where it was first planted by Archbishop Wilfrid. 2. Haflings, one of the Cinque-Ports, in Suffex also, the Landing-place of the Normans, and famous for the Overthrow of King Harold in the Fields adjoining. 3. Guileford, upon the River Wey, the chief Town of Surrey, well built, and having in it two Parish-Churches. 4. Arundel, in a Dale or Valley on the River Arun, and from thence so named: belonging to the Crown in the time of the Saxons, when given by the Testament of King Alfride, unto Anthelm, his Brother's Son. Of great note for a beautiful and capacious Castle; but more for giving the Title of Earl to the Noble Families of the *Albeney*s, the Fitz-Alans, and the Howards; this last of such a large and diffused Nobility, that in the Year 1641, there were no fewer than eight Howards in the House of Peers. 5. Kingston upon the Thames, so called to distinguish it from Kingston upon Hull in Yorkshire; heretofore famous for the Coronation of the Monarchs of the English Saxons, whence it had the Name of Kingston, or the King's-Town. This Kingdom had only three Kings, crushed in the infancy thereof by more potent Neighbours.

The Kings of the South-Saxons.

A. Chr.

- 488 1 Ella, the first King.
- 514 2 Cissa, the Son of Ella, who lost his Life and Kingdom to Cerdic, King of the West-Saxons.
- 590 3 Cheulin, King of West-Sex, called himself King of the South-Saxons.
- 4 Edelwalch, or Ethelwolf, the first Christian King, overcome and slain in Battel by Ceadwal, King of the West-Saxons, Anno 687. After whose Death Berhan and Anthum, two Brethren, took on themselves the Government, with the Title of Dukes or Captains; and held it for a little while. But not being able to withstand the puissance of the West-Saxons, this Kingdom was subdued by Ina, the Successor of Ceadwal; by whom united to that Crown.

III. The Kingdom of WEST-SEX, or the WEST-SAXONS, the third in order, and that which did in fine prevail over all the rest; contained the Counties of Cornwall, Devon, Somerset, Dorset, *Wilt*s, Southampton, and Berks: begun by Cerdic, a noble Commander of the Saxons, arriving with new Forces out of Germany, Anno 495. who having overcome the Britains of this Western Tract, conducted by Natanland their Chieftain, entituled himself King of the West Saxons, Anno 522. The Christian Faith suppress'd here, as elsewhere, was restored again in the time of Kingil, their first Christian King; by the preaching of S. Birinus, Bishop of Dorchester, near Oxford, then a great City, of no fewer than ten Parishes, now reduced to one.

Chief Cities of this Kingdom, were 1. Exeter, a fair and goodly City, and a Bishop's See, remov'd hither from Cridington or Kirton, by Leofricus, An. 1049. Seated upon the Bank of the River Ex, whence the Name of Excester; environ'd with deep Ditches, and very strong Walls, in compass about a Mile and half besides the Suburbs, in which are contain'd in all 15 Parish-Churches, besides the Minster, a beautiful and stately Fabrick. 2. Bath, so called from the Baths there being, the chief City of Somerset, by the Latines called Aqua Solis; by the Greeks Ἰσθία Ἀσφαλα for the self same reason. Situate in a low Valley, environ'd about with Hills, very steep and high, from whence come many Rivulets and fresh Springs, to the great Commodity of the People. A fine neat Town, and beautified with as neat a Church, heretofore a Monastery, partner with Wells, the Bishop's See, in the Stile Episcopal; and gives the Title of an Earl to the Noble Family of the Bourchiers. 3. Falmouth in Cornwal, seated upon a large and capacious Bay, so full of Creeks and Roads, capable of the best Ships, that it is said, an hundred Sail of Ships may be lodg'd therein with such such convenience, that from the top of the one, the Mast of another is not to be seen; the mouth or entrance of it defended for the greater safety with two very strong Castles built by Henry the 8th, that of S. Maudits on the East, and that of Pendinas (commonly called Pendennis) upon the West. 4. Dorchester, the chief Town of Dorsetshire, which is thence denominated, by Antoninus called Durnovaria, the principal at that time of the Durotriges: an Inland Town, and consequently of no great Trading: not so much famous for ought else as giving the Title of a Marquess to Henry Earl of Kingsfon, of the noble Family of the Pierreponts. 5. Wilton, the head Town, in those times of Wiltshire, and a Bishops See, honoured with the Residence of several Bishops. But by translating of the See to Sarum (or Sarisbury) as the fitter place, and carrying thither therewithal the Thorowfare, which before was here; it fell by little and little into decay; and is now hardly worth the reputation of a Market Town. 6. Winchester called Venta in the times of the Romans, by the Saxons, Vent-ceaster, situate on the banks of a pleasant River, the Seat Royal of the West Saxon Kings, who had here their Palace called Wolves-eye: so named from the Kings of the Welfian Family, and the situation of it in the circlings of the foresaid River, which the old Saxons called an Eye: not from the Wool-Staple here kept, as some; much less from Cardinal Wolsey, as others most absurdly think. The House given after to the Bishops, and made their Palace. The Town in compass two Miles, besides the Suburbs; commodiously seated in a low place, between very steep Hills, by which it is defended both from Cold and Wind: Afflicted very much since those times both by War and Fire. half of the Ground within the Town being Fields and Gardens; but still adorned with a Magnificent Cathedral, and a gallant (but no great) Castle, bravely mounted upon an Hill for defence and prospect; besides a Colledge, and an Hospital added since those days. 7. Southampton, conveniently seated on an Arm of the Sea, capable of Ships of burden to the very Key; which maketh it one of the richest Towns in those parts of England. Well built, of fair large Streets, beautified with five Parish Churches, and fortified with high Walls, a double Ditch, and a right strong Castle; but the Castle now decayed and ruined. 8. Reading, on the banks of the River Kennet, where it falleth into the Thames, by which means it hath the convenience of both Rivers: A Town of great Trade for Clothing, well built, and of three Parish Churches; heretofore beautified with a strong Castle, and a goodly Monastery, but both decayed. 9. Windsor, called Windleshores in the old Saxon, situate near the banks of the Thames on a rising Ground, which gives it a fair prospect over all the Country; adorned in succeeding times with a Palace Royal of the Kings of England, and the Seat of the Order of the Garter. 10. Wallingford, the Gualena of the Ancients, and then the chief Town of the Attrebatii, as it was afterwards (in the time of the Saxons) of the County of Berks; a Mile in compass at that time within the Walls, fortified with an impregnable Castle, and adorned with twelve Parishes. So desolated by a Plague, an. 1348. that there is now but one Church left, hardly Inhabitants enough to keep that in Repair; and nothing of the Walls left (as not much of the Castle) but the track and ruins.

IV. The Kingdom of EAST-SEX, or the EAST-SAXONS, was begun about the year 527, by Erchenwin, descended from Woden, the common Progenitor of the Saxons; from whom we have the name of Wednesday, or Wodensday, as they called it formerly. It contained only the Counties of Middlesex, Essex, and so much of Hartfordshire, as is in the Diocess of London. The Christian Faith expelled here as in other places, was restored again in the time of Sebert, the Founder of the Abby Church of S. Peter in Westminster, by the Preaching of Melitus the first Bishop of London, after the entrance of the Saxons, suppressed again by Seward, and Sigebert, the Sons of Sebert; but settled stronger than before by Cedd, the next Bishop. Principal Cities of this Kingdom, besides London, spoken of already, were, 1. Westminster, situate in those times a Mile from London, now adjoining to it. The See of the Archbishop of London in the time of the Britains; afterwards by the Saxons called Thorn eye, or the Thorny Island; till the new Minster built by Sebert as before is said, and the Western situation of it in regard of St. Pauls, built at the same time by Ethelbert the King of Kent, gained it this new Name. A City honoured with the Seat of the Kings of East-Sex, and since those times with that of the Kings of England; the name of the Old Palace of the one, and the New-Palace of the other, still remaining there; beautified upon that occasion with more stately and magnificent Houses, belonging to the King, Bishops, and Nobility, than all the other in the Kingdom, having of late a new Town added to it in the Covent Garden (a place belonging formerly to the Monks of Westminster) for uniformity of Building, and handsom Streets, inferior to no City of France or Italy. 2. Colchester, the chief Town of East-sex, situate near the Sea, on the River Coln; a Colony of the Londoners in former times, thence called Colonia Londinensium, and Colonia only, then a Bishops See: from which, or from the River, with the Addition of Ceaster, after the manner of the Saxons, came the name of Colchester. A fair and well built Town, and of good Resort, fortified with an old Roman Wall, and having in it to the number of 14 Churches. 3. Itchenchester in Dengey Hundred, where S. Ceadda the second Bishop of London, baptized the relapsed East-Saxon. 4. Hartford, the chief Town of the County so called; by Beda named Herudford, and of great note in his time for a Synod there held in the dawning of the day of Christianity amongst the Saxons; in which S. Augustine the Monk, the first Apostle of that People, had a Conference or Consultation with the British Bishops: More memorable in the following times, for giving the Title of an Earl to the illustrious Family, surnamed De Clare; the addition of an Honour, and a goodly Patrimony to John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster; and at this time, Title of Earl, and Marquess to the noble Family of the Seymours.

V. The Kingdom of the EAST-ANGLES, so called from the Angli or English, which possessed these parts, and that Eastern situation of it; begun by Uffa, a great Commander of the Saxons, Anno 575 contained the Counties of Norfolk, Suffolk, Cambridgehire, and the Isle of Ely. The Christian Faith first planted here in the Reign of Redwall the third King, by the Ministry of Felix a Burgundian, the first Bishop of the East Angles, the See whereof was afterwards removed to Norwich. Places of most Importance in it, were 1. Dunwich on the Sea shore, the first Bishops See of the East-Angles, for the County of Suffolk: then a Town capable of that Dignity, now, ruinous, decayed, and for the greatest part worn into the Sea. 2. Ipswich in the same County of Suffolk and the chief of the Country, a rich populous, and well traded Empory, consisting of no fewer than twelve Parish Churches. 3. Norwich, the head City of Norfolk, situate on the River Tare, which runs thence to Yarmouth, lying out in length a Mile and an half, half as much in breadth, and in that Circuit comprehending about 20 Parishes well walled about with many a Turret, and 12 Gates for entrance; but hath within it much waste Ground, the City suffering great loss both in Wealth and Buildings, by Kiss Rebellion, in the time of King Edward the Sixth. Recovered of the first blow by the Dutch Manufactures, of the last still languishing: yet still it glorieth in the beauties of a fair Cathedral, the three Palaces of the Bishops, the Dukes of Norfolk, and the Earls of Surrey, and the Ruins of an ancient Castle of the Saxons building. 4. North Elmham, the Bishops See of the East-Angles, for those parts which we now call Norfolk: both this and that at Dunwich ruined in the Danish Wars, but this reviving at the end of 100 years and here continuing, both Sees united unto one, till removed to 5. Thetford, another Town of this County, situate on the confluence of the Thet, and the lesser Ouse; a larger Town than either of the other two, from whence at last removed to Norwich. 6. Cambridge, the chief Town of that County, by Antonine called Cambohitum, whence the Modern name: unless we rather fetch it from a Bridge over the River Cam or Grant (for some call it Grantbridge) as perhaps we may. A Town well built by reason of the University, said to be founded by Sigbert, King of the East-Angles, of whom it is affirmed by Beda, that he founded a School for the Education of Children in the ways of good Learning; but he speaketh neither of University, nor nameth Cambridge for the place. 7. Ely, situate in the Isle so named, occasioned by the divided streams of Nen and Ouse, with the overflows of other Rivers; turning a great part of this Tract into Fens and Marshes, the Inhabitants whereof were called Girvii: A place of no great Beauty or Reputation, as situate in a foggy and unhealthful Air; but only for a fair Monastery built by S. Ethelreda, Wife of Egfride, King of the Northumbers, by her made a Nunnery; afterwards rebuilt and replenished with Monks by Ethelwold Bishop of Winchester, Anno 970. or thereabouts; finally made a Bishops See in the time of King Henry the First, Anno 1119.

 870 15 S. Edmund, descended from Anna, the Seventh King hereof, Martyred by the Danes for his stout and constant perseverance in the Faith of CHRIST; from whence the fair Town of St. Edmundsbury, in the County of Suffolk, took Denomination. After whose death the Kingdom was possessed by the Danes, till vanquished by King Edward the Elder, by whom it was united unto the rest of England.

VI. The Kingdom of NORTHUMBERLAND, so called from the situation on the North of Humber, contained the Counties of York, Lancaster, Durham, Westmerland, Cumberland, and Northumberland, properly so called; and all the Southern parts of Scotland, as far as to the Frythes of Edinburgh and Dunbritton, formerly reckoned of as Members of the Roman Empire. Extorted from the Britains by Occa the Son, and Ebisa the Brother of Hengist, Conductors of new Forces hither, (all of the Nation of the Angli) by the leave of Vortiger; under pretence of guarding these Countries from the inroads of the Scots and Picts. By them divided into two Provinces, the one called Deira, extending from the Humber, to the River of Tees; the other called Bernicia, reaching from Tees, to the two Frythes before-mentioned; both governed a long while by Dukes, under the Sovereignty and homage of the Kings of Kent. In the year 547. Duke Ella takes unto himself the Title of King of Bernicia, and Abn. 558. Duke Ella, doth the like in Deira. The Towns of most notice in this last (for the former is now reckoned as a part of Scotland) besides York spoken of before, were 1. Lancaster, the chief Town of that County, situate on the River Len, which with addition of Ceaſter much used by the Saxons, made the name thereof; called for the same reason Longovicus by the Emperour Antonine. The Town not very well peopled nor much frequented, but of sufficient fame in our English Annals for those Noble Persons which have successively born the Titles of Earls and Dukes of it; the greatest Princes for Revenue, of any Subjects in Christendom, 2. Kendal, or Candale, situate in a dale on the River Can, whence it had the Name; the chief Town of Westmerland: built in the manner of a Cross, two long and broad Streets thwarting one another. A rich, populous and well traded Town, especially for the making of fine woollen Cloth, but of more fame for giving the Title of an Earl to John Duke of Bedford, Regent of France; and to John de Foix, created Earl hereof by Henry the Sixth. 3. Carlisle, upon the River Eden, a frontier Town betwixt the Romans and Scots, as now between the Scotts and English: consumed to ashes in the time of the Danish Invasions; afterwards rebuilt by William Rufus, made an Episcopal See in the Reign of K. Henry the First, and beautified with a Cathedral founded at the persuasion of Atthelwulfus, the first Bishop hereof. 4. Monck-cheſter, on the Northern banks of the River Tine, which maketh there a safe and capacious Haven. Of no great note till the Norman Conquest, when when from a Castle built by Robert Son of William the Conqueror, it was called New-Castle: growing from that time forwards to such Wealth and Trading, by the Neighbourhood of the Cole-mines there, that it is now the goodliest Town in all the North; fortified with strong Walls, beautified with five fair Churches, and giving to the L. Will. Cavendish, Viscount Mansfield, the honorary Titles of Earl and Marquess. 5. Hagulfade, or Hex-told, by the Romans called Axelodunum, by the Normans. Hexam, a Bishops See in the first time of Christianity amongst these Northumbers, specially so called, converted to the Faith in the time of Oswald their tenth King, by the Ministry of Aiden the first Bishop of Lindisfarn: Eata the fifth Bishop, erecting here an Episcopal See, for the better propagation of the Gospel among this People; after a Succession of ten Bishops ruined and suppressed by the Danish furies. 6. Dunholm, now Durham, situate on a Hill, as the name importeth, a Bishops See, translated hither with the body of St. Cuthbert, Anno 990. or thereabouts, from Lindisfarn, a small Island on the Coast of Northumberland, where it was first erected by S. Aidamus, the first bishop thereof: planted in Lindisfarn, because of the solitude of the place; translated hither to avoid the fury of the Danes, who then raged extremely in these Quarters. And being settled here, was fortified with such ample Priviledges and Possessions, by the Saxon Kings; that the Bishops were reputed for Count Palatines, at and before the Norman Conquest. 7. Halifax, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, of great wealth by making of Cloth. 8. Rippon, in the same, adorned with a fair Cathedral or Collegiate Church, subordinate to that of York. 9. Godmanham, (by Beda called Gotmandin Gabam) famous in those days for a Temple of the Saxon-Idols, burnt down and utterly destroyed by Coife, the chief Priest thereof, converted to Christianity by Paulinus the first Archbishop of York, and the Apostle of the Northumbers in these parts. The Catalogue of the Kings of which mighty Nations, by reason of the division of it into two Kingdoms, as before is said, is very intricate and confused, the Kingdoms being sometimes united, and sometimes dis-jointed. But in regard the most prevalent King of either, was called King of Northumberland, the other of Bernicia or Deira only, I shall accordingly sub-join them in this order following.

The Kings of Northumberland.

| 774 | 19 | Ethelred . |
| 778 | 20 | Alfwald . |
| 789 | 21 | Osfred II. |
| 794 | 22 | Ethelred II. After whose death, slain by his treacherous and rebellious Subjects (as many of his Predecessors had been before) the Kingdom became distracted into Parts and |

Factions, invaded by the Danes on the one side, the Scots and Picts on the other, who during these Distractions, had possessed themselves of all the Countries on the other side of the Tweed. At the last Anno 827. they yielded themselves to Egbert, the most Potent King of the West-Saxons, ruled by his Deputies for a while, then subdued by the Danes and finally recovered to the Crown of England, by Athelstan and Edred, Anno 950. or thereabouts. Content since that to give the Title of an Earl to some eminent Persons both of English and Norman Races: as it hath done since the first year of King Richard the Second; to the Noble Family of the Per-cies, descended by Josceline of Brabant, Brother of Adolize the second Wife of King Henry the First, from Charles the Great, Emperor and King of France, and that too in a clearer Line than the Dukes of Lorain, who so much brag of it.

VII. The Kingdom of M E R C I A, was begun by Cridda, or Criodda, a great Commander of the Angli, or English Nation, who settling in the heart of Britain, where the People were least used to Arms, made themselves Masters of the Counties of Gloucester, Worcester, Hereford, Salop, Chester, Stafford, Derby, Nottingham, Leicester, Rutland, Lincoln, Huntingdon, Northampton, Warwick, Oxon, Buckingham, Bedford, and the rest of Hartfordshire, which bounded in a manner by all the rest of the Saxon Kingdoms, had the name of Mercia, from the word Meare, which signifieth a bound or limit. The Christian Faith suppressed here, as in other Kingdoms of the Saxons, was restored again in the Reigns of Penda, Peada, and Wulfhere, by the preaching of St. Chad the first Bishop of Lichfield.

Places of most observation in it, 1. Hereford, seated on the Banks of the River Wye, in the middle of most flourishing Meadows, and no less plentiful Corn Fields; raised out of the Ruines of Ariconium here placed by Antonine, the Tract of which name it doth still retain. A Bishops See in the time of the Britains, restored to that dignity by the Saxons, An. 680. the honourable Title of the Bobuns, once Earls hereof; and afterwards of Henry of Bullingbrook Duke of Hereford. 2. Worcester, pleasantly seated on the Severn, over which it hath a very fair Bridge with a Tower upon it. A Bishops See, Anno 672, beautified with a fair Cathedral, and every way considerable for situation, number of Churches, neat Buildings, the industry of the Inhabitants, and giving the Title of an Earl to the Noble Family of the Somersets, extracted by the Beauforts from John of Gaunt. 3. Litchfield, the first Bishops See amongst the Mercians, founded there Anno 646. by Oswy King of the Northumbers, but fixed and settled by St. Chad in the Reign of Wulfhere King of the Mercians; endowed in the very Infancy with such fair Possessions, that in the year 793. Adulfus the Bishop hereof, was made Archbishop of the Mercians. But it proved only a personal honour, and died with him. 4. Coventry, so called from an old Covent or Religious House, which gave name unto it; Situate in Warwickshire, and now the principal of that County, though esteemed a County of it self: beautified with a goodly Wall, two fair Parish Churches, large Streets, and very handfom Houses. A City of great Trade and Riches, though destitute of all Advantages which a Navigable River might afford it; heretofore of great Fame for a stately Monastery, to which the See Episcopal was for a while removed from Litchfield, now a ruine only. 5. Leicester, once a Bishops See, the Diocess taken out of Litchfield, An. 733. removed to Dorchester near Oxon, and thence to Lincoln. Beautified in those days with a fair Collegiate Church, a magnificent Abbey, and a strong Castle; and decayed and ruined by the iniquity and injury of these later times; the Town remaining in as good plight both for Trade and Buildings, as most Towns do which want a Navigable River. Of most fame for the Earls thereof, Algar and Edwin, noble Saxons, Simon de Montfort the Catiline and great Incendiary of this Kingdom, the Princes of the House of Lancaster, who bore

this Title; with some others since. 6. Derby, upon the River Derwent, a well-traded Town, and of good Resort; adorned with five Churches, a goodly Stone Bridge, and a large Market-place; the honorary Title of the noble Family of the Stanleys, created Earls hereof by King Henry the Seventh. 7. Nottingham seated on the Trent, but very high upon an Hill, which overlooks it. For Buildings, fair Streets, and a spacious Market-place, not giving way to many Cities; but of most fame for a Royal and Magnificent Castle, which for Strength, Stateliness, and Prospect, may justly challenge the precedency of most in England. 8. Lincoln, a Town in those days of great strength and note, one of the best Peopled Cities in all the Heptarchie; and of great Merchandise and Traffick both by Sea and Land, insomuch that Remigius, then Bishop of Dorchester thought fit to translate hither the Episcopal See. Now much decayed, and thence the Proverb, that Lincoln was, London is, &c. The chief fame which now it hath, is for the Minster, one of the stateliest Piles in England, and perhaps in Christendom; high seated on a Hill, and from thence discerned over all the Country. 9. Huntingdon, or the Hunters Town, from the great sport the Hunters found in the Neighbouring Forest, commodiously seated on the Northern bank of the River Ouse, rising on the North with a soft ascent, consisting of four Parish Churches, and shews the ruins of a Castle built by Edward the Elder, An. 917. 10. Peterburgh, seated in a Nook or Angle of Northamptonshire, were formerly had been a Gulf or Whirlpool of exceeding depth; but made firm ground by Wulfhere King of the Mercians, when he laid the Foundations of the Monastery, Anno 633. dedicated to St. Peter, whence it had this Name; before then called Medanfhede. A Town, but for the Church, of no great esteem, as standing out of the way for Trade, and in no plausible place for Health or Pleasure; yet shewing two handfom Streets, a large Market-place, and a fair Parish Church (besides the Abbey) made an Episcopal See by King Henry the 8th. 11. Northampton, built on the Northern Bank of the River Antona, (now Nen) whence it had the name. A Town which for the beauty and circuit of it, need not give way to many Cities; fortified heretofore with a very strong Castle, and seated in so good an Air, that once the Students of Cambridge had a purpose to remove their University hither. The Noble Family of the Comptons are now Earls hereof. 12. Bedford, so called from Beds and Lodgings on the Ford, built on both sides thereof for the use of Travellers, growing in time to so great bigness as to contain in it five Parish Churches: famous in former times for the great Battel fought in the adjoining Fields, Anno 572, in which Cuthwulf the Saxon vanquish'd the Britains, and became Master of the Country; But more famous for giving the Title of Duke to John of Lancaster, Regent of France for King Henry the Sixth, and Jasper of Hatfield, Uncle to King Henry the 7th. 13. St. Albans, so called from a famous Monastery, here founded by Offa the great King of the Mercians, in honour of St. Albans, the Proto-Martyr of Britain, a Citizen of Verulamium, near adjoining to it; out of the Ruins whereof; decayed by Age, and destroyed by War; arose the present greatness of S. Albans, the fairest and best traded Town in the County of Hartford. 14. Buckingham, the chief Town of the County so called, situate on the River Ouse: fortified by King Edward the Elder against the Danes, Anno 915, otherwise not much observable, but for those many noble personages which have had the Title of Dukes hereof.

| 852 | 20 | Burdred , a substituted King of the West-Saxons , and the last King of the Mercians (the short Reign of his six Predecessors, portending that fatal period to be near at hand.) After whose Death, Anno 886 , this Kingdom for some few years tyrannized over by the Danes , was united by King Alured to the English Monarchy. |

Such was the Order and Succession of the Saxon Kings, during the Heptarchie, or division of it into seven Kingdoms; continuing separate and distinct till the prevailing Fortune of the West-Saxons brought them all together into one, by the name of England. But so, that they were subject for the most part unto one alone, who was intituled Rex Gentis Anglorum: those which were stronger than the rest, giving the Law unto them in their several turns; and are these that follow:

The Monarch of the English Saxons in the time of the Heptarchie.

| 794 | 17 | Egfride , King of Mercia . |
| 796 | 18 | Kenwolf , King of Mercia . |
| 799 | 19 | Egbert , the Son of Almond , King of the West-Saxons , who having vanquished all the rest of the Saxon Kings, and added most of their Estates unto his own, caused the whole united body to be called Engle-lond , or England , in a Parliament or Council held at Winchester , Anno , 819, being the 19th year of his Reign over the West-Saxons ; and by that Name he was then crowned in the presence of his Nobles, and the rest of his Subjects, leaving it unto the rest of his Successors. |

But before we come to the recital of their Names, we are to take notice of the Danes, the next considerable Actors on the Stage of England, who in the time of this Egbert, first invaded the Country, and after exercised the patience of his Posterity, till in fine they got the Kingdom to themselves. Of the Original and first Successes of this People,

People, we shall speak more at large when we come to Denmark. Suffice it here to know, that having taken up the void Rooms of the Jutes and English in the Cimbrick Chersonese, they thought it not amiss to follow them into Britain also; making a discovery of some part of the Coast thereof with three Ships only, An. 787, being the first year of Brithic (the Father of Egbert) King of the West-Saxons. Which having done, and prepared themselves for the undertaking, in the time of Egbert, they invaded Northumberland, the Isle of Shepey in Kent, and the Coasts of Wales; not without much difficulty driven out by him. In the Reign of the three Kings succeeding, having vanquished the Northumbrians, East-Angles, and a part of the Mercians; they erected many petty Tyrannies: by Alfred first stopped in their Career, by Edward the Elder outed of the East-Angles, and by Athelstan of Northumberland also, the Danes for some time after being subject to the English Government, mixing in Marriages and Alliance, and Incorporated with them, by the Valour and good Fortune of Swain their King, they recovered their power again in England; and in the Person of Canutus obtained the Kingdom: who having impolitickly sent back his Danes into their Country (as if a Kingdom got by Force, could be held by Favour) opened a way to their exclusion from the Crown; which happened within seven years after his decease. Which said, we come to the Successions of

The Kings of England of the Saxon Race.

- 819 1 Egbert, the last King of the West-Saxons, and the first of England. 18.
- 837 2 Ethelwulf, the eldest Son of Egbert. 20.
- 857 3 Ethelbald, the eldest Son of Ethelwulf. 1.
- 858 4 Ethelbert, the Brother of Ethelbald. 4.
- 863 5 Ethelfred, the Brother of the two former Kings, the third Son of Ethelwulf, and as much molested by the Danes, as his Brethren were. 10.
- 873 6 Alfred, the fourth Son of Ethelwulf, who totally united the Saxon Heptarchy into one Estate, vanquished the Danes, whom he made subject to his commands, though he could not expel them. He divided England into Shires, and restored the University of Oxon.
- 900 7 Edward, surnamed the Elder, the Son of Alfred, who recovered the East-Angles from the power of the Danes, whom he shut up in Northumberland. 24.
- 924 8 Athelstan, the Son of Edward, who subdued the Britains of Cumberland and Cornwall, and compelled the Danes to submit themselves to the English Government. In his time lived Sir Guy of Warwick, famous for overcoming Colbrand the Danish Champion (the great Goliath of that People) near the Walls of Winchester. 10.
- 941 9 Edmund the Brother of Athelstan, by whom the Danes of Northumberland were brought under obedience, and the Kingdom of the Britains in Cumberland utterly subverted.
- 946 10 Ethel, the Brother of Edmund and Athelstan, so fortunate against the Danes, that he compelled them to be Christened. 9.
- 955 11 Edwy, the Son of Edmund.
- 958 12 Edgar, the Brother of Edwy, surnamed the Peaceable, the most absolute Monarch of England, since the time of the Saxons; by whom the Tribute of Money, imposed by Athelstan on the Welsh, was exchanged into a Tribute of Holwer. 16.
- 978 13 Edward II. Son of Edgar, treacherously murdered by his Stepdame, to make way for E- thelred her Son; hence surnamed the Martyr, 2.

- 978 14 Ethelred, the younger Son of Edgar, and half Brother of Edward, enjoyed the Crown unquietly, which he got unjustly. Oppressed and broken by the Danes, he was fain to buy his peace of them at the yearly tribute of 1000 pounds; increased to 4800 pounds within short time after; which monies were raised upon the Subjects, by the name of Danegeld. Weary of the exactions, he plotted warily with his Subjects to kill all the Danes, as they slept in their Beds; which accordingly was put in execution on St. Brices Night, November 2. Anno 1012. To Revenge this Outrage and Dishonour, Swaine King of Denmark, with a Fleet of 350 Ships came into England; the fear whereof compelled Ethelred, a weak and impuissant Prince to fly into Normandy; leaving his poor Subjects to the mercy of the Danish Tyrant, who miserably plagued them till his death. To whom succeeded his Son Canute (Canutus) a more temperate Prince; who maugre Ethelred now returned, or his Son Edmond Ironside, a most valiant King, did in the end possess himself of the whole Kingdom.
- 1016 15 Edmund II. surnamed Ironside, having in vain attempted to recover his Kingdom, at last divided it with Canutus: not long after which he was treacherously and basely murdered, by Edward, surnamed the Out-Law, his eldest Son. He was Grandfather of Edgar Ateling, and of Margaret, Wife of Malcolm the third, King of the Scots.

The Danish Kings.

- 1017 1 Canutus King of Denmark and Norway, after the death of Edmund the Second, sole King of England. He married Emma the Widow of Ethelred, and Daughter of Richard Duke of Normandy. 20.
- 1037 2 Harald the base Son of Canutus, surnamed Harfagar, 3.
- 1041 3 Canutus II. commonly called Hardy Canute, the lawful son of Canutus by Emma the Widow of Ethelred the second, and Mother of Edward surnamed the Confessor, the last King of the Danes in England. After whose death that People having tyrannized in England for the space of 255 years, (of which they had reigned only 26) were utterly expelled the Country, or passed in the Account of English; Edward the Confessor, the youngest Son of Ethelred, being advanced unto the Throne, by the power and practices of his Mother Emma, and the absence of the Children of Edmund Ironside his elder Brother, Anno 1042.

Now concerning the Danes abiding here, and going hence as they did, I observe three Customs yet in use amongst us. First, each English house maintained one Dane, who living idly like the Drone among the Bees, had the benefit of all their Labour, and was by them called Lord Dane; and even now when we see an idle fellow, we call him a Lordane. 2. The Danes used when the English drank, to stab them, or cut their Throats: to avoid which Villany, the party then drinking, requested some of the next unto him to be his surety or pledge, whilst he paid nature her due, and hence we have our usual custom of pledging one another. 3. The old Romans at the expulsion of their Kings, annually solemnized the Fugalia: according to which pattern the joyful English having cleared the Country of the Danes, instituted the annual Sports of Hock-tide; the word in their old Tongue, the Saxon, importing the time of Scorning, or Triumphing. This Solemnity consisted in the merry meetings of the Neighbours in those days, during which the Festival lasted, and was celebrated by the younger sort of both Sexes, with all manner of Exercises, and Pastimes in the Streets, even as Shrove-tide yet is. But now time hath so corrupted it, that the name excepted, there remaineth no sign of the first institution.
L. V. importing

The Saxons Re-enthroned.

16 Edward III. surnamed the Confessor, half Brother both to Edmund Ironside, and Hardy-Canute the Dane, called out of Normandy, where he lived with the Dukes his Cousins, succeeded in the Realm of England. This King collected out of the Danish, Saxons, and Mercian Laws, one universal and general Law, whence our Common Law is thought to have had its Original: which may be true of the written Laws, not of the customary and unwritten Laws; these being certainly more ancient. He was in his life of that holiness that he received power from above to cure many Diseases, amongst others, the swelling of the Throat, called by us the Kings-Evil: a Prerogative that continueth Hereditary to his Successors of England. Finally after his death, he was Canonized for a Saint; and died, having reigned 24 years.

17 Harald II. Son to Earl Godwyn, was chosen King in the Non-age of Edgar Atheling, Grandchild to Edmund Ironside, the true Heir of the Kingdom: to which Harald might pretend some Title as being born unto Earl Godwyn by Thyra the base Daughter of Canutus the first, Sister by the whole blood to Harald Harfager, and of the half blood to Canutus the second, the last King of the Danes in England. But William Duke of Normandy, (of which People we have spoke already when we were in France, and shall speak more at large when we come to Denmark, as the last Actors on the Theatre or Stage of England.) This William (I say) pretending a Donation from his Cousin, King Edward the Confessor, invaded England, slew Harald, and with him 66654 of his English Soldiers, and possessed himself of the Kingdom; using such Policy in his new Conquest, that he utterly disheartned the English from hopes of better fortune. From him beginneth the new account of the Kings of England, those of the former Line being no longer reckoned in the computation of the first, second, or third, &c.

The Norman Kings.

1 William, surnamed the Conqueror, after the vanquishment and death of Harald, acknowledged and Crowned King, altered the ancient Laws of England, and established those of Normandy in the place thereof: governing the People absolutely by the power of the Sword, and giving a great part of their Lands to his former Followers, and such as were engaged in the Action with him; from whom most of our ancient Families do derive themselves; those Lands to be holden in Knights-Service, which drew along with it the Wardship of the Heir in Minority, as a charge laid upon the Land.

2 William II. surnamed Rufus, second Son to the Conqueror, succeeded by the appointment of his Father, and was Crowned King; slain afterwards in the New Forest, by an Arrow levelled at a Deer.

Henry, for his Learning surnamed Beau-Clerk, the third Son of the Conqueror, in the absence of his Brother Robert (in the Holy-Land Wars) entred on the Kingdom, and afterwards took from him also the Dukedom of Normandy, and put out his eyes. Deprived of all his male-issue, he left one only Daughter whose name was Maud; first married to the Emperour Henry the Fifth, and after to Geofry Plantagenet Earl of Anjou, Touaine, and Maine. 34.

Stephen, second Son of Stephen Earl of Champagne and Blois, and of Alice Daughter to the Conqueror, succeeded; who to purchase the peoples love, released the Tribute called Danegelt: he spent most of his Reign in War against Maud the Empress. 19.

Henry II. Son to Maud the Empress, Daughter to Henry the First, and to Maud Daughter to Malcolm King of Scotland, and Margaret Sister to Edgar Atheling, restored the Saxon Blood to the Crown of England. His Father was Geofry Earl of Anjou, Touaine, and Maine; which Provinces he added to the English Empire, as also the Dutchy of Aquitain, and the Earldom of Poitou, by Eleanor his Wife; and a great part of Ireland by Conquest. Happy in all things, the unnatural Rebellions of his Sons excepted. 34.

Richard, the Son of Henry, surnamed Cœur de Lyon, warred in the Holy Land, overcame the Turks, whom he had almost driven out of Syria, took the Isle of Cyprus; and after many worthy Achievements, returning homewards to defend Normandy, and Aquitain against the French, was by Tempest cast upon Dalmatia; and travelling through the Dominions of the Duke of Austria, was taken Prisoner, put to a grievous Ransom, and after his return slain at the Siege of Chalus, in the Province of Limousin. 12.

John, Brother of Richard, an unhappy Prince, and one that could expect no better, as being an unnatural Son to his Father, and an undutiful Subject to his Brother. Distressed for a great part of his Reign by Wars with his Barons, outed of all Normandy, Aquitain, and Anjou, by the power of the French; to whom also he was likely to have lost the Realm of England. Finally, after a base submission of himself and his Kingdom to the Popes Legate, he is said to have been poisoned at Swinsede Abbey. 17.

Henry III. Son of John, expelled the invading French out of England, and by a composition with Lewis the 9th, was restored unto the Dukedom of Guyenne, held by his Successor till the Reign of King Henry the 6th. Exhausted by the Pope, and oppressed a long time by his factions and unruly Barons, but at last Victorious. 56.

Edward, the Son of Henry, awed France, subdued Wales, brought Scotland into subjection, of whose King and Nobility he received homage. 34.

Edward II. Son of Edward the First, a dilute Prince, hated of the Nobles, and contemned by the Vulgar, for his immeasurable love to Pierce Gaveston, and the Spencer w

- was twice shamefully beaten by the Scots : and being deposed by a strong Faction raised against him by his Queen, and Roger Lord Mortimer, was barbarously murdered in Berkeley Castle. 19.
- 1327 11 Edward III. Son of Edward the Second, a most Vertuous and Valorous Prince, brought the Scots to Obedience, overthrew the French in two great Battels, took the Town of Callice, and many fair possessions in that Kingdom. 50.
- 1377 12 Richard II. another of our unfortunate Kings, lost many of his Peers in France, and at last being overawed by his two great Uncles of Lancaster, and Gloucester, and taken Prisoner by his Cousin the Duke of Hereford, he was forced to resign his Crown, and afterwards was murdered at Pomfret Castle.

The Lancastrian Line.

- 1392 13 Henry IV. Son to John of Gaunt Duke of Lancaster, the fourth Son of Edward the 3d, was by the power of the Sword, but with the consent of the People, settled in the Throne ; and spent his whole Reign in suppressing homebred Rebellions. 15.
- 1414 14 Henry V. the Mirrour of Magnificence, and Pattern of true Vertue, pursued the Title of France, and won it, being ordained Heir apparent to the French Crown, but lived not to possess the Kingdom. 9.
- 1423 15 Henry VI a Pious, but unfortunate Prince, was crowned King of France in Paris, which he held during the life of his Uncle John of Bedford, and Humphrey of Gloucester ; after whole deaths, he not only lost France to the French, but England and his life to the Yorkish Faction. 38.

The Yorkish Line.

- 1461 16 Edward IV. Son of Richard Duke of York, the Son of Richard Earl of Cambridge, and Grandson of Edmund of Langley Duke of York, the fifth Son of King Edward the Third, challenged the Crown in right of the Lady Anne his Grandmother, Daughter of Roger Mortimer Earl of March, the Son of Edmund Mortimer Earl of March, and of Philippa, his Wife, sole Daughter of Lionel Duke of Clarence, the third Son of the said King Edward, and elder Brother of John of Gaunt. The claim first set on foot by his Father the Duke of York, who lost his life in pursuance of it in the Battle of Wakefield ; with better fortune and success, pursued by King Edward himself, who finally after nine bloody Battels fought between the Houses (specially that of Towton, in which were slain 36000 English) was quietly seated in the possession of England and Ireland, 23.
- 1484 17 Edward V. his Son, was before his Coronation murdered by his Uncle Richard, in the Tower of London.
- 1484 18 Richard III. Brother of Edward the 4th, a most wicked and tyrannical Prince, to make way unto the Diadem, murdered King Henry the Sixth, and 2. Prince Edward his Son. 3. George Duke of Clarence, his Brother. 4 Hastings a faithful Servant to King Edward. 5. Rivers, Vaughan and Gray, the Queens Kindred. 6. Edward the Fifth, his Sovereign, with his Brother Richard. 7. Henry Duke of Buckingham his dear Friend, and greatest Coadjutor in these his ungodly practices ; and his own Wife Anne, so to make way to an incestuous Marriage with his Niece Elizabeth, the eldest Daughter of Edward the 4th ; but before the Solemnity, he was slain at Bosworth 3.

The Union of the Families.

- 1487 19 Henry VII. Earl of Richmond, Heir to the House of Lancaster, (as Son of Margaret, Daughter of John Duke of Somerset, Son of John Earl of Somerset, Son of John of Gaunt Duke of Lancaster) after the overthrow of Richard, married Elizabeth, Daughter and Heir to Edward the 4th. uniting by that Marriage the divided Families. He was also extracted from the British and French Royal Blood, as being Son to Edmund Tudor Earl of Richmond, Son to Owen Tudor (descended from Cadwallader, the last King of the Britains) and Katherine of France, Widow of Henry the 5th. His whole Wars was against home-bred Rebels, the chief being Lambert, and the Followers and Followers of Perkin Warbeck. 23.
- 1509 20 Henry VIII. Heir to both Families, between which were fought for the Diadem 17 pitched Fields ; in which perished 8 Kings and Princes, 40 Dukes, Marquesses, and Earls, 200000 of the common People, besides Barons and Gentlemen. This King banished the usurped Supremacy of the Popes, and began the Reformation of Religion ; though formerly he had writ a Book against Luther, for which the Pope gave him the honourable Title of The Defender of the Faith ; afterwards made Hereditary by Act of Parliament to his Heirs and Successors. A Prince of great Vices, but of greater Virtues. 38.
- 1547 21 Edward VI. the Son of Henry the 8th, by Jane Seymour his third Wife ; out of whose Womb he is said to be cut, to come into the World, as Caesar was ; but he had neither Caesar's Fortune nor length of Life ; dying very young, and his Affairs conducted by divided Councils ; though otherwise of great hopes, and of a pregnancy of Judgment above his years. 6.
- 1553 23 Mary, the Daughter of King Henry the 8th, by Katherine of Spain, the Widow of his Brother Arthur, restored the Popes Supremacy banished by her Father, with the whole mass of Popery abolished in her Brother's Reign. To which Religion so addicted, that in the short time of her Reign there was more Blood shed, than in the whole 44 years of her Sister Elizabeth. In the last year of her Reign she lost Calice to the French, which proved the loss of her life also, as it was supposed. 5.
- 1558 23 Elizabeth, the Daughter of King Henry the 8th, by the Lady Anne Bullein his second Wife, a most gracious Heroick Princess, was by the Divine Providence of God preserved from the Practices of her Enemies in her Sisters Reign, to sway the Scepter of the Kingdom. She pursued the Reformation of Religion, begun in the times of her Father and Brother ; refined the corrupt Coin brought in by her Father, furnished the Royal Navy with all kind of Warlike Ammunitions ; encreased the Revenue of the Universities, by the Statute of Provisions ; succoured the Scots against the French ; the French Protestants against the Papists, and both against the Spaniard : defended the Netherlands against the attempts of Spain; commanded the whole Ocean; entred League with the Muscovite; and was famous for her Prudence and Government amongst the Turks, Persians, and Tartars, yea, her very Enemies. Finally, she died in the 45 year of her Reign, and the 70. of her Life, on the 24 of March, Anno 1602. according to the computation of the Church of England, which beginneth the New Year with the Feast of the Annunciation. To whom succeeded JAMES the Sixth, King of the Scots, with the joy of all Men, as the next undoubted Heir of the Crown. Of whom we shall say more when we come to speak of the Monarchs of Britain, of which he was the first since the fall of the Roman Empire, and such more properly than the greatest of all those Emperors had been before: None of them having all the North parts of Britain it self, or any part of Ireland at all, nor many of the Isles adjoining, under their Dominion.
- L 1 2 Netherlands

In the mean time to look on England as a State distinct, we will consider it and the Kings thereof, with references to reputation abroad, and power at home; with the Revenues, Arms, and Military Orders of it, as in other places. And first for Reputation, when all Christendom in the Council of Constance, was divided into Nations, Anglicana Natio was one of the Principal, and not Subaltern; and had its voice of equal balance with the Nations of France or Italy, in all Affairs concerning the Doctrine, Discipline and Peace of the Church, which were there debated. And for the place due to the Kings hereof in those General Councils, and the rank they held among other Christian Princes; I find that the Emperour of Germany was accounted Major filius Ecclesiae; the King of France, Minor Filius; and the King of England, Filius tertius & adoptivus. The King of France in General Councils, had place next the Emperour, on his right Hand; the King of England on his left Hand, and the King of Scotland next before Castile. Now indeed the King of Spain being so much improved, is the dearly beloved Son of the Church; and arrogateth to himself the place above all other Princes; but in time of Pope Julius, the Controversie arising between the Ambassadors of the two Princes for Precedency: the Pope adjudged it to belong of right unto England. And Pope Pius the Fourth, upon the like Controversie arising between the Ambassadors of France and Spain, adjudged the Precedency to the French. And the present King of France, Lewis the 14th, forced the King of Spain to acknowledge that Right, upon a Quarrel arising between their Ambassadors in London, in the year 1661.

Touthing the Souldiery of Engl. and their most notable Achievements, both by Sea and Land, sufficient hath been said already. What Forces the Kings hereof have been able to Raise, and may command for present Service, will best be seen by the Action of King Henry the 8th at Bulloign, the Armies of Queen Elizabeth in 88, and the numbers of the Trained Bands of the several Counties. First, for the Action of King Henry the 8th, he had in his Avant Guard 12000 Foot, and 500 Light Horse in blew Jackets with red Guards; in the Rere-ward a like number both of Horse and Foot, and in the main Battel 20000 Foot; and 2000 Horse, all in Red Jackets and yellow Guards: the whole number 44000 Foot, and 3000 Horse. They drew after them 100 great Pieces, besides small ones, and for conveyance of their Ordnance, Baggage, and other necessities, no fewer than 25000 Draught-horses, besides other Carriages. In the next place for 88. the Queen dispersed in several places on the Southern Coasts of the Kingdom, to hinder the Landing of the Enemy, 25000 Soldiers of both sorts; at Tilbury, for the defence of the City of London, under the Command of the Earl of Leicester, 22000 Foot, and 1000 Horse: and for the Guard of her own Person, under the Lord Hunsdon, 84000 Foot, and 2000 Horse: in all the number of 84000 men; besides those goodly Troops which the Nobility and Gentry did present her with, at their own proper Charges. And as for the Trained Bands, the number of both sorts disciplined and mustered to be ready upon all occasions: in the eighth year of King James, (for I have since seen no Muster-Roll of them) amounted to 296130 able men, 141315 armed men, 935 Demilances, 6777 Light-Horse, 19345 Pioneers; besides what was required of Peers and Prelates, supposed to amount to 20000 armed men, and 4000 Light-Horse. And for their strength at Sea, besides the Navy Royal, consisting of about 30 gallant Ships, (besides the lesser Vessels; the best and bravest that any Prince of Christendom can boast of as his own propriety; there are such store of Colliar and Merchants Ships, fit for any Service, that in the year 88 aforesaid, the Queen had 100 Sail of good Ships to oppose the Spaniards; and 20 more to wait upon the motions of the Duke of Parma. And in the year 1597, she set out for the Island Voyage, no fewer than 120 Sail of all sorts, of which 60 were men of War.

As for the Revenues of this Kingdom, Boterus reckoned them in the time of King Henry the 7th, to be no more than 400000 Crowns per annum; but grants, that afterward they were improved to a Million more, by King Henry the 8th, the dissolution of Monasteries, and the benefit redounding from the Court of Wards, making that improvement. And to say truth, the Universal Dissolution of Religious Houses of all sorts, did for the time so mightily increase his annual Income, that he was fain to erect two new Courts (the Court of Augmentation, and the Court of Surveyors) for the better managing of the same. But these Additions being wasted by his own exorbitant expences, and the several Alienations made by King Edward the Sixth; those Courts of new erection were dissolved again; and the Revenue fell so short of its former height, that in the 12th year of Queen Elizabeth, the profits of the Crown (besides the Court of Wards, and the Dutchie of Lancaster) came to no more than to 188197 l. 4 s. Of which 110612 l. 13 s. went that year out upon the Navy, the charge of Household, and other necessary assignments. Since which time the great increase of Trading, both at home and abroad, and the great glut of Money in all parts of the World, hath added very much to the Intrads. The certainty whereof as I do not know, so neither will I aim at it by uncertain Hearsay.

The Principal Orders of Knighthood are, and were, 1. of the Round Table, instituted by Arthur King of the Britains, and one of the Worlds Nine Worthies. It consisted of 150 Knights, whose Names are recorded in the History of King Arthur, there were Sir Ure, a wounded Knight came to be cured of his hurts; it being his fate that only the best Knight of the Order should be his Chirurgeon: The Arms of most of these, with their several Blazons (I know not on how good Authority) we find in Bara, the French Herald. The principal of them were Sir Lancelot, Sir Tristram, Sir Lamorock, Sir Gawin, &c. all placed at one Round Table, to avoid quarrels about priority and place. The Round Table hanging in the great Hall at Winchester, is falsely called Arthurs Round Table, it being not of sufficient Antiquity, and containing but 24 Seats. Of these Knights they are reported many fabulous Stories. They ended with their Founder, and are feigned by that Lucian of France, Rablais, to be the Ferry-men of Hell; and that their pay is a piece of mouldy Bread, and a philop on the Nose.

2. Of S. George, called commonly the Garter, instituted by King Edward the Third, to increase Vertue and Valour in the hearts of his Nobility; or as some will, in honour of the Countess of Salisbury Garter, of which Lady the King formerly had been enamoured. But this I take to be a vain and idle Romance, derogatory both to the Founder, and the Order; first published by Polydore Virgil, a Stranger to the Affairs of England, and by him taken upon no better ground than fama vulgi, the tradition of the common People; too trifling a Foundation for so great a Building; Common bruit, being so infamous an Historian, Historian, that wise Men neither report after it, nor give credit to any thing they receive from it. But for this fame or common bruit, the vanity and improbabilities thereof have been elsewhere canvassed. Suffice it to observe in this time and place, that the Garter was given unto this Order, in testimony of that bond of Love and Affection, wherewith the Knights or Fellows of it were to be bound severally unto one another, and all of them jointly to the King as the Sovereign of it. So saith the Register of the Order, (in which occurreth not one word of the Ladies Garter) affirming that King Edward did so fit the Habit unto that design, Ut omnia ad amicitiam & concordiam tendere nemo non intelligat. But to return unto the Order, there are of it 26 Knights, of which the Kings of England are Sovereigns: And is so much desired for its excellency, that eight Emperors, twenty one Foreign Kings, twenty two Foreign Dukes and Princes, besides divers Noblemen of other Countries have been Fellows of it. The Ensign is a blue Garter, buckled on the left Leg, on which these words are embroider'd, viz. Hony soit qui mal y pense. About their Necks they wear a Blue Ribbond, at the end of which hangeth this Image of St. George, upon whose Day the Installations of the new Knights are commonly celebrated.

3. Of the Bath, brought first into England, 1399. by Henry the Fourth. They are created at the Coronation of Kings and Queens, and the Installation of the Princes of Wales. Their Duty to defend true Religion, Widows, Maids, Orphans, and to maintain the King's Rights. The Knights thereof distinguished by a Red Ribbond, which they wear ordinarily about their Necks, to difference them from Knights Bachelors, of whom they have in all places the precedency; unless they be also the Sons of Noblemen, to whom their Birth gives it before all Orders.

4. Of Baronets, an Order instituted by King Jarvis. the Ninth Year of his Reign, for the furtherance of the Plantation of Ulster. They have Precedency of the Knights of the Baths, but not of those of the Garter, nor of the younger Sons of the Nobility. But this being Hereditary, not Personal, and rather Civil than Military, is not so properly to be ranked amongst Orders of Knighthood.

The Arms of the Realm of England, are Mars, three Lyons passant Gardant, Sol. The reason why these Arms, quartered with the French, took the second place, are, 1. Because that France at the time of the first quartering of them, was the larger and more famous Kingdom. 2. That the French seeing the honour done to their Arms, might more easily be induced to have acknowledged the English Title. 3. Because the English Arms were compounded of the Lion of Aquitaine, and the two Lions of Normandy, being both French Duchies.

There were in England, at and since the time of the Reformation.

W A L E S.

WALES is bounded on all sides with the Sea, except towards England on the East; from which separated by the River Dee, and a line drawn to the River Wie. Anciently it extended Eastwards to the River Severn, till by the puissance of Offa, the great King of the Mercians, the Welch or Britains were driven out of the plain Countries beyond that River, and forced to betake themselves to the Mountains; where he caused them to be shut up and divided from England by an huge Ditch, called in Welch, Claudb Offa, i. e. Offa's Dike: Which Dike beginning at the influx of the Wie into the Severn, not far from Chepstow, extendeth 84 Miles in length, even as far as Chester, where the Dee is mingled with the Sea. Concerning which Ditch, there was a Law made by Harold, That if any Welchman was found with a Weapon on this side of it, he should have his Right-hand cut off by the King's Officers.

The Name of Wales some derive from Ihwallo, the Son of Cadwallador, who with the small remainder of his British Subjects, made good the fastnesses of this Country, and was the first who had the Title of King of Wales. Others conceive that the Name of Welch and Wales, was given them by the Saxons; who having possessed themselves of all the rest of the Country, called the Britains, who lived here by the Name of Walsh, which in their Language signifieth as much as Aliens; because they differed from them both in their Laws and Language: which is the general Opinion. Most probable it is, that as the Britains derive their Pedigree from the Galls (as before was proved) so they might still retain the Name; and were called Wallish by the Saxons, instead of Gallish: The Saxons used in most Words W. for G. as Warre for Guerre, Warden for Guardian, and the like. And this to be believed the rather, because the Frenchmen to this day call the Country Galles, and the eldest Son of England, La Prince de Galles: As also that the Dutch or Germans, (of whom the Saxons are a part) do call such Nations as inhabit on the Skirts of France, by the Name of Wallons.

The ancient Inhabitants hereof, in the time of the Romans, before it had the Name of Wales, were the Silures, possessing the Counties of Hereford, Brecknock, Radnor, Monmouth, and Clamorgan, all Glocestershire beyond the Severn, and the South parts of Worcestershire on the same side also: their chief Towns, Ariconium, now Hereford, (not reckon'd since the time of Offa, as a part of Wales,) Baleum, now Buelth, in Brecknock, Cobannium, now Abergavenny, in Monmouth; Magni, now New Radnor, in the County so named; and Bovium, now Boverton, in Glamorgan. 2. The Dimetæ, possessing Cardigan, Caermarthen, and Pembrokeshire, whose chief Towns were Loven-tium, now New-Castle, in Caermarthen; Muridunum, or Caermarthen it self: and Oclopitæ, where now stands S. Davids, by the Welch called Meneu, whence that Bishop hath the Name of Menevensis in Latin. 3. The Ordovices, inhabiting the Counties of Merioneth, Carnarvon, Anglesey, Denbigh, Flint, and Montgomery; with the North part of Worcestershire beyond the River Severn, and all Shropshire, on the same side of the River. Their chief Towns were Segontium, now Caer Seont, in Carnarvonshire; Cononium, now Convey in the same County; Bonium, where after stood the famous Monastery of Ban-chor, in Flintshire; and Mediolanium, now Llanvillin, in the County of Montgomery. By these three Nations was all that Tract possessed, which lieth on the other side of the Severn. A very stout and hardy People, and so impatient of the Yoke, that two of the three Legions which the Romans kept constantly in Britain, as before is said, were planted in and near this People, the better to contain them in due obedience; that is to say, the second Legion at Caer Leon upon Urk, of which more anon; and the twentieth at Deurvana, where now stands West-Chester.

Chester. So difficult a thing it was to make this Nation subject to the Power of Rome; and no less difficult to bring them under the Command of the Saxons, whom they withstood, when all the rest of Britain had been conquered by them; and lived to see their Victors overcome by the Normans, before themselves had yielded to a foreign Yoke.

The Christian Faith planted amongst the Britains, in the time of Lucius, they still retained, when all the rest of the Island had been relapsed to Paganism: and they retained it not in secret, as afraid to own it, but in a well constituted Church. Insomuch that Augustine the Monk, when he first preached the Gospel to the English Saxons, found here no fewer than seven Bishops; that is to say, Herefordensis, Tavenfis, Paternensis, Banchorensis, Ebwyensis, Wiccienfis, and Morganensis, (or rather Menevensis;) all which, excepting only Paternensis, do still remain amongst us, though in other Names; Hereford, and Worcester, (Wiccienfis) reckon'd now in England; St. Davids or Menevensis, Tavenfis or Llandaff, Bangor, and Ebwyensis, or St. Asaph, in Wales, according to the present boundaries and limits of it: And as they did retain the Faith, so they retained it after the Tradition of their Predecessors; neither submitting unto Augustine as Archbishop of Canterbury, nor to the Pope from whom he came as Oecumenical, or chief Pastor of the Church of Christ; nor receiving any new Doctrines or Traditions from them; but standing to those Principles of Liberty and Religion which they were possessed of, till all the World almost had yielded to that powerful See. Not manumitted from the vassalage and thralldom to it, till they embraced the Reformation of the Church of England in Doctrine, Discipline, and Worship; the Liturgy whereof was by the command of Queen Elizabeth, translated into the Welch or British; as the Bible also was by virtue of an Act of Parliament, in the Fifth of that Queen, the care thereof committed to the Bishop of Hereford, and the four Bishop's of Wales. But because the Bible then set forth was only in a large Church Volume; it was in the beginning of the Reign of King Charles reduced to a more portable Bulk, at the cost and charge of my Cousin, Mr. Rowland Heylin, one of the Aldermen of London; who also caused the Book called, The Practice of Piety to be Printed in that Language for the instruction of the People: and a Welch or British Dictionary to be made and published, for the understanding of the Language.

But to return unto the Church, and Affairs thereof, for the better ordering of the same, it hath been long ago divided into four Diocesses (besides that of Hereford) for the exercise of Ecclesiastical Discipline, those Diocesses subdivided into nine Arch-Deconries, as before in England: all subject heretofore to their own Primate or Archbishop, residing in the City of Isca Silurum, the Metropolis of the Province of Britannia Secunda, called by the Welch or Britains, Caer-Leon, or the City of the Legion, from the second Legion fixt there for defence of the Province; and Caer-Leon upon Usk, because situate on the River so named. But this City being too much exposed to the fury of the Saxons, the Archiepiscopal See was translated to Meneu, standing on a Promontory in the extreame Angle of Pembrokeshire, by David then Archbishop thereof, and near of Kin to Arthur, that renowned King of the Britains; from whom, in tract of time, the Name of Meneu being left off, the See and City came to be called St. Davids. From David unto Sampson the twenty sixth Archbishop of the Welch, (being above 400 Years) did they hold this Dignity; but then the Pestilence extremely raging in these Parts, Archbishop Sampson carried with him the Episcopal Pall, and therewith the Dignity it self to Dole in Bretagne. After which time we hear of no Archbishop in Wales, in Name and Title, though the Power proper thereunto still remained among them: The Welch Bishops acknowledging no other Primate, nor receiving Consecration from any other hands than their own Bishop of St. Davids, till Bishop Barnard was compelled to submit himself to the Power and Jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Canterbury, in the time of King Henry the First.

But its time to look upon the face of the Country, as it stands at the present, which we find Mountainous and Barren; not able to maintain its People but by helps elsewhere. To make amends for which defect, there were some Silver Mines discover'd in it not long since, by Sir Hugh Middleton, Knight and Baronet; not only to the great honour of his own Country, but to the Profit and Renown of the whole Island of Great Britain. Their chief Commodities are coarse Cloths, entituled commonly by the Name of Welch Freeze, and Cottons; which Merchandise was heretofore brought to Osweestre (the furthest Town of Shropshire) as the common Empory; there bought by the Merchants of Shrewsbury. But the Welch coveting to draw the Staple more into their own Country, occasioned the Merchant to hold off from buying their Commodities; till in the end the Merchant got the better of them, and enforced them to settle the whole Trade at Shrewsbury, where it still continueth.

To speak of Mountains in a Country which is wholly Mountainous, were a thing unnecessary; yet of most note are those of 1. Snowdon, 2. Brechin, 3. Rardurvaure, and 4. Plinlimmon: Not much observable but for their vast height, and those many notable Rivers which issue from them. The principal whereof are, 1. Dee, in Latin called Deva, arising out of Rardurvaure Hills in Merionethshire, and running into the Sea not far from Chester. Over this River, Edgar, King of England, was rowed triumphantly in his Barge by eight inferior Kings, Vassals and Tributaries to him, that is to say, Kenneth, King of the Scots; Malcolm, King of Cumberland; Mac-cuis, King of the Isles; Dufwal, Gryffith, Howel, Jago, and Indetbel, Princes or Kings of Wales; using these words to such as attended on him, that then his Successors might call themselves Kings of England when they did the like. This was in the Year 973. and the last of his Reign. 2. Wie, in Latin called Vaga, arising from Plinlimmon-Hills, and emptying it self into the Severn at Chepstow. More in the heart of the Country (for these are but borders for the greatest part of their course.) 3. Conwey, which rising in Merionethshire, and dividing the Counties of Denbigh and Carnarvon, mingleth with the Sea at Abur Conwey. 4. Tywie, which rising in Montgomeryshire, and passing between the Counties of Cardigan, Pembroke, and Caermarthen, runneth into the Sea a little below Cardigan. 5. Chedlady, which runneth quite through Pembrokeshire, emptieth it self into Milford-Haven, one of the most capacious and safest Havens, not of England only, but of all the World.

The Men are of a faithful Carriage towards all Men, especially towards one another in a strange Country, and towards Strangers in their own. Of a temper questionless much enclining to Choler, as being subject to the Passion by Aristotle called αλεχολία, by which Men are quickly moved to Anger, and as soon appeased; of all Angers the best and noblest. Their Language (the old British) hath the least commixture of foreign words of any in Europe; and by reason of its many Consonants and guttural Letters, is not so pleasing as some others in the Pronunciation. A Language not much studied by those of other Nations, in regard that such of the Inhabitants who have addicted themselves to Learning, have rather chose to express themselves in the Latin or English Tongues, than that of their own Native Country. The principal of which (not to say any thing of Merlin, the Tages of the Welch or British) were 1. Gildas, for his great knowledge surnamed Sapiens. 2. Geofry of Monmouth, and 3. Giraldus Cambrensis, the Historians; and of later times, 4. William Morgan, the Translator of the Bible into Welch, for which performance most deservedly made Bishop of Landaff. 5. Sir John Price, the Antiquary. 6. Owen, the Epigrammatist, &c.

The whole Country (not taking in the Counties of Shropshire and Monmouth into the reckoning) contain in it twelve Shires only; of which, seven were set out by King Edward the First; that is to say, Glamorgan, Pembroke, Caermarthen, Cardigan, Merioneth, Anglesey, and Carnarvon; the other five, viz. the Counties of Denbigh, Flint, Montgomery, Radnor, and Brecknock, were after added out of the Marchlands by King Henry VIII. These twelve Shires are again contracted or subdivided into four Circuits, for the administration of Justice. Of which the first containeth the Counties of Montgomery, Flint, and Denbigh; the second those of Carnarvon, Anglesey, and Merioneth; the third those of Caermarthen, Cardigan, and Pembroke; and the fourth those of Glamorgan, Brecknock, and Radnor.

In these 12 Shires are reckoned one Chase, 13 Forests, 36 Parks, 230 Rivers, and an hundred Bridges. They contain also 1016 Parishes, amongst which, four Cities, 55 Market-Towns, and 41 Castles of the old erection. The Cities small, poor, and inconsiderable. The Market Towns, those especially on the Marches and out-parts of the Country, very fair and strong; as being not only built for Commerce and Trade, but fortified with Walls and Castles to keep in the Welch; and so employed till the incorporating Wales with England, took away all occasion of the old Hostilities. And for the Castles in the Inlands, partly by the iniquity of time, which is edax rerum, but chiefly by the Policy of the Kings of England, who would not suffer any places of strength to remain in a Country almost inaccessible, and amongst Men apt to take the advantage offered; the very ruines of them are now brought to ruine.

But to proceed more particularly, the four Cities (or Episcopal Sees) are 1. St Davids, formerly the Metropolitan of Wales, situate on the Promontory in Pembrokeshire, by the Ancients called Octopitæ; in a safe place, and far enough from the Saxons, whom the Welch most feared, but incommodious enough for all the rest of the Clergy to repair unto it; and not so safe neither unto the Inhabitants of it, in respect of sundry other Nations, who have often spoiled and defaced it. For standing near the Sea, it hath been frequently visited and spoiled by the Danes, Norwegians, and other Pirates; insomuch that the Bishops were enforced to remove their dwelling to Caermarthen; which brought the City (small enough before, when it at the biggest) to the condition of a Village. 2. Llandaffe, upon the River Taffe, whence it took the Name; Llan, in the Welch or British, signifying a Church; Llandaffe, the Church upon the Taffe: the Bishops whereof derive their Lineal Succellion from those of Caer-Leon upon Uik, though the Primacy or Archbishop's See were removed to Menew, a small Town now it is, God wot, nothing to rank it for a City but the Cathedral Church, and the Prebends Houses. 3. S Asaph, a small Town in Flintshire, so called from S. Asaph, the second Bishop hereof; left here by Kentigern a Scot, by whom the Cathedral Church was founded, about the Year 560. situate on the Banks of the River Elwy, thence called Llan-Elwy by the Welch, the Bishop Elwynensis in some Latin Writers. 4. Bangor upon the Menai, a Branch of the Irish Sea, of no more beauty and renown than the other three; but only for the Cathedral founded here by the first Bishops, defaced by Owen Glendower, and afterwards re-edified by Henry Dean, Bishop hereof, An. 1496.

Towns of chief note (for these Cities have not so much in them which is worth the noting) are 1. Shrewsbury, counted now in England, but heretofore the Seat of the Princes of Powysland, who had here their Palace; which being burnt in some of their Broils with England, is now converted into Gardens for the use of the Townsmen. The Town well traded and frequented by the Welch and English, the common Empory of both; well built, and strongly situate on a rising Ground, almost encompassed with the Severn; that part thereof which is not fenced with the River, being fortified with a very strong Castle, the work of Roger de Montgomery, the first Earl hereof, Anno 1067. Over the River, for convenience of Passage, it hath two Bridges, and but two, the one towards England, and the other called the Welch Bridge, which is towards Wales; built by Leoline or Llewellen the First, one of the Princes of North-Wales, whose they conceive to be that Statua which is there standing on the Gate. Remarkable since the times of King Henry the Sixth, for giving the Title of Earl to the noble Family of the Talbots; a Family of great Honour, and as great an Estate, till the parcelling of the Lands betwixt the Daughters and Co-heirs of Gilbert Talbot, late Earl hereof; according to the ill Custom of England, where many times the Estate goes to the Females, and the Honour (with nothing to maintain it) to the next Heir-Male. 2. Banbor, by Beda called Bancornaburg, a famous Monastery of the Britains; containing above 2000 Monks, attending their Devotions at the times appointed, at other times labouring for their livelihood; most cruelly and unmercifully slaughter'd by the Saxons, at the instigation of Austin the first Archbishop of Canterbury, offended that they would not yield unto his Authority. 3. Carnarvon, on the Menai before-mentioned, not far from Bangor, (the Monastery of Banbor being in Flintshire) well walled, and fortified with a strong Castle by King Edward the First, after his Conquest of the Country, formerly much resorted to, for the Chancery and Exchequer of the Princes of North-Wales. 4. Denbigh, well seated on the Banks of the River Istrad, which from thence runs into the Clwyd, the fairest River of all those Parts. A Town well traded and frequented, especially since it was made by King Henry the Eighth, the head Town of a County; before which time of great resort, as being the head Town of the Barony of Denbigh, conceived to be one of the goodliest Territories in England; having more Gentlemen holding of it than any other. 5. Matravall, not far from Montgomery, heretofore a fair and capacious Town, honour'd with the Palace, and made the chief Seat of the Princes of Powysland, thence called Kings of Matravall; now a poor Village. 6. Caermarthen, Maridunum anciently, whence the modern Name, the Britains adding Caer unto it; not called so from Caer-Merlin, or the City of Merlin, enchanted by the Lady of the Lake, in a deep Cave hereabouts, as old Fables and Romances tell us. A fair large Town, beautified with a Collegiate Church; to which there was a purpose in the time of King Edward the Sixth, of removing the Episcopal See from St Davids. Not far off, on the top of an Hill, stands Dinevour-Castle, the chief Seat of the Princes of South-Wales, thence called Kings of Dinevour; who had their Chancery and Exchequer in the Town of Caermarthen. 7. Haverford West, situated in the Chersoneuse, or Demy-Island of Pembrokeshire, by the Welch called Ros; by the English, Little-England beyond Wales, by reason of the English Tongue there spoken; a Town the best traded and frequented of all South-Wales. 8. Milford, in the same County of Pembroke, famous for giving Name to the most safe and capacious Haven in all the Island, consisting of sundry Creeks, Bays, and Roads for Ships, which make it capable of entertaining the greatest Navy: The Landing-place of Henry the Seventh, when he came for England. 9. Monmouth, situate at the mouth or influx of the River Munow. (where it falleth into the Wie) whence it had the Name. A Town belonging anciently to the House of Lancaster, the Birth-place of King Henry the Fifth, called Henry of Monmouth. That one particular enough to renown the place, and therefore we shall add no more. 10. Ludlow, a Town of great resort, by reason of the Court and Council of the Marches, kept here for the most part ever since the incorporating of Wales with England, for the ease of the Welch, and bordering Subjects, in their Suits at Law. Situate on the confluence of the Tem, and Corve, and beautified with a very strong Castle; the Palace heretofore of some of the Princes of Wales of the Blood-Royal of England, at such times as they resided in this Country (of

(of which more anon;) and of late times, the ordinary Seat of the Lord President of Wales; now reckon'd as all Shropshire on that side of the Severn, as a part of England. Of Anglesey, and the Towns thereof, we shall speak hereafter, now taking notice only of Aberfraw, the Royal-Seat sometimes of the Princes of North-Wales, call'd thence Kings of Aberfraw.

The Story of the Britains till the time of Cadwallader their last King, we have had before. After whose retirement unto Rome, the whole Name and Nation became divided into three Bodies; that is to say, the Cornish Britains, the Britains of Cumberland, and the Britains of Wales. The Cornish Britains governed by their own Dukes, till the time of Egbert the first Monarch of England; by whom subdued, An. 809. and made a Province of that Kingdom. The Britains of Cumberland had their own Kings also, (some of whose Names occur in Story) till the Year 946. when conquered by Edmund, King of England, the Son of Athelstan, their last King being named Dammilus, as Matthew of Westminster informs us. But the main Body of them getting into the mountainous parts beyond the Severn, did there preserve the Name and Reputation of their Country; although their Princes were no longer call'd Kings of Britain, but of the Wallish-men or Welch; and much ado they had to make good that Title; all the plain Country beyond Severn being taken from them by Offa King of the Mercians; and themselves made Tributaries for the rest by Egbert before-mentioned, by Athelstan afterwards. Which last impos'd a Tribute on them of 20 pounds of Gold, 300 pounds of Silver, and 200 head of Cattel yearly; exchanged in following times for a Tribute of Wolves. But howsoever, they continued for a time the Title of Kings, whose Names are thus set down by Glover, in his Catalogue of Honour, published by Milles.

The Kings of Wales.

A. Ch.

690 1 Idwallo, Son of Cadwallader.
 720 2 Roderick, Son of Idwallo. 33.
 755 3 Conan, Son of Roderic. 63.
 818 4 Mervin, the Son in law of Conan. 25.
 843 5 Roderick II. surnamed the Great, Son of Mervin, who divided his Kingdom, small enough before, amongst his Sons; giving Guinedth, or North-Wales, to Amarawd his eldest Son; to Cadel, his second Son, Debeubarth, or South-Wales; and Powys-land to his youngest Son Mervin; conditioned, that the two younger Sons and their Successors, should hold their Estates in Fee of the Kings of North-Wales, and acknowledge the Sovereignty thereof, as Liege-men and Homagers. According unto which appointment, it was ordained in the Constitutions of Howel Dda, the Legislator of Wales, that as the Kings of Aberfraw were bound to pay 63 pounds in a way of Tribute to the Kings of London; so the Kings of Dynevor and Altraval, should pay, in a way of Tribute, the like Sum to the Kings of Aberfraw. But notwithstanding the reservation of the Sovereignty to the Kings of North-Wales, Roderick committed a great Solacism in point of State, by this dismembering of his Kingdom, especially at a time when all the Kingdoms of the Saxons were brought into one, and that one apt enough upon all occasions to work upon the weakness of the neighbouring Welch; which had they continued under one sole Prince, might have preserved their Liberty, and themselves a Kingdom, as well as those of Scotland, for so long a time, against the Power and Puissance of the Kings of England. Yet was not this the worst of the mischief neither; his Successors subdividing (by his example) their small Estates into many parcels, insomuch that of the Eight tributary Kings which row'd King Edgar on the Dee, five of them were the Kings or Princes of Wales. But Roderick did not think of that which was to come, whom we must follow in our Story, according to the division of the Country made by him into three Estates of North-Wales, South-Wales, and Powys-land.

1. NORTH-WALES, or Guinedth, contained the Counties of Merioneth and Carnarvan, the Isle of Anglesey, and the greatest parts of Denbigh and Flint-shires. The chief Towns whereof are Bangor, Denbigh, Canarvan, Aberfraw, spoken of before; and some in Anglesey, whereof we shall speak more hereafter. The Country (Anglesey excepted) the most barren and unfruitful part of Wales; but withal the safest and furthest from the danger of the encroaching English; which possibly might be the reason why it was set out for the portion of the Eldest Son, in whom the Sovereignty of the Welch was to be preserved by the Kings or Princes of North-Wales.

A. Ch.

877 1 Amarawd. 36.
 913 2 Idwallo, Son of Amarawd.
 3 Merick, Son of Idwallo.
 4 James, or Jago, Brother of Merick.
 1076 5 Conan, Son of James, or Jago.
 1099 6 Gryffith ap Conan.
 1120 7 Owen Guinedth, Son of Gryffith.
 1178 8 David ap Owen, Son of Owen Guinedth.
 1194 9 Llewellen ap Forweth, the Nephew of David.
 1240 10 David ap Llewellen.
 1246 11 Llewellen II. Son of Gryffith, the Brother of David ap Llewellen, the last Prince of Wales, of the British Race. Of whom it is said, that once consulting with a Witch, he was told by her that it was his destiny, to be carried in triumph through London, with a Crown on his Head. Hereupon making some Excursions on the English Borders, he drew upon himself the whole part of King Edward the First, which not being able to withstand, and the King as unwilling on the other side not to fight with Mountains, Commissioners were appointed to conclude the differences: Robert Lord Tipstaff, and some others, for the King of England; for the Welch Prince, Grono ap Hygon, a great Man of that Country, descended from Brackwal Skybrack, one of the Princes of Powys-land, (from whom if Cambden Clarenceux be of any credit, the Author of these Papers doth derive his Pedigree) under whom that Family had the Office of Hereditary Cup-bearer, and from thence their Name, Heylyn, Promys, sive a poculus, que rex in proprium nomen abiit (saith the Welch Dictionary.) By those Commissioners it was concluded and agreed on, that Llewellen should enjoy a part of the Country with the Title of Prince, during his Life; the rest in present, and the whole after his Decease, to be surrendred over to the King of England. But David, the Brother of Llewellen, finding himself excluded by this Agreement, from the hope of Succession, incensed his Brother and the Welch to a new Revolt; the issue thereof was the taking of David, executed by the hand of Justice; and the death of Llewellen, slain in Battel near the Buelth in Brecknock-shire: Whose Head being pitched upon a Stake, and adorned with a Paper Crown, was by a Horseman carried triumphantly through London, An. 1282. And so the Prophecie was fulfilled. In him ended the Line of the Princes of North-Wales, after they had for the space of 405 Years resisted not only the private Undertakers and Adventurers of England, but the Forces of many Puissant Monarchs, whose Attempts they always made frustrate, by retiring into the heart of their Country, and leaving nothing for the English to encounter with, but their Woods and Mountains. But now the fatal period of the British Liberty being come, they were constrained to yield to the stronger. What followed after this, we shall see anon.

The Arms of these Princes was quarterly Gules and Or, four Lions Passant Guardant counterchanged.

2. POWYS-LAND contained the whole Counties of Montgomery and Radnor, all Shropshire beyond the Severn, with the Town of Shrewsbury, and the rest of Denbigh and Flintshires; comprehending by the estimation of those times, fifteen Cantrets, or hundreds of Villages; the word Cant signifying an Hundred, and Tret a Village. The principal Cities or Towns of it were, St. Asaph, Shrewsbury, Matrawal, spoken of before. A Country more partaking of the nature and fertility of England, than the parts belonging unto Guinedth, or North-Wales; but always lying in harms way, by reason of the Neighbourhood of the more potent English; and therefore given by Roderick to Mervin, his youngest Son, partly because he was the youngest; but chiefly because he was a Man of an approved Valour, and so more fit to have his portion upon the Borders. In his Line it continued a long time together, but much afflicted and dismembred by the Earls of Chester and Shrewsbury, who took from them a good part of Flint, Denbigh, and Shropshire; and by the Princes of North-Wales, who cast many a greedy Eye upon it. Of the Successors of Prince Mervin, I find no good Constat, more than of Breckwel Skythrac, before remembred. The last that held it all entire was Meredith ap Blethyn, who following the ill example of Roderick Mawr, divided it betwixt Madoc and Gryffith, his two Sons. Of which Madoc died at Winchester, An. 1165. in the time of King Henry the Second, his part hereof depending after his decease, on the Fortunes of Guinedth: And Gryffith was by Henry I. made Lord of Powys (the stile of Prince left off as too high and lofty.) In his Race it continued till the time of King Edward I. to whom, at a Parliament holden in Shrewsbury, Owen ap Gryffith, the fifth from Gryffith ap Meredith before-mentioned, surrendred his Place and Title; and received them of the King again to be holden in Capite and free Baronage, according to the Custom of England. Avis, or Harris, Daughter and Heir of this Owen ap Gryffith, was married unto John Charleton, Valat (or Gentleman of the Privy-Chamber) to King Edward the Second, by whom, in right of his Wife, he was made Lord Powys. Edward the Fifth also of this Line of the Charletons, was the last of that House; his Daughter Jane conveying the Estates and Title to the House of the Greys; and of them also five enjoyed it, the last Lord Powys of the Line or Race of Mervin, being Edward Grey, who died in the days of our Grand-Fathers. And so the Title lay extinct, until revived again in the Person of Sir William Herbert of Red-Castle, descended from the Herberts, Earl of Pembroke; created Lord Powys, by King Charles the First, An. 1629.

The Arms of the Princes of Powysland, were Or, a Lyon Rampant, Gules.

3. SOUTH-WALES, or Debenbarth, contained the Counties of Monmouth, Glamorgan, Caermarthen, Cardigan, and Brecknock; the greatest and most fruitful part of all Wales, but more exposed to the invasion of Foreign Nations, English, Danes, Flemings, and Norwegians, by whom the Sea Coasts were from time to time most grievously plagued; insomuch that the Kings and Princes hereof were enforced to remove their Seat from Caermarthen, where it was fixt at first, unto Dynevor Castle, as a place of greater strength and safety; where it continued till the Princes of it were quite extinct, called from hence Kings of Dynevor, as before is said. The chief Towns of it, Caermarthen, Monmouth, Landaffe, S. Davids, spoken of already. The Kings and Princes, as far as I can find upon any certainty, are these that follow,

The Princes of South-Wales.

A Chr.

- 877 1 Cadel, the Son of Roderick Mawre.
- 2 Howel.
- 907 3 Howel Dha, Sovereign King of Wales.
- 948 4 Owen, the Son of Dha.
- 5 Meredith, Son of Owen.

- 998 6 Aeneas, or Evenus, Brother of Meredith.
- 7 Theodorct the Great.
- 1077 8 Rhese ap Theodore.
- 1093 9 Gryffith ap Rhese.
- 10 Rhese II. ap Gryffith.

11 Gryffith ap Rhese, the last Prince of South-Wales, of the Line of Cadel, after they had with great struggling maintained their Liberty for the space of 300 Years and upwards; but so, that though they still preserved the Title of Princes, they lost a great part of their Country to the Norman-English. For in the Reign of William Rufus, Bernard de Norman a Noble Norman, seized upon those Parts which now make the County of Brecknock, being then a fair and goodly Lordship: And Robert Fitz Haymon, with some other noble Adventurers, made themselves Masters of Glamorgan, in which the Posterity of some of them are still remaining. Incouraged by their good success, Arnulph of Montgomery, in the time of King Hen, the First, won from the Welch a great part of Dyvet, which we now call Pembrokeshire; as the Earls of Warren, and Lord Martino, about the same times did prevail exceedingly in the Conquest of Cardigan and Monmouth. So that the poor Princes had no Country left entire, but Caernarthen only, too little to maintain them in so high a Title. And though this last Gryffith, in the time of the Wars in England, betwixt Maud the Empress, and King Stephen, had recovered a great part of his lost Estate; yet neither he nor his did enjoy it long; himself deceasing shortly after, and his two Sons, Cymmerick and Meredith, being taken by King Henry the Second, who most cruelly put out their Eyes: Yet did the Welch, as well as possibly they could, endeavour to preserve the Liberty which their Fathers left them; till the Felicity and Wisdom of King Edward the First, put an end unto the Wars of Wales, and settled them in some degree of Peace and Quiet.

But before we come to speak to this, we are to shew another Catalogue of the Kings and Princes of Wales, different from the Succellion of them before laid down; and made according to the History of Wales, writ by Humphrey Lloyd: this Catalogue containing the Succellion of the greater and predominant Princes, whether of Gwynedth, Debenbarth, or Powys-land; such as gave Law unto the rest, and had the honour to be called Kings of Wales, though Princes only of their own proper and particular Countries; as formerly we had a Catalogue of the Monarchs of the English Saxons, made out of the Predominant Princes of the Saxon Heptarchy. Only we shall find some in the following Catalogue, who were not naturally and lineally Princes of any of the three, and therefore not expressed in the former Tables; but such as by strong hand had intruded into those Estates, to the prejudice of the right Heirs, overpowered by them.

The Kings and Princes of Wales, according to the Welch History.

- 688 1 Ivor, a potent Interloper, upon Cadwallader's departure usurped the Kingdom.
- 690 2 Idwallo, or Edwall, Son of Cadwallader, restored unto his Father's Throne.
- 720 3 Roderick Malbrinnoc, the Son of Idwallo.
- 755 4 Conan Tiendaetbry, the Son of Roderick.
- 820 5 Mervin Urich, in right of Eisyllt his Wife, the Daughter of Conan.
- 843 6 Roderick Mawre, (who divided Wales into three Estates) the Son of Mervin.
- 877 7 Amarawdb, Prince of Gwynedth, the Son of Roderick Mawre.
- 913 8 Edwal Voel, Prince of Guinedth, Son of Amarawdb; made tributary to Atbelstan King of England.
- 940 9 Howel Dha, (or the Good) Prince of Debenbarth, and Powys.

- 948 10 Iseval, and Iago, Sons of Edwal Mael, to whom King Edgar did release the Tribute ordained by King Atelstan, to be paid in Money, for a tribute of Wolves; of which we spake before when we were in England.
- 982 11 Howel, the Son of Iseval, succeeded in the Kingdom of Wales, his Father being still alive, and of right Prince of Gwynedib.
- 984 12 Cadwalan, the Brother of Howel.
- 986 13 Meredith ap Owen, Prince of Deheubarth.
- 992 14 Idwal III. Son of Merrick, the Eldest Son of Ithwal Mael; which Merrick had been pretermitted, as unfit for Government.
- 1003 15 Laden ap Blethard, an Usurper.
- 1015 16 Llewellyn ap Sitguth, descended from Amarawdb, the first Prince of Gwynedib, or North Wales.
- 1021 17 Iago ap Edwal, Prince of Gwynedib, Son of Idwal the Third.
- 1037 18 Gryffith ap Llewellyn, the Son of Llewellyn ap Sitguth, and the Lady Angharad.
- 1061 19 Elthyn, and Rhywallon, Sons of Angharad, the Daughter of Meredith ap Owen, Prince of Deheubarth, by a second Husband.
- 1073 20 Triabern ap Caradoc, Cousin to Blethyn.
- 1078 21 Gryffith, Prince of Gwynedib, Son of Conan, the Son of Iago ap Edwal, one of the Princes of the same, did Homage to William the Conqueror, and was the last that had the Title of King of Wales.
- 1137 22 Owen Gwynedib Prince of Gwynedib, and Sovereign Prince of Wales, eldest Son of Gryffith.
- 1169 23 David ap Owen, Prince of Gwynedib, the younger Son of Owen Gwynedib.
- 1194 24 Llewellyn, Son of Forwerth, eldest Son of Owen Gwynedib, excluded by David his younger Brother.
- 1242 25 David ap Llewellyn, Prince of Gwynedib, Son of Llewellyn ap Forwerth.
- 1246 26 Llewellyn, Son of Gryffith, the Brother of David, the last Sovereign Prince of Wales, of the Race of Cadwalader; overcome and slain in Battel by King Edward the First, An. 1282. as before is said; by means whereof the Principality of Wales was added to the Crown of England.

When King Edward had thus fortunately effected this great business, he gave unto his English Barons and other Gentlemen of note, many fair Signiorities and Estates; as well to reward them for their service in the Conquest, as to engage so many able Men, both in Purse and Power, for the perpetual defence and subjection of it. As for the Lordship of Flint, and the Towns and Estates lying on the Sea coasts, he held them in his own hands, both to keep him self strong, and to curb the Welsh: and (wherein he dealt like the politick Emperor Augustus) pretending the ease of such as he had there placed; but indeed to have all the Arms, and Men of employment under himself only.

This done, he divided Wales into seven Shires, viz. 1. Glamorgan, 2. Caermarthen, 3. Pembroke, 4. Cardigan, 5. Merioneth, 6. Caernarvon, and 7. Anglesey, after the manner of England. Over each of these, as he placed a particular English Lieutenant, so he was very desirous to have one general English Vicegerent, over the whole Body of the Welsh. But this, when they mainly withstood he sent for his Wife, then great with Child, to Carnarvon, where she was deliver'd of a Son. Upon the news whereof the King assembled the British Lords, and offered to name them a Governour born in Wales, which could not speak one word of English, and whose Life no Man could tax. Such a one, when they had all sworn to obey, he named his young Son Edward; since which time our Kings eldest Sons are called Princes of Wales. There Investiture is perform'd by the imposition of a Cap of Estate, and a Coronet on his Head that is invested, as a token of his Principality; by delivering into his hand a Verge, being the emblem of Government; by putting a Ring of Gold on his Finger, to shew him that now he is a Husband to the Country, and a Father to her Children; and by giving him a Patent, to hold the said Principality to him and his Heirs Kings of England. By which words the separation of it from the Crown is prohibited; and the Kings keep in themselves so excellent an occasion, of obliging unto them their eldest Son, when they please. In imitation of this Custom, more ex Anglia translato (saith Mariana) John the First of Castile and Leon, made his Son Henry Prince of the Asturians; which is a Country so craggy and mountainous, that it may not improperly be called the Wales of Spain. And all the Spanish Princes even to these times, are honoured with this Title of Prince of the Asturians.

Notwithstanding this provident care of Edward the First, in establishing his Empire here; and the extremity of Law here used by Henry the Fourth, in reducing them to obedience, after the Rebellion of Owen Glendower: yet till the time of Henry the Eighth, and his Father, (both being extract from the Welsh Blood) they seldom or never contained themselves within the bounds of true Allegiance. For whereas before they were reputed as Aliens, this Henry made them (by Act of Parliament) one Nation with the English, subject to the same Laws, capable of the same Preferments, and priviledged with the same Immunities. He added also six Shires to the former number, out of those Countries which were before reputed as the Borders and Marches of Wales; and inabled them to send Knights and Burgeses into the English Parliaments; so that the Name and Language only excepted, there is now no difference between the English and Welsh; an happy Union.

The same King Henry established for the ease of his Welsh Subjects, a Court at Ludlow like unto the ordinary Parliaments in France; wherein the Laws are ministr'd according to the fashion of the Kings Courts of Westminster. The Court consisteth of one President, who is, for the most part, of the Nobility, and is generally called, the Lord President of Wales; of as many Counsellors as it shall please the King to appoint; one Attorney, one Solicitor, one Secretary, and the four Justices of the Counties of Wales. The Town it self (for this must not be omitted; adorned with a very fair Castle, which hath been the Palace of such Princes of Wales, of the English Blood, as have come into this Country, to solace themselves among their People. Here was young Edward the Fifth, at the death of his Father; and here died Prince Arthur, eldest Son of Henry the Seventh; both being sent hither by their Fathers to the same end, viz. by their Presence to satisfy and keep in order the unquiet Welsh men. And certainly, as the presence of the Prince was then a terror to the rebellious, so would it now be as great a comfort to this peaceable People.

What the Revenues of this Principality are, I cannot say, yet we may boldly affirm, that they are not very small, by these reasons following, viz. 1. By the Composition which Llewellyn, the last Prince of Wales, made with Edward the First; who being Prince of North Wales only, and dispossessed of most of that, was fain to redeem the rest, of the said King Edward, at the price of 50000 Marks (which comes to 10000 Pounds of our present Money) to be paid down in ready Coin; and for the residue to pay 1000 l. per Annum. And 2dly, by those two circumstances, in the marriage of the Lady Catharine of Spain, to the above-named Prince Arthur. For first, her Father Ferdinand being one of the warriest Princes that ever were in Europe, giving with her in Dowry 200000 Ducats; required for Jointure, the third part only of this Principality, and of the Earldom of Chester. And secondly, after the death of Prince Arthur, the Nobles of the the Realm perswaded Prince Henry to take her to Wife; that so great a Treasure as the yearly Revenue of her Jointure might not be carried out of the Kingdom.

The Arms of the Princes of Wales differ from those of England, only by the addition of a Label of three points. But the proper and peculiar device, and which we commonly, though corruptly, call the Princes Arms, is a Coronet beautified with three Ostrich Feathers, and inscribed round with ICH DIEN, that is, I serve; alluding to that of the Apostle, The Heir while he is a Child, differeth not from a Servant. This Coronet was won by that valiant Prince, Edward the Black Prince, at the Battel of Cressie, from John King of Bohemia; who did there wear it, and whom he there slew. Since which time it hath been the Cognizance of all our Princes.

I will now shut up my Discourse of Wales, with that testimony of the People, which Henry the Second used in a Letter to Emanuel Emperor of Constantinople; The Welch Nation is so adventurous, that they dare encounter naked with armed Men; ready to spend their Blood for their Country, and pawn their Life for Liberty. And adding only this, That since their incorporating with the English, they have shewed themselves most loyal, hearty, and affectionate Subjects of the State; cordially devoted to their King, and zealous in defence of their Laws, Liberties, and Religion, as well as any of the best of their Fellow-Subjects; whereof they have given good proof in these latter times.

There are in Wales.

The BORDERS.

Before we come into Scotland, we must of necessity pass through that Batable Ground, lying betwixt both Kingdoms; called, THE BORDERS; the Inhabitants whereof are a kind of Military Men, subtle, nimble, and by reason of their often Skirmishes, well-experienced and adventurous. Once the English Border extended as far as unto the Fryth, or Strait of Edinburgh on the East, and that of Dunbritton on the West (the first Fryth, by the Latins called Bodotria, and the latter Gletta;) betwixt which, where now standeth the Town of Sterling, was an ancient Bridge, built over the River which falleth into the Fryth of Edinburgh; on a Cross standing whereupon, was writ this Passport;

*I am Free-march, as Passengers may ken,
To Scots, to Britains, and to English-men.*

But when England groaned under the burden of the Danish Oppression, the Scots well husbanded that advantage; and not only enlarged their Borders to the Tweed, but also took into their hands Cumberland, Northumberland, and Westmorland. The Norman Kings again recovered these Provinces, making the Borders of both Kingdoms to be Tweed, East; the Solway, West; and the Cheviot-Hills in the midst. Of any great Wars made on these Borders, or any particular Officers appointed for the defence of them, I find no mention till the time of Edward the First; who taking advantage of the Scots disagreements about the Successor of Alexander the Third, hoped to bring the Country under the obedience of England. This Quarrel betwixt the two Nations he began, but could not end; the Wars surviving the Author: so that what Velleius saith of the Romans and Carthaginians, I may as well say of the Scots and English. For almost 300 Years together, aut bellum inter eos populos, aut belli preparatio, aut infida pax fuit, there was either a War, or a preparation for one, or an uncertain faithless Peace. In most of these conflicts the Scots had the worst. So that Daniel in his History seemeth to marvel how this corner of the Isle could breed so many, had it bred nothing but Men, as were slain in these Wars. Yet in the Reign of Edward the Second, the Scots (having twice defeated that unhappy Prince) became so terrible to the English Borderers, that an hundred of them would fly from three Scots. It is a Custom among the Turks, not to believe a Christian, or a Jew, complaining against a Turk, except their Accusation be confirmed by the Testimony of some Turk also; which seldom hapning, is not the least cause why so little Justice is there done to the Christians. In like manner, it is the Law of these Borderers, never to believe any Scots complaining against any English man, unless some other English man will witness for him; and so on the other side. Ex jure quidam inter limitaneos rato (saith Camden in his Elizab.) nullus nisi Scotus in Scotum, nullus nisi Anglus in Anglum, testis admittitur. This Custom making void in this fashion all kinds of Accusations, was one of the greatest causes of the Insolencies of both sides committed. Besides, there were divers here living, which acknowledged neither King; but sometime were Scots, sometime English, as their present Crimes and Necessities required Protection or Pardon. To keep in this People, and to secure their Borders, there were in each Kingdom three Officers appointed, called the Lords Wardens of the Marches; one being placed over the East, the other over the West, the third over the middle Borders. In England, the Warden of the East Marches had his Seat at Berwick, (a Town of great Strength, and which for the conveniency of its situation, was the first thing which the English took care to defend, and the Scots to surprise) of which he was also Governour. The Warden of the West Marches had his Seat in Carlisle, which Henry the Eighth for that cause well fortified. The Warden of the middle Marches had no set place of residence, but was sometimes in one place, sometimes in another, according as occasion required; the Office being executed for the most part, by the Wardens of the Eastern or Western Marches. But Imperii medium est, terminus ante fuit, by the blessed Marriage of the Kingdoms, that being now the middle of one, which was then the bounds of two Empires; these Officers, and the cause of them, the Wars, are quite extinguished.

SCOTLAND.

SCOTLAND is the Northern part of Britain, separated from England by the River Tweed and Solway, and the Cheviot-Hills, extending from the one to the other. It is in length (according to Polydore Virgil) 480 Miles, but of no great breadth; there being no place distant from the Sea above 60 Miles, and the Country ending like the sharp point of a Wedge. And for the length assigned unto it by Polydore, it must be made up by measuring the Crooks and Windings of the Shores, every where thrusting out with very large Promontories, and cutting deep Indentures into the Land: For measuring in a strait Line from North to South, the length thereof from Solway Fryth to the Straitby-head, amounteth but unto three hundred and ten Italian Miles; and from Berwick unto Straitby-head, is a great deal shorter. So that there is no such over-sight in the Maps of Britain, nor such necessity to correct them, as was sometimes thought.

It was once called Caledonia, from the Caledonii, a chief People of it: sometimes Albania, from Albanie or Braid Albin, a principal Province in the North. But the most usual Name is Scotia or Scotland; though the reason of the Name be not agreed on. Some fabulous Writers of their own fetch it from Scota, the Daughter of an Egyptian Pharaoh; of whom more when we come to Ireland. Others with better reason (though that none of the best) from the Scotti, Scitti, or Scythi, a German, or Sarmatian People, of noted fame; whom they will have to seize first on some parts of Spain, from thence transplant themselves into Ireland; and out of Ireland into the Hebrides or Western Islands, now parts and members of this Kingdom. The more probable Opinion is, that they were no other than mere Irish, (whose Language, Habit, and the most barbarous of their Customs, the Highlanders or natural Scots do still retain) united in the Name of Scot, about the declination of the Roman Empire: the word Scot signifying in their Language, a Body aggregated into one, out of many particulars; as the word Alman in the Dutch, Scot illud dicitur, (saith Cambden out of Matthew of Westminster) quod ex diversis rebus in unum acervum aggregatur. First mentioned by this Name in some fragments of Porphyry (who lived about the time of the Emperor Aurelian) as they are cited by S. Hierom; after the death of Constantine much spoken of in approved Authors, as the Confederates of the Picts, in harassing the Roman Province.

The whole divided commonly into the Highlands, and the Lowlands. The Highlanders or Irish Scots inhabiting the Hebrides, and the West parts of the Continent adjoining to them, more barbarous than the Wild Irish at this day; not to be civiliz'd (as King James observed in his most excellent Basilicon Doron) but by planting Colonies of the more Inland, orderly Scots among them. Amongst the manifold Calamities that afflicted these Kingdoms, between the Years 1640. and 1660. and particularly Scotland, one good thing, which was not expected, happened, and that was the civilizing of the Highlanders, partly by the Earl of Montrose, and partly by the English; so that they are now quite another People than they were before, tho' that brave Earl perished in his attempt to restore the Royal Family. The Lowlanders or English Scots (as I well may call them) inhabiting on this side the two Fryths of Dumblinton and Edinburgh, and the plain Countries along the German Ocean, are the more civil of the two, as being of the same Saxon Race with the English. This is evident, first by their Language, being only a broad Northern English, a Dialect only of that Tongue. 2. By the testimony of the Highlanders themselves, who are the true Scots, and speak the old Irish Language, by whom the Lowlanders and the English are called by the same Name of Saxons. 3. By the general consent of all Historians, affirming that the Kingdom of the Northumbers or English Saxons, beyond Humber, extended as far Northwards as the two Fryths before-mentioned; and there continued for the space of 300 Years. And 4. By the confession of some ingenious Gentlemen of that Nation, who grant it for a probable Tenet, That the Saxons and Scots invading Britain much about the same time, the Saxons might extort the Eastern Shore lying next their Country, from the old Inhabitants; as well as the Scots did all the Western parts which lay next to Ireland, and the Hebrides or Western Islands, from whence they first passed into Britain.

The Country for the most part, especially beyond the limits of the Roman Province, is very barren and unfruitful, not able to afford sustenance for the Natives of it; were they not a People patient of Want and Hunger, temperate in Diet, and not accustomed unto that Riot and Excess, used commonly in richer and more plentiful Countries. Fruit they have very little, and not many Trees, either for Building or for Fuel; the People holding, as in France, at the Will of the Lord, and therefore not industrious to build or plant. Their chief Commodities are coarse Cloth; Fish in great abundance, Hides, Lead, and Coal; of which two last their Mountains do afford some rich undecaying Mines.

The People have been noted by their best Writers, for some barbarous Customs entertain'd amongst them. One of which was, If any two were displeased, they expected no Law, but bang'd it out bravely, one and his Kindred, against the other and his; and thought the King much in their common, if they granted him at a certain day to keep the Peace. This fighting they call their Feides, a word so barbarous, that were it to be expressed in Latin or French, it must be by Circumlocution. These deadly Feides, King James in his most excellent Basilicon Doron, adviseth his Son to redress with all care possible; but it pleased God to give him so long a Life as to see it in his own days remedied; wherein he got a greater Victory over that stubborn People, than ever did any foreign Prince, or any of his Predecessors could do before him, an Act indeed truly Royal, and worthy himself. Another Custom they had of that nature, that the like was hardly ever heard of amongst the Heathen, and much less in Christendom, which took beginning, as the Scottish Historians affirm, in the Reign of Ewen III. who is the Fifteenth King in their Catalogue, after the first Fergus. This Ewen being a Prince much addicted, or wholly rather given over unto Lasciviousness, made a Law, that himself and his Successors should have the Maidenhead, or first Nights lodging with every Woman, whose Husband held Land immediately from the Crown; and the Lords and Gentlemen of all those whose Husbands were their Tenants or Homagers. This was, it seems, the Knights-service which Men held their Estates by; and continued till the Days of Malcolm Connor; who, at the request of his Wife Margaret, (she was the Sister of Edgar Atheling) abolished this Law, and ordained, That the Tenants, by way of commutation, should pay unto their Lords a Mark in Money; which Tribute the Historians say is still in force. It was called Marcheta mulieris: but whether from Mark, a Horse in the old Gallique (implying the obscene signification of Equitare) as Mr. Selden thinks; or from Marca, the sum of money by which it was afterwards redeemed, I cannot determine. Certain I am, that this last Custom was of such a barbarous and brutish Nature, that the Custom of the Indians in giving to the Bramine the first nights Lodging with their Brides; and that of many Savage unconverted Nations in prostituting their Wives and Daughters to the Lusts and Pleasure of their Guests; have not more unchristianity in them, than this of those Scottish Christians, if I may so call them.

These Customs shew the ancient Scots to be rude and barbarous, partaking little of the civility of the Neighbouring Nation; nor are they so broken of the former, but that they are observed by a modern Writer, to be still greedy of Revenge where they find means to take it; as also to be a subtle and politic People, inclined to Factions and Seditions amongst themselves; which he that reads their Stories cannot choose but see. A People, as King James observeth in his Basilicon Doron, ever weary of the present State, and desirous of Novelties, accustomed to judge and speak rashly of their Kings and Princes; towards whom they have always carried themselves with such untractableness, that more Kings have been betrayed, murdered and deposed by the Scots, than by all the Nations in the World. But take them in themselves without these relations, and they are said to be an industrious People, capable of all Sciences which they give their minds to, and generally well versed in Grammatical Learning, of which most of their Gentry have a smattering. And of most note in point of Learning, have been 1. Marianus (surnamed) Scotus, and 2. Hector Boetius, the Historians. 3. John Major, a well known Schoolman, for the times before the Reformation. And for the times that followed, 4. George Buchanan, an ingenious Poet, but an unsound States-man; whose History, and Dialogue De jure Regni, have wrought more mischief in the World, than all Machiavel's Works. Not to have been remembered here, but because he was Pedagogue to 5. King James, of most famous memory; whose Printed works declare his large Abilities in all kinds of Learning. 6. Napier, the Laird of Marchiston. 7, 8. Barcklay, the Father and the Son. 9. John Skene, the best Antiquary of this Nation. 10. Doctor John Maxwell, the late learned Bishop of Ross, and my very good friend; besides some others of less note.

The Christian Religion was here planted by divers Men according to their several Nations, who did here inhabit amongst the Low-Landers, or Saxon-Scots, by Aidan the first Bishop of Lindisfarn, or Holy-Island; amongst the Picts, inhabiting the South-Eastern parts, by Ninias, Bishop of Candida Casa, or Whithorne, in Galloway; amongst the Northern Picts, An. 555. and finally amongst the Scots, by Palladius a Deacon of Rome, sent to them hither for that purpose by Pope Celestine, An. 435. or thereabouts. And for the Reformation of Religion, overgrown with the rust and rubbish of the Romish Church, (degenerated from it self in the latter days) it was here made by a strong hand, according to the judgment of Knox and others; not taking counsel with the Prelates, nor staying the leisure of the Prince as they did in England; but turning Prince and Prelates, out of all Authority; made by that means, more naturally subject unto alterations, than it had been otherwise; or only to be made good by the same violence which first introduced it. 'Tis true, that for a while being in danger of the French, and of necessity to support themselves by the power and favour of the English; they bound themselves by a solemn Subscription, to adhere only to the Rites and Ceremonies of the Church of England, and to observe that form of Worship which was there established. Religionis cultui, & Ritibus cum Anglis communibus subscripserunt; as is affirmed by Buchanan, their own State-Historian. But no sooner was that danger over, but they found opportunity and leisure to affect their ends; and have endeavoured ever since by practices, and correspondence with that party here, and finally by force of Arms, to thrust their own Constitutions and Form of Worship on the Church of England, which at last ended in the ruine of it even in Scotland; and at the Restoration of Charles the II. settled that Kingdom under Episcopacy again, though without a Liturgy.

This Kingdom in the Revolution in 1688. received another great change; The Episcopal Party standing at a Gaze, to see what would be the issue of the struggle in England: The Presbyterian Party fell into Tumults and Outrageous Violences, and having picked a Convention of their own Creatures, whilst few or none of the other Party endeavoured to be chosen. They fairly voted the Geneva Discipline more agreeable to the People of Scotland, than Episcopacy; and therefore once more laid it aside, and set up the other. How long it will last is uncertain; but it seems to have no very firm Foundation, by the Violences were used to bring it in, and the Difficulty they have had to keep it. That Convention being kept on foot to this day, for reasons best known to themselves. As for the Government of the Church, it was originally by Bishops, (as in all parts else;) but so as they exercise their Functions and Jurisdictions in all places equally, wheresoever they come: The Kingdom not being divided into Diocesses, till the time of Malcolm the third An. 1070, or thereabout. Nor had they any Archbishops till the year 1478. The Archbishop of York being accounted and obeyed before that time, as the Metropolitan of Scotland. But being once settled in an orderly and constant Hierarchy, they held the same until the Reformation began by Knox, and when he and his Associates approving the Genevian Platform, took the advantage of the Minority of King James the Sixth, to introduce the Presbyterian Discipline, and suppress the Bishops; forbidding them by their own sole Authority, to intermeddle any more in matters which concerned the Church; and Cantoning the Kingdom into Presbyteries of their own assigning. And that the King might not be able to oppose their doings, they kept him under by strong hand, Imprisoned him at Sterling, made him fly from Edenburgh; removed from him all his faithful Servants, and seized upon his principal Fortresses: and in a word, so baffled and affronted him upon all occasions, that he was minded many times to have left the Kingdom, and retire to Venice, which doubtless he had done, (as I have heard affirmed by some of great place, and power) had not the hopes of coming at the last to the Crown of England, made him stay it out: So that his Maxim of No Bishop, No King, was not made at random, but founded on the sad experience of his own condition. And though upon the sense of those inconveniencies, which that alteration brought upon him, he did afterwards with great both Policy and Prudence, restore again the Episcopal Order, and settle it both by Synodical Acts, and by Acts of Parliament; yet the same restless Spirit breaking out again in the Reign of his Son, An. 1638. did violently eject the Bishops, and suppress the Calling; and set up their Presbyteries throughout the Kingdom, as in former times.

The famous or miraculous things rather of this Country are, 1. The Lake of Nirton, part of whose waters do congeal in Winter, and part of them not. 2. That in the Lake of Lennox, being 24 Miles in compass, The Fish are generally without Fins, and yet there is great abundance of them. 3. That when there is no wind stirring, the Waters of the said Lake are so Tempestuous, that no Mariner dares venture on it. 4. That there is a Stone called the Deaf-stone, 12 foot high, and 33 Cubits thick; of this rare quality, that a Musket shot off on the one side, cannot be heard by a man standing on the other. If it be otherwise (as he must have a strong Faith who believes these wonders) let Hector Boetius bear the blame, out of whom I had it.

Chief Mountains of this Kingdom are the Cheviot Hills upon the Borders; and Mount Grampius, spoken of by Tacitus; the safest shelter of the Picts, or Northern Britains.

ains against the Romans and of the Scots against the English; now called the Hills of Albany, or the Mountainous Regions of Braid Albain. Out of these springeth the 1. Tay, or Tams, the fairest River of Scotland, falling into the Sea at Dundee, in the East side; and 2. the Clud, emptying it self into Dumbritton Frith, on the West side of the Kingdom. Other Rivers of most note, are, the 3. Bance, emptying it self into the Frith of Edenburgh; on the Banks whereof was fought that fatal Battel of Bannocksburn, of which more anon. 4. Spey, 5. Dee, the Clava of Ptolomy; none of them of any long course, by reason that the Country Northward is but very narrow.

In reference to Ecclesiastical Affairs, this Kingdom hath been long divided into 13 Diocesses, to which the Diocess of Edenburgh (taken out of that of S. Andrews) hath been lately added; and in relation to the Civil, into divers Counties and Sheriffdoms, which being for the most part hereditary, are no small hindrance to the due execution of Justice. So that the readiest way to redress the mischief (as King James advised) is to dispose of them as they fall, or Eleheat to the Crown, according to the laudable custom (in that case) in England.

The greatest Friends of the Scots, were the French, to whom the Scots shewed themselves so faithful, that the French King committed the defence of his Person to a select number of Scottish Gentlemen; and so valiant, that they have much hindred the English Victories in France. And certainly the French feeling the smart of the English Puissance alone, have continually heartned the Scots in their Attempts against England, and hindred all means of making Union betwixt them; as appeared, when they brake the Match agreed on, between our Edward the Sixth, and Mary, the young Queen of Scots. Their greatest Enemy was the English, who overcame them in many Battels, seized once upon the Kingdom, and had longer kept it, if the mountainous and inaccessible Woods had not been more advantagious to the Scots, than their Power; for so much King James seemeth to intimate in his Speech at White hall, 1607. And though, saith he, the Scots had the favour and good fortune never to be conquered, yet were they never but on the Defensible side; and may in part thank their Hills and inaccessible Passages, that saved them from an utter Overthrow, at the hands of all them that ever pretended to conquer them. But

Jam cunctigena una sumus, sic simus in ævum:

One only Nation now are we,
And let us so for ever be.

The chief Cities are Edenburgh (of old called Castrum Alatum) in Lothien, where is the Kings Palace, and the Courts of Justice. It consisteth chiefly of one Street extending in length one Mile, into which run many pretty lanes; so that the whole compass may be nigh three Miles, extending from East to West on a rising Ground, at the North or West end whereof standeth a strong and magnificent Castle, mounted upon a steep and precipitious Rock, which commandeth the Town; supposed to be the Alatum Alatum, spoken of by Ptolomy. Under the command, or rather the Protection of which Castle, and through the Neighbourhood of Leith, standing on the Fryth, and serving as a Port unto it; and finally by the advantage of the Courts of Justice, and the Court Royal, called Holy-Rood House it too became rich, populous, well-traded, and the chief of the Kingdom: but withal Factionous and Seditious, contesting with their Kings, or siding against them upon all occasions. No way to humble them, and keep them in obedience to their Sovereign Lords, but by incorporating Leith, indulging it with the Priviledges of a City, and removing thither the Seat Royal and the Courts of Judicature; which they more fear than all the Plagues that can befall them. It belonged in former times to the English Saxons, (as all the rest of the Country from the Fryth to Barwick) from whom, oppressed by the tyranny of the Danes, it was taken by the Scots and Picts, Anno 800, or thereabouts. 2. Sterling, situate on the South-side of the Forth or Fryth, in the Sheriffdom so called; a strong Town, and beautified withal with a very fair Castle, the Birth-place of King James the Sixth, the first Monarch of Great Britain. Near to which Town, on the banks of the River Bannock, happened the most memorable discomfiture that the Scots ever gave the English; who besides many Lords and 700 Knights and Men of Note, lost in this Fight (as the Scottish Writers do report) 50000 of the common Soldiers (our English Historians confesse 10000, and too many of that) the King himself Edward the II. being compelled to flie for his Life and Safety. Some of the Scottish Writers tell us, that the purer sort of Silver, which we call Sterling-Money, did take name from hence; they might as well have told us, that all our Silver Bullion comes from Bullion in Luyckland, or from the Port of Bulloin in France; the truth being that it took that name from the Easterlings or Merchants of East-Germany, drawn into England by King John to refine our Coin. 3. Glasgo, in Cluidisdale, honoured with an Archbishops See, and a publick School (to which some give the name of an University) founded here by Archbishop Turnbul, Anno 1554. 4. S. Andrews the chief Town of Fife, an Archiepiscopal See, and an University; by the Latines called Fanum Reguli; which, and the English Name, it took from the bones of S. Andrew the Apostle, translated first from Patras in Peloponnesus, where he suffered death, unto Constantinople; and thence brought hither by a Monk called Albatus Regulus, in the year 378. (if they be not mistaken in the time, who made the Story.) Over which Relicks he is said to have built a Monastery, which after grew to be a City; called from the Founder Fanum Reguli; in honour of the Saint S. Andrew. The Bishop hereof is the Metropolitan of all Scotland; the City seated on the Ocean, near the fall of the Ethan, overlooked with a strong and goodly Castle, the Archbishops Seat. 5. Falkland, in the same Province or Fife, beautified with a retiring House of the Kings, resorting thither, often on recess from Business, or for the commodity and pleasure of Hunting, which the place affords. 6. Dundee, in Latine, Taodunum, a rich and noted Port at the mouth of the Taye, the chief Town of Angus. 7. Aberdon, at the mouth of the River Done, whence it had the name, (the word Aber in the British, signifying the mouth or influx of a River) an University, and Bishops See. 8. Perth, or St. Johns Town, seated on the Taye, but in the middle of the Kingdom; walled and replenished with an industrious People: the chief Town of the Sheriffdom of Perth. 9. Scone, on the farther side of the Taye, adorned heretofore with a famous Monastery; the usual place for the inauguration of the Scottish Kings, the fatal stone, on which they did receive the Crown, (the Palladium of the Scottish Kingdom) here kept, till the removal of it unto Westminster, by King Edward the first. Upon which stone there were of old ingraven these Verses.

Non fallat fatum, Scoti quocunque locatum Invenient lapidem, regnare tenentur ibidem.

Translated into old Meeter thus:

The Scots shall brook that Realm as native ground,
If Weirds fail not, whereere this Stone is found.

Most happily accomplished in the Succession of King James the Sixth, to the Crown of England. 10. Dumbritton (Britannodunum in the Latine) seated in a grassie Plain, at the fall or influx of the River Levin into the Clud, upon two steep and precipitious Rocks, flanked on the West with the said two Rivers, and on the East with a miry Flat, drowned at every full Sea: the strongest hold of all the Kingdom, and thought to be impregnable ble but by Famine or Treason, and the chief Town of the West side of Scotland; the name hereof communicated to the Fryth adjoining.

The ancient Inhabitants of this Country dwelling within the limits of the Roman Province, were the Gadeni, possessing Tevidale, Tweedale, March and Lothien, whose chief City was Castra Alata, now Edinburgh. 2. The Damnii, dwelling in Cluydsdale, Lennox, Sterling; and Menteith, whose chief City was Vanduara, now Renfrew; Lindum, now Linlithquo. 3. The Selgovæ inhabited in Liddisdale, Tividale, Eskdale, Anmondale, and Niddisdale, whose chief place was Carbantorigum, now Caer-Laverock: and 4. The Noventes, containing Galloway, Carrick, Kyle and Cunningham, Principal places of the which were, Lucopibia, now Withern, and Berigonium, now Bargenie. Without the Province amongst the Picts or barbarous Britains, divided generally into Caledonii and Meatae, the Nations of most Note were, 5. The Caledonii properly so called, taking up all Strathern, Argile, Cantire, Albanie, Lorn, Perth, Angus, and Fife. 6. The Vermes of Mernis and Mar. 7. The Talzali of Buquhan. 8. The Vacomagi of Loquabre and Murray. 9. The Cantæ of Rofs and Sutherland. 10. The Contini of Cathness; and 11. The Cornubii of Strathnaver, the furthest Country Northward of all the Island. Chief Towns of which were, Tamia, Banatia, Orea, Devana, and Tuesis, which we know not where to find upon any certainty.

The fortunes of this People, as they related to the Romans, hath been shewed before. On the withdrawing of whose Forces, so much hereof as formerly had belonged to that Empire, was possessed by the Saxons, the residue thereof, as formerly, by the Scots and Picts; save that the Saxons not content with that which the Romans held, made themselves Masters also of the plain Countries, lying on the German Ocean, to which the passage out of Germany, was both short and easie. By which accompt, besides those places in the East, they were possessed of the Counties or Sherifffdoms of Tevidale, Tweedale, March, Lothien, Liddisdale, Eufedale, Eskdale, Anmandale, Niddisdale, Cluydsdale, Galloway, Carick, Kyle, Cunningham, Lennox, and Sterling, being the richest and most flourishing part of the modern Scotland. The Scots for their part had the Counties of Cantire, Argile, Braid-Albin, (or Albanie) Lorne, Loquabre, and Strathnaver, lying on the West and North: the other Northern moiety (excepting some parts near the Coast of the German Ocean possessed by the Saxons) containing the now Counties of Cathness, Sutherland, Rofs, Murray, Buquhan, Marre, Mern, Angus, Atbel, Perth, Fife, Strathern and Menteith, being only left unto the Picts. From whence the Saxons and Scots came into these parts; hath been shewn already. And for the Picts, (to omit here the refutation of those who will have them to descend from the Agathyrsi, a People of Scythia) they were no other than such of the natural Britains, as never were brought under the Roman Empire, but still preserved their Country in its former Liberty; called therefore by Tertullian, in accessa Romanis loca, as indeed they were; and using still their ancient Custom of painting their Bodies; after the rest of their Countrymen had conformed themselves to more civil courses, were by the Romans called Picti: and by that name first mentioned in the Panegyrick of Ennomius, in the time of Constantine the Great. They long possessed these parts, without an Inmate, even till the year 424; when the Irish Scots wanting room at home, and having formerly possessed themselves of the Western Isles, first set foot in Britain: with whom they had continual War, till in the end the Scots prevailing, compelled the Picts to abandon to them the Western parts, and withdraw themselves into the Eastern. Afterwards growing into better terms with the other, and willing to enlarge their Borders towards the more flourishing South, they contracted an Offensive and Defensive League against the Britains; who on all sides, they most miserably tortured, till vanquished and beaten back by the conquering Saxons, against whom they contracted a new Confe- deracy. Taking the advantage of the death of Ethelred King of the Northumbers, and the Invasion of the Danes on the rest of England; they got into their hands all Bernicia, or so much of the Kingdom of the Northumbrians, as lay on the North of Twede, and Solway; reckoned from that time forwards as a part of their Dominions. But this good Neighbourhood held not long betwixt these two Nations. It hapned at the last, that Alchian King of the Scots, married Fergusia; Sister unto Hungust, King of the Picts, and had by her a Son called Alpine, who after the death of Hungust dying without Issue, and having none nearer Kindred, was in the Judgment of the Scots, to succeed in that Kingdom. But the Picts, alledging a Law of not admitting Aliens to the Crown, chose one Ferretb of their own Nation, to be their King; with whom Alpine contended in a long War, Victorious, for the most part, in conclusion slain. The quarrel notwithstanding did remain betwixt the two unfriendly Nations, till at the last, after many bloody Battels, and mutual over throws (the Scots being for the most part on the losing side) Keneth, the second of that Name, vanquished Donsken, the last King of the Picts, with so great a slaughter of his People, that he extinguished not their Kingdom only, but their very Name; passing from that time forwards under that of Scots. No mention after this of the Pictish Nation; unless perhaps we will believe that some of them passed into France; and there, forsooth, subdued that Country which we now call Picardy.

As for the Catalogue of the Kings of the Scots in Britain, I shall begin the same with Fergus, the second of that name in the Accompt of their Historians; leaving out that rabble of 39 Kings (half of them at the least before Christ's Nativity) mentioned by Hector Boetius, Buchanan, and others of their Classick Authors. Neither shall I offend herein, as I conjecture, the more Judicious and understanding Men of the Scottish Nation, (and for others take little care) since I deal no more unkindly with their first Fergus and his Successors, than I have done already with our own Brutus, and his: The first Scottish King that settled himself in the North of Britain, is according to the above named Hector Boetius, one Fergus, which in the time that Coyl governed the Britains, came (forsooth) into these parts out of Ireland. From him, unto Eugenius, we have the names of 39 Kings in a continued Succession: which Eugenius, together with his whole Nation, is said to have been expelled the Island, by a joynt confederacy of the Romans, Britains, and Picts. Twenty and seven years after the death of this Eugenius, they were reduced again into their possessions here, by the Valour and Conduct of another Fergus, the second of that name. To this Fergus I refer the beginning of this Scottish Kingdom in Britain, holding the stories of the former 39 Kings to be vain and fabulous. Neither want I probable conjecture for this Assertion, this Expedition of Fergus into Britain being placed in the 424 year of CHRIST, at what time the best Writers of the Roman Story, for those times, report the Scots to have first seated themselves in this Island.

The Kings of chief note in the course of the whole Succession are, 1. Alchian, who died in the year 809. and in his Life contracted the Offensive and Defensive League with Charles the Great, between the Kingdoms of France and Scotland. The Conditions whereof were, 1. Let this League between the two Kingdoms endure for ever; 2. Let the Enemies unto one, be reputed and handled as the Enemies of the other; 3. If the Saxons or English-men invade France, the Scots shall send thither such numbers of Soldiers as shall be desired, the French King defraying the charges; 4. If the English invade Scotland, the King of France shall at his own charges send competent assistance unto the King of Scots. Never was there any League, which was either more faithfully observed, or longer continued, than this between these two Kingdoms: the Scots on all occasions so readily assisting the French, that it grew to a Proverb, or by-word, He that will France win, must win with Scotland first begin. 2. Kenneth the 2d, who having utterly subdued and destroyed the Picts, extended his Dominions over all the present Scotland, deserved to be accounted the first Monarch of it: the Picts (being either rooted out, or so few in number, that they passed afterwards in the name and accounts of Scots) from that time forwards never mentioned in any Author. 3. Malcolm the first, who added Westmerland and Cumberland, unto his Dominion, given to him by King Edmund of England, the Son of Atbelstane, to have his aid against the Danes, or to keep him neutral. After which time, those Counties were sometimes Scottish, and sometimes English, till finally recovered by King Henry the Second, and united to the Crown of England; never since disjoyned. 4. Kenneth the Third, who by consent of the Estates of his Realm, made the Kingdom Hereditary, to descend from the Father to his Eldest Son, before which time (keeping within the compass of the Royal Family) the Uncle was sometimes preferred before the Nephew; the eldest in years, though furthest off, before the younger Kinsman, though the nearer in Blood. After which time (the opposition and interruption made by Constantine the Third, and Donald the fourth excepted) only the eldest Sons of these Kings, or the next in Birth, have succeeded ordinarily in that Kingdom. This Kenneth was one of those Tributaries and Vassal Kings, which rowed King Edgar over the Dee near Chester, in such Pomp and Majesty. 5. Macbeth of whom there goeth a famous Story, which shall be told at large anon. 6. Malcolm the Third, the Son of Duncane, who lived in England during the whole time of Macbeth's Tyranny; and thence brought into Scotland at his return, not only some Civilities of the English garb, but the honourary Titles of Earls and Barons, not here before mentioned. At the perswasion of the Lady Margaret his Wife, (Sister of Edgar, surnamed Atbeling, and after his decease the right Heir of the Crown of England) he abolished the barbarous Customs spoken of before. He did Homage to William the Conqueror for the Crown of Scotland, but afterwards siding against him with the English, was slain at Alnwick. 7. David, the youngest Son of Malcolm the Third, succeeded (his two Brothers, Edgar and Alexander dying without Issue) in the Throne of his Father; and in right of his Mother the Lady Margaret, Sister and Heir of Edgar Atbeling, and Daughter of Edward the Eldest Son of Edmund the Second, surnamed Ironside, King of England, had the best Title to that Kingdom also; but dispossessed thereof by the Norman Conquerors, with whom by reason of the great puillance of those Kings, and the little love which the English bare unto the Scots, not able to dispute their Title by force of Arms. From Maud the Sister of this David, married to Henry the First of England, descended all the Kings of England (King Stephen excepted) to Queen Elizabeth's death: from David all the Kings of Scotland, till King James the Sixth, who on the death of Queen Elizabeth, succeeded in the Crown of England, in right of his descent from another Margaret, the eldest Daughter of King Henry the Seventh. So that in his Person there was not an union of the Kingdoms only, under the Title of Great Britain, but a restoring of the old Line of the Saxon Kings (of which he was the direct and indubitate Heir) to the Crown of England; the possession whereof had for so long time continued in the Posterity of the Norman Conqueror. And upon this descent it followeth most undeniably, that though the Norman Conqueror got the Crown of England by the power of the Sword, from the true Heirs of Edmund the II. surnamed Ironside; and that his Successors had enjoyed it by no other Title till Queen Elizabeth's Death: yet James, the first Monarch of Great Britain, succeeded by a right descent from the Saxon Line; without relation to the Conquest of the Norman Bastard. 8. William, the Brother of Malcolm the Fourth, and Nephew of David before mentioned by his Son Prince Henry, (who died in the life of his Father) being taken Prisoner at the Battel of Alnwick, did Homage to King Henry the Second for the Crown of Scotland, and was thereupon restored to his Liberty, and his Realm to peace. What doth occur concerning the succeeding Kings, when their Affairs with England and the World abroad became more considerable, we shall see anon.

In the mean time proceed we to the story of Macbeth, than which for variety of action, and strangeness of events, I never met with any more pleasing. The Story in brief is thus: Duncan King of the Scots had two principal men, whom he employed in all matters of Importance, Macbeth and Banquho. These two travelling together through a Forest, were met by three Faries, Witches (Weirds the Scots call them) whereof the first making obedience unto Macbeth, saluted him Thane (a Title unto which that of Earl afterwards succeeded) of Glamis the second, Thane of Cawder; and the third, King of Scotland. This is unequal dealing, saith Banquho, to give my friend all the honours, and none unto me; to which one of the Weirds made answer, That he indeed should not be a King, but out of his Loyns should come a Race of Kings that should for ever rule the Scots. And having thus said, they all suddenly vanished. Upon their arrival to the Court, Macbeth, was immediately created Thane of Glamis; and not long after, some new service of his requiring new recompence, he was honoured with the Title of Thane of Cawder. Seeing then how happily the Prediction of the three Weirds fell out in the former, he resolved not to be wanting to himself in fulfilling the third, and therefore first he killed the King, and after, by reason of his command among the Soldiers, and common People, he succeeded in his Throne. Being scarce warm in his Seat, he called to mind the Prediction given to his Companion Banquho; whom hereupon suspecting as his supplanter, he caused him to be killed, together with his whole Posterity; Fleance one of his Sons escaping only, with no small difficulty, into Wales. Freed as he thought from all fear of Banquho and his Issue, he built Dunfinan Castle, and made it his ordinary Seat: and afterwards on some new fears, consulting with certain of his Weirds about his future Estate, was told by one of them, that he should never be overcome, till Bernane Wood (being some Miles distant) came to Dunfinan Castle; and by another, that he should never be slain by any man which was born of a Woman. Secure then as he thought, from all future dangers, he omitted no kind of libidinous cruelty, for the space of 18 years; for so long he tyrannized over Scotland. But having then made up the measure of his Iniquities, Macduffe the Governor of Fife, associating to himself some few Patriots, equally hated by the Tyrant, and abhorring the Tyranny, privily met one Evening at Bernane Wood; and taking every one of them a Bough in his Hand, (the better to keep them from discovery) marched early in the Morning towards Dunfinan Castle, which they took by Scalado. Macbeth escaping, was pursued by Macduffe; who having overtaken him, urged him to the Combat; to whom the Tyrant, half in scorn, returned this Answer, that he did in vain attempt to kill him, it being his destiny never to be slain by any that was born of a Woman. Now then said Macduffe, is thy fatal end drawing fast upon thee, for I was never born of a Woman, but violently cut out of my Mother's Belly; which words so daunted the cruel Tyrant, though otherwise a valiant Man, and of great performances, that he was very easily slain; and Malcolm Commer, the true Heir of the Crown, seated in the Throne. In the mean time Fleance so prospered in Wales, that he gained the affection of the Princes Daughter of that Country; and on her begot a Son called Walter; who flying out of Wales, returned into Scotland; and his descent once known, he was not only restored to the Honours and Estates of his Ancestors, but preferred to be Steward of the House of Edgar, the Son of Malcolm the Third, surnamed Commer; the Name of Stewart growing hence Hereditary unto his Posterity. From this Wal- ter descended that Robert Stewart, who succeeded David Bruce in the Kingdom of Scotland, the Progenitor of nine Kings of the name of Stewart, which have Reigned successively in that Kingdom. But now it is time to leave off particulars, and look into the general Succession of

The Kings of Scots before the Conquest of the Picts.

The Kings of the Scots after the Conquest of the Picts.

- An. Ch.
- 839 1 Kenneth II. the first sole King of all Scotland 17.
856 2 Donald II. Brother of Kenneth the 2d.
862 3 Constantine II. Son of Kenneth the 2d.
875 4 Ethns, Brother of Constantine the 2d.
890 5 Donald III. Son of Constantine the 2d.
903 6 Constantine III, 30.
933 7 Malcolm, Son of Donald the 3d.
949 8 Ingulph, an Intruder. 12.
961 9 Duffe, Son of Malcolm 1.
991 10 Kenneth III. Brother of Duffe.
994 11 Constantine IV. an Intruder against the Law, and Line of Kenneth the 3d.
1004 12 Malcolm II. Son of Kenneth the 3d opposed by Grime, the Nephew of Duffe.
1035 13 Duncan, Son of Grime, succeeded Malcolm the second dying without Issue.
1040 14 Machbeth, the Tyrant and Usurper.
1057 15 Malcolm III. Son of Duncan.
1096 16 Donald IV. surnamed Ban, Brother of Malcolm the 3d.

- 1098 17 Edgar, Son of Malcolm the 3d.
1107 18 Alexander, Brother of Edgar.
1124 19 David, Brother of Alexander.
1133 20 Malcolm, Son of David.
1166 21 William, Brother of Malcolm the fourth.
1213 22 Alexander II. Son of William.
1250 23 Alexander III. Son of Alexander the 2d, after whose death, dying without any Issue, An 1285. began that tedious and bloody Quarrel about the Succession of this Kingdom, occasioned by sundry Titles and Pretendants to it: principal whereof were Bruce and Baliol descended from the Daughters of David Earl of Huntingdon, younger Son of William, and Great Uncle of Alexander the Third, the last of the Male Issue of Kenneth the 2, those of nearer Kindred being quite extinct. And when the Scots could not compose the difference among themselves, it was taken into consideration by King Edward the First of England, as the Lord Paramount of that Kingdom; whose selecting 12 English, and as many of the Scots to advise about it, with the consent of all adjudged it to John Baliol Lord of Galloway, Son of John Baliol and Derworguilla his Wife, Daughter of Alan Lord of Galloway, and of the Lady Margaret, the eldest Daughter of the said David; who having done his homage to the said King Edward, was admitted King.
1300 24 John Baliol, an English-man, but forgetful both of English Birth, and English Favours, invaded the Realm of England in Hostile manner, and was taken Prisoner by King Edward. Who following his blow, made himself Master of all Scotland, which he held during the rest of his Life, and had here his Chancery, and other Courts. 6.
1306 25 Robert Bruce, Son of Robert Bruce, Lord of Annamdale (Competitor with Baliol for the Crown of Scotland, in Right of Isabel his Mother, the second Daughter of David Earl of Huntingdon, and consequently a degree nearer to the King deceased than Baliol was, though descended from the elder Sister) was crowned King in the life-time of King Edward the First; but not fully possessed thereof until after his death; confirmed therein by the great Defeat given to Edward the Second, at the fight of Bannockburn, not far from Sterling, spoken of before. But he being dead, Anno 1322. Edward the Third confirmed the Kingdom on 1332 26 Edward Baliol, Son of John Baliol, rejected by the Scots for adhering so firmly to the English; who thereupon harried Scotland with Fire and Sword. 10.
27 David Bruce the Son of Robert, restored unto his Fathers Throne by the power of the Scots, and a great enemy to the English. Invading England when King Edward was at the Siege of Calice, he was taken Prisoner by Queen Philip, the Wife of that King, and brought to Windsor, where he was Prisoner for a while with King John of France. Released at last on such conditions as best pleased the Conqueror. 29.
1371 28 Robert II. surnamed Stewart, King of the Scots by descent from the eldest Sister of David Bruce, was extracted also from ancient Princes of Wales (as was said before:) restoring thereby the British Blood to the Throne of Scotland.
1390 29 Robert III. Son of Robert the Second, called John before he came to the Crown; in which much over-awed by his own Brother the Duke of Albany, who had an aim at it for himself. 16.

- 1406 30 James, Son of Robert the Third, taken Prisoner by King Henry the Fourth of England, as he was crossing the Seas for France, to avoid the practices of his Uncle. Restored unto his Country in the beginning of the Reign of King Henry the Sixth, after 18 years absence, he was at last most miserably murdered by the Earl of Arbol, claiming a right unto that Crown. 42.
- 1448 31 James II. slain by the English at the Siege of Roxborough Castle. 24.
- 1462 32 James III. slain by his own rebellious Subjects. 29.
- 1491 33 James IV. married Margaret the eldest Daughter of King Henry the Seventh, but at the soliciting of the French, (against the Peace between the Nations) he invaded England (in the absence of King Henry the Eighth) with 100000 Men; but was met with by the Earl of Surrey (having 26000 Men in his Army) nigh unto Flodden, where he was slain, together with two Bishops, twelve Earls, fourteen Lords, and his whole Army routed. 23.
- 1514 34 James V. Son of James the Fourth, and the Lady Margaret, kept for a time such good correspondency with the English, that in the year 1536, he was created Knight of the Order of the Garter. But afterwards inheriting his Fathers hatred against them, he invaded their Borders in the year 1542: and was met by the Lord Wharton, then Warden of the West Marshes. The Battels being ready to joyn, one Sir Oliver Sinclair the Kings Favourite, though otherwise of no great Parentage, was by the Kings directions proclaimed General: which the Scottish Nobility took in such Indignation, that they threw down their Weapons, and suffered themselves to be taken prisoners; there being not one Man slain on either side. The principal Prisoners were the Earls of Glen-carn, and Cassiles; the Barons Maxwell, O-liphant, Somerwell, Flemming, with divers others; besides many of the principal Gentry, 28.
- 1542 35 Mary, the Daughter and only lawfully-begotten Child of James the Fifth, succeeded in her Cradle unto the Throne; promised in Marriage to King Edward the Sixth of England; but by the power of the Hamiltons carried into France, where married to Francis, then Dauphin, afterwards King of the French, of that name the second. After whose death, she married Henry Lord Darnley, eldest Son of Matthew Earl of Lennox Outed of her Diminions by a potent Faction, she was compelled to flee into England; where after a tedious Imprisonment, she was put to death in Fotheringhay Castle in Northamptonshire, and interred at Peterburgh, Anno 1586.
- 1567 36 James VI. the Son of Mary Queen of Scots, and of Henry Lord Darnley, was crowned King in his Cradle also. He married Anne, the Daughter of Christian the Third, King of Denmark; was chose of the Order of the Garter, Anno 1590. and succeeded Queen Elizabeth in the Realm of England, March 24. Anno 1602. And here I cannot omit the prudent fore-sight of Henry the Seventh, who having two Daughters, bestowed the Eldest (contrary to the mind of his Council) on the King of Scots, and the younger on the King of the French, that so, if his own Issue Male should fail, and that a Prince of another Nation must inherit England; then Scotland as the lesser Kingdom would depend upon England, and not England wait on France, as upon the greater. In which Succession of the Scots to the Crown of England, the Prophecy of the fatal Stone, spoken of before, did receive accomplishment. And so perhaps might that ascribed in the Poly-chronicon to an holy Anchoret living in King Edwards time, which is this, Englishmen, for that they wretched them to Drunkenness, to Treason, and to Retchlesness of Gods House, first by Danes, and then by Normans, and the third time by Scots, whom they holden least worthy of all, they shall be overcome. Then the World shall be unstable, and so divers and variable, that the unstableness of thoughts shall be betokened by many manner Diversity of Clothing. For on this Union of the Kingdoms, this Prediction seems to have been accomplished; the Circumstances mentioned in the same so patly agreeing, and the Scots never subduing England, but by this blessed Victory. Unless perhaps the Accomplishment thereof be still to come; or that it was indeed more literally fulfilled in the great Defeat at Bannocks bourn, in which was slain 50000 English, as the Scottish Writers do report, and the name of Scot growing so terrible for a time, that an hundred of the English would flee from three Scots, as before was noted.

The Revenues of this Crown Boterus estimateth at 100000 Crowns, or 30000 Sterling, and it is not like that they were much more, if they came to that: here being not Commodity in this Kingdom to allure Strangers to Traffick: the Demain or Patrimony of the Crown, but mean; the Country in most places Barren, and many of the Subjects, those especially of the Out-Isles, and the Western parts, so extreemly barbarous, that they add very small improvement to the publick Treasury.

And answerable to the shortness of their standing Revenue, were their Forces also. For though the Country be very populous, and the Men generally patient both of Cold and Hunger, and inured to Hardship; yet in regard the Kings hereof were not able to maintain an Army under pay, their Forces seldom held together above 40 days; and then, if not a great deal sooner, did disband themselves. For the Nobility and Gentry being bound by the Tenure of their Lands, to serve the King in his Wars, and to bring with them such, and so many of their Vassals, as the present Service did require; used to provide for themselves and their Followers, Tents, Money, Victuals, Provision of all sorts, and all other Necessaries; the King supplying them with nothing. Which being spent, they usually Disbanded, and went home again, without attending long on the Expedition. Which I conceive to be the reason, why the Scots in the time of Hostility betwixt the Nations, made only sudden and tumultuary Incursions into England, without any thing of special Moment: and that they have not acted any thing elsewhere in the way of Conquest, but only as Mercenaries to the French and other Nations that have hired them. And though it be affirmed that the Army of King James the 4th, when he invaded England in the time of King Henry the Eighth, (being then in France) consisted of 100000 fighting Men; yet this I look on only as an Argument of their Populosity; few of those Men being armed or trained up to Service, and therefore easily discomfited by a far less Army. It's true, that in the year 1645. the Scottish Covenanters raised an Army consisting of 18000 Foot, and 2000 Horse, and 1000 Dragoons; with Arms, Artillery, and Ammunition correspondent to it: which was the gallantest Army, and the best appointed, that ever that Nation did set out in the times foregoing. But then it is as true withal, that this Army was maintained and payed by the two Houses of the Parliament of England, at the rate of 30000 l. per mensum, and an advance of 100000 l. before-hand, the better to invire them to embrace the Action, and prepare Necessaries for it, without any charge unto themselves. And though the Army which they sent into England above five years after, under James Duke Hamilton of Arran, was was little inferiour unto this number, but far superiour to it both in Horfe and Arms, and other necessary appointments: yet it is well known, that the Scots brought nothing but their own Bodies to compound that Army; the Horfe and Arms being such as they had gotten out of England in the former War.

In point of Reputation amongst Foreign Princes, the Kings of the Scots, and their Ambassadors and Agents, had place in all General Councils, and Ecclesiastical Assemblies, before those of Castile: and by the Statists of late times, have been reckoned (with the Kings of England, France, and Spain) for absolute Monarchs. But I conceive that this was only since the first years of King Edward the Third, when they had quitted their Subjection and Vassalage to the Crown of England. For that anciently the Scots were Homagers to the Kings of England, may be apparently demonstrated by these following Arguments. 1. By the Homages, and other Services, and Duties, done by the Kings of the Scots unto those of England: Malcolm the Third, doing Homage unto William the Conqueror; as William, one of his Successors, did to King Henry the Second; and that not only for the three Northern Counties, or the Earldom of Huntingdon (as by some pretended) but for the very Crown it self: Kenneth the Third, being also one of those eight Tributary or Vassal Kings, which rowed King Edgar over the Dee, as before was noted. 2ly, By the interpoling of King Edward the First, and the submission of the Scots to that interpoling, in determining the controversie of Succession betwixt Bruce and Baliol; as in like case, Philip the Fair adjudged the Title of Artoys, which was holden of the Crown of France, and then in question betwixt the Lady Maud, and her Nephew Robert; or as King Edward the Third, in the right of the said Crown of France, determined of the Controversie betwixt John Earl of Montford, and Charles of Blois, for the Dukedom of Bretagne. 3ly, By the confession and acknowledgment of the Prelates, Peers, and other the Estates of Scotland, subscribed by all their Hands and Seals in the Roll of Ragman; wherein they did acknowledge the Superiority of the Kings of England, not only in regard of such advantages as the Sword had given him, but as of his original and undoubted right. Which Roll was treacherously delivered into the hands of the Scots, by Roger Mortimer Earl of March, in the beginning of the Reign of King Edward the Third. 4ly, By the tacit concession of the Kings themselves, who in their Coins, Commissions, and publick Instruments, assume not to themselves the Title of Kings of Scotland, but of Reges Scotorum, or the Kings of the Scots: and thereby intimating that though they are the Kings of the Nation, yet there is some Superiour Lord (King Paramount as we may call him) who hath the Royalty of the Land. 5ly, By the Judgments and Arrests of the Courts of England, not only in the times of King Edward the First, but in some times since. For when William Wallis, a Scottishman by Birth, and the best Soldier of that Country, was taken Prisoner and brought to London, he was adjudged to suffer death as a Traytor; which had been an illegal and unrighteous judgment, had he been a Prisoner of War, and not looked on by the Judges as a Subject to the Crown of England. The like done in the case of Simon Frezill, another of that Kingdom in the same Kings Reign. In like manner, in the time of K. Edward the Third, it was resolved by the Court, in the Lord Beaumonts Case, when it was objected that one of the Witnesses was a Scot, and therefore as an Alien, not to give his Evidence; that his Testimony was to be allowed of, because the Scots in the Law of England did not go for Aliens. And when one indicted for a Rape in the 13th of Queen Elizabeths Reign, desired a Medietatem Linguae, because he was a Scottishman, and so an Alien, it was denied him by the Court, because the Scots were not reputed here as Aliens, but as Subjects rather. So also, when Robert Umfraville, Lord of Kyme, was summoned to the Parliament of England, in the Reign of King Edward the Third, by the name of Robert Earl of Angus, (which is a dignity in Scotland;) and after in a Writ against him was called only by his own name of Umfraville, without any addition of that honour; the Writ was judged to abide; which I conceive the learned Judges had not done, if Scotland had not been reputed to be under the Vassalage of the Kings of England. 6. and lastly, by a Quarter of Lands and Arms, (which I have in my custody) granted by King Edward the First, in the last year of his Reign, to Peter Dudge of Stopworth in the County of Chester, one of the Ancestors of my Mother, in which it is expressed, that the said Lands and Arms were conferred upon him by that King, for his eminent services, encomencé son grand Enemy & Rebel, Baliol, Roy d'Escoce & vassal de Angleterre; that is to say, against his great Enemy and Rebel Baliol King of Scotland, and Vassal of England. A thing so clear, that if King James had not been extremely tender of the honour of his Native Country, he needed not to have put his Lawyers to the trouble of a New Invention in hammering the Case of the Post-nati for him; to make the Scots inheritable unto Lands in England. The acknowledgment and Reviver of their old Subjection would have served his turn. But of this Argument enough, and perhaps too much. I only add, that upon conference which I once had with an honourable Person of that Kingdom of Scotland, employed unto the Court in a business of no mean consequence to the Peace and Quiet of his Country: I found him so sensible of the inconveniences of their present Government, by reason of the Kings absence, and the frequent divisions and partialities of his Council there; that he confessed that Nation could be never rich or happy, till they were made a Province of the English Empire; and governed by a Vice-Roy, as Ireland was.

The Principal Order of Knighthood in this Kingdom was that of S. Andrew, instituted by Hungus, King of the Picts, to encourage his Subjects in the War against King Athelstane of England. The Knights did wear about their necks a Collar, interlaced with Thistles, with the Picture of St. Andrew appendant to it: the Motto Nemo me impune lacessit. It took this name because after the Battel, Hungus and his Soldiers went all barefoot to S. Andrews, and there vowed that they and their Posterity would henceforth use his Cross as their Ensign (which is a Saltire Argent in a Field Azure) whensoever they take in hand any warlike Enterprize. This Order having been long Extinguished in the year 1687. was revived by James the 2d, King of England.

2. But this Order being expired many Ages since, there is now no Order of Knight-hood in it, (except Knights Bachelors) but that of Nova Scotia; ordained by King James, An 1622. for the planting of that Country by Scottish Colonies; in imitation of the Orders of Baronets in England, for the plantation of Ulster. Hereditary, as that also is, but the Knights heretof distinguished by a Ribband of Orange-Tawney.

The Arms are Sol, a Lion Rampant Mars, within a double Tressure Counter-flowered: which Tressure Counter-flowered was added to the Lion by Achaius King of the Scots, at what time he contracted the League with France: signifying (saith Hector Boetius one of their Historians) Francorum opibus Leonem exinde muniendum; that the Scotch Lion should be guarded by the riches of France.

I R E L A N D.

IR E L A N D is invironed on all sides with the Ocean; parted from Britain by a violent and unruly Sea, called S. Georges Chanel; situate to the West of Britain, next unto which it is the biggest Island of Europe, containing in length 300, and in breadth 120 Miles; and is seated under the 8th and 10th Climates; the longest day being 16 hours and an half in the Southern, and 17 hours 3 quarters in the Northern parts.

It was once called Scotia, from the Scots who did there inhabit; and Scotia Minor, to difference it from Scotland, in the Isle of Britain. But the general name hereof is Ireland; by the Latines called Hibernia, by the Greeks, Iernia. And though some frame a wrested Ety-mologie from Iberus, a Spanish Captain; and some from Irnaulph, once a supposed Duke hereof; as others, ab Hyberno acre, the Winter-like and inclement Air; yet probably the name proceeded from Erinland, which signifieth in their own Language a Western Land. And yet I must not pretermitt the Etymon given us by Bochartus, (more near the name than most of his other Fancies) who will have it called Hibernia, from Ibernae, a Phœnician word, signifying the furthest Habitation; there being no Country known amongst the ancients, which lay West of Ireland.

Their own Chronicles, or Fables rather, tell us, how Cæsarea, Noahs Neece, inhabited here before the Flood; and how 300 years after the Flood, it was subdued by Bartholomæus, a Scythian, who overcame here I know not what Giants. Afterward Nemethus another Scythian Prince, and Delus a Grecian, came hither, and last of all Gaotbel, with his Wife Scota, one of Pharaohs Daughters, who must needs name this Island Scotia. But not to honour such Topperies with a confutation, doubtless the first Inhabitants of this Island came out of Britain. For Britain is the highest Country unto it, and so had a more speedy waftage hither. Secondly, the ancient Writers call this Island, a British Island: And thirdly, Tacitus, giveth us of this Country this Verdict, Solum, cœlumque cultus & ingenia hominum, haud multum a Britannia differunt; the Soil and Air, the Habits and Disposition of the People, were not much unlike the Britains. For further evidence whereof, it was observed, at the reduction of Wales to the Crown of England, by King Edward the First, that many of their Laws and Customs were those of the Irish; which shews, that they did both descend from the same Original. But then we must observe withal, that they were counted far more barbarous and savage by most ancient Writers, than those of Britain are deciphered at the first discovery; said by Strabo to be Man-eaters; accustomed (as Solinus telleth us) to drink the Blood of those whom they slew in fight. Nor were the Women, though the softer and more tender Sex, free from such wild and savage Customs, it being a constant course amongst them, when they were delivered of a man child, to put some meat into the mouth of it, on the point of a Sword, wishing therewith it might not dye but in the midst of Arms, and the heat of Battel. Both Sexes used to trim themselves with the Teeth of Fishes, white as the driven Snow, or the polished Ivory; and therein placed the greatest part of their pride and bravery.

Nor are the modern Irish much abhorrent from such barbarous Customs, as plainly shew from what Original they descend; altered but little by converse with more civil Nations. Of natural constitution generally strong and nimble of Body; naughty of Heart, careless of their Lives, patient in Cold and Hunger, implacable in Enmity, constant in Love, light of Belief, greedy of Glory; and in a word, if they be bad, you shall nowhere find worse; if they be good, you shall hardly meet with better. The Diet, especially of the meer Irish, is for the most part, on Herbs, Roots, butter mingled with Oat-flower, Milk, and Beef-broth: eating Flesh many times without Bread, which they digest with Uisquebaugh; and give their Bread-corn to their Horses instead of Provvender: But more particularly, those of the richer sort in all parts, and of all sorts those which inhabit within the Pale (as they themselves call it) and in such places where the English Discipline hath been entertained; conformable to civility, both in Behaviour and Apparel: The Kernes (for by that name they call the wild Irish of the poorer and inferior sort, most extreemly barbarous; not behaving themselves like Christians, scarcely like Men. All of them so tenacious of their ancient Customs, that neither Power, nor Reason, nor the sense of the inconveniences which they suffer by it, can wean them to desert or change them. A pregnant evidence whereof, is their use of Ploughing, not with such Gears or Harness, as in other places; but by tying the hindmost Horses head to the Tail of the former: which makes the poor Jades draw in a great deal of pain; makes them unserviceable by the soon losing of their Tails, and withal is a course of so slow a dispatch, that they cannot break up as much ground in a Week, as a good Teem well harnessed would perform in a Day; yet no perswasion hath been able to prevail upon them for the changing of this hurtful and ridiculous Custom. And when the Earl of Strafford, the late Lord Deputy had damned it by act of Parliament, and laid a Penalty on such as should after use it, the People thought it such a Grievance, and so injurious to the Nation, that amongst other things demanded towards a Pacification of the present Troubles, their Agents and Commissioners insisted eagerly on the abrogation of this Law. An humour like to this in the point of Husbandry, we shall hereafter meet with in another place. Near of kin to which, is a lazie Custom that they have of burning their Straw (rather than put themselves to the pains to thresh it) by that means to part it from the Corn. From which no Reason can dissuade them, nor Perswasions win them. They have among them other Customs as absurd though less inconvenient; as placing a green Bush, on May-day before their Doors, to make their kine yield the more Milk; kneeling down to the New-Moon as soon as they see it, desiring her to leave them in as good health as she found them; and many others of like nature.

They use a Language of their own, but spoken also in the West of Scotland, and the Hebrides or Western Islands; which though originally British, or a Dialect of it, by reason of their intermixture with Norwegians, Danes, Easterlings, or Oost-mans, and English Saxons; hath no affinity with the Irish, for ought I can learn.

The Christian Faith was first preached among them by S. Patrick, affirmed to be the Nephew of S. Martin of Tours, Anno 435. Reformed in the more civil parts, and the English Colonies, according to the Platform of the Church of England: but the Kernes, or natural wild Irish, (and many of the better sort of the Nation also) either adhere unto the Pope, or to their own Superstitious fancies, as in former times. And to say truth, it is no wonder that they should, there being no care taken to instruct them in the Protestant Religion; either by translating the Bible, or the English Liturgie, into their own Language, as was done in Wales, but forcing them to come to Church to the English Service, which the People understand no more than than they do the Mass : (Since altered.) By means whereof the Irish are not only kept in continual ignorance, as to the Doctrine and Devotions of the Church of England, and others of the Protestant Churches ; but those of Rome are furnished with an excellent Argument, for having the Service of the Church in a Language which the common Hearers do not understand. And therefore I do heartily commend it to the care of the State (when these Distempers are composed) to provide that they may have the Bible, and all other publick means of Christian Instruction and Devotion in their natural Tongue.

The Soil of it self is abundantly fruitful, but naturally fitter for Grass and Pasturage, than it is for Tillage : as may be seen in such places where the industry of Man is aiding to the natural goodness of the Soil. But where that wanteth, the Country is either over-grown with Wood, or encumbered with vast Bogs, and unwholesome Marshes ; yielding neither Profit nor Pleasure unto the Inhabitants. In some places, as in the County of Armagh, so rank and fertile, that the laying of any Soil or Compost on it, doth abate its fruitfulness, and proves the worst Husbandry that can be.

It hath been anciently very famous for the Piety and Religious Lives of the Monks. Amongst whom I can not but remember Columbus, and of him this memorable Apothegm ; when offered many Preferments to leave his Country, he returned this Answer, It becomes not them to embrace other Mens Goods, who for Christ's sake had forsaken their own. Of no less Piety, but more eminent in point of Learning, was Richard Fitz Rafe, Archbishop of Armagh, commonly called Armacanus, who flourished about the Year 1350. A declared enemy of the Errors and Corruptions of the Church of Rome.

It is affirmed of this Island, that (amongst other Privileges which it hath above other Islands) it fostereth no venomous Serpent ; and that no such will live here, brought from other places. Hence of her self we find her speaking in the Poet.

*Ille ego sum Graiis Glacialis Hibernia dicta ;
Cui Deus, & melior norma nascentium Origo ;
Fus commune dedit cum Caeta abrice Torantis,
Angues ne nostris dissimulant sibi in oris.*

I am that Island which in times of old
The Greeks did call Ilibonia, icy-cold :
Secured by God and Nature from this fear,
Which gift was given to Crete, Jove's Mother dear,
That poisonous Snake should never here be bred,
Or dare to hiss, or hurtful venom spread.

The other Miracles of this Island are, 1. That there is a Lake in the County of Armagh, into which if one thrust a piece of Wood, he shall find that part of it which remaineth in the Mud to be turned Iron ; and that which is in the Water, to be turned into a Whetstone : richly deserved by him, if the Tale be false, who did first report it. 2. That the Kine will yield no Milk, if their Calves be not by them ; or at least their Calves-skins stuffed with Straw or Hay. It is said also, that all the breed of this Country are of less size than they be in England, except Women and Grey-hounds, and those much bigger than with us.

As for the Clergy of this Country, they have been little beholding to their Lay-Patrons in former times ; some of their Bishops being so poor, that they had no other Revenues than the Pasture of two Milch-Beasts. And so far had the Monasteries and Religious Houses been invaded by Appropriations, the Churches Rights, that of late times, in the whole Province of Connaught, the whole Stipend of the Incumbent was not above forty shillings, in some places not above sixteen : So that the poor bish must needs be better fed than taught ; for Ad tenuitatem Beneficiorum necessario sequitur ignorantia Sacerdotum Poor Benefices will be filled with ignorant Priests, said Panormitan rightly. But this remedied in part by his Sacred Majesty King Charles the Second, Monarch of Great-Britain, who liberally (at the Suit of the late Lord Archbishop of Canterbury) restored unto this Church all the Impropriations and Portions of Tithes, which had been vested in the Crown. An Action of most singular Piety and Princely Bounty.

Principal Rivers of this Country, are, 1. The Shannon, (the Senas of Ptolemy) which arising in the Mountains of Leitrim in the County of Connaught, and making many fair Lakes as it passeth forwards ; loseth it self after a course of 200 Miles (of which sixty Navigable) in the Western Ocean. 2. The Liff, by Ptolemy called Liffimus, neighboured by the City of Dublin. 3. Loudiffe, or Black-Water, as the English call it. 4. Slane, supposed to be the Medona of the ancient Writers. 5. The Somme. 6. The Boyne, &c. Of which, and others of like note, take this following Catalogue out of the Canto of the Marriage of the Thames and Medway in the Edy Queen.

There was the Liffe rowling down the Sea,
The sandy Slane, the stony Lublin,
The spacious Boyne, spreading like a Sea,
The pleasant Boyne, the fishy-fruitful Banne,
Swift Arwidiffe, which of the Englishman
Is called Black-Water ; and the Liffar deep, Sad Trowis, that once his People over-ran,
Strong Allo tumbling from Shenl cheer steep,
And Maullo mine, whose Waves I whilom taught to weep.

There also was the wide-embayed Moyre,
The pleasant Banden crown'd with many Wood ;
The spreading Lee, that like an Island fair
Incloseth Cork with his divided flood ;
And hateful Oure, late stain'd with English Blood,
With many more, ———

So the renowned Spencer in his Canto of the marriage of Thames and Medway.

But besides these Rivers, this Island is in most places well stored with Lakes, yielding great plenty of Fish to the parts adjoining. The principal of which, 1. Lough Erne, containing 15 Miles in breadth, and 30 Miles in length ; shaded with Woods, and so replenished with Fish, that the Fishermen complain of too much abundance, and the often breaking of their Nets. It hath also in it many Islands, one most remarkable for the strange and horrid Noises which are therein heard, called therefore by the Vulgar, St. Patrick's Purgatory. Almost as big as this is, 2. the Lake of Corbes, which loseth it self in the Sea not far from Galloway. A Lake of 26 Miles in length, and four in breadth ; said to have in it 30 Islets, abounding with Pine-Trees. 3. Lough-Boyle, supposed to be the Logia of Ptolemy. 4. Lough-Eaugh, out of which the River Banne, abundantly well stored with Salmons, hath its first Original. And besides these and many others of less note, there are said to be three Lakes in the Province of Meth, not far asunder, and having an Intercourse of Waters ; but of so different a Temper, that the Fish which are proper to the one, (for each of them hath its proper and peculiar sorts) will not live in the other ; but either die, or by some secret conveyances, find a way to their own Lake out of which they were brought.

It was divided anciently into five Provinces, each one a Kingdom of it self, that is to say, 1. Leinster, 2. Meth, 3. Ulster, 4. Connaught, and 5. Munster ; but of late time the Province of Meth is reckoned for a Member or part of Leinster.

1. LEINSTER, by the Latines called Lagenia, hath on the East, the Irish Channel) commonly called St. George's St. George's Channel) by which parted from the Isle of Great Britain; on the West, the River Nurrie, (Neorus, as the Latins call it) which divides it from Munster; on the North, the Province of Meath; and the main Ocean on the South. The Soil more fruitful generally than the rest of Ireland, because better cultivated and manured, as having been longest in the possession of the English; from whom a great part of the Inhabitants do derive themselves, and for that reason more conformable to the Civilities and Habit of the English Nation. Well watered, besides a large Sea-coast, with many fair and pleasant Rivers, the principal whereof, 1. the Barrow, called in Latin, Borgus, 2. the Nurrie, 3. the Shannon, 4. the Liffie, (the Labinus of Ptolemy) neighbouring Dublin the chief City.

It containeth the Counties of 1. Dublin, 2. Kilkenny, 3. Cathlough, 4. Kildare, 5. Lease, or Queens-County; 6. Ophalie, or Kings-County, and 7. Wexford; in which are comprehended 24 Towns of note, and 88 Castles well fortified, and able to make good resistance against an Enemy. The English being forced to fortifie themselves in their Plantations with strong Holds and Fortresses against the incursions of the Natives.

Places of most observation in it, 1. Dublin, supposed to be the Eblana of Ptolemy; by the Irish called Balaclogh; because, being seated in a fenny and moorish Soil, it was built on Piles, as the word doth signifie in that Language. Situate at or near the mouth of the River Liffe, which affordeth it a commodious Haven, but that the entrances thereof are many times encumbered with heaps of Sand. The City very rich and populous, as being the Metropolis of all the Island, the Seat of the Lord Deputy, an Archbishop's See, and an University; besides the benefits redounding from the Courts of Justice. In these respects well fortified against all emergencies; and adorned with many goodly Buildings, both private and publick. The principal of which are the Castle, wherein the Lord Deputy resideth, built by Henry Loan-dres, once Archbishop here: A College founded by Queen Elizabeth, to the Honour, and by the Name of the blessed Trinity; the Cathedral Church dedicated to St. Patrick, the Apostle of the Irish Nation; a fair Collegiate Church called Christ-Church, besides thirteen others destinated to Parochial Meetings. Being destroyed almost to nothing in the Danish Wars, it was re-edified by Hakon, surnamed Harfager, King of the Norwegians, then Masters of most parts of the Island; and after the subjection of it to the Crown of England, was peopled with a Colony of Bristol-Men. 2. Wexford, or Wexford, the Atenapia of Ptolemy, situate on the mouth of the River Slane, supposed to be the Adodona of the same Author, the first of all the Towns in Ireland which received a Colony of English. 3. Kilkenny, on the River Nurrie, the chief Seat of the Bishop of Offory, and the fairest Town of all the Inlands: so called, quasi Cella Canici, the Cell or Monastery of Canicus, a Man of great renown for Piety in these parts of the County. 4. Kildare, an Island Town also, and a Bishop's See; but of more note for giving the Title of an Earl to the ancient Family of the Fitz-Gerards, of long time honoured with this Title. One of which being much complained of to King Henry the Eighth, as a Man of so unquiet and turbulent a Nature, that his Adversaries closed their Charge against him with this Expression, Finally, all Ireland cannot rule this Earl; the King replied, that Then this Earl should rule all Ireland; and so, for his Jest's sake, made him Lord Deputy of the Kingdom. 5. Rosse, once populous, well traded, and of large circumference, now a Ruine only; nothing remaining but the Walls, which were built by Isabel, the Daughter of Richard Strongbow, Earl of Pembroke, the fortunate Conqueror of this Island for King Henry the Second. 6. Philip's Town, the principal of the County of Ophalie, or Kings-County; so called in honour of King Philip; as 7. Mariborg, the chief of Lease, or the Queens-County, was in honour of Queen

Mary. 8. Ligblin, a place of great importance, well walled and fortified against the incursions of the Irish by the Lord Deputy Bellingham. 9. Cathlough, commonly, but corruptly, Carlough, a Town of great strength, and the chief of that County. 10. Rheban, not otherwise of note, but that it is conceived to be the Rhoba of Ptolemy.

2. METH, by the Latines called Media, by Giraldus, Midia; because situate in the midst of the Island, hath on the South Leinster; on the West Connaught; on the North, Ulster; on the East, the Irish Sea, or St. George's Channel. A small, but rich and pleasant Province; well stocked with People, and stored with all things necessary for their Sustentation; and for a sweet and wholsom Air not inferior to any. Divided into three Counties only, that is to say, 1. East-Meth, 2. West-Meth, and 3. Longford; containing thirteen Towns of note, and fourteen Castles of good esteem. By reason of which strength, it is called by some Writers, the Chamber of Ireland.

Towns of most consequence herein, are, 1. Trim, the chief Town of the County of East-Meth, the ancient Barony of the Lacies; possessed in former times of a fair Revenue in this County, and the Lords of the greatest part of Ulster. 2. Tredagh, more properly Drogheda, situate on the River Boine on the edge of Ulster, to which Province belongs so much of the Town as lieth on the North side of that River; a very fair and populous City, as well by Art as Nature very strongly fortified, and furnished with a large and commodious Haven. It took the Name of Drogheda, from the Bridge there built upon the River for the conveniency of passage (as the word signifies in that Language) and therefore called Pontana by some Latin Writers. This was one of the first Places O. Cromwel took in Ireland by Force, who put all he found in it to the Sword, and miserably impoverished the place. 3. Molinga, the chief Town of West-Meth. 4. Delvin, in the same County also, the Barony of the Nugents, an ancient Family in this Tract. 5. Longford; of most note in the County so named, but not else observable.

As for the Fortunes of this Province (for Leinster since the first Conquest of it, hath been inseparably annexed to the Crown of England) it was first granted in Fee-Farm by King Henry the Second, to Hugh Lacy a Man of great merit and employment in the Conquest of Ireland; who left it unto Walter his younger Son. By Margaret and Matilda, the Nieces of this Walter, by his Son Gilbert, one moiety hereof came to the Montimers, Earls of March, and in their Right unto the Crown in King Edward the Fourth; and the other moiety to the Verduns, by whom dispersed and scattered into divers Families. Accompted for one County only till the time of King Henry the Eighth, in whose Reign it was divided into East-Meth and West-Meth; to which the County of Longford was after added, as it continueth to this day.

3. ULSTER, by the Latines called Ultonia; is the largest Province of all Ireland, bounded on the South with Meth and Connaught; on the West, with the vast Irish Ocean; on the North, with that part of the Northern Ocean, to which Ptolemy gives the Name of Hyperborean; and on the East, with St. George's Channel. A Country fruitful of it self, but in most places formerly overgrown with Woods, and drowned in Marshes and great Bogs, by the natural slothfulness of the People; made more responsive to the Husbandman, both for Corn and Pasturage, since the late Plantation of the British, than in times foregoing.

It is divided into the Counties of, 1. Louth, 2. Carvon, 3. Permanath, 4. Down, 5. Monaghan, 6. Armagh, 7. Cel-rane, 8. Tirconnel, 9. Tir Oen, and 10. Antrim. In which are comprehended 14 Towns of note for Commerce and Traffick.

Traffick, and 30 Castles for the defence of the Country, and keeping under the wild Irish; wider and more untractable in these Northern parts, than the rest of Ireland. The whole well watered with a large and spacious Sea, on three sides thereof; many great Lakes in the body of it, besides the Rivers of 1. Bine, called in Latine Binnla, which divides it from Meth, 2. the Binn, 3. Moandae, and 4. the Eyn, belonging to this Province wholly.

Places of most importance in it, 1. Armagh, on or near the River of Kahan, the chief Town of the County so called; and the See of an Archbishop, who is the Primate of all Ireland. An ancient City but so miserably defaced by the Tir-Oen Rebellion, that it can scarce preserve the reputation of a Market-Town. 2. Carlingford, an ancient Town, both situate on the Sea-side, and both within the County of Louth. 4. Knock-Fergus, the chief of Enniskillen; more properly Rack-Fergus, (and in that sense called Carick-Fergus by the Irish) so called from Fergus, one of the Kings of the Irish Scots, who there suffered Shipwreck. Seated upon a large and spacious Bay (the Vindicta of Ptolomy) which giveth it both a safe and commodious Port; as well by natural situation, as the works of Art, very strongly fortified, by reason of the Neighbourhood of the Scots in Cantire, from which little distant. 5. London-Derry, a Colony of the Londoners, best built of any Town in the North of Ireland. 6. Dungannon, the principal Seat and Residence, in former times, of the great O-Neals. 7. Dungall, the principal of Tir-Cannell. 8. Rohogh, a small Village at present, but anciently a Bishop's See: fit to be mention'd in this place, in regard it still preserveth some foot steps of the old Rohogdii, an Irish Tribe, and placed by Ptolomy in this Tract, where they gave Name unto the Premontory, by him called Rohogdium, now the Fair-Forland; as is probably conceived by the Learned Cambden.

This, as it is the largest Province of all this Kingdom, so was it with most difficulty subjected to the Crown of England, and reduced to good order and civility. First conquered by John Curcy, a valiant English-man, in the Reign of King Henry the Second, by whom he was created Earl of Ulster. But being maligned for his eminent Virtues, and after proscribed by King John, this Title and Estate were both conferred upon Hugh Lacie, the Lord and Conqueror of Meth, whom before we spake of. By an Heir General of the Lacies, it came unto the Burghs, then Lords of Connaught; and by the Marriage of Elizabeth, Daughter and Heir of Richard de Burgh, the last Earl of that Family, it came to Lionel, Duke of Clarence, the second Son (then living) of King Edward the Third, as by his Daughter Philip, to the Earls of March; from them by the like Marriage to the House of York, and in the Person of King Edward the Fourth, to the Crown again. But being neglected by the English in the whole course of their Government, especially in the Wars betwixt York and Lancaster, it was cantoned in many Estates and Principalities, by the great Lords of the natural Irish; (who had born too great sway here in the former times) and so estranged from the civilities of England, and their Allegiance to that Crown, as if that it had never been in subjection to it. In which estate it did continue (the Kings of England having here no more Power or Profit, than the great ones of the Country were pleased to give them): till the Rebellion first, and afterwards the vanquishment of Hugh O-neal, the then Earl of Tir-Oen, brought it in full subjection to the English Government, of which more hereafter.

4. CONNAUGHT, in Latin called Connacia, by the Irish Connaught, is bounded on the North with Ulster; on the West with the main Ocean; on the South with Munster, from which parted by the River Shannon; and on the East, with Meth and some part of Leinster. So called from the Nagnata, an old Irish Nation; or from Nagnata a Port-Town, both placed by Ptolomy in this Tract. The Soil of the same temper with that of Ulster; as woody and as full of Bogs till these later times, in which indifferently well cleared of both inconveniences.

It hath been also called by our English Writers the County of Clare, from Thom de Clare, one of the younger sons of Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester, on whom it was conferred by King Edward the First; and is divided at the present into these five Shires: that is to say, 1. Larim, 2. Roscommon, 3. Meth, 4. Siege, and 5. Galloway and Tromond. In which are comprehended but eight Towns of any consequence for Commerce and Traffick (an argument of the imperfect Plantation of it by the English Conquerors); and about 24 Castles for defence of the County, of old erection, besides such Fortresses as have been raised occasionally in these latter Troubles.

Places of most note and observation, 1. Trim, an Archbishop's See. 2. Athlone, an ancient Town, but decayed and ruinous; of most renown for being the Barony of John de Birmingham, a noble Englishman, who had great possession in this Tract. 3. Larim, the chief Town of the County so named, neighboured by the Curlew-Mountains, unfortunately memorable for the great defeat there given the English in Tir-Oen Rebellion; and by the Spring or Fountain of the River Shannon or Shannon, whose course we have before described. 4. Siege, and 5. Roscommon, the chief Town of their several Counties. 6. Athlone, a piece of great strength, and the great Key of Connaught. 7. Twemont, not otherwise much observable, but for giving the Title of an Earl to the Family of O Brian, (descended from the Kings of Connaught) advanced unto that Honour by King Henry the Eighth. 8. Galloway, the principal of this Province, a Bishop's See, and the third City of the Kingdom for beauty and bigness. Situate near the fall of the great Lake or River of Corbet, in the Western Ocean, defended on that side from the fury of the Sea, and fear of Invasions, by the interposition of some Islands (called the Isles of Arran) very strongly fortified. A noted Empory, and lately of so great fame with Foreign Merchants, that an out-landish Merchant meeting with an Irishman, demanded in what part of Galloway Ireland stood; as if Galloway had been the Name of the Island, and Ireland only the Name of some Town.

This once a Kingdom of it self, as the rest of those Provinces; the last King whereof was Roderick, surnamed the Great, who having a great hand over the rest of the Royalets, entitled himself sole Monarch, or King of Ireland. But being forced to submit himself to King Henry the Second, his Country at the last was brought into subjection to the Crown of England, by the Valour and good fortune of William de Burgh, Gilbert de Clare Earl of Gloucester, William de Birmingham, and other Noble Adventurers of the English Nation. And though all of them did partake of the fruit of their Labours; yet the greatest part of the Spoil, together with the Title of Lords of Connaught, fell to the Family of the Burghs; from them to Lionel Duke of Clarence, and by degrees unto the Crown, as before was shewn. Cantoned again amongst the Irish and degenerate English, as Ulster was, by the supine neglect of the Kings of England; till the Rebellion of Tir-Oen, involving all the chief of the Irish Nation in the same cause with him, involved them also consequently in the same destruction.

5. MOUNSTER, by the Latins called Momonia, is bounded on the North with Connaught; on the East with Leinster; on the West with the Atlantic or Western Ocean; and on the South with the Virginian. By the natural Irish it is called Mown, whence the English had the Name of Munster. A Province, which for rich Towns, commodious Havens, fair Rivers, and the fertility of the Soil, yields not to any in the Kingdom.

It is divided into six Counties, viz. Limerick, 2. Waterford, 3. Cork, 4. Down, 5. Kerry, and 6. Tipperary, which which two last anciently enjoyed all the Rights of a County Palatine: And in these Shires are comprehended (besides many safe Stations and Roads for Shipping) 24 Towns of Note and Trading, and 66 Castles of old erection.

Places of most observation, 1. Cassiles, in the County of Limerick, an Archbishop's See, advanced unto that honour by Pope Eugenius the Third, about the Year 1150. 2. Limerick, the principal of that County, and the fourth in estimation of all the Kingdom: Situate in an Island compassed round about with the River Shanon, by which means well fortified; a well frequented Empory, and a Bishop's See; distant from the main Ocean about 60 Miles, but so accommodated by the River, that Ships of Burden come up close to the very Walls. The Castles and the Bridge-pieces of both great strength and beauty, were of the foundation of King John, exceedingly delighted with the situation. 3. Clonmel, in the County of Tipperary, of great strength and consequence. 4. Holy Cross, in the same County also, once flourishing by reason of the great resort of Pilgrims, to see and worship there a piece of the Holy Cross, as it was supposed; which supposition, as it drew much Wealth unto the Town, so it obtained the Rights of a County Palatine for the County also. 5. Thurles in the same County, which gives the Title of a Viscount to the Earls of Ormond, but not else observable. 6. Waterford, on the River Shannon, a well traded Port, a Bishop's See, and the second City of the Kingdom. Of great fidelity to the English since the Conquest of Ireland, and for that cause endowed with many ample Privileges. First built by some Norwegian Pirates, who though they fixed it in one of the most barren Parts, and most foggy Air of all the Country, yet they made choice of such a safe and commodious Site for the use of Shipping, that of a Nest of Pirates it was afterwards made a Receipt for Merchants, and suddenly grew up to great Wealth and Power. 7. Cork, (by the Latines called Corcagia) the principal of that County, and a Bishop's See; well walled and fitted with a very commodious Haven; consisting chiefly of one Street reaching out in length; inhabited by a civil, wealthy, and industrious People. 8. Dunkerran, an old Episcopal See, supposed by some to be the Ivernus of Ptolomy, but not else observable. 9. Kinsale, upon the mouth of the River Bany, a commodious Port, opposite to the Coasts of Spain, and fortified in Tir Oen's Rebellion by a Spanish Garrison, under the Command of Don John de Aquila; but soon recovered (after the defeat of that Grand Rebel near the Walls hereof) by the Valour and indefatigable Industry of Charles Lord Mounjoy, the then Lord Deputy of this Kingdom. 10. Baltimore, 11. Youghall, and 12. Berehaven, all upon the Sea, and all provided of safe Roads and convenient Havens. 12. Lismore, of old a Bishop's See, now annexed to Waterford, in which Shire it standeth. Nothing in point of Story singular which concerns this Province, but that it was so carefully looked to by the Kings of England, that there was appointed over it a peculiar Officer (in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, in power and place next to the Deputy himself) called the Lord President of Munster; by whose vigilancy there have happened fewer Rebellions here, than in any Province of this Island.

The ancient Inhabitants of this Island, being originally Britains (as before is said) were in the time of Ptolomy distinguished into the Nations of Rhobognii, Darnii, Volontii, Venicii, and Erdini, possessing the Northern parts, now Ulster; the Auteri, Cangani, and Nagnatae, inhabiting Connaught; the Velibori, Uerni, Vedii, and Coriondi, in the South, now Mounster; and the Menapii, Cauci, Blanii, Brigantes, taking up the Provinces of Meth and Leinster. Principal Cities of the which were Eblana, now Dublin; Menapia, now Waterford; Nagnata, which Ptolomy honoured with the Title of Urbs insignis; Rbigia, Rbeba, Malcolicum, Labernus, Ivernus, &c. not easily discernable by what Names we may call them now: This Country never being so happy as to come under the Power of the Romans, the great Masters of Civility and good Letters in the West of Europe; and by that means, the Affairs thereof buried in ignorance and Silence Towards the falling of which Empire we find the Nation of the Scots to be seated here, and from hence to take possession of the Hebrides, or Western Isles, near the Western part of Britain, on the North of Dublin. Afterwards some of the Saxon Monarchs cast their Eyes upon it, and made themselves Masters of Dublin, and some other place, but being incumbered with the Danes, could not hold them long; being hard to defend their own against the People. The next that undertook the Conquest were the Northern Nations, Danes, Swedes, and Normans, all passing in the Chronicle of that time under the Name of Norwegians; who only scoured along the Coasts in the way of Piracy, till after finding the weakness of the Island, divided among many petit and inconsiderable Princes, they made an absolute Conquest of it under the Conduct of Turgesius, whom they elected for their King; soon rooted out by the policy of the King of Meth, the only Irish Prince who was in favour with the Tyrant. This petit King, by Name Omo-Lagblien, had a Daughter of renowned Beauty, whom Turgesius demanded of her Father to serve his Lusts; and he seeming willing to condescend to the motion, as if honoured by it, made answer, That beside his Daughter, he had at his disposing many others of more exquisite Beauties, which should all be ready at command. Turgesius swallowing this Bait, desired him with all speed to effect the meeting. But the King of Meth, attiring in the Habits of Women, a company of young Gentlemen, who durst, for the common Liberty, adventure their several Lives, conducted them to the Tyrant's Bed-chamber, and they, according to the directions given them, (when for that little modesty sake he had in him, he had commanded all his Attendants to avoid the Room) assaulted him, now ready for and expecting more kind embraces, and left him dead in the place. The Meth King had by this time acquainted divers of the better sort with his Plot; all which upon a Sign given, rush into the Palace, and put to death all the Norwegians, and other Attendants of the Tyrant. After this, the Reydes enjoyed their former Dominions, till the Year 1172, in which Dermot, Mac Morough King of Leinster, having forced the Wife of Murice O Rork, King of Meth, and being by him driven out of his Kingdom; came to the Court of England for succour. To this Petition, Henry II. then King, condescended; sending him Aid under the leading of Richard de Clare, surnamed Strongbow, Earl of Pembroke, who restored King Dermot, and brought a great part of the Island under the English subjection. John, King of England, was the first who was entituled Lord of Ireland; which Title was granted him by Pope Urban III. who for the ornament of his Royalty, sent him a plume of Peacock Feathers: And when Tir Oen styled him Defender of the Irish Liberty, he was by Clement VIII. honoured with the like Plume. But here we are to understand, that tho' the Kings of England used no other Title than Lord of Ireland, yet were they Kings hereof in Effect and Power, Lords Paramount, as we use to say. And tho' themselves retained only the Name of Lords, yet one of them gave to one of his English Subjects, the honourable but invidious Title of Duke of Ireland. And they retained the Title of Lords, till the Year 1542, in which Henry VIII. in an Irish Parliament, was declared King of Ireland, as a Name more sacred, and repleat with Majesty, than that of Lord: At which time also he was declared to be Supreme Head, under God, of the Church of Ireland; and the pretended Jurisdiction of all Foreign Powers, especially the usurped Authority of the Pope of Rome, were cod by Law, though still acknowledged by too many of this superstitious and untractable People.

The Government of this Country, since the first conquest by the English, hath been most commonly by one Supreme Officer, who is sometimes called the Lord tenant, most generally the Lord Deputy of Ireland; than whom no Vice-Roy in all Europe hath greater Power, or comes nearer the Majesty of a King in his Train and State. For his assistance he hath a Privy-Council attending on him, though resident for the most part at Dublin; and in emergencies, or cases of more difficult nature proceedeth many times in an arbitrary way, without formalities of Law. And for their Laws, which are the standing Rule of all Civil Government, they owe their being and original to the English Parliaments. For in the Reign of King Henry VII. Sir Edward Poynings, then Lord Deputy, caused an Act to pass in the Irish Parliament, whereby all Laws and Statutes, which were made in England before that time, were to be entertained and stand in force as the Laws of Ireland. On which foundation they have raised many Superstructures both of Law and Government, enacted in their own Parliaments, summoned by the Lord Deputy at the Kings appointment; in which, by another Statute made in the time of the said Poynings, the People are enabled to make Laws for their own good Governance, conditioned they were first transmitted to the Court of England, to be consider'd of by the King, before they were Voted to in either of the Houses of the Irish Parliaments: Which Laws, commonly called Poyning's Laws, have hitherto continued in force amongst them; though the last much stomached and repined at, not only as a badge of their subjection to the Crown of England, but as a Curb or Martingal to hold them in.

Yet notwithstanding these good Laws, and the ample Power of their Commission, the Lord Deputies could never absolutely subdue the Island, or bring the People to any civil course of Life; the Fathers inflicting an heavy Curse on all their Posterity, if ever they should sow Corn, build Houses, or learn the English Tongue. To this indisposition of the Irish themselves, let us add the defects of the King of England, and Irish Deputies, in matters of civil Policy, as I find them particularized by Sir John Davies, in his worthy and pithy Discourse of this Subject: I will only glean a few of them. First then, saith he, a barbarous Country is like a Field overgrown with Weeds, which must first be well broken with the Plough, and then immediately sown with good and profitable Seed; so must a wild and uncivil People be first broken and ploughed up by War, and then presently sown with the Seed of good Laws and Discipline; lest the Weeds revive in the one, and ill Manners in the other. Here then was the first defect in our English Kings, not to tame and take down the Stomachs and Pride of this People, though either Civil or Foreign Wars perhaps occasioned this neglect; And also the Irish Deputies, who at such times as the People upon a small discomfiture, were Crest-fall'n, neglected the so keeping of them by severity of Discipline. The second oversight concerneth particularly our Kings, who gave such large Possessions and Regalities unto the first Conquerors, that the People knew no Authority in a manner, above their own immediate Lords. The Laws of England were not indifferently communicated to all the Irish, but to some particular Families and Provinces only; insomuch as there were but five great Lords of the natural Irish, who had the benefit and protection of the Laws of England, that is to say, O Neal in Ulster, O Connobor in Connaught, Mac Murrough in Lemster, O Malagblin in Meth, and O Brian in Tivomond, known by the Name of Quinque Sanguines in some old Records. By means whereof the rest of the People being in the condition of Out-Laws, or at the best of Aliens, had no encouragement either to build, or plant, or manure their Land, or to behave themselves as Subjects. A fourth defect was more particularly in the Deputies or Lords Lieutenants, who having made good and wholesome Laws against the barbarous Customs of the common People, and the merciless Oppressions of the Lords, never put any of them in execution; as if they had been made for Terror, not for Reformation. Fifthly, Add unto these (which Sir John Davies hath omitted) the little care which was too often taken by the Kings of England in the choice of their Deputies. Sometimes conferring that high Office as a Court Preference, without relation unto the Merits of the Person, and sometimes sending Men of weak or broken Fortunes, who attended more their own Profit than their Master's Service, and were more bent to fleece than to feed this flock. Sixthly, And yet besides these Errors of the Kings and Deputies, in point of Government, there was another, and as great in the Planters themselves; who building all their Forts and Castles in the open Countries, abandoned the Woods and Bogs, and other Fastnesses to the natural Irish; the strength whereof not only animated them to Rebel upon all occasions, but served too fitly to continue them in their ancient Barbarism.

In these terms of wildness and non-subjection stood Ireland, till the latter end of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, at what time the Rebellion of Hugh O Neal, Earl of Tir-Oen, had engaged almost all the Irish in that desperate Action, which ending in the overthrow of that ingrateful Rebel, and all his Partizans, not only crushed the over-much Power of the Irish Nobility, but made the final and full Conquest of the whole Nation. So true it is, that Every Rebellion, when it is suppressed, doth make the Prince stronger, and the Subjects weaker. Ireland thus broken and ploughed up, that glorious Queen died a Victor over all her Enemies, and left the sowing of it unto her Successor King James, who omitted no part of a skillful Sad-man. 1. Then there was an Amnesia or Act of Oblivion made, whereby all the Offences against the Crown were remitted, if by such a limited Day the People would sue out their Pardons, and by the same Act, all the Irish were manumitted from the servitude of their Lords, and received into the Kings immediate Protection. 2. The whole Kingdom was divided into Shires, and Judges Itinerant appointed to circuit them; whereby it hath follow'd, that the exactions of the Lords are laid aside, the behaviour of the People narrowly look'd into, the Passages before unknown unto our Soldiers, are laid open by our Under-Sheriffs and Bayliffs; and the common People seeing the benefit and security they enjoy by the English Laws, and loth to plead always by an Interpreter, began to set their Children to School, for the learning of the English Tongue. 3. The Irish were not rooted out, as in the first Plantation in Lemster, and the English only settled in their rooms, but were only removed from the Woods, Bogs, and Mountains into the plain and open Country; that being like wild Trees transplanted, they might grow the milder, and bear the better Fruit. And 4. whereas there was but one Freeholder in a whole County, which was the Lord himself, the rest holding in Villenage, and being subject to the Lords immeasurable Taxations; whereby they had no encouragement to Build or Plant: now the Lord's Estate was divided into two parts, that which he held in demain to himself, which was still left unto him; and that which was in the hands of his Tenants, who had Estates made in their Possessions, according to the common course of England, paying instead of uncertain Irish Taxations, certain English Rents; whereby the People have since set their Minds upon repairing their Houses, and manuring their Lands, to the great increase of the private and publick Revenue.

But that which most advanced the reduction of Ireland to a settled and civil Government, and rooted it in a subjection to the Crown of England, was the voluntary flight of the Earls of Tyrone and Tirconnel, Sir John Odaughertie, and other great Men of the North, possessed of large Territories and great Jurisdictions. Who being both incapable of Loyalty, and impatient of seeing the Kings Judges, Justices, and other Ministers of State, to hold their Sessions, and execute their Commissions of Oyer and Terminer within the parts where they commanded, without more provocation, or the fear of any danger, but a guilty Conscience, forsook the Country, and left their whole Estates to the Kings disposing. By whose directions, their Lands were seized upon, and sold to several Purchasers, the City of London incoffed in a great part of them, a great Plantation tation made in Ulster of English, Welch, and Scots, by the united Name of a British Plantation; and a new Order of Knights Baronets erected in the Kingdom of England, for raising Money to advance and endear the work. Which, had it been as cordially effected by the English, as it was by the Scots; if more of this Nation had gone thither, and not abandoned so great a part of it to the power of the other, it had been better for both Kingdoms, in the conformity of each to one form of Government (which the Scots, being factious for another, did not easily brook) and the uniting of both People in the bonds of amity: the Irish looking on the Scot as a meer Intruder, but on the English as his old Master, or his Fellow-Subject. Howsoever, so great a part of the Country (and that which heretofore was the Nest of the Rebels) being thus disposed of, it came to pass that Ireland, which before served only as a Grave to bury our best Men, and a Gulf to swallow our greatest Treasures; being govern'd neither as a Country Free nor Conquer'd; was brought in some hope, by the prudence and policy of her last Kings and late Lord Deputies, to prove an orderly Common-wealth, civil in it self, profitable to the Prince, and a good strength to the British Empire: For to such Order it was reduc'd, in a little time, that the wayfaring Men might travel without danger, the Ploughman walk without fear; the Laws administred in every place alike, the Men drawn unto Villages, the Woods and Fastnesses left to Beasts, and all reduc'd to that civility as our Fathers never saw, nor could we well sample out of ancient Histories.

The Revenues of this Kingdom are said by Walsingham in the time of Edward III. to have been yearly 40000 l. but his Successors, till of late, have scarce got so much as the keeping of it costs them. King Richard II. being by the same Walsingham reported to have spent 30000 Marks out of his own Purse, over and above the Money which he receiv'd thence. Whether this Country were so profitable to Edward III. or no, I determine not, tho' I find good reason to perswade me, that Walsingham was not well acquainted with the state of that Exchequer. But sure I am, that the Revenues of the Crown are more than double what they were in the said Kings Reign, and more du'y paid into the Exchequer of that Kingdom than ever formerly; the Profits of the Custom-House amounting to 30000 per An. in the last Year of King James's Reign. Not to say any thing of the great Improvements which were made by the Earl of Strafford, in the time of his Government, because they fell together with him.

The strength of this Kingdom consisteth partly in the situation of it, begirt about with difficult and dangerous Seas; partly in the many Castles first built and fortified by the English Planters; and partly in a standing Army continually kept up by the Kings of England, for defence of their hold and interest against the Rebellions of the Natives. What Forces it is able to raise, both of Horse and Foot, could never be conjectur'd at, till now of late. For formerly the Kings of England being actually possessed only of those four Countries, which they called the Pale, that is to say, the Counties of Dublin, Louth, Kildare, and Meth (which last hath since the time of King Henry VIII. been subdivided into three) were not able to raise any great Power out of that Estate, but were forced to send Soldiers out of England (as occasion was) to preserve their Sovereignty in Ireland. The greatest Levy which I read of, was that of 1500 Irish, led by the Prior of Kilmainham to King Henry V. then being at the Siege of Harflew in Normandy. And on the other side, the great Lords of the natural Irish, and degenerate English, being divided into Factions amongst themselves, and never joined in any one principle of common Interest, were more inconsiderable than the weak, but united Forces of the Kings of England. And tho' most of them at the last were drawn into a Confederacy with the Earl of Tir-Oen, to make good his Rebellion, yet find I not that their Army did exceed at any time, the number of 8000 Men; and those not well appointed neither: So that the best estimate which can be made of the Forces of Ireland, must be measured by the Armies raised in the late Rebellion, when the Irish had both time and leisure to get themselves some reputation in the World, and make provision for a War. In prosecution of which, he who considers the many Armies they have raised, since the first mustering under the Command of Sir Phelim O'Neal; the many Defeats which have been given them, and those as many new Recruits after each Defeat; all of them raised out of the Bodies of their own People, without supply from other Countries (besides such as have served against them for the King) must needs conclude that they want not Men enough for Service; nor Skill, nor Courage to attempt the most difficult Enterprizes.

The Arms of Ireland are Azure, an Harp Or, stringed Argent. Which Coat, King James, (to shew himself the first absolute King of Ireland) first caused to be marshalled with the Royal Arms of Great Britain.

The LESSER ISLANDS.

And now we come at last to the LESSER ISLANDS, dispersed in several parts of the British Ocean. The chief whereof are, 1. The Orcades, 2. Schetland, 3. The Hebrides, 4. Man, 5. Anglesey, 6. The Islands of the Severn Sea, 7. The Sorlings, or Isles of Scilly, 8. Wight, 9. Thanet, 10. Sunderland, 11. Holy Island.

I. The ORCADES or Isles of Orkney are in number 32, situate over-against Cathness, the most Northern Country of all Scotland; and separate from one another by some narrow Straights. The Soil indifferently fruitful, exceedingly well stored with Barley, and great Herds of Cattel; plentiful in Hares and Conies, Cranes and Swans; but destitute of Wheat, and unfurnish'd both of Woods and Trees. But their chief Commodity is their Fish, which the Inhabitants catch upon the Coasts in great abundance. Those of most note in all the cluster, are 1. Heth, conceiv'd to be the Orcis of Platony. 2. Fair Isle, on good reason thought to be the Dumna of Pliny; the chief Town of it being still called by the Name of Dumna. 3. Hey, taken or mistaken for the Dumna of Pliny, but not else observable. 4. Pomona, the chief of all, in length about 26 Miles, in breadth, where it is broadest six. The chief Town of it Kirkwall, honour'd with a Bishop's See, and strengthen'd with two Castles. This Island is well stored with Tin and Lead, and is at this day, by the Inhabitants, call'd Mainland.

The People of these Isles (according to Maginus) are great drinkers, but no Drunkards; Bibacissimi sunt incole, nunquam tamen inebriantur. They use the Gothish Language, which they derive from the Norwegians, in whose Possessions they once were; and of whose Qualities they still retain some smack. The Isles themselves, in the time of Solimus, were not inhabited, being then overgrown with Rushes (now in a measure populous and fertile as before was said) and were first discover'd by Julius Agricola, the first that ever sail'd about Britain. In later times they were possessed by the Normans or Norwegians, who held them till the Year 1266. when Magnus King of Norway surrendered them up to Alexander King of Scotland; which Surrender some of the succeeding Kings did afterwards ratifie; the claim heretofore being finally relinquish'd by Christiern I. King of Denmark and Norway, on the marriage of his Daughter Margaret with King James III. 1474. others say in 1470. some Money being added to make good the Contract, without which the Danes would not forego pretensions to them.

II. Two Days sailing North of these Orcades, lieth SCHETLAND, an Island belonging to the Crown of Scotland; and is by many learned Men, upon very good reasons, supposed to be the Thule of the Ancients. For first, it standeth in the 63 degree of Latitude, in which Platony placed Thule. Secondly, It lieth opposite to Bergen in Norway; way; against which Pomponius Mela hath seated it. And, Thirdly, Cassper Peucerus hath observ'd that this Scheland is by Mariners called Thylensel; a Name in which that of Thule is apparently couch'd. That Island was not Thule (as most say) we shall shew you when we come to Norway, and the Northern Islands: Here we add only, That the Ancients did report many strange things of it, and some of them beyond all belief. Pliny affirming, that they had no Day here for all the Winter, (nulla per brumam dies) as his own words are: with whom agree Solinus, and many others; as to that particular Isidore adds, (Origen lib. 14 c. 6.) nullum ultra eam diem esse, that beyond this Isle there was no Day in any place; as if here had been the end of the World and Nature. But Pytheas in Polybius goes beyond them all, reporting, that in this Isle, there was no distinction of Earth, Air, and Water, ἀνα' ὁμοεικέλι ἐν τῇ τῶν, but a confused mixture of all together, like the Primitive Chaos of the Poets. The reason of which strange report was the audaciousness of those who had seen the Island, and thought that whatsoever they said of it would not be disproved, because of the remoteness of it from more civil Countries. So truly and judiciously spoken was that of Synesius, a right Learned Prelate, Ἡ Θάλασσα διδύται τοῖς διαπλέουσι αὐτὴν Ἀνδ' ὅντα καὶ ἀνελεστο ἰδέναι. Thule, (saith he) gave those who had sailed unto it the opportunity of lying without controul. An opportunity which many of our Mariners and vulgar Travellers had made too much use of in these last times also.

III. The HEBRIDES, HEBUDAE, or Western Islands, situate on the West of Scotland; are in number about 44. The chief whereof, 1. Ila, 24 Miles long, and 16 in breadth; plentiful in Wheat, Cattell, and Herds of Deer. 2. Fona, famous for the Sepulchers of the old Scotish Kings; whose chief Town is Sodore, once a Bishop's See, called hence Sodorenfis; his Jurisdiction comprehending these Islands with the Isle of Man; his See erected by Pope Gregory IV. Anno 840. or thereabouts. His dwelling for the most part of it in the Isle of Man, as the wealthier and more pleasant part of his Diocese, till the Conquest of it by the English; at what time, those of the Western Islands withdrew themselves from his Obedience, and had a Bishop of their own; both of them for a long time called Sodorenfis, but at last this took the Name of Infulanus, Bishop of the Isles, which he still retains. 4. Mela, by Ptolomy called Maleos, (that of Ila before-mentioned being his Epidia) mountainous and hilly, but affording good Mines of Lead and Copper, 25 Miles more in compass than that of Ila. 4. Lewis, or Lewissa, the largest of all the Hebrides, said to be 60 Miles in length and 30 in breadth the more Western of the two Ebudae spoken of by Ptolomy; the other being now called Skye, famous for the multitude of Sea-Calves in the Creeks thereof. 6. Racine, the Recine of Ptolomy, the smallest of the Hebrides, and most near to Ireland. The rest of less note, not known, or not inhabited in the time of the Romans, and not very well peopled at the present, I forbear to name; some of them rather Rocks than Islands, others scarce having Grass enough to hide their Barrenness. The People of them all, as well in language as Behaviour, resemble the Wild-Irish, and are all'd Red-shanks; a People, as King James affirmeth in his Basilicon Doron, utterly rude, and without all shew of civility; such as endure not to be govern'd by Laws, or kept under by Discipline. Legum severitate, & judiciorum, vetu, se alligari non patiuntur, saith judicious Cambden. Such they are, they came unto the Crown of Scotland by a contract betwixt Magnus King of Norway, and King Alexander III. the Orcades being bargain'd for at the same time so.

South of the Hebrides in the Bay of Dunbritten Frith, lieth the Isle of Rothsay, (now called Buthe) which gives the Title of a Duke to the Prince of Scotland; and the Isle of Arran, which gives the Title of an Earl to the chief of the milsons.

IV. MAN is situate just over against the Southern part of Cumberland, from which it is distant 25 Miles, and was judged to belong to Britain rather than to Ireland; because it foster'd venomous Serpents, brought hither out of Britain. By Ptolomy it is called Moneda, or the further Mona. to difference it from that which we call Anglesey; by Pliny, Monabia; Menavia, by Orasius and Beda; Eubonia, by Gildas, an old British Writer. The Welch, at this day, call it Menaw, the Inhabitants Maning, and the English Man. It is in length 30 Miles, in breadth 15, and 8 in some places. The People hate Theft and Begging, and use a Language mixt of the Norwegians and Irish Tongues. The Soil is abundant in Flax, Hemp, Oats, Barley, and Wheat; with which they use to supply the defects of Scotland, if not the Continent it self, yet unquestionably the Western Isles, which are a Member of it: For thus writeth the Reverend Father in God John Mericke, late Bishop of this Island, in a Letter to Mr. Cambden, at such time as he was composing his most excellent Britannia, Our Island (saith he) for Cattell, for Fish, and for Corn, hath not only sufficient for it self, but sendeth also good store into other Countries. Now what Countries should need this supply (England and Ireland being afore-hand with such Provision) except Scotland, or some Members thereof, I see not.

Venerable Bede numbred in it 300 Families; and now it is furnish'd with 17 Parish Churches; the chief Towns are, 1. Balacuri, and 2. Ruffin, or Castle-Town, the Seat of a Bishop, who tho' he be under the Archbishop of York, yet never had any Voice in the English Parliament. In this Island is the Hill of Scaful, where, on a clear Day, one may see England, Scotland, and Ireland. Here also are bred the Soland Geese, of rotten Wood falling into the Water. This Island was taken from the Britains by the Scots, and from them regain'd by Edwin King of Northumberland. Afterwards the Norwegians seiz'd on it, and made it a Kingdom; the Kings hereof ruling over the Hebrides, and some part of Ireland. From them taken by Alexander III. of Scotland, by a mixt Title of Arms and Purchase. After which time it was sometime English, sometimes Scotish, as their Fortunes varied; till in the end, and about the Year 1340. William Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, descended from the Norwegian Kings of Man, won it from the Scots, and sold it to the Lord Scrope, who being condemn'd of Treason, Henry IV. gave it to Henry Piercy, Earl of Northumberland; but he also proving false to his Sovereign, it was given to the Stanleys, now Earls of Derby.

the Isle of Man, now living, An. 1648. but beheaded by the Order of the Junto in 1651. for his Loyalty at Bolton in Lancashire.

1651 14 Charles L. Stanley and Strang, who was disposfess'd of the Government of Man till 1660.

1672 15 William Stanley, Son and Heir of the said Charles
K. of Man, and E. of Derby, who is now living.

They are Kings in effect, though but Lord in Title, as having here all kind of Civil Power and Jurisdiction over the Inhabitants under the Fife and Sovereignty of the Crown of England, together with the nomination of the Bishop, whom he presents unto the King for his Royal Assent, then to the Archbishop of York for his Consecration. And this I take to be the reason why the Bishop of Man was no Lord of Parliament, none being admitted to that honour, but such as held immediately of the King himself, nor was it reason that they should.

V. ANGLESEY, is an Island situate in the Irish Sea; over against Caernarvonshire in North-Wales, from which it is divided by a narrow Strait, which they call the Monai: By the Britains themselves, as by the Welch at this day, it was called the Mon, from whence the Romans had their Monai; but being conquered by the English, it obtained the name of Anglesey, as one would say, the Island of the English-Men (eye in the Saxon Language signifying an Island.) A place of such a fair Revenue to the Princes of it, that Llewellyn, the last Prince of Wales being stripped of almost all the rest of his Estates by King Edward I. paid to that King a Tribute of 1000 per Annum for this Island only.

And to say Truth, the Island is exceeding fruitful both in Corn and Cattel: from whence the Welch are liberally stored with both: and therefore it is said proverbially; Mon Mam Cymri, that Anglesey is the Mother of Wales. In length from East to West, about 20 Miles, and 17 in breadth. Containing in that compass 74 Parishes, divided into six hundreds, and hath in it only two Market-Towns; that is to say, 1. Beaumaris, seated on a flat or marsh Ground, near the Monai, built by King Edward the First to secure his Conquest: by whom well walled and fortified as the times then were. 2. Newburgh, a Town of no great Antiquity, as the name doth intimate, by the Welch called Rossur: in former times it had an Haven of some good receipt, but now choaked with Sand. The other places of most note are. 3. Aberffraw, a small Village now, but heretofore the Seat Royal of the Kings of Wales: and 4. Holyhead, seated on a head-land or Promontory thrusting into the Seas, made holy (or thought so at least) by the religious Retirement of Saint Kuby, or Kibius, one of the Disciples of St. Hillary of Poitiers; from whence by the Welchmen called Caer Cuby: of most note for the ordinary passage betwixt Wales and Ireland. Anciently this Island was the seat of the Druides, and brought with no small difficulty under the power of the Romans, by Suetonius Paulinus: the People fighting in other parts of Britain for their Liberty only; but here pro Aris & Focus too, for their Religion, Liberty, and their Goods to boot: Being deserted by the Romans, with the rest of Britain, it remained in the possession of its own natural Princes, till the fatal period of that State, when added to the Crown of England by the puissance of King Edward the First, by whom made one of the Shires of Wales, as it still continues.

Not far from Anglesey, somewhat inclining to the South, is the Isle of Bardsey, by Ptolomy called Edri, by Pliny Adros, by the Welch Enlhy; extended towards the East with a Rocky Promontory, but rich and fruitful towards the West: the retiring place of many godly and devout Hermits in former times. Southwards from hence and over against St. David's, are two other Islands, the one called Selame, plentiful of wild Honey; the other named by the Welch Lymen, by the English Ramsay; thought to be the Limni of Ptolomy, the Silimum of Pliny, but not else remarkable.

VI. THE ISLANDS OF THE SEVERN SEA are four in number; of no great note, but I must take them in my passage to the Isles of Scilly. Of those the first is Flat-Holm; for the flat and level. The 2. Stekholm, from the steep and craggy disposition of it: both by the Welch called Eckm, and both situate over against the County of Somerset. More towards the opening of the Channel, lyeth the Isle of 3. Chaldey, called by the Welchmen Inis Pir, of as small note as the other: and at the very mouth thereof the Isle of 4. Lundey, over against Devonshire, the principal Island of this Sea: extending two Miles every way; of excellent pasture, well stored with Conies, and great plenty of Pigeons. Situate a good distance from any part of the Land, in the midst of the salt and brackish Ocean, and yet yielded many Springs of Fresh-water for the use of the People; inhabiting for the most part in a Town of the same name with the Island. A place of very great strength and safety; begirt about with dangerous unapproachable Rocks, and having but one way of access into it, and that so narrow, that two Men cannot go a breast.

VI. The Isles of SCILLY, in number 145, are situate over against the Western Promontory of Cornwall, from which distant 24 Miles; and lyeround together in the manner of a ring or Circle, Discovered first by the Silures, a Phœnician Colony in Spain, opposite against which they lie; thence called Silures by Solinus: much traded and resorted to by the said Phœnicians from the Isle of Gades; invited thereunto by the unexhaustible Mines of Tin, which they found amongst them. A Trade so great and gainful to them, that they held it a great point of State: κρυπτεν ἀπὸ πάντων τῶν ἄλλων, to keep it as a Secret from all the World, as we find in Strabo; who adds the story of a Carthaginian or Phœnician Merchant, incountred in his Voyage hither, by some Roman Vessels; and splitting his Ship on the next shore (where he knew the Romans would not follow him; rather than let them know to what place he was bound; was rewarded for his honest care, and recompenced for the loss of his Ship and Goods, out of the publick Treasury. From this abundance of Tin, the Græcians when they came to know them, called them Cassiterides: (Cassiteros in that Language signifying Tin) accordingly Herodotus, ἐπεὶ ἴδεντες οὐδὲν ἄλλο κατὰ τὴν οὐρανὴν ἐκ τῶν ὁ κατὰ πρὸς ἡμῶν ποταμῶν, affirming that he knew not those Islands called Cassiterides, from whence Tin was brought. The richness of this Commodity, the pleasures of the Place, and the Western situation of them makes many of the Græcians call them Hesperides: mistaking them for the Fortunate Islands. By Solinus they are called Silures; as before is said, Sigdeles in the corrupt Copies of Antonius; insule Sillinae, by Severus Sulpitius: from whence we have the name of the Isles of Scilly. The Flemings, I know not why, call them the Sorlings. All of them very fruitful in Corn and Herbage, besides the Treasures hid within, well stored with Conies, Cranes, Swans, and most sorts of wild Fowl. Ten of them more esteemed than the rest, are called by the names of 1. Armath, 2. Agnes, 3. Sampson, 4. Scilly, 5. Brefar, 6. Susco, 7. S. Hellens, 8. Arthur, 9. S. Maurice, and 10. S. Maries: Of which the most famous in the account of former times, was that of Scilly, as giving name unto the rest; but in the present estimate S. Maries is accounted the chief of all: 8 Miles in compass; fruitful of all Necessaries, and fortified with a very strong Castle built by Queen Elizabeth, well Manned and Garrisoned, for defence of a large and goodly Harbour made amongst these Islands, capable of the greatest Navies.

These Islands first discovered by Hamilco a Carthaginian, sent by that State to search into the West Coasts of Europe, became of great fame afterwards both in Greece, and Italy; by reason of the Mines of Tin spoken of before: So beneficial to the Romans, that they used to send hither their condemned Prisoners to work in the Mines; as the best service to be done by their forfeited Lives. And hither amongst others, Justinus, a fierce Triscillianist, for his factious and seditious Carriage, was sent by Maximus; in Sillinam insulam ultra Britanniam deportatus, as Sulpitius hath it. After the Romans had forsaken their hold in Britain they returned again into the power and possession of the Natives; from whom subdued, and added unto the English Crown by Athelstane the 8 K. of England. Now ordered for Civil matters, as a part of Cornwall, for military, by the

their own Captain, subordinate to the Lord Lieutenant of that County; and for the Tin-Trade, by the Lord Warden and Court of Stanneries. An Officer and Court erected for the benefit and regulating of the Tinners of Cornwall, who by reason of their Employment in these Mines have many Privileges and Exemptions more than other Subjects; but of late limited and restrained by Acts of Parliament.

VIII. The Isle of WIGHT lieth over against Hampshire, from which it seemeth to have been divided; the passage betwixt it and Hurst-Castle on the opposite shore, being very narrow; and the name of it intimating some such divisions. For by the Britains it was anciently called Guith, which signifieth a Breach or Separation, from whence the English have their Wight; the turning of Gu. to W. being familiar with the Saxons, and all other Dutch People; and from some Root probably the Romans had the name of Vetis, Vetch, Wight, and Guith being words of near resemblance, that we need not to travel further for an Etymologie. The Island of an Oval form 20 Miles in length, and 12 Miles broad about the midt; from thence growing narrower towards each end, to the East and West. Naturally fenced about on all sides, on the South especially, where it looks towards France, on which side inaccessible by reason of the steep and craggy Rocks, the whole length thereof; and not much less safe on the North-West, where the remainder of the Rocks, (which they call the Shingels, and the Needles) not worn away either at or since the first separation from the other shore, make the passage dangerous; except to single Ships, and those not unacquainted with the course of the Channel. Towards the North-East more flat and level, and therefore fortified with the two Castles of the Cows and Sandham. There is also the Castle of Yarmouth in the West of the Island, and that of Garesbrook in the midt (but more towards the North) in which last there is said to be Armour for 5000 Men; and in each Village (of which here are 33, besides many Market-Towns) a piece of Ordnance. Yet do not all these Arms and Castles add so much to the strength of it, as the natural courage of the People; Warlike and Stout, and trained up unto the postures of War from their very Childhood.

The Soil hereof abundantly answereth the pains of the Husbandman, so plentiful of Corn, and all the fruits of good Pasture; that they have not only enough for themselves, but furnish the Markets of Southampton and Portsmouth (but the last especially) with the greatest part of the Wheat, Flesh, Cheese, and Butter; which is spent amongst them. Insomuch that the Soldiers of Portsmouth presuming on the strength of the Town, have been used to say, That if they had the Isle of WIGHT to their friend, and the Seas open, they cared not for all the World besides. Their Sheep hereof so fine a Fleece, that the Wool hereof hath the second esteem next to that of Lemster (in the Country of Hereford) and precedency of that of Corswold.

Their chief Towns, 1. Yarmouth, on the North-West of the Island, seated on a convenient Haven, which is said to have some resemblance to that of Rochel; and that Haven defended with a strong Castle. 2. Brading, another Market-Town. 3. Newton, an ancient Burrough, and privileged, sending Burgesses to the English Parliament. 4. Garesbrook, a large Town, and neighboured with an ancient Castle. 5. Newport, now the chief of all the Isle, called in the times past Medena, afterwards Novus Burgus de Medena, at last Newport; seated upon an Arm of the Sea, capable of Ships of lesser burden to the very Key; and by that means populous, well traded, & inhabited by a civil and wealthy People.

The Island first subdued to the Romans by the Valour of Vespasian, (afterwards Emperour of Rome) in the time of Claudius. Extorted from the Britains by Cerdick King of the West-Saxons, and by him given to Stuffa and Whitgar, two of that Nation, who had almost rooted out the old Inhabitants. It was the last Country of the Saxons which received the Gospel, and then upon compulsion, too, forced to it by the power as well as the persuasion of Cedwella the West-Saxon King. Took from the English in the time of the Norman Conqueror, by William Fitz-Osborn Earl of He- reford, who thereupon was made the first Lord thereof. From whose Family, by the gift of Henry II. it pailed to that of Redvares, or Rivers, (de Riparis) then Earl of Devonshire; and on failing of that House, returned to the Crown in the Reign of Edward the First. Never so much ennobled as by Henry the Sixth, who bearing a great affection to Henry Beauchamp Earl of Warwick, in the 23 of his Reign crowned him King of Wight, An. 1445. Which Title ended with his life about two years after.

IX. THANET, is a little Island in the North-East of Kent, not far from Sandwich, environed on three parts with the Sea, into which it shooteth with a large Promontory called the North-fore-Land; the Cantium of the ancient Writers: and towards the West, severed from the main Land of Kent by the River Stoure, which is here called Yenlade, but severed so, that by the benefit of a Causeway and passage for the waters in convenient places, it is united to the Continent or main Land of Kent. The quality, site, and figure of it, taken in these Rhythms (for I dare hardly call them Verses) extant not long since in a Window of the chief Church there, viz.

Insula rotunda Thanatos, quam circuit unda, Nobilis & munda, nulli est in orbe secunda.

Thanet is round with circling waters bound,

A neat and noble ground, none like it to be found.

Called by Solinus, Athanatos, in some Copies Thanatos, from whence the Saxons had their Thanet. Famous, as in other things, so in these particulars, that it was the place which the Saxons landed at, when they first came into Britain; the first Livery and Seisin, which they had of the whole Kingdom, conferred upon them by the improvident bounty of Vortiger, to whose aid called in; and the landing place of Augustine the Monk, when he brought the Gospel to the Saxons. The whole about two Miles in length, and four in breadth, was reckoned to contain in those times, 600 Families; now very populous for the bigness, and plentiful of all Commodities necessary, but of Corn especially. The People generally are a kind of Amphibii, able to get their livings both by Sea and Land, well skilled, as well in steering of a Ship at Sea, as in holding the Plough upon Land; and in both industrious. Of most note in it, 1. Stonar, a Port-Town, the usual landing place of the Saxons; more memorable for the Sepulchre of Vortimer, King of the Britains, who having vanquished the Saxons in many Battels, and finally driven them out of the Island, desired to be here interred on a conceit, that this dead Corps would fright them from landing any more upon these Coasts. And this perhaps he did in imitation of Scipio African, who having had a Fortunate hand against those of Carthage, gave order to have his Tomb placed towards Africk, to fright the Carthaginians from the Coasts of Italy.

X. SUNDERLAND is an Island only at an high-water, when environed on all sides with the Sea; at other times joyned unto the Land, or of an easie passage from the one to the other: pulled by some Tempest, or by the working of the Sea from the rest of the Land: whence the name of Sunderland. Situate in the North-East part of the Bishoprick of Durham, over against the influx of the River Were. Rich in its inexhaustible Mines of Coal, and for that cause seldom without the company of foreign Merchants, yet not to have been here remembered, but that it hath been thought worthy by our Sovereign Lord King Charles, the second Monarch of Great Britain, to confer the Title of Earl to the two Noble Families of the Scropes and Spencers; the first in the third year of his Reign, An. 1627. the second in the 18th, An. 1642.

XI. The HOLY ISLAND lieth upon the Coast of Northumberland, not far from Berwick, stretched out in length from East to West, with a narrow point unto the Land, from thence growing broader like a wedge: fortified with a strong Castle, and of great safety, but more Famous for what it hath been, than for what it is. In the dawning of Christianity amongst the Northumbrians, made a Bishops See, by S. Aidanus, one of the first Apostles of that potent Nation. Selected for this Dignity by that godly ly Man for the Solitude and Privacy of it; which made it thought more fit and proper for Devotion. The name then Lindisfarn; but the Religious Lives of so many pious Bishops, Monks, and others of the Clergy as did there inhabit, gained it the name of Holy Island. The See continued there 353 years, that is to say, from the year 637, to 990, under 22 Bishops, hence called Bishops of Lindisfarn; then removed to Durham: the insolencies of the Danes (who then raged terribly on those Coasts) compelling them to abandon that Religious Solitude.

Thus have we taken a survey of the British Islands, and shewn by what means Ireland and all the lesser Islands became united either to the Crown of England or Scotland; and those two Kingdoms to each other joyned in the person of the same King, and the participation of his Favours, though different still in Laws, and some forms of Government, as most of the Estates of Spain, at the present time. United also in one name, the different Appellations of England and Scotland being swallowed up, or incorporated rather in that of GREAT BRITAIN, which it pleased King James to own for his stile Imperial. And for a memory thereof, to cause a piece of Gold to be coined of 20 s. (since raised to 22 s.) which he called the Unity, stamped on the one side with his picture, and this Inscription, JACOBUS D. GR. MAGNÆ BRITANNIÆ FR. ET HIBERNIÆ REX, and on the other side with his Arms, crowned with this Motto, FACIAM EOS IN GENTEM UNAM. All we have now to do, is to lay down the names of those puissant Princes, whom God hath raised to be

The MONARCHS of BRITAIN.

1602 1 James, the sixth of that name; King of the Scots, Son of Mary Queen of Scots, Daughter of James V. the Son of James IV. and of the Lady Margaret, eldest Daughter of Henry VII. of England: which Margaret being after married to Archibald Douglas Earl of Angus, had a Daughter named Margaret also (the only child of her Parents) married to Matthew Stewart Earl of Lenox; by whom she was made the Mother of Henry Lord Darnley, the Father of King James VI. by the said Mary Queen of Scots. So that King James descending from the eldest Daughter of Henry VII. both by Father and Mother, on the expiring of the Line of Henry VIII. in the person of Queen Elizabeth of famous Memory; was the next Heir to the Crown of England, and was accordingly with all joyful Acclamations proclaimed and acknowledged King in the City of London, March 24. An 1602. (according to the Account of the Church of England) a Learned and Religious Prince, a true Defender of the Faith, a Nursing Father of the Church, and a lover of Learning. He died at Theobalds, March 27. 1625. having reigned 23 years, and four days over.

1625 2 Charles, second Son of King James, and of Anne of Denmark, (his elder Brother Henry dying long before) the 63 King in descent from Cerdick, King of the West-Saxons; the 45th King of England, in descent from Egbert; the 24th from the Norman Conqueror; the 64th Monarch of the English, and the second Monarch of Britain. In the beginning of his Reign he married the Princess Henrietta Maria, Daughter to Henry IV. and Sister to Lewis XIII. French Kings, by whom blest with a Royal Issue of Sons and Daughters. The first 12 years of this Princes Reign were to his Subjects most Happy, and to him not Inglorious; but in the year 1637. the Scots began to be unquiet, yet this Storm soon was composed, but broke out again the next year, and forced this Prince to enter into a War against them in 1639: which ended in a short liv'd Peace, two Parliaments being call'd in England in the year 1640. The last of which proved fatal to this Nation, and the 30th of January 1648. basely Murdered that Holy Prince. Banishing his Children, and as much as in them lay, extinguishing the Monarchy of Great Britain. They intended to have governed it for the future as a Common-Wealth; but the 20th of April 1653. Oliver Cromwell one of their Generals, put an end to this Dream, and took upon him the Title of Protector of the Common-Wealth of England. The 3d of September 1658. This Tyrant went to his own place, and Richard his Son succeeded him, who, April the 2d following was deserted, and the 7th of May the Rump Parliament was restored, which was finally dissolved by General Monk the 15th of March 1659. 60.

1660 3 Charles the 2d, Eldest Son of Charles the Martyr, was Restored to the rightful Possession of his Fathers Throne the 29th of May, to the universal and unspeakable Joy of all English Men; who by so many Miseries, had learned to value the Monarchy, as the greatest of their Blessings; he proved a Prince of incomparable Justice, Mercy, and Goodness, and wanted nothing but Children to have made him the eternal Darling, and Admiration of the English Nation.

1684 4 James the 2d, the second Son of Charles the Martyr, and Brother of Charles the 2d, Succeeded him the 6th of February, 1684. according to the Computation of the Church of England. He was born the 13th of October 1633. And Married first Ann, Daughter of Edward Earl of Clarendon, Lord Chancellor of England, in the year 1660. by whom he had many Children that are Dead; but there survived Mary late Queen of England, born the 10th of May 1662. Married to William Prince of Orange the 7th of November 1677. Anne Born in 1665. Married to George Prince of Denmark now Queen, the 28th of July 1683. Of which there was one Son born the 24th of July at Hampton Court, Baptized the 28th by the Name of William, and declared Duke of Gloucester by his late Majesty, since Dead.

The first Wife of James the Second, Died in the year 1671. and he Married in 1673. Mary Eleonora, Daughter of Francis Duke of Modena, from this Marriage the 11th of June 1688. there was pretended a Spring, a Prince of Wales, which is still living in France.

1688 5 William III. Prince of Orange, and Mary Eldest Daughter of James II. Succeeded in the Abdicated Throne of England. James II. having the 11th of December 1688. and the three Estates in a Convention having Recognized the Rights of William and Mary, the 12th of February following. The History of which wonderful Revolution, is too long to be here inserted, it being largely unfolded in the History of the Desertion then Printed. The Queen died the 28th of December 1693. And the Government continued in the King to his Death.

As for the Forces and Revenues of these British Monarchs, we cannot put the estimate of them in a better way, than by laying together that which hath been delivered of each several part; out of which Items the summa totius of the whole both in Power and Treasure, will be easily gathered. For though these Monarchs never had any occasion to muster and unite the Forces of their several Kingdoms upon any one Action, yet by considering what they have been able to do divided; we may conclude of what they may do, if need be, being now united. And so we are to do in marshalling the Arms of the British Monarchy, which are 1. Quarterly France and England, 2ly Scotland, 3ly. Ireland, the Fourth as the first. I shut up this Discourse of the British Empire, with those words of Scripture (the Motto of another of King James his Coins) QUE T DEUS CONJUNXIT NEMO SEPARET

The Revenues and Government of England, received so great a change in the year 1660. upon the Restitution of Charles the Second, that it is in vain to attempt a Representation of it here: I shall therefore refer the Reader to that Elaborate piece, which has been so often Printed, call'd the Present State of England, where he may satisfy his Curiosity, and in the Interim, what this Learned Author has Written, may stand as the most exact Account of its Ancient State, before the War began.

And so much for Britain.

O F

BELGIUM.

HAVING pursued the Fortunes of the Roman Empire through the four Western Diocesses or Divisions of it, wholly subdued to the Command of that Conquering State: Let us next look on those Countries which lay farther North, and either never felt the force of the Roman Armies, or were but Conquered in part, or else were reckoned as the Members of some greater Province. Of this last sort was all that Tract which is now called Belgium, or the Netherlands, bounded Eastward with Westphalen, Gulick, Cleve, and the Land of Triers, Provinces of the Higher Germany; on the West with the main Ocean, which divides it from Britain; on the North with the River Ems, which parts it from East-Friseland; on the South with Picardie and Champagne, two French Provinces; upon the South-East with the Dukedom of Lorraine.

By the Latines (especially of these last Times) it is called Belgium, from the Belge, the most potent People of all these Parts; and sometimes also Germania inferior or the Lower Germany, (in the same sence as by the English it is called the Low-Countries and the Netherlands) from their low Situation, and the conformity which they have with the Germans in Laws, Languages, Customs and Manners. By some it hath been call'd by the aggregate Name of the Seventeen Provinces, from the like number of several and distinct Estates united under the Command of the King of Spain. The more peculiar name is Flanders, which, though but one of the Seventeen Provinces, hath yet given denomination to all the Netherlands; the People of which were once generally called by the Name of Flemmings; and that either for the power of that Province, in regard of the others; or by reason of the great Trade and Traffick formerly driven at the Fairs or Marts of Bruges, (a Town thereof) by the Merchants of all Parts of Europe; or in respect that lying nearer than the rest to France, Spain, Italy and England, that Name was better known and took notice of. But this was when the whole Country was under the Command of many Princes; of which the Earls of Flanders were esteem'd most potent. And though this name continued also after the Incorporating of most of these Provinces in the House of Burgundy, at which time they were called the Estates of Flanders: Yet since the falling off of Holland and the rest of the United Provinces from the Kings of Spain, it hath lost this Honour, the name of Flanders being now restrained within narrower bounds.

But for the name of Belgium, though I find that name most current amongst the Latines of this Age, yet I see little little reason for it. For first, Old Belgium contained in it many fair and large Estates which are not now within the compass of these Belgick Provinces; that is to say, the Dukedom of Lorraine, Berg, Julliers, and a great part of Cleve, the Bishopricks of Triers, Mentz and Colen, and so much of the Kingdom of France as takes up all Picardy, with parts of Champagne and of France specially so called. Secondly, Gallia Belgica extended somewhat farther yet, comprehending a great part of the Lower Palatinate, all Alsace, the whole County of Burgundy, and so much of Switzerland as lyeth on the French side of the Rhene. And thirdly, the whole Provinces of West-Friseland, Groening, Over-Yssel, Zutphen, together with all North-Holland, and so much of Gelderland, and Utrecht as lyeth on the farther side of the middle Channel of the Rhene, were never counted of as parts of either Belgium or of Belgia Gallica, though now within the compass of the Belgick Provinces) but as parts of Germany; clearly without the Limits of the ancient Gaul, of which Body Belgium was a Limb or Member in the Roman estimate.

As for the Belga, from whence we have the Names of Belgium and Gallia Belgica, they were originally Germans, who driving out the Gauls, planted themselves within the Rhene; esteem'd by Cesar to be the Valiantest of the Gallick Nations for these three Reasons. 1. They were the farthest from Provence, where the Roman Civilities and more affable course of Life was embraced. 2. They dwelt on a Sea not then frequented by Merchants; and so wanted those allurements to Effeminacy which are in Countries of Traffick. 3. They border'd on the Germans, a warlike Nation, with whom they were continually in Armes. This People seeing the prosperous success of Cesar's Victories in Gaul, joined together in a League, and mustered an Army of 269000 fighting Men against him. But seeing they could not draw him out of his Fortresses, they retired again, and that in such disorder, that three Legions (for no more was Cesar's Army) put them to an infinite slaughter. After this, Cesar, fighting against them severally, overcame them all; and made their Country, and the Country of the bordering Germans, whom he also vanquished, subject unto the Roman Empire. By Constantine the Great it was made part of the Diocess of Gallia, and by him cast into five Provinces: that is to say, 1. Belgica Prima, containing the Dukedom of Lorraine and the Land of Triers, the Metropolis whereof was Triers; 2. Belgica Secunda, comprehending Artois, Picardy, and the Country of Cambray, with parts of Champagne and France special, of which the Metropolis was Rhemes; 3. Germania Prima, comprehending Alsatia, part of the Palatinate, and the Bishoprick of Mentz, the Metropolitan City of that Province; 4. Germania Secunda, containing Cleveland, Brabant, Gelderland, Utrecht, Holland, Zeland, Flanders, Hainault, Namur, Luxemburgh, Limbourg, and the Land of Colen, which last was honoured with the Title of Metropolitan; 5. Maxima Sequanorum, so called of the Sequani, the old Inhabitants thereof, containing the whole County of Burgundy, and so much of Switzerland as lyeth on the French side of the Rhene, of which Basle was the Mother City. But at this time none of the Provinces above specified are comprehended under the account and name of Belgium, but such as were possessed in these latter Ages by the House of Burgundy; some petty Seigniories and Estates which properly do belong to Germany being added to it: that is to say, the Lordship of West-Friseland, given to the Earls of Holland by Charles the Bald; the Earldom of Zutphen united unto that of Gelders by Earl Orho of Nassau; and finally the Estate of Groening, Over-Yssel, and some part of Utrecht by Charles the Fifth. Under which Name and Notion we do now consider it.

And taking it according to this Name and Notion, it is in compass 1000 Italian, or 250 German Miles; and is situated in the Northern temperate Zone, under the 7, 8, and 9 Climates: the longest Day in the midst of the 7th Climate, where it doth begin, being 16 hours, in the beginning of the 9th Climate increased to 16 hours three quarters, or near 17 hours. The Air in these latter Days is grown more wholesom than formerly, partly by the wonderful increase of the Inhabitants, and partly by the incredible Industry of the People, who, by draining the Marshes, and converting the standing Waters into running Streams have purged the Air of many gross and unhealthy Vapours, which did thence usually arise in Times foregoing.

The Country is very populous, containing well-nigh Three Millions of Souls; the Men being for the most part well-proportioned, great lovers of our English Beer, unmindful both of good Turns and Injuries, of good Wit for inventing, and of a most indefatigable industry for perfecting the rarest Manufactures. For unto them we are indebted for the making of Cloth, which we learnt of the Flemmings; as also for Arras-Hangings, Dornix, Clocks, Watches, and the perfection of the Mariner's Compass. They restored Musick, and found out divers Musical Instruments, being naturally good Musicians, and generally so given unto it, and so perfect in it, that therefore (till the Art of Musick grew more common) there were not many Great Mens Houses which had not Musicians to teach their Children. To them belongeth also the invention of Chariots, the laying on of Colours with Oyl, the working of Pictures in Glasse, and the making of Worstedes, Seyes, and Tapestries; the making of which and other Stuffs, being driven out of their Country by the Duke of Alva, they first taught the English. The Women generally are of good Complexion, well-proportioned, especially in the Leg and Foot, honourers of Vertue, active and familiar. Both within doors and without they govern all: which, considering the natural desire of Women to bear Rule, maketh them too imperious and burthenfom.

They use for the most part the German and Dutch Language, with a little difference in the Dialect. But in the Provinces adjoining to France, that is to say, Luxemburg, Namur, Artois, Hainault, and some parts of Flanders and Brabant, they use the French; but the same very corruptly and imperfectly, by reason of that mixture which it hath of the Dutch or German, yet so that one may easily discern those People to be French Originally, or some remainder of the old Gauls, mastered by the French, but not rooted out: From their Language or first Original called to this day by the name of Wallons, the Germans usually changing G into W, as War for Guerre, Warden for Guardian, and in the like cases Wales for Galles. I know there is another Etymology of the name of Wallons; some making them to be of the Burgundian Race, who, at their first passing over the Rhene, enquired their way of the Country People in these words, On allons, i. e. Whither go we? which being oft repeated by them, occasioned them to be called Wallons: A trim invention doubtless, but of no solidity, nor to be farther honoured with a confutation.

The Country in those parts which lie towards Germany, especially on the South-East bordering upon Cleveland and Lorraine, is somewhat swelled with Hills and over-shaded with Woods, the Relicks of the great Forest of Ardenne, which once took up a great part thereof: But towards the West and North, where it joins to the Sea, it is plain and level, full of Flats and Marshes, affording very little Corn, but abounding in Pasturage, which yields a great increase of Butter and Cheese, good store of Beeves and Horses of more than ordinary bigness. By reason of which low and level Situation, and the ill Neighbourhood of a troublesom and unruly Sea, it hath been formerly much subject to Inundations; in so much as in the time of King Henry the II. Flanders was so overflowed, that many thousands of People, whose Dwellings the Sea had devoured, came into England to beg new Seats; and were by that King first placed in Yorkshire, and then removed to Pembrokeshire. Since that, it hath in Zeland swallowed eight of the Islands, and in them 300 Towns and Villages: many of whose Churches and strong Buildings are at a dead low Water to be seen. And as once Ovid said of Helice and Buris, Cities of Achaia, so may we of these;

*Invenies sub aquis, & adhuc ostendere nauta
Inclinata solent cum manibus oppida versis.*

That is to say,

The Waters hide them, and the Sailors show
The ruin'd Walls and Steeples, as they row.

The chief Commodities which they vent into their Countries are Linnen, Scarlets, Worsted, Seyes, Silks, Velvets, and the like rich Stuffs; together with great quantities of Armour, Ropes, Cables, Butter, Cheese, &c. Of which, excepting Cheese and Butter, there is nothing of the natural grow of the Country: the rest being Manufactures which they make out of such materials as they fetch out of Foreign Regions. But the Commodity which yieldeth them most benefit is that of Fish, not caught upon their own Coast neither, but either in the Northern Seas or the Coast of England. The very Herrings which they catch on the Shoars of England (to the no small Dishonour of the English Nation) bringing them a Revenue (besides what is pursed up by Adventurers) of 440000 Pounds per Annum; and that of Cod-fish, which they catch on the Coasts of Frieseland, amounting to 150000 Pounds Sterling yearly.

Captains of Note and Eminence it hath bred but few. The People living till of late in perpetual Peace. The chief of those whose Names have been transmitted to us are, 1. Civilis, a Prince of the Batavians, for subtilty of Wit compared to Hannibal and Sertorius; of which in the long War against the Romans, in the time of Vespasian, he gave very good proof. In the middle times, 2. William Earl of Holland, elected Emperor of Germany. 3. Baldwin Earl of Flanders, Emperor of Constantinople. 4. Philip the Good, and 5. Charles the Warlike, Dukes of Burgundy. 6. Charles the Fifth, Emperor and King of Spain: And of late times the Princes of the House of Nassau and Orange, transplanted hither in the Regency of Maximilian out of higher Germany. And to say the truth their Genius doth not lie so much for Land-service as it doth for the Seas; in which they have been very Famous, and not less fortunate. For of this Nation was Oliver Vander Noort, the fourth that compassed the World, Jacob le Maire, the first discoverer of the Streight or Fretum, which now beareth his name, besides divers others. And generally the People are so expert in Navigation, (especially those bordering on or near the Coasts) that they seem born for and to the Seas: many of which being born on Ship-board and bred up at Sea, know no other Country, and brook the Land as ill as a Fish doth the dry ground. Which natural inclination to it, and the necessity they have of employing themselves that way (the Country not being otherwise able to provide sustenance for those multitudes of Men which it doth abound with) hath so exceedingly increased their Shipping, that it is thought that they are Masters of more Vessels of all sorts, taking one with another, than almost all the rest of Europe.

Scholars of Note it hath bred many. 1. Erasmus, the great restorer of Learning in these parts of the World. 2. Justus Lipsius, as eminent a reviver of the Latine Elegancies. 3. Joseph Scaliger, the Son of Julius, & mei nāv mraud dūbō, a Man not to be fellowed in all parts of Learning; but of equal Arrogance. 4. Rodolphus Agricola. 5. Levinus Lemnius. 6, 7. Janus Douza, the Father and the Son. 8. Abraham Ortelius, and 9. Gerard Mercator, the Geographers. 10. Geo Cassander. 11. Dr. James Hermin. 12. Gerard Vossius, eminent Divines. And 13. Hugo Grotius, of as great Parts (but seasoned with more Modesty and Moderation) as the Famous Scaliger. 14. Jansenius, and 15. Pamelius, two right learned Men, but of the Pontifical Party.

As much unfortunate it hath been in some wretched Hereticks, in none more than in David George, born at Delf in Holland, who called himself Christ and King immortal: Flying from Delf to Basil with his Wife and Children, Anno 1545. he there taught his Doctrine, viz. 1. That the Law and Gospel were unprofitable for the attaining of Heaven; but his Doctrine able to save such as received it. 2. That he was the true Christ and Messias. 3. That he was not to restore the House of Israel by Death or Tribulation, but by Love and Grace of the Spirit. 4. That he had been till that present kept in a place unknown to all the Saints. And that this last Point might obtain the easier credit amongst the People, he bound his Disciples, first, to conceal his Name; secondly, not to reveal of what Condition he had been; thirdly, not to discover the Articles of his Doctrine to any Man in Basil without his permission. But for all this great care of his within three days after his Death (which happened in the Year 1556.) his Doctrines being made known, were condemned by the Senate and Church of Basil, his Goods confiscate, and his Bones most deservedly taken up and burnt. Of somewhat less Impiety, but of no less Phrensie, was, 2. John of Leyden, (another Town of the same Province) who from a Taylor was made King of the Anabaptists, when they had raged in Munster, and there we shall hear farther of him. 3. Cappinus, and 4. Quintinus, both Flemings; the joint Authors and Co-founders of the Sect of the Libertines.

The Christian Religion was planted in several Provinces by several Men: in Holland, Zeland, and Frieseland, by Willibrod an English Man, the first Bishop of Utrecht, whence by degrees it gained on the rest of the Country; these being the first People of the Franks, or Germans, converted totally to the Gospel. In tract of time it fell from the Primitive Purity, participating of the Errors and Corruptions of the Church of Rome; from which when they desired to reclaim themselves, they were therein opposed by the King of Spain and his Ministers. Hence the beginning of the Troubles; enlarged afterwards on pretence of Civil Rights invaded and infringed by the Spaniards affecting a more absolute Dominion over them than their Laws admitted. At this time, as the Country doth stand divided betwixt the States and the Spaniards, so stands it with Religion also: the Spaniards permitting only the Religion of the Church of Rome within the Provinces and Estates under his Command; and the States General indulging the free use of all Religions (even the very Jews) but countenancing only that of the Reformed Churches, according to the Plat-form laid down by Calvin.

Chief Forests of this Country are, 1. That of Ardenne, which in the time of Cæsar extended from the Banks of Rhene as far as Tournay one way, and Champagne another way, and was in compass 500 Miles in the least accompt. In which circuit there was comprehended the Southern parts of Brabant and Flanders, all Limbourg, Luxemburg, Luyckland, Namur, and Hainault, together with the Land of Gulick in the Higher Germany, as some Writers say. At this time, though the greatest of all Gaul Belgick, it reacheth but from Liege to Treconville, 30 Leagues in length, and yet not all that Wood-land neither, though within the Verge of the Forest: there being much Tillage and many Villages in that tract of ground, the principal of which is the Town of S. Hubert, situate almost in the midst of it. 2. Niepe, and 3. Nonnen, in the Earldom of Flanders; the first extending to the Banks of the River Lis, the other coming up close to Ypres. 4. Pondsberg, in the Confines of Hainault and Flanders, near unto Mont-Gerard. All these were parts of this great Forest of Ardenne, which once overshadowed all this Country. 5. Normault, in Hainault, in which is much Charcoal made; supposed for that reason reason to be part of that Forest which the old French called La Charboniere. 6. Echterwald, in Gelderland, near Arnhem, &c.

The chief Rivers are, 1. Rhene, which ariseth out of two Springs in the Lepontian Alps amongst the Grisons, united into one stream near Chur; thence passing by the Cities of Constance, Basil, Spire, Wormes, Mentz, and Colen, it is again divided about the Confines of Gelderland into four Branches or Channels. Of which the first is called the Wael, which running through Guelderland by Nimeguen and Bommel, loseth it self in the Maes. The second, which keeps the name of the Rhene, passeth by Arnhem, from thence in a contracted Channel to Utrecht, and so through Holland unto Leyden. The third, called the Leck, taketh his course through the Provinces of Utrecht and Holland, and so into the Sea betwixt Dort and Rotterdam. And the fourth called the Yssel, which passing by the Towns of Zutphen and Deventer betwixt Gelderland and Over-Yssel, emptieth it self into the Ocean near Amsterdam. And of these Branches I have given the exacter reckoning, partly because the course of that famous River is otherwise not easie to be observed; and partly because the knowledge of a great part of these Provinces dependeth on the knowledge of the course of this River, it being the middle Branch of the Rhene (that which goeth by Leyden) which anciently divided Germany from Gallia Belgica. A River of such Reputation in the ancient Times, that into it the old Belge used to cast the Children which they suspected to be illegitimate: For were they born of lawful Bed, they floated on the Waters, if of unlawful they sank immediately. Whereunto Claudian, alluding, saith, Nascentes explorat gurgite Rhenus. But the great searcher of Antiquities, Verstegan, is of Opinion, that thereby they only inured their Children to hardness, and made trial of their Strength; Adultery being rarely found among them, and so these kinds of Experiments needless. 2. Mosa, the Maes, as the Dutch, or the Meuse, as the French Men call it, which springing from the Mountains of Vange in the Confines of Lorraine, and not far from the Fountains of the Seine and Marne, runneth through Lorraine, Luxemburg, Luyckland and Namur; from thence by Ruremond and Venlo, two known Towns of Guelderland, where turning towards the West, it taketh in a part of the Rhene, and from thence passing by Maestricht, divides Brabant from Holland, watering the Town of Grave in the one, and of Dort in the other; and fallerh into the Sea not far from Briel with so great a violence, that the Waters of it for a long space continue fresh, 3. Ems, in Latine called Amisus, dividing the two Frieselands; of which more in Germany, 4. Scaldus, which arising in Picardy, and running through Artois, and between Hainault and Brabant, meeteth with the Sea a little above Antwerp. And 5. Lis or Ley, which runneth quite through Flanders. Besides which Rivers, and others of inferior Note, (which we shall meet withal in their proper places) here are great store of Lakes, Pools and Marshes, which do both fortifie the Country, and provide it of Fish: besides many navigable Channels, made by the hand of Man from one River to another, for the convenience of passage, and the more easie transport of their Commodities.

The Shoar of this Country hath been much worn out by the Sea, especially that of the Islands of Zeland, and such as lie scattered about Holland; where they are defended with Banks and Ramparts, painfully made, and chargeably maintained. These Banks are about ten ells in height, and twenty-five in breadth at the bottom: they are made of the hardest Clay that may be gotten, in the inside stuffed with Wood and Stone, on the outside covered with Mats strong and thick made.

The former Inhabitants were divers, and were as differently disposed of in their several Countries. That is to say, the *Atrebat*es in the greatest part of Artois; the Morini in the rest of Artois, and those parts of Flanders which make up the Imperial and Dutch Flanders; the Nervi in Hainault; Namur, and Flanders Gallicant, the Batavi in South-Holland, and so much of Gelderland and Utrecht as lies on the South-side of the Rhene, with the Menapii intermixt in the Dukedom of Gelders; the Mattiaci in the Isles of Zeland; the Aduarici and part of the Tongri in the Dukedom of Brabant, with part of the Treviri in Luxemburg, and of the Eburones in Luyckland and the Dukedom of Limburg: all which were Belgick Nations, and therefore anciently accounted of as parts of Gallia. Then on the Northern side of the middle Chanel of the Rhene there dwelt the Frisii minores in North-Holland, and so much of the District of Utrecht as lies on the farther side of that Channel; the Frisii majores in West-Friesland and the State of Groening; some parts of the Sicambri in the Earldom of Zutphen, and the rest of Gelderland, with part of the Brueteri in Over-Yssel, all German Nations, and properly not within the reckoning of Gallia Belgica. Those which passed under the account and name of Belge being subdued, together with other Tribes of that numerous Nation, by the Valour and good Fortune of Julius Caesar, continued subject to the Romans, without any notable Disturbance unto their Affairs, but the Rebellion raised against them by Civilis Prince of the Batavians in the time of Vespasian. In the declining of the Empire they were possessed by the French, under whom they made a part of the Kingdom of Metz or Ostenreich, united by Childerick the Third to the rest of France, and made a Member of that Kingdom; as they continued till the time of Lewis the Godly, Son of Charles the Great. In the division of whose Empire amongst his Children, the Countries of Flanders and Artois being laid to France, the residue of these Countries on this side of the Rhene made up a special part of the Kingdom of Lorraine. Those, on the farther side of the middle Channel of that River, being German Nations, gained to the vast Empire of the French by Charles the Great, in the division of the Spoil spoken of before fell to the share of Lewis surnamed the Ancient, the first King of Germany, and after his decease to his Successors in that Estate, whether Kings or Emperors. And so we have the whole divided betwixt the three great Kings of France, Lorraine and Germany, by that means subdivided into lesser parcels (no fewer than Nineteen in all) we shall see anon.

In the mean time we are to know, that in the beginning of the French Conquests in the rest of Gallia, there started up in Belgica two great Estates, founded by Auberon, Regnault and Ranchaire, Sons of Clodion, the second King of the French; who being disherited of their Father's Kingdom by Merove Master of his Horse, to whose Tuition and Guardianship they had been committed, betook themselves to the most defensible places of the great Forest of Ardenne, and the Countries on the Banks of the River Moselle; where they Founded the two great Earldoms from thence denominated. That of Ardenne (for of the Earldom of Moselle we shall speak elsewhere) contained part of the modern Flanders, and some part of Brabant, together with all Hainault, Namur, Limburg, Luxemburg, and the Dukedom of Bouillon. Grown to this greatness by the withdrawing of the French Forces into richer Conquests, and dismembring of that Empire into many Kingdoms, and trusting too much to that Greatness, they drew upon themselves the jealousy of those mightier Princes: occasioning Clovis the Second to give their Country unto Dagobert his eldest Son, then King of Metz, whom he furnished with convenient Forces for the Conquest of it; Brumulph, the then Prince hereof, being by him discomfited and slain in Battel. By Sigebert, who succeeded his Father Dagobert in the Kingdom of Metz, the Earldom of Hainault is taken out of it, and given to Albert, one of the youngest Sons of Brumulph. By Dagobert himself, succeeding in the Realm of France; (and whilst he lived sole King of the French) the parts of Flanders and Brabant, formerly belonging to these Princes, were dismembred from it, and laid unto two new Estates of his own own erecting. And probable it is, that either to weaken this great House, or to comply with the ill Customs of those Times; the Earldom of Namur might be taken out of it at the same time also, for the portion of some other of the younger Brethren. The rest of the Estate, with the Title of Earl of Ardenne, remained unto the eldest Son: whose Posterity, notwithstanding this great diminution, grew to such esteem, that Judith, the Widow of Buin, and Sister of Boson, Earls of Ardenne, was thought a fit Wife for Charles the Bald, King of France and Emperor, by whom (the more to Honour his Family) the said Boson was created King of Arles and Burgundy. During the Empire of Otho the First, the Earldom of Luxemburg was divided from it, and given to Sigefride, one of the younger Sons of Ricvine the preceding Prince, and so perhaps was Limbourg also for another of them. The rest remained to Godfrey the eldest Son, who by Matilda, a Daughter to Otho the Second, was Father of another Godfrey, who succeeded after Charles, and Otho the third Duke of Lorraine: the Dukedom being ever since enjoyed by the House of Ardenne, and there we shall hear farther of it. This said, and so much of the Story opened as concerns the general, we will proceed to a particular Survey of the modern Belgium, divided at the present into Seventeen Provinces, besides the two great Bishopricks of Liege and Cambray, which being always under the protection of the Belgick Princes, partakers of their Fortunes, either good or ill, and lying intermixt among their Estates, shall have their turn in the Description of these Countries, divided generally.

into { 2 Bishopricks, { 1. Liege or Luyck.
 { 2. Cambray.
 4 Dukedoms, { 1. Limbourg, 2. Luxemburg,

Of these Nineteen, two only did acknowledge the Sovereignty of the Kings of France, viz. Flanders and Artois; the Earls whereof were Homagers unto that Crown, but seldom did descend so low as do their Homage, quitted at last to Philip the second King of Spain, and his Successors, by King Henry the second of France in the Treaty at Cambray, Anno 1558. The rest were held originally of the German Empire, and by Maximilian Emperor of Germany, and Regent of those Countries for his Son Philip (who had a purpose to subject them to the Empire again) were made the Tenth Circle of the Empire, called the Circle of Burgundy. But neither since, nor before that time, would the Princes of the House of Burgundy acknowledge any such Subjection; but govern'd these Estates as absolute Princes, without relation to the Empire, or Subordination to the Emperor or Imperial Officers; never appearing at the Diets, nor contributing to any Taxes there imposed, not holding themselves bound by any Constitutions which were made therein. So that these several Relations being out of use, we must behold it at this time as it stands divided betwixt the Spaniards and the States: beginning first with those Provinces which belong to the Spaniard, the true Proprietary of the whole; and therein first with Flanders, as of most esteem.

1. FLANDERS, and 2. ARTOIS.

These two I have thought fit to join together, because at first but one Estate; and though divided for a time, yet after five or six Descents again united, and have so continued ever since.

1. FLANDERS is bounded on the East with Hainault and Brabant, on the West with the English or German Ocean; on the North with the Seas of Zeland and a branch of the Scheld, and on the South with part of Picardy in France, interposing betwixt Calice and Greveling; in which bounds Artois is included. So called, as some say, a Flando, because it lieth open to the Winds; as others say, from Flandbert, the Son of Blesinda, Daughter of Clodion, the second King of the French. Some fetch it from a Town of this name, situate in that part of the Country where now Ardenburg stands; so long since ruined, that very few except themselves could ever hear of it: and others (which I think most probable) from Flandrina the Wife of Lideric II. the first who governed in these Parts by the name of Forcster.

The Soil is indifferently fruitful in Corn and Pasture; the Air healthful, temperate and pleasant. The whole Country not in length above 90 Miles, and in breadth but 60, and yet containing in that compass above thirty Cities (for they reckon all Cities which be walled) and 1154 Villages, which stand so thick, (as needs they must in so narrow a compass) that the Spaniards, at their first coming in with King Philip the Second, took the whole Province for one Town. Divided commonly into, 1. Imperial, 2. Gallican, and, 3. Teutonican; or, 1. Flanders Imperial, 2. Flanders Gallican, and, 3. Flanders Flammeugant.

1. FLANDERS FLAMMEUGANT, which is the greatest of the three, is bounded on the East with Imperial Flanders and the River Scheld, on the West with the English Ocean, on the North with the Seas of Zeland, and on the South with Artois and Flanders Gallican. The chief Towns of it, 1. Gaunt, in Latine called Gandavum, seven Miles in compass, but taking in the Suburbs, which are great and large, the whole Circuit is ten Miles at least. One of the greatest Cities in Europe for extent of Ground, but not so populous as many of a less capacity; there being much waste Ground even within the Walls. Commodiously seated on the Banks of the Scheld and the Ley, both which run through it, and make in it Twenty-six Islands, joined together with Ninety-eight Bridges: and had not her many Seditions ruined her Beauties, she might have been the Queen of Europe. In this Town were born John Duke of Lancaster, commonly called John of Gaunt, and Charles the fifth Emperor, and King of Spain: which last, to restrain the People from their old Sedition, which had been very troublesome to his Predecessors, (the Gauntois taking on them many times to rule and over-rule their Princes) built a strong Citadel in the place where stood the Abby of Saint Bavons. For Churches, Monasteries, and other places of Devotion, there were numbred in it Fifty-five, all of them answerable to the Grandeur and Renown of the City; the private Buildings being also very stately, if not Majestical. But now it is much fallen from its former Glories, the often Seditions of this People drawing upon themselves the Vengeance of their angered Prince; and their Wealth much impaired by the long Wars, and the diversion of their Trading by the Hollanders, who command the Seas. This Place was taken by the French the 12th of March, 1678. but restored to the Spaniards by the Treaty of Nimwegen in 1679. 2. Bruges, or Brugge, more within the Land. A Town that hath neither Port nor River, yet formerly of such Wealth, and the People in those Times so willing to shew it, that Queen Joan, the Wife of Philip the Fair, having been there, and marked the Pomp of the Women, complained that She was not Queen alone. The Town of four Miles circuit within the Walls, wonderfully well peopled; the Buildings fair and sumptuous (amongst which Sixty Churches and Religious Houses) the Streets large and straight, and a spacious Market-place, from which the six principal Streets of the City do pass directly on to as many Gates, which is very pleasant to behold. And though the Town hath neither Port nor River, as before was said, yet was it anciently anciently of so great Trading, that it was accounted one of the four Mart-Towns of Christendom; flourishing chiefly by the benefit of the English Cloth, and sensibly decaying when the English Traffick was removed hence to Antwerp. It was Walled by Earl Baldwin, An. 890, is distant three Leagues from the Sea, and seated on a fair and deep Channel made by Art, and filled with the Waters of all the adjoining Fountains and Rivulets; which artificial Channels are in these Countries very frequent, to the great enriching of the whole State. It continues still under the Spaniards, and is one of the best Places they have left. 3. Ypres, a Town seated very strongly, and almost impregnable, on a small River so named: a reasonable rich Town, and well built, though most of the Houses be of Timber, very well served with Water, conveyed into every House almost in leaden Pipes, of which there is so great a number, that the Foundations of it seem to be laid in Lead. This City was taken by the French the 26th of March, 1678. and is still in their Hands. 4. Bourbourg, a fine strong Town, but little, pertaining to the French King in the Right of the House of Bourbon. 5. Comines, on the River Lis, or Ley, beautified with a strong Castle, and an excellent Library; but more in being the Birth-place of Philip de Comines, that notable States-Man and Historian. Now under the French. 6. Courtray, on the same River of Ley, one of the ancientest Towns in Flanders, yet still continueth well built, of very great strength both by Art and Nature, famous for a great Overthrow given the French, Anno 1301. for which the Town was called of long time the Sepulchre of the Frenchmen. Taken by the French in 1646, and again in 1667, but restored to the Spaniards in 1679. 7. Ardenburg, (called in Times past Rodemburgh) a pretty Town, enriched every Year with a great Horse-Fair every June, and beautified with one of the goodliest Churches in all this Province: the principal Town of that part hereof, which properly is called Flanders; that name being first given to the Parts hereunto adjoining, as some conceive, and after by degrees communicated to the rest of the Country. It was taken by the Hollanders in 1604, and is still in their power, but wasted to nothing. 8. Bier-vliet, both a Town and Island, and furnished with a good and commodious Haven; yet not to be mention'd in this place, but that the salting of Herrings was here first invented by one William Beukeleme, who died Anno 1397. 9. Winocksberg, so called of a goodly Abbey built upon an Hill in the honour of St. Winock an English Man of an holy Life, sacked by the French, Anno 1538, but since re-edified, and made more beautiful than it was before. Taken by the French in 1646, retaken by the Spaniards in 1658. 10. Graveling, on the Sea-side, which, since the taking of Calice by the French, hath been made the strongest Town in the Low-Countries. Yet it has been twice taken by the French in 1644, and in 1658: Since which last date it has been in their Hands. 11. Oudenard, seated on the Scheld, a fair strong Town and of very great Traffick, especially for Tapeltry and the finest Linens, which are here made: The Birth-place of Margaret, Dutchess of Parma, and Mother to Alexander Prince of Parma, that renowned Souldier. taken by the French in 1658, and in 1667, besieged by the Spaniards unsuccessfully in 1674, but restored by the Treaty in 1679.

The principal Ports of Flanders, being four in number, are all of them seated in this part. 1. Dunkerck, a small but safe Port, belonging to the French King (as doth Graveling also) in the Right of the House of Vendosme; but strongly Garrisoned by the Spaniard, even in times of Peace, because of the importance of their situation both by Sea and Land. Most memorable in these Days for that the People of it in the times of War so infested the Seas. This Town was taken by the united Forces of England and France in the Year 1658, June 17. And being put into the Hands of the English, was sold to the French in the Year 1662. And the present French King has bestowed incredible Cost in Fortifying it, and enlarging and securing the Haven, though to little purpose. 2. Schuyts, seated at the Mouth of the Channel of Bruges, beautified with a very fair Haven able to contain 500 good Ships; and is now subject to the States, with whose safety it could not well stand to let the Spaniards enjoy any safe and large Harbours so near unto them. Over against it lieth the Isle of Cassander, famous for the Birth of George Cassander, a moderate and learned Papist, formerly as big again as it is at the present, having then a fair Town in it and many rich Villages, of which there is but one remaining (of the same Name with the Island) the rest all swallowed by the Sea. 3. Nieuport, a pretty Town, with a very strong Castle, built on a well frequented Haven, but not very safe, and therefore not much used by the Men of War, nor made rich by Paracies, as Dunkerck. Near to this Town, Anno 1603. was fought the Field-battel betwixt the Arch-duke Albert and the States; the Victory, next under God, being gotten for the States by the Valour of the English, and the excellent Conduct of the Verees. 4. Ostend, not walled till the Low-Country Wars, and then but with a mud Wall only, and that not finished till the Arch-duke fate down before it: insomuch as the Arch-dutche's Isabel is said to have sworn, that she would not shift her Smock till the Town were taken: who, had she kept that rash Oath, had been very lowly; the Town (then Garrisoned with English) holding out against the said Arch-duke a Siege of three Years and as many Months. These two East Ports are still in the Hands of the Spaniards.

2. IMPERIAL FLANDERS, so called, because it was long under the Obedience of Emperors, is severed from Brabant by the River Dender, and from the Gallick Flanders by the River Scheld, about Oudenard. It was sometimes called Brabant, of a Castle of that name, destroyed by Baldwin le Debonaire, Earl of Flanders; and is now call'd the County of Alost, from the chief Town thereof so named; the Jurisdiction whereof, containing 170 Villages, extendeth as far as to the Walls of Gant, and the Gates of Oudenard. The Town is strong, and indifferently fair, situate on the River Dender, most Famous in these Times for a Ear of Hops which is kept there Yearly. 2. Hulst, a walled Town, and the chief of the four Towns in the County of Waes; the other three being, 3. Axele. 4. Monchaet. 5. Affende; of which little memorable, but that they were all taken from the Empire by the said Baldwin le Debonaire in the time of the Emperor Henry the Fourth. 6. Dendermond, situate at the mouth of the Dender, where it entrencheth into the Scheld; a strong Town both by Art and Nature, and much enriched by making Fustians, and a weekly Market of Flax. A distinct Signory of it self, with many rich Villages belonging to it; incorporated into the Earldom of Flanders by the Marriage of Earl Lewis de Malaine with the Lady Margaret of Brabant, to which House it formerly appertained. 7. Rupelmond, on the mouth of the River Rupel, where it falleth into the Scheld: Famous in former time for an ancient Castle, in which were kept the Monuments and Records of the Earls of Flanders; more in late times for being the Birth-place of Mercator, that renowned Cosmographer. 8. Mont-Gerhard, called by the French, Grandmout, a fine and pleasant Town seated on the Dender. Which three last Towns, together with Bornhem, a fair large Village, having some Jurisdiction on the Parts adjoining, made up that Estate which was called the Proper or Domaine of Flanders, because not holden of the Empire or the Kings of France, but in the Sovereignty alone of the Earls hereof. This Part of Flanders is yet entirely in the Hands of Spaniards, though in the Year 1667 they took Alost, and kept it till the Peace.

3. FLANDERS GALlicant, so called from the French Language there spoken, lieth on the South of Flanders Flammengant; having Hainault on the East, Artois on the West, and the Country of Cambrai on on the South. The chief Towns of it are, 1. L'Isle, in Latine, Insula, so called from its Island-like situation, among Ponds, Pools, Marshes, dried up and made firm Land by Earl Baldwin de Barbu, who built the Town, Anno 1007. which afterwards was called by Baldwin de Lisle, his Son (born in his Town, and hence so named) Anno 1066. The Town made rich by Manufactures and retort of Merchants, accounted the best Town of Traffick, next Amsterdam and Antwerp, in all the Netherlands. Not far from which are to be seen the Ruins of an ancient Castle called Brug, the Seat or Mannor-House of the ancient Foresters, who had the Government of this Country for the Kings of France. Taken by the French in 1667. 2. Doway, (Duacum, in Latin) a fair and strong Town seated on the Scharp, having many Fountains, good Buildings, and a great number of Churches; made an University by King Philip the Second of Spain, who built therein a Seminary or Colledge for English Fugitives. Taken by the French in 1667. 3. Orchies, a pleasant Town, and well traded for the making of Serges; which, with the other two, make up the three Estates of this part of Flanders. 4. Armentiers, an unwall'd Town, but of very great Trading; there being yearly 25000 pieces of Cloth sent hence to Italy, and thence to Constantinople. 5. Tournay, (or Dornick, as the Dutch call it) a great, rich, mighty and strong Town, seated on the Scheld, well built, and full of stately and magnificent Churches and Religious Houses, and anciently honoured with a See Episcopal. A Town of great importance, and much contended for betwixt the Flemmings and the French; but finally fell unto the French, as the more puissant Prince; taken from them by Henry the Eighth of England, Anno 1513. to whom the Citizens paid 100000 Ducats for their present Ransom; restored by him unto the French, Anno 1518. for the sum of 600000 Crowns; and finally from them recovered by Charles the Fifth, who restored it to the Body of Flanders, from which it had been long dismembred; but so that it is govern'd as a State apart, and is called the Seignioury of Tournes, having a goodly Jurisdiction over the Country round about it. Taken by the French again in the Year 1667. 6. S. Amand, in the Country of Tournes, pleasantly seated on the Scharp; in which is one of the richest Abbeys in all Flanders; the Abbot thereof having the temporal and spiritual Jurisdiction over it and the parts about it. And so much for the Chorography of the Earldom of Flanders, inhabited by the Nervii and Morini in the time of Cesar. All this part of Flanders was resigned to the French by the Treaties of Aix la Chapel, in the Year 1668, and confirmed by the Treaty of Nimwegen.

2. ARTOIS, is bounded on the East with Flanders Gallicant and the Country of Cambray, on the South and West with Picardy, on the North with Flanders Flammengant and the River Lis. The name is derived from the Airebates, the old Inhabitants hereof: the Air exceeding temperate, and the Soil so fruitful, that it serveth as a Granary to a great part both of Flanders and Brabant. This whole Province was resigned to the French by the Pyrenean Treaty in the Year 1659, and confirm'd by the Treaty of Nimwegen.

On the West part hereof towards France lieth the Earldom of S. Paul, so called from the chief Town thereof; a goodly Seignioury, and of great Jurisdiction and Revenue, containing, besides many Villages, the good Town of Pern, a walled Town, and of great importance. The Earls hereof were lineally derived from Walleran, Brother of Henry the Seventh Emperor of Germany and Earl of Luxemburg; the last of which was Lewis of Luxemburg, made Constable of France by King Lewis the Eleventh, with whom, as also with Edward the Fourth of England, and Charles Duke of Burgundy, he plaid so many cross Tricks, that having long deluded them all, and kept them in a continual Jealousie of one another, he was at last by Duke Charles taken and beheaded. After whose death this goodly Seignioury fell to the House of Vendosme in France, by the Marriage of Francis Earl of Vendosme with Mary the Daughter of this Lewis, to whom it was adjudged by the Power and Favour of the French King's; the Heirs-males being made incapable of Succession in it, by the Attainder and Confiscation of the said last Earl. By means whereof the House of Vendosme was intitled to many fair Estates in Artois, Flanders, Hainault, and much good Lands in France, which they were possessed of; Francis the 2d. Son of that Francis, and Francis the only Son of this, being intitled, whilst they lived, Earl of S. Paul, and Dukes of Tutcheville.

The Arms of these Earls were Argent, a Lion Gules armed and crowned Or, his Tail forked of the second.

As for the residue of Artois, the Towns of most importance in it are, 1. Arras, in Latine Atrebatum civitas, the chief City of the Atrebat the old Inhabitants hereof in the time of Cesar, and still the chief City of this Province; a large, populous and well-fortified City, anciently honoured with a See Episcopal, and stocked with an industrious People, the first makers of the Cloth of Arras, which took Name from hence: divided into two distinct Towns, both of them walled, and called by two several Names; the lesser called La Cite, subject to the Bishop, beautified with a fair and stately Cathedral Church, and a Library containing many excellent Manuscripts; the lesser called La Ville, subject to the Prince, having large Streets, and a rich Monastery of the yearly Revenue of 20000 Crowns. By Pytolomy it is called Regiacum, seated within a Bow-shot of the River Scharp, and heretofore the Metropolitan Town of Flanders, till Artois was dismembred from it; since which time the chief City of this Province, as before is said. Taken by the French in 1640, and unfortunately attacked by the Spaniards in 1654. 2. S. Omar, a fair Town, and well peopled, seated upon the River At, some eight Dutch Miles from the Ocean; so called from S. Omar, or Andomar, Bishop of the Morini, who built a Monastery in this place, from which grew the Town, the second of Esteem and Rank in all the Country. Near to it is a goodly Lake of fresh Water, in which are many little Islands affording good Pasturage for Cattel: of which Lewis Guicciardini reporteth, that by fastning a Cord unto the Bushes which grow in them, a Man may draw them which way he will; and that under them there are found great number of fishes, who bed themselves there for shelter against the Weather. This City was raised to the Dignity of a Bishops See under the Arch-Bishop of Cambray in 1550, instead of Terovanne, which was Ruined some few Years before. In 1596 Philip II. of Spain founded here a Colledge for the English Jesuits: In 1639 the French besieged it unsuccessfully, but they took it 1677, and had the Possession confirmed by the Treaty of Nimwegen. 3. Bathune, a strong Town; and seated amongst excellent Pastures, of which the People make great plenty of the best Cheese: which, with the Territory hereof, fell to Cy of Dampiere, Earl of Flapders, in Right of Maud his Wife, Daughter and Heir of Daniel the Lord of this Town, honoured in that regard with the Birth of their eldest Son, who from this place had the name of Robert de Rathunc. Taken by the French in 1645. 4. Ayre, on the Lis, a strong Town, with a Castle of great Antiquity. Taken by the French in 1641, and soon after recovered by the Spaniards, but was finally retaken by the former in 1676, and is now in their Hands. 5. Bupaulme, a little, but well Fortified Town; and yet more strong, because it cannot be Besieged for want of fresh Water, which is not to be had within three Leagues of it. Taken by the French in 1641, and ever since kept by them. 6. Remy, an unwall'd Town, but Fenced with a very strong Castle, besieged by the French, Anno 1554. but being overcome in a set Field by Charles the Fifth, they were fain to raise the Siege and go home again. In the Year 1638 the French took and ruined it.

7. Hesdin, on the confluence of two little Riverets, Blangis and Canche; a Frontier Town on the edge of France, one of the strongest and most defensible places of all the Netherlands, built by Charles the Fifth out of the Ruines of old Hesdin, which having taken from the French, he commanded it to be razed as no longer serviceable, and raised this Town in stead thereof, somewhat nearer France. Which in the Year 1639 was also taken by the French, and resigned to them by the Pyrenean Treaty. 8. Terwin, or Teroane, the Tervanna of Ptolomy, and Civitas Morinum of Antoninus, a Frontier Town, held for a long time by the French, by whom thought impregnable, till taken by King Henry the VIII. Anno 1513. they changed their Opinion. A Siege not only memorable for the issue of it, but for two other matters of great moment: The one, that the Emperor Maximilian came and served in Person under the Colours of S. George, with the English Cross upon his Breast: The other, that the French intending to victual the Town, had so great an Overthrow, that had the English followed their Fortune, they had opened a fair way to have made themselves Masters of all France; the French King being so astonished at the News hereof, that he prepared to fly into Britagne. But the English more minded the Spoils and Riches of Terwin, than the sequel of an absolute Victory; Et frui maluerunt victoria, quam uti, as the Historian said of Hannibal. It is now, after many changes of Fortune, in the Hands of the French, and by some reckoned and accounted of as part of Picardy. There are, besides these, three walled Towns more, that is to say, Lillers, Lens, and La Bassée, of which little memorable, and to the number of 854 Villages.

These Countries of Flanders and Artois were anciently, if not a part, (as the parts hereof about Tournay most undoubtedly were) yet much of the same nature with the great Forest of Ardenne, nothing but a continual waste of Woods and Desarts till the Conquest of it by the French; the Sea-coasts being then unpeopled for fear of the Danes, who by their frequent Piracies did much vex those Shores, and the inland Countries meanly planted, for want of Corn and other Necessaries for the Life of Man: subject in part to the greatest Princes of Ardenne, till the discomfiture of Earl Brunolph by Dagobert, sole King of the French, by whom about the Year 621 this wild Country, extending then as far as the River Somme, and comprehending, besides Artois and Flanders, a good part of Picardy, was given unto one Liderrick de Bucque, with the Title of Forester, to be holden under the Sovereign of that Crown. In whose Posterity it continued with the Title of Foresters till the time of Baldwin the First, the Son of Odoacer, the seventh of the Foresters, whose Names occur upon Record; there being a long intermission of their Names and Memories during the Ravagements and Depredations of the Danes and Normans. This Baldwin having first Ravished, and afterwards Married, Judith, Sister to Charles the Bald, King of France and Emperor, was by him created Earl of Flanders, the Sovereignty thereof reserved as before it was: in whose Issue it remained intire, till Philip the first Earl of that name gave unto Philip Augustus, King of France, the Country of Artois with the Earldom or Country of Veromandois, part of Picardy, in Marriage with Isabel his Niece, Daughter of Baldwin Earl of Hainault. By Lewis the Eighth, Son and Successor of Philip Augustus, Artois was given in Portion to his youngest Son Robert, made the first Earl of Artois by King Lewis the Ninth, Anno 1234. And by the Marriage of Lewis the First of Flanders with Margaret the Heir of Artois and of the Earldom of Burgundy, both these Estates were added unto this of Flanders, now made far mightier than before. And yet before this great accession of Estate it was accounted the prime Earldom, as Millano was the prime Dukedom of Europe: these Earls being privileged to write themselves Dei Gratia, all others Dei Clementia only; and Flanders being now grown abroad to so great Esteem, that it was generally used for the Netherlands. Finally, by the Marriage of Margaret Daughter of Lewis de Malain, Earl of Flanders, to Philip the Hardy, Duke of Burgundy, this great Estate came united to that House, and afterwards was conveyed to that of Austria, as shall be shewn hereafter in due time and place. In the mean season let us take a brief survey of

The Earls of FLANDERS and ARTOIS.

| 1205 | 19. Joan , eldest Daughter of Baldwin the Emperor, first married to Ferdinand , Son of Sancho King of Portugal , and after to Thomas the 3d Son of Thomas Earl of Savoy ; both in her Right called Earls of Flanders . |
| 1244 | 20. Margaret , Sister of Joan , and 2d Daughter of the Emperor Baldwin , Widow of William of Dampierre , governed the Estate of Flanders as long as she lived, admitting William her eldest Son to the Title of Earl, which he continued till his death (being many years before his Mother's) Anno 1255. |
| 1278 | 21. Guy of Dampierre , the second Son of Margaret , admitted to the Title of Earl on the death of his Brother, and to the Estate itself on the death of his Mother. |
| 1304 | 22. Robert III. surnamed of Bethune ; who married Yoland , Heir of Odo of Boulogne , Earl of Nevers , by whom he had a Son call'd Lewis , who married Mary , Daughter and Heir of James Earl of Rethel . |
| 1323 | 23. Lewis , Son of Lewis , and Grandson of Robert the 3d. in right of his Mother Earl of Rethel , in right of his Grandmother Earl of Nevers , and of Flanders in right of his Father and Grandfather. |
| 1347 | 24. Lewis de Malain , Earl of Flanders , Nevers and Rethel , in right of his Father, and of Artois and of Burgundy , in right of his Mother, whom he succeeded at her death, but the time I find not. |
| 1369 | 25. Philip II. surnamed the Hardy, Duke of Burgundy , succeeded in the Earldoms of Flanders , Artois , &c. in right of Margaret his Wife, Daughter and Heir of Lewis de Malain , whom he married solemnly at Gant , An. 1369. Of which Philip and his Successors in these Estates we shall hereafter speak in a place more proper. |

The Earls of ARTOIS.

- 1234 1. Robert of France, Grandson of Philip Augustus, and Isabel the Daughter of Baldwin the 8th, made the first Earl by Lewis the 9th.
- 1245 2. Robert II. Son of Robert.
- 1302 3. Otheline, Earl of Burgundy, succeeded in right of Maud his Wife, the Daughter of Robert the Second.
- 1315 4. Philip the Long, King of France, Earl of Burgundy and Artois, in right of Joan his Wife, the Daughter and Heir of Maud and Otho, or Otheline.
- 1331 5. Eudes, Duke of Burgundy, Earl of Burgundy and Artois, in right of Joan his Wife, the eldest Daughter of Philip.
6. Philip, the only Son of Eudes, in right of his Mother, Earl of Artois, and so called in his Father's life-time.
- 1349 7. Philip III. Son of Philip the II. and Nephew of Eudes, Duke and Earl of Burgundy, and Earl of Artois, who died young and without Issue, Anno 1361.
1361. 8. Margaret, Daughter of Philip of France, and of Joan Countess of Artois and Burgundy, married to Lewis Earl of Flanders, &c. succeeded Philip III. (being then a Widow) in the Earldoms of Burgundy and Artois, Anno 1361.

The Arms of Flanders are Or, a Lion Sable, langued and armed Gules. Those of Artois being Semé of Flower-de-Luces Or, in a field Azure, a File of three Labels, Gules charged with as many Castles of the first.

3. HAINAULT.

HAINAULT is bounded on the East with Namur, on the West with Flanders, on the North with Brabant, on the South with Picardy and Champagne in France. It was anciently called Salus Carbonarius, from the abundance of Charcoal made in the Woods and Forests of it; by some Writers of the middle Times, the Lower Picardy; by the Latine Writers of these Times called Hamonia. It seemeth to have taken this new name from the River Hain or Hainat, which passeth thro' it, and the word Holt, signifying a Wood, as being overspread in a manner with the Forests of Normant, St. Amand de Faing, and that of Poodsberg, and then Hainault will be quasi Haine holt, i. e. a Country of Woods and Forests on the River Hain. Thus called originally by the French, (as the word importeth;) but by the Dutch best known by the name of Hainegow, i. e. the Country bordering on Haine, as the name signifieth in that Language.

The length thereof is 60 Miles, 48 the breadth; comprehending in that compass 950 Villages, and 24 Towns; in and amongst which there is reckoned one Principate, 10 Earldoms, 12 Peerdoms or Painies, 22 Baronies, 26 Abbeys, one Lord Marshal, (besides other Officers of the Prince) descending by Inheritance to the Lords of this Province.

The Air hereof is very good, and the Soil Fruitful, by reason the Country is watered with so many Rivers, as the Scheld, the Sambre, the Dender, and several lesser Streams, besides divers Lakes, Marshes, Ponds and Pools, which do much enrich it, the Country abounding in most places with fresh Meadows, and sweet Pastures, good Fruits, and profitable Trees, but especially with great plenty of Corn. Here are also some parts of it notable Mines of Iron and Lead, and excellent Quarries of the best Stone, fit for all kind of Buildings.

The principal of these Towns are, 1. Mons, situate at the confluence of Haine and a little River called Trulle, which gives a good natural strength unto it; fortified besides with a very strong Wall, three large deep Ditches, and an ancient Castle. The Town is great, beautiful and rich, adorned with sumptuous Buildings, both private and publick, and replenished with wealthy Merchants and Men of Trade; the principal of all the Province, erected into an Earldom by Charles the Great, and sometimes used for the style of Earls of Hainaut. In this Town is the noble Nunnery of S. Valdrade, once a Dutcheis of Lorraine, the Nuns whereof are to be Ladies and Gentlewomen of Noble Families, in the morning apparelled in white, like Nuns, in the afternoons according to their Birth and Qualities; who when they please may leave the Cloister and be married. The Abbess hath Jurisdiction both in the Town and Country about it, and anciently did put the Earls of Hainaut into possession of the State. Another Nunnery like this (but not of such large Revenues) there is at, 2. Mauberge on the Sambre, a good Town of Merchandise. This Town, and the Earldom thereunto belonging, is still in the Hands of the Spaniards, the far greatest part of the Province being subdued by the French. In the Year 1678 the latter besieged this City, and were defeated chiefly by the Valour of the English, though they were so well Re-entrench'd that they despised their Enemies.

3. Valenciennes, seated on the Scheld, and a little River called Rouelle, which make not only in it many pleasant Isles, but pass almost under every Man's House, to the great benefit and delight of the place and People. The sight hereof is so strong by Nature (besides the Fortifications of Art) that on the one side it may be easily made unapproachable by Water, and on the other side is so defended by Hills, that it can hardly be besieged but by three Armies at once. A goodly, large and beautiful Town, especially for publick Building: the chief whereof are the Church of our Lady, built after the ancient manner of Architecture, with sumptuous Arches and goodly Pillars of Marble and Porphyry; the Earl's Palace, and the Town-hall, Buildings of great Magnificence and excellent Workmanship. The Birth-place of Henry the Seventh, Emperor of Germany, of Mary Daughter of Charles the Warlike, and of Froissart the great French Historian. Finally a Town which, for the Eminence thereof, is governed as a State apart by itself, having under the Jurisdiction of it 3 Towns, 132 Villages, which on occasion of Appeal resort not to the Provincial Council at Mons, but the great Council at Mechlen. This Town was taken by the French in the Year 1677.

4. Chimay, upon the River Blanche, near a pleasant Forest, which gives the Title of a Prince to the eldest Son of the Duke of Aerschot, one of the principal Lords of Brabant, who hath here a very goodly Palace.

5. Halle, seated on the Sonne, which runs through it, a place of great Credit amongst the Papists, by reason of an Image of the blessed Virgin famed for many Miracles. Of which see Lipsius on that subject.

6. Beauvais or Bavay, an old Town, at a Pillar whereof begin all the ways leading into France, made of Paved-stones by Brunehaut, the Wife of Sigebert King of Metz and Austrasia, who with Fridegonde, the Wife of Chilperick, and Katharine Medicis, the Wife of Henry the Second, are said to be the Three Furies of France.

7. Landrevie, on the River Sambre, famous for the notable resistance which it made to Charles the Fifth, 1543.

8. Marienburg, built by Mary Queen of Hungary, Governess here for the said Charles, Anno 1524. to serve as a Bulwark against France, on which it Frontiereth. Surrendered by the Spaniards to the French by the Pyrenean Treaty, but dismantled.

9. Philip-Ville, built and well fortified for the same Reason by King Philip the Second. Surrendered by the last mentioned Treaty to the French.

10. Bonchain, upon the Scheld, in the County of Ostrianand, which County is the Title of the first Son of Hainaut; and by that name William the eldest Son of Albert Earl of Hainaut and Holland, was admitted Knight of the Garter by King Richard the Second. Under the French.

11. Conde, a good little Town seated on the Scheld, the Moiety whereof whereof belonged heretofore to the House of Montpensier in France; as, 12. Enghein, a Town of great Trade for Tapestry, to the House of Vendosme: from whence the Princes of Conde, and Dukes of Enghein, do derive their Titles. This Town was taken by the French in 1655, and lost in 1656, but was retaken in 1676, and is still in their Hands. 13. Beaumont, upon the knap of a goodly Hill, whence it hath the name; belonging at the present to the Dukes of Aerschot, but anciently the Partage of the second Son of the Earls of Hainault. 14. Bins, or Binche, on a branch of the River Hain, one of the Jointure-Towns of the Countesses of Hainault, much beautified and made a place of Pleasures by Mary Queen of Hungary, to whom it was given by Charles the Fifth, (commonly called the Queen's Paradise) but burnt and utterly destroy'd by the French, Anno 1554. 15. Aeth, seated on both sides of the Dender; a little, but a pleasant and wealthy Town; here being held the Staple of Linnen for all this Country, and the Cloth here sold amounting to 200000 Crowns per Annum. This last is yet in the Hands of the Spaniards.

As for the History of Hainault, the ancient Inhabitants thereof were the Nervii, the most valiant and most potent People of all the Gauls, possessed not only of this Province, but of the whole Earldom of Namur, and some part of Flanders, able to bring, and de facto did bring into the Field, when the Belga mustered up their united Forces against Julius Caesar, no fewer than 50000 fighting Men. Won from the Romans by the French, they became a part of the great Earldom of Ardenne, continuing so till the death of Burnulph, discomfited and slain in battel by Dagobert sole King of the French, whom his Father in his Life-time had made Duke of Ardenne, and designed unto the Conquest of it. But the Fury of the War being over, the Parts of Flanders and Brabant which belonged unto it elapsed upon other Houses, and the rest allotted out amongst his Children, Alberic, surnamed the Orphelin, one of his younger Sons, was by Sigebert King of Metz or Austrasia, enfeoffed of this Country, by the Name and Title of Earl of Hainault. Twice this Estate was added or united to that of Flanders. 1. In the Person of Baldwin V. Earl of Flanders, succeeding hereunto in right of Richild his Wife, Daughter of Regnier the Third. 2. By the Marriage of Baldwin the Sixth of Hainault with Margaret Countess of Flanders, Sister and Heir of Philip of Alsace, Earl of Flanders. But being divided the first time by the Usurpation of Flanders, wrested from Arnulph the Third by his Uncle Robert, and the second time by the Intrusion of John de Avesnes, natural Son of Margaret the second Daughter of the Emperor Baldwin, into the Estate and Earldom of Hainault; it was finally annexed to Holland by the Marriage of John de Avesnes to Adelize or Aleide, Daughter and (at the last) Heir of Florence, the Fourth Earl of Holland, Zeland, &c. From which it never was divided, till they were both incorporated into that of Burgundy.

The Earls of HAINAULT.

1. Alberic, one the younger Sons of Brunulph Earl of Ardenne.
2. Waultier, Son of Alberic.
3. Waultier II. Son of Waultier the first.
4. Waultier III. Son of Waultier the second.
5. Albon, in right of his Wife, eldest Daughter of Waultier the third.
6. Albon II. Son of the said Albon by that Wife.
7. Manassier, Son of Albon the second.
8. Regnier, Son of Manassier.
9. Regnier II. Son of Regnier the first.
10. Regnier III. Son of Regnier the second.
11. Baldwin V. of Flanders, and the first of that name in Hainault, succeeded in Right of Richild his Wife, the sole Daughter to Regnier the third.

- 1070 12. Arnulph, Son of Baldwin and Richild, deposed of his Estate and Life by his Uncle Robert, who seized on the Earldom of Flanders.
- 1071 13. Baldwin II. Brother of Arnulph, succeeded in Hainault.
14. Baldwin III. Son of Baldwin the second.
15. Baldwin IV. Son of Baldwin the third.
16. Baldwin V. Son of Baldwin the fourth.
17. Baldwin VI. of Hainault, Son of Baldwin the fifth, and the eighth of that Name in Flanders, into which also he succeeded in right of Margaret his Wife, Sister and Heir of Philip of Alsace, Earl of Flanders.
- 1199 18. Baldwin VIII. of Hainault, and IX. of Flanders, Emperor of Constantinople.
- 1205 19. Joan, Countess of Hainault and Flanders, first married to Ferdinand of Portugal, and then to Thomas Earl of Savoy.
- 1244 20. Margaret the younger Sister of Joan, married to William of Bourbon, Lord of Dampierre, by whom she had William and Guy, both Earls of Flanders.
21. John de Avesnes, base Son of Margaret, begot before her Marriage by Buschart her Guardian the Prior of St. Peters in L. Isle, by Force and Fraud extorted Hainault from his Brethren born in lawful Wedlock, and married Aleide Daughter and Heir of Florence, the 4th Earl of Holland; whose Successors in both Estates we shall meet with there, and amongst them with William II. Father of Queen Philippa, Wife of Edward III. one of the most considerable of all the number.

The Arms hereof are quarterly Flanders and Holland.

4. The Bishoprick of CAMBRAY.

Southward from Hainault lieth the Bishoprick of CAMBRAY, containing a goodly Town and Territory, reckoned of anciently as a part of Hainault, now a State distinct; rather confederate with the Princes of the Netherlands, than subject to them.

The principal City hereof is Cambray (called in Latine Cameracum) seated on both sides of the River Scheld, a fair, goodly and mighty City, full of People, many of which are rich Merchants, but all of them industrious, especially in making that fine linnen Cloth from hence called Cameras, or Cambrick. The private Buildings are very fair, but the publick much fairer, especially the Monasteries and other Churches, of which the most remarkable is that of our Lady, an ancient and sumptuous Fabrick, and the See Episcopal; from whence the Country and Territory hereunto adjoining is call'd Cambresis, in which are divers Villages and Places of importance. The chief of which are, 1. Chastellum Cambresis, six Leagues from the City, remarkable for the Treaty held there betwixt France and Spain, Anno 1559. in which a Peace was happily settled amongst all the chief Princes of Christendom, after a long and tedious War between those Kings and the Confederates of each: and before that for the Confederacy there made by the said Kings of France and Spain, the Emperor, the Pope, and many of the Princes of Italy, against the Seignoury of Venice, Anno 1508. called the League of Cambray. 2. Avesnes le sec, (so called to distinguish it from Avesnes in Hainault) near which are digged excellent white Stones for building, little inferior unto Marble.

This Bishoprick was Founded in the Person of S. Diogenes, a Grecian born, Anno 390, or thereabouts: whose Successors in tract of time became so potent, that at the last the Bishop hereof became both the Lord Spiritual and Temporal of the Town and Territory, honoured with the Title of a Duke, and Prince of the Empire, and was in the end made an Archbishop by Pope Paul the Fourth, Anno 1562. And as for the City of Cambray, it was made Imperial by the German Emperors, afterwards by Henry the Fifth, given in Protection to Robert of Jerusalem, Earl of Flanders; and finally settled and confirmed on all his Successors by the Emperor Frederick, Anno 1164. Which notwithstanding the French finding it convenient for them, divers times possessed it: but governing with too great Insolence, they were driven out by the People in the time of Lewis the Eleventh, and the Town yielded voluntarily unto Maximilian, Governour of these Countries for his Son Philip. Charles the Fifth, in the Year 1543, built a strong Citadel in it, pretending that he did it for defence of the Town against the French, but indeed to keep it for himself. After this it was taken by the Duke of Alençon, (Brother of Henry the Third of France) then Governour of the Netherlands, Anno 1582. but regained not long after by the Spaniards, the Inhabitants giving up the Town for want of Victuals. Since that continually possessed by the Spaniards, and by them strongly Garrison'd; but so, that the People still enjoy their ancient Privileges, and are govern'd by their own Laws and Bishops, as in former times. In the Year 1677, Lewis the XIV. the present King of France, after a sharp Defence took this City, and by the Treaty of Nimmeghen had the Possession of it yielded to him.

5. N A M U R.

THE Earldom of NAMUR hath on the East Hainault, on the West the Bishoprick of Liege, on the North Brabant, and on the South Luxemburg; so called from Namur the chief Town of it; Namuricum and Namurcensis Comitatus in our Latine Writers. The Country is very small, containing only 182 Villages, and four Walled Towns, but plentiful of all Commodities, and replenished with a Loyal and Industrious People. Particularly the Air hereof is very wholesome; the Country water'd with many Rivers and pleasant Brooks (amongst which the Sambre and the Maes) which, besides the benefit of Portage, yield great plenty of Fish. The Hills, whereof it hath not many, are cloathed with Woods, abounding with all kind of Fowl and Vemson; the Valleys eminently fruitful of all sorts of Grain, rich Mines of Lead, Quarries of Marble of all colours, as also of Porphyry or Jasper, and great plenty of Coal. In Mines of Iron so abounding, and that continually hammer'd by a painful People, that Vulcan's Forge may seem to be restored to the World again and seated here; which as it makes the People Wealthy, so it keeps them from Idleness. And as for the Nobility they are generally Valiant, given to all military Exercises fit for their Degrees, and very affectionate to their Princes; The greatest Vertue of a Subject.

Walled Towns it hath but four, as before was said; that is to say, 1. Namur, the chief of all the Province, where resideth the Council for the Country, from which lieth no Appeals but to Mechlin only. Seated it is between two Hills on both sides of the Sambre, which doth there fall into the Meuse. This City is rich, inhabited for the most part by the Nobility, defended with a strong Castle, and beautified with a fair Cathedral, founded here in the Church of S. Albin, Anno 1539. Not far off in the Villages of Ardenne and Monstier are two Nunneries of Ladies, like those of Mons and Maubenge, spoken of in Hainault. 2. Bovines, upon the Meuse, sacked by the French, anno 1554. since repaired and fortified. 3. Charlemont, a small Town, but of most exact Fortifications, built by Charles the Fifth, anno 1555. to oppose the French, who had then possessed themselves of Marienburg, a Town of Hainault. 4. Valencourt, a little Town, but standing in a goodly and fruitful Country. Of the Villages the chief is Douc, seated on the Meuse or Maes, fortified with a strong Castle, and honoured with the Title of a Viscounty, 2. Floren, 3. Pesere, and 4. Sanjon, of much Beauty and Greatness.

The ancient Inhabitants of this Country were a part of the Nervii. It was first made an Earldom by some of the Descendents of the Sons of Clodion, the second King of the French, who being dispossessed of their Father's Kingdom by Meroveus, the Master of his Horse (to whom he had committed the Guardianship or Tutelage of them) were forced to betake themselves to the most defensible places of the great Forest of Ardenne and the parts adjoining, where they founded the great Earldoms of Ardenne and Moselle, as before is said, divided in succeeding times into many parcels, of which this is one. By what and how many Earls this Earldom was possessed, I am yet to learn, the Estate being small, and consequently the Princes of it not much considerable. They were allied to the Royal House of France, by the Marriage of Albert Earl hereof with Iminegrade, Daughter of Charles of France, the first Duke of Lorraine: and after unto the House of Flanders, by the Marriage of N. the Daughter and Heir of Lorraine, the last Earl of that Race, to Henry the second, Son of Baldwin the eighth of Flanders, and Brother of Baldwin Earl of Flanders, and the first Emperor of the Latines in Constantinople, whom he succeeded in that Empire. After whose death it came by Yoland his Daughter to Peter Earl of Arverne, who succeeded also in the Empire, and after his decease to Philip his younger Son. But he deceasing without Issue, and Robert his elder Brother reigning in Constantinople, it was seized on by Philip the Brother of Henry, who, to assure themselves thereof, took to Wife Mary Daughter of Philip Augustus King of France, by a Niece or Cousin of this Philip it was conveyed in Marriage to Henry Earl of Luxemburg, (the Father by a former Wife of Henry the seventh, Emperor and Earl of Luxemburg) and finally brought back again to the House of Flanders, by the Marriage of Guy of Dampierre Earl of Flanders, with Isabel Daughter of that Henry by the Heir of Namur, and in his Issue it continued (for ought I can find) till it was swallowed up with the rest of the Belgick Provinces, by the House of Burgundy. So that the highest we can go in search of the Earls of Namur, is to the time of Hugh Capet and Charles of Lorraine, which was 540 Years after the coming in of the Sons of Clodion. From which time downwards the Succession is confused and broken, and towards the latter end discontinued for 140 Years. Such as are left upon Record I have drawn together (not without much trouble) in as good order as I could, and here present them in the ensuing Catalogue of

The Earls of N A M U R.

1. Albert, Co-temporary of Hugh Capet, spoken of before.
2. Godfrey the Son of Albert, and Father of Alice, Wife of Baldwin the fifth of Hainault, and Mother of Baldwin the sixth of Hainault, and the eighth of Flanders.
3. Peter, the Son or Brother of Godfrey.
4. Henry the second, Son of Baldwin the eighth of Flanders, in right of N. his Wife, the Heir of Peter, Emperor of Constantinople, also on the death of Baldwin the 9th, his elder Brother.
- 1216 5. Peter II. Son-in-Law of Henry Emperor of Constantinople, and Earl of Namur.
- 6, 7. Philip, the younger Son of Peter, and John the elder Brother of Henry, both taking to themselves the Title of Earl of Namur, the one at Constantinople, the other in the Netherlands, and both deceasing without Issue.
8. Philip II. Brother of John and Henry without Issue also.
9. John II. surnam'd of Dampierre, the third Son of William of Dampierre, by Margaret Countess of Flanders, Daughter and Heir of the Emperor Baldwin, succeeding by the gift of his Mother, challenging the disposing of it as next Heir of Philip the second, or in the right paramount paramount of the Earldom of Flanders, enjoyed upon a better Title by.

10. Guy of Dampierre, Earl of Flanders; and elder Brother of John the second, in right of Isabel his Wife, Daughter of Henry Earl of Luxemburg by the Heir of Namur; but I neither find her Name nor Parents.
11. John III. Son of Guy and Isabel.
12. John IV. Son of Guy by a former Wife, the Brother of John III. by the whole Blood, being absent or unfriended, and so put beside.
13. Guy II. the Brother of John the Fourth by the same Venter.
14. John V. Son of Guy the second, who in the Year 1307. married a Niece of Lewis the Ninth of France, by Robert Earl of Clermont, a younger Son.
15. John VI. who in the Year 1429 sold his Estate to Duke Philip the Good, to be enjoy'd by him on the death of Theodore, the next Heir here of, infirm, and (as it seems) without hope of Children.
16. Theodore, or Theodorick, the last Earl of Namur, after whose death Duke Philip entred on this Earldom by the former Contract, and as the next Heir of the House of Flanders it continuing ever since unto his Posterity.

The Arms hereof are Or, a Lion Sable, bruised with a Bend Gules.

The Spaniards are possessed entirely of this Earldom.

6. LUXEMBURG.

LUXEMBURG is bounded on the East with the Moselle and the Land of Triers, on the West with the Meuse or Maes and a branch of the Forest of Ardenne, on the North with Luyckland, Namur, and a part of Hainault, and on the South with the Dutchy of Lorraine; so called from the Castle near the Town of Luxemburg, selected by Sigefride the first Earl hereof for his Seat and Residence.

The whole is divided into two parts: the Eastern part being called Favanne, fruitful of Corn, and yielding withal some Wines, some Mines, and many excellent Quarries of goodly Stone: the Western called Ardenne, a remainder of that spacious Forest, which sometimes over-shadowed all this Country, barren of Corn, but very plentiful of Venison, and having of Fowl good store.

The People of this Country are not all of one Language: those nearer Germany, as in Luxemburg, Arlun, Rodemark, Theonville and the rest on that side speaking the Dutch; as those of Montmedy, Marville, Dampvillers, with the rest bordering on France, do a corrupt or broken French, in which regard the Pleadings held before the Council residing in Luxemburg are made in both Languages, that so they may be understood by all that have business there. But the Nobility and Gentry (of which there is more in this Province than in any other of the Seventeen) speak both Tongues perfectly. A breed of Men full of Vertue, Courtesie, and Hospitality towards one another, and of great Truth and Faith to their Prince: but reckoned for the worst Landlords in all these Countries; governing their Subjects and Tenants like the Peasants of France, contrary to the use and Liberties of the rest of the Netherlands. Both sorts, as well the Nobility as the Commons, hate both Law and Lawyers, and for the most part end their Controversies amongst themselves without any Process.

The whole Country containeth in compass about 70 Leagues, or 200 Italian Miles, in which are comprehended 23 walled Towns, and 1168 Burroughs and Villages. The principal of which are, 1. Luxemburg or Lucemburg, built in the place where anciently stood the Augusta Veromanduorum of Ptolomy; and took this new name quasi Lucis burgum, from the Image of the Sun there worshipped; seated on the Alfinuntius or Alze, which runneth through it; large and of a strong situation, but not very well built, nor yet recovered of the Spoils which the long Wars betwixt the French and the Spaniard brought upon it before the Treaty of Cambray. However it is the chief Town of the Province, honoured with the Residence of the Council hereof, and the Sepulchre of John King of Bohemia, slain in the Battel of Cressy against the English, Anno 1348. This City was taken by the French in the Year 1684. 2. Arlun, on the top of an Hill, so called quasi Ara Lunæ, from an Altar consecrated to the Moon in the time of Paganism. 3. Theonville, on the Moselle, over which it hath a goodly Bridge; a Frontier Town near Metz and the Border of Lorraine, and for that cause made marvellous strong; but taken by the French, anno 1558, and restored the next Year by the Peace of Cambray. Retaken by the French the Year 1644. 4. Bostonack, a fair Town, and very well traded, commonly called the Paris of Ardenne, in which part it standeth. 5. Montmedy, on an high Hill, at the foot of which runneth the River Chiers. Taken by the French in the Year 1657. 6. Dampvillers, once a very strong place; both taken and ransacked by the French, anno 1552. 7. Marville, upon the Chiers, the one half whereof belongeth to the Duke of Lorraine, the other to the King of Spain as Duke of Luxemburg, for which cause it is called la Ville Commune. 8. Rock de March, fortified with a strong Castle. 9. Tvois, a place once of great importance, sacked by the French, anno 1552, and restored by the Treaty of Cambray, on condition it should never more be walled. 10. La Fume, on the Chiers, a Town of the same Condition.

In the skirts of this Country towards France standeth the Principality of Sedan, extended all along the Banks of the River Maes, from the Borders of Lorraine on the South, to the great Forest of Ardenne and the Dukedom of Bouillon on the North: A small, but very fair Estate, of fruitful Soil, and beautified with many rich Villages, and some Towns of note; the principal whereof are, 1. Jamais upon the borders of Lorraine, by the Duke whereof it was taken after a long season from the Lady Charlotte, the last Heir-general of the House of Mars, anno 1585. and laid unto that Dukedom as a part thereof. A place of great importance, and therefore much contended for by each Pretender. 2. Donchiery, a strong Town of War, bordering on Tirascie in Picardy, to which by some it is ascribed. 3. Sedan, in Latin call'd Sedunum ad Mosam, because situate on the Banks of the Maes or Mosa, the usual Residence of the Prince: a fine neat Town, well fortified, and planted with 80 Brass pieces of Ordnance; honoured with a Seat of Learning, which being of a middle nature betwixt a Grammar-School and an University, is in the Criticism of these Times called a Schola illustris, to which Men may send their Children to learn good Letters, though they can take in them no Degrees, that being a Privilege reserved only to the Universities. So that these Schools may be somewhat like our Collegiate Churches of Westminster, Winchester and Eaton, but that the younger Students in these last named are more restrained to Rhetorick and Grammar than in the other, though these more liberally endowed for the encouragement and reward of Learning than all the Schola illustris of either Germany. 4. Mousson, a Town of great strength and consequence on the River Maes, upon some jealousies of State garrisoned by the French, as also in Sedan it self, and most of the other good Towns belonging unto this Principality; but so that the Revenues of it, execution of Justice, and all other Rights of Sovereignty, are still enjoyed, as formerly, by the Lords thereof. This small Principality in the Year 1642 was forced to submit to the Crown of France.

This Estate anciently was a part of the Dukedom of Bouillon, from which it was dismembred for the Portion of some younger Prince, at such time as Godfrey Earl of Ardenne and Bouillon succeeded in the Dukedom of Lorraine, after Charles and Orto the first Dukes; or else excepted and reserved by Godfrey, surnamed of Bouillon, Duke

Duke of Lorrain, and King of Jerusalem, when he sold the Dukedom of Bouillon to the Bishop of Liege. By many mean Conveyances and Alterations of the Owners it came at last to the House of Aremberg, a Family of great Wealth and Power in Westphalen, (a Province of Germany not far off) by the Heir-general of which House it was brought in Marriage to Engelbert Earl of Mark, about the Year 1330, from whom descended Robert Earl of Mark, and Sovereign of Sedan with the Towns annexed, who succeeding his Mother in the Estates of Sauss and Florence, Fiefs holden of the Dukedom of Bouillon, and eagerly affecting to unite the Estates together, (as they had been anciently) purchased the Town and Title of Duke of Bouillon of Eberhard Earl of Mark his Brother, Bishop and Cardinal of Liege, and consequently Duke of Bouillon also. Proud of his Honour, and being somewhat too stiff in maintaining the Rights of his new Dukedom against a Sentence passed in the Imperial Chamber, in a Suit there depending betwixt two of his Vassals, he took up Arms against the Empire, with far more Courage than Discretion. For being in the course of that War worsted by Charles V. (for whom he was too weak an Enemy) the Town of Bouillon, being taken by the conquering Emperor, was afterwards restored to the Bishops; and nothing but the Title of Dukes of Bouillon left to the Princes of Sedan. And that he might be able to hold Sedan, this Robert was fain to return again to the Protection of the French, (as his Ancestors from the time of Charles VIII. had done before, and died anno 1535, leaving his Titles and Estate unto Robert his Son, one of the Marshals of France, whose Grandson, called also Robert, being a dear Friend and Companion of Henry of Bourbon King of Navarre, and afterwards of France also, dying without Issue at Geneva, anno 1588, committed to him the disposal of his Estates, and of the Lady Charlotte his only Sister. And he so well discharged his Trust, that (having settled his own Affairs) he gave the Lady in Marriage to Henry de la Tour, Viscount of Turenne, in France, (one who had done him very good service in the course of his long War against the Leaguers) and with her the possession of Sedan, and the Title of Bouillon; whose Posterity do still enjoy it. The whole Succession of these Princes we shall find in Bouillon, of which more anon.

But to return again unto the Dutchy of Luxemburg, it was at first a part of the great Earldom of Ardenne, dismembred from it in the time of the Emperor Orto the first, by Sigefride the Son of Ricinus Prince thereof, who, in the division of that Estate amongst his Brethren, had this for his Portion, with the Title of Earl. Of his Successors there is little to be found upon good Record in a constant order of Succession, until the time of Henry I. Father of Henry II. Emperor of Germany, and they of a Royal Progeny of Kings and Princes; two of the which are most considerable, tho' all of them of eminent quality in their several times, viz. 1. Henry, elected and crowned Emperor by the name of Henry VII. said to be poisoned by a Friar in the holy Chalice, to prevent some Designs he had against the Pope, in asserting the Imperial Power in Italy. 2. John, the Son of this Henry, chosen King of Bohemia, in regard of his Marriage with Elizabeth the Daughter of Winceflaus King thereof, the possession of which Realm he left unto his Posterity, advanced unto a Dukedom by Charles IV. the eldest Son of this John, in the Person of Winceflaus his younger Brother. What else concerns it we shall find in this following Catalogue of

The Earls and Dukes of LUXEMBURG.

1. Sigefride, the Son of Ricinus, Prince of Ardenne, the first Earl of Luxemburg.
2. Gilbert, the Father of Ogine, Wife of Baldwin the Fourth of Flanders; but whose Son I find not.
3. Godfrey, Earl of Namur, was also Earl of Luxemburg by the right of Marriage, Father of Agnes the Wife of Simon the second Duke of Lorrain.

4. Conrade, perhaps the Son of Godfrey by the Daughter of Luxemburg, Father of Catharine, Wife of Matthew the second, Duke of Lorrain.
5. Henry Earl of Luxemburg, slain in the Quarrel of Rainold Earl of Geldres, contending with John Duke of Brabant for the Dutchy of Limbourg.
6. Henry II. Son of Henry I. by means of his Brother Baldwin, Elector of Triers, was chosen Emperor of the Germans, the seventh of that name, anno 1308, first crowned at Aken, and afterwards at Rome, one of the last Emperors that meddled in the Affairs of Italy.
- 1313 7. John, Son of Henry II. Earl of Luxemburg, married Elizabeth, Daughter of Winceflaus the elder, King of Bohemia; upon which he was upon that Marriage elected and crowned King, anno 1311. in the Life of his Father; slain by the English in the Battle of Cressy, anno 1346.
- 1346 8. Winceflaus, the younger Son of John, created Duke of Luxemburg by his elder Brother Charles IV. Emperor and King of Bohemia.
- 1383 9. Winceflaus II. eldest Son of the said Charles IV. Emperor and King of Bohemia also, succeeded his Uncle in the Dukedom.
- 1419 10. Sigismund, Brother of Winceflaus, succeeded Winceflaus in all his Estates; to which he added the Crown of Hungary, by the Marriage of Mary, Daughter of King Lewis I.
11. Elizabeth, Daughter of John Duke of Goritz, (a Town of Lusatia) the Brother of Sigismund, by the gift of Sigismund her Uncle, being then alive, the better to fit her for the Bed of Anthony of Bourgogn, Duke of Brabant, after whose decease she married John III. Earl of Hainault, Holland, &c. But having no Issue by either of them, she sold her Interest in this Dukedom to Duke Philip the Good.
12. Philip the Good succeeded on the Sale aforesaid made by the said Elizabeth, in pursuance of the Contract and Agreement made at her first Marriage, for settling this Estate in the House of Burgundy. Of whom, and his Successors in these Belgick Provinces, we shall speak hereafter.

The Arms are B. six Barrulets A. supporting a Lion G. crowned and armed Or.

7. L. I M B O U R G.

THE greatest of the Estates of Belgium for extent of Territory, at the time of their incorporating in the House of Burgundy, was that of Brabant, comprehending five of the 19 Provinces; that is to say, the Dukedom of Limbourg and Brabant, the Marquitate of the Holy Empire, and the Seignoury of Mechlin, with the Sovereignty of Liege or Luxekland.

L. I M B O U R G hath on the East the Dukedom of Gulick, or Juliers, in High Germany, on the West the Bishoprick of Liege, on the North Brabant, and on the South the Dukedom of Luxemburg. The Soil is fruitful of all necessary Commodities, excepting Wines, the want whereof is recompensed with most excellent Wheat, great store of Fewel, and plenty of the best Iron Mines in all these Countries: all which Commodities it hath of so great excellency in their several kinds, that it is said of them proverbially, That their Bread is better than Bread, their Fire hotter than Fire, and their Iron harder than Iron. It is also well stored with Medicinal Simples, and enriched with a Mine of Copperas, (by Pliny called Lapis aerofus, lib. 34. c. 10.) which being incorporated with Brass makes Lattin, and encreaseth the Brass by one third part. Lapis arosus multum aris habet, & ex eo fusio fit as, as that Author hath it.

Brass

It is one of the least of the Belgick Provinces, containing in it but 125 Villages, and no more than five walled Towns or Cities: viz. 1. Limbourg, which gives name to the whole Estate, pleasantly seated on a Hill amongst shady Woods, under which runneth the River Wesdo; which, having watered the whole Country, emptieth it self into the Maes; well built, and fortified with a very strong Castle, mounted upon a steep precipice, of no easie access. This City was taken by the Hollanders in 1632, after which it was recovered by the Spaniards, from whom it was taken by the French in 1675, dismantled in 1677, and restored to the Spaniards again in 1678. 2. Valkenburg, called by the French Fauquemont, a reasonable fair Town, with a large Territory, two Dutch miles from Maestricht; conquered from Reynold, Lord hereof, by John the third, Duke of Brabant. Now under the Hollanders. 3. Dalem, a little Town with a Castle, the Territory thereof extending beyond the Maes, conquered by Henry Duke of Brabant, of that name the second. 4. Rhode le Duc, a little old Town with as old a Castle, half a League from Valkenburg. 5. Carpen, situate between Gulick and Collen, beautified with a Collegiate Church and a strong Castle, in which there is a Governor with a good Garrison for defence of the place. Each of these Towns hath Jurisdiction on the parts adjoining, but with Appeal unto the Chancery at Brabant.

The ancient Inhabitants of this Tract, and the Bishoprick of Liege adjoining, were the Eburones. When it was first made an Earldom, I am yet to seek. Most probable it is, that lying within the Verge of the great Forest of Ardenne, it was at first a member of that Earldom also, dismembred from it for the Portion of some younger Son, as Luxemburg and Namur were, or seiz'd on by some strong Pretender, (as Gulick was) when Godfrey and Baldwin, Dukes of Lorraine, and the direct Heirs of the House of Ardenne, were absent in the Wars of the Holy Land. But whensoever, and by whomsoever it was made an Earldom, certain it is, that of an Earldom it was made a Dukedom by the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa, anno 1172. Henry, one of the Dukes hereof, married his Daughter Margaret to Godfrey the third, Duke of Brabant, which gave that House some colour to pretend unto it; backed with a better Title on the death of another Henry, the last Duke of Limbourg, whose next Heir, Adolph, sold it to John, Duke of Brabant; pretending to it in the right of the former Marriage, anno 1293. But Reynold Earl of Cieldres, thinking himself to have a better Title than Adolph, in right of Ermingrade his Wife, the Daughter of Herman, a late Duke hereof, put in his plea, and challeng'd it by force of Arms: but being vanquished and taken Prisoner by the said Duke John in the Battel of Worancan, was fain, for his Release, to release all his Claim and Title to the Dukedom of Limbourg, after that quietly enjoy'd by the Dukes of Brabant, till they fell both together to the House of Burgundy.

The Arms hereof are Argent, a Lion Barrie of ten pieces, Or and Gules.

8. LUYCK-LAND, or, the Bishoprick of LIEGE.

Westward of Limbourg, but a far mightier Estate than it, lieth LUYCK-LAND, as the Dutch, or the Bishoprick of LIEGE, Leodensis, as the Latin and French Writers call it; anciently under the Protection of the Dukes of Brabant, and afterwards of the Princes of the House of Burgundy, as Lords of that Country. By some it is accompted of and described as a part of Germany; but for the reasons before-mentioned, I shall place it here. It is environed on all sides with the Belgick Provinces, that is to say, with the Dukedom of Limbourg and the Earldom of Namur on the East, with Brabant on the North and West, on the South with Luxemburg.

The Air hereof is very whollom, and the Earth as fruitful, abounding with all kind of Grain and Fruits with some store of Wine; and as for Flesh, Fish, Fowl and Venison, it hath very great plenty, and that too of an excellent taste: less fertile it is in such parts hereof as lie towards Luxemburg, in which it is most sweetened with Hills, and over-spread with shady Woods, remainders of the great Forest of Ardenne, within which it stood. But the chief Riches of this Country is under Ground, consisting in Mines of Lead and Iron, and some few of Gold; Quarries of Alabaster, mingled with all sorts of Marble; rich veins of Brimstone, and unexhaustible Pits of Coals; which last it hath in such abundance, that there is digged within the compass of one League of the City of Liege, not only sufficient for that great City, but so much over-plus, as being sold at mean prices about the Country, amounts unto 100000 Ducats of yearly value. The Coal much sweeter than elsewhere, and of nature contrary to all other Coal, in that it is kindled with Water, and quenched with Oil, and the strong favour of it taken off by casting Salt on it.

The whole Country containeth 24 walled Towns, and 1800 Villages. The principal of which are, 1. Liege, or Luyck, (in Latin, Leodium) situate in a pleasant Valley environ'd with Hills, the Meuse entering it in two branches, accompanied with four lesser Riverets, which make in it many delightful Islands. The compass of it is about four Miles; the ordinary Buildings very fair, all built of Stone; the Bishop's Palace a magnificent and sumptuous piece; the Churches in number forty, of which eight are Collegiate, 32 Parochial, all of them for their Riches and Beauty excelling all in any City of France or Germany. Besides these, there are so many Covents, Monasteries and Religious Houses about the Town, that taking all together they amount to an Hundred, all of them of such fair Revenues, so well endowed, and the Religious Persons thereof so great Authority, that it is called the Paradise of Priests, and that deservedly. It is also an University of good Antiquity, wherein were Students at one time 9 Kings Sons, 24 Dukes Sons, 29 Earls Sons, besides Barons and Gentlemen; the greatest part of which were Canons of the Church of S. Lambert, which is the Cathedral of the City. Yet notwithstanding it hath tasted of the malice of Fortune as well as others, being first destroyed by the Danes, then by the Normans, twice taken, and once destroy'd by Charles of Burgundy, anno 1468. Subject it is unto the Bishop as Lord Temporal of it; from whom (being long since made an Imperial City) there lieth an Appeal to the Chamber of Spire. In the Year 1675 the French took this City by Surprise, and perceiving they could not keep it, in 1676 pulled down the Castle of it. In the Year 1616 the Bishop of this Diocess founded here a College for the English Jesuits. 2. Dinant, upon the Meuse, near Namur, of very great Traffick, till destroyed by Charles of Burgundy in the same Year with Liege; hardly recover'd of which Wound; it was again sack'd by King Henry II. of France, anno 1548. 3. Nussey, upon the Meuse or Alou, also, a League from whence is the fair Nursery of Thuren, of the same nature with that of Mons and others spoken of before: the like to which there is near, 4. Bilsen, another Town of this Bishoprick: the Abbelles of each having the privilege of Coining both Gold and Silver. 5. Loorz, by the Dutch called Borcolm, in the County of Diofstein; made a County in the time of Charles the Great, the Title and Possession of Ogier the Dane, so famous in the History of Gallen of France, and others of the old Romances. 6. Franchimont, which gives the Title of a Marquis to the Bishop of Liege. 7. Centron, or St. Truden, a fair Town, so called of the Abbey dedicated to that Saint. 8. Huy or Hoy, so called of a violent River which there runs into the Meuse. 9. Tungres, the City of the Tongri, which together with the Eburones were once the Inhabitants of this Tract; in which are still the Ruines of a Temple consecrated to Mercurius: Anciently it was an Episcopal See, translated hence hence to Maastricht, and at last to Liege; and in those times so great and of such Renown, that Atila the Hun destroyed in it 100 Churches; now but a very small Town, and not worth the mentioning but for these Antiquities. Eight Leagues from hence, amongst the shady Thickets of the Forest of Ardenne, is, 10. that so celebrated Village, and those famous hot Baths frequented from all the places in Europe, called the Spa; not so pleasant as wholesome, nor so wholesome as famous. Yet are they good for sundry Diseases, as the Tertian Ague, the Dropsie, the Stone, the Exulceration of the Lungs, the Sciatica, &c. They are of most virtue in July, because they are then hottest; and to such as tast them they relish much of Iron, from some Iron Mines, it seemeth, thro' which the Waters run, which feed them. These Baths were of great Fame in the time of Pliny, who doth thus describe them: Tongri Civitas fontem habet insignem, plurimis bullis stillantem ferruginei saporis, quod ipsum non nisi in fine potus intelligitur. Purgat hic corpora, febres tertianas discutit calculorumque vitia. So he, lib. 31. c. 2. agreeably to the nature of them at this present time.

This Country (not taking the Dukedom of Bouillon, though now reckoned as a part thereof, into this account) followed the same Fortunes with the rest of Belgica, till the Conquest of it by the French, by whom it was made a part of the Kingdom of Lorraine; in the division of which Kingdom between the Kings of France and Germany, it fell unto the share of the Kings of France, as lying almost wholly on the West or French side of the River Maes, which parted their Possessions in that broken Kingdom. Won from Lotharius the French King (the last but one of the Caroline Race) by Otho the 2d. it was by him made part of the Dukedom of Lorraine, then by him erected, and continued as a part thereof, till sold by Godfrey of Bouillon, Duke of Lorraine, to the Bishops of Liege, (of which more anon) since which time it hath been the Patrimony of those wealthy Prelates. As for the Bishoprick of Liege, it was founded at Tungres, as before was said; after the sackage of which City by Atila, it was removed anno 498, by S. Servatius unto Maastricht. But the People of Maastricht having martyred S. Lambert their Bishop, anno 710, by Hubert, his design'd Successor, with the leave of Pope Constantine, it was translated to this place, and a Cathedral Church here Founded by the name of S. Lambert. His Successors did so well husband their Advantages that they did not only buy the Dukedom of Bouillon, but the City and Territory of Liege, sold unto Spentus and Obertus successively Bishops of it by Godfrey of Bouillon Duke of Lorraine, at his departure hence to the Holy Land: not much increased since that in Lands, though they be in Titles, the Bishop being stiled a Prince of the Empire, Duke of Bouillon, Marquis of Franchimont, Earl of Loerz and Hasbain. Yet are not his ordinary Revenues above 30000 Ducats yearly; his Subjects living very well under him, at easie Rents, and growing for the most part unto good Estates. An argument whereof may be, that when the Liegeois had rebelled against Philip the Good, Duke of Burgundy (under whose Protection they were as Dukes of Brabant) they bought their Peace of him at the Price of 600000 Florens of the Rhene, to be paid in six Years. After which again Rebelling against Charles, the Warlike, (as they have been observed to be the most rebellious City in Europe, excepting Gant) they were able to wage 30000 Men; but not being able to withstand the Forces of their Lord Protector, they fell into that miserable destruction spoken of before. Since that time they have lived with more moderation under the protection of the Princes of the House of Austria: but were counted neutral in Quarrels betwixt the King of Spain and the States Confederate, as formerly between the Spaniards and the French; though many times they suffer in the Contestations.

Southward hereof betwixt it and Luxemburg, lieth the Dukedom of Bouillon; subject unto the Bishops of Liege, but a State distinct, and holden by a different Title.

It taketh up a great part of that Country, which more particularly and specially is called the Forest of Ardenne, with the Woods thereof many places over-shadowed; but not unfurnished of fair Towns and wealthy Villages. The principal of which are, 1. Loni, and, 2. Musson-Court, destroyed by Charles the Fifth, in his War against Robert Earl of Mark and Duke of Bouillon, but, on the Peace ensuing, repair'd again. 3. Susfi, and, 4. Floringe, Fiefs, as before is said, of the Dukedom of Bouillon, but possessed by the Sovereigns of Sedan, since the time that Robert Earl of Mark and Sovereign of Sedan had them in Marriage with Joan his Wife, the right Heir thereof, from whom came Robert Earl of Mark, the first Duke of Bouillon of that Family. The last a pretty Town, till destroyed by the French in the Wars betwixt Henry and Philip the seconds, Kings of France and Spain, since passing in account as a principal Village. 5. Hierk, in the Forest of Ardenne, the cause of the great War betwixt Charles the Fifth and Robert Duke of Bouillon, spoken of before; the Emperor having passed Sentence in behalf of the Embries, who laid claim unto it, and Robert favouring the Pretensions of the House of Chinay. 6. Bouillon, built on the side of a Hill near the River Semois, a fair large City, and beautified with a goodly Castle on the top of the said Hill, and commanding over a large and goodly Territory, so strong, as well by Art as Nature, that before the use of great Ordnance it was held impregnable; much spoiled in the War betwixt Charles the Fifth and Robert of Mark, and tossed from one Master to another in a little time, for being taken from Earl Robert by the power of Charles, it was from him gotten by the French, anno 1552, and finally restored to the Bishop of Liege by the Treaty of Cambray, anno 1559, but without prejudice to the Claim and Title of the Prince of Sedan. So that there are no fewer than three distinct Families which at this time enjoy the Title of Dukes of Bouillon, that is to say, the Bishop of Liege, who hath precedency of Title, and the possession of the City; the House of de la Tour, who hold Floringe, Susfi, and some other pieces; and the Heirs-males of the collateral Line of the House of Mark, who hold Lumaine, Rochfort, and some other places, but of less importance. By the Treaty of Nimwegen in 1679, That the Dukes of Bouillon, who are in possession of it, should peaceably enjoy the same, all Differences being referred to Honorary Arbitrators, and that the Bishops of Liege in the mean time should use no Force against the said Dukes.

This Dukedom, once a part of the great Earldom of Ardenne, in the division of that Estate betwixt the Children of Ricvine, Prince or Earl thereof, fell to the share of Godfrey his eldest Son (Sedan with its appurtenances then belonging to it) with the Title of Earl of Ardenne and Bouillon. By Godfrey his Son it was united to the Dukedom of Lorraine, who succeeded into that Estate after Charles and Otho, and by another Godfrey the first Duke of Lorraine dismembred from it, and given in Dower with his Sister Ida, at her Marriage with Eustace Earl of Boulogne in Picardy. Of these was born the Famous Godfrey, commonly called Godfrey of Bouillon, either because he was here educated, or in regard he was Duke hereof before he did attain to the Dukedom of Lorraine; who, to provide himself of necessities for the Wars of the Holy Land, (so fortunately conveyed and conducted by him) sold first this Dukedom unto Obert, as afterwards the whole Country of Luxemburg to Spentus, Bishops of Liege successively, and their Successors for ever; which though accounted by most Writers for a part of Luxemburg, or of the Bishoprick of Liege, call it which you will, was notwithstanding held by those great Prelates as a State distinct, and governed under them by the Estates of the Country, from whose Sentence there lay no Appeal. The maintenance of which Privileges, on an Appeal made by the Embries unto Charles the Fifth, cost Robert Earl of Mark so dear, who had not long before purchased this Estate of his Brother Eberhard, Bishop and Cardinal of Liege, as was said before. The rest of the Story we have had already in our Description of Sedan: we will now look upon the Princes which have born these Titles.

The Dukes of Bouillon of the House of Ardenne.

1. Godfrey, the eldest Son of Ricune, Prince or Earl of Ardenne, the first Earl of Bouillon, and Husband of Matilda, a Daughter of the Emperor Otho II.
2. Godfrey II. Son of Godfrey I. who in the Year 1004, by adoption of Duke Otho his Cousin, and the power of Henry II. Emperor, succeeded in the Dukedom of Lorraine.
- 1019 3. Gozelo, Brother of Godfrey II. Duke of Lorraine and Bouillon.
- 1044 4. Godfrey III. Son of Gozelo.
5. Eustace, Earl of Boulogne, and Ida his Wife, Daughter of Godfrey III. by him endow'd at her Marriage with the Dukedom of Bouillon.
6. Godfrey IV. surnam'd of Bouillon, Son of Eustace and Ida, on the death of his Uncle Godfrey, succeeded in the Dukedom of Lorraine, anno 1078, and died King of Jerusalem. Going unto the Wars of the Holy Land, he sold this Dukedom to Obert Bishop of Liege and his Successors, anno 1096. who did accordingly enjoy it till the Year 1509 or thereabouts; when it was sold by Everhard of Mark to his Brother Robert, of whose Descent and Successors you may take this view, in the ensuing Catalogue of

The Sovereigns of Sedan, and Dukes of Bouillon of the House of Mark.

1. Engelbert, the ninth Earl of Mark in Germany, by marrying with the Daughter and Heir of Aremberg, added Sedan, Jamais, &c. to the House of Mark.
2. Everhard, second Son of Engelbert by the Heir of Aremberg, Lord of Aremberg, Sedan, &c.
3. John, Son of Everhard, Earl of Mark, Lord of Aremberg, Sedan, &c.
4. Everhard II. Brother of John Earl of Mark, &c.
5. John II. Earl of Mark, Son of Everhard II.
6. Robert of Mark, the second Son of John II. Lord of Sedan, his elder Brother Everhard succeeding in the Estates of Aremberg. He added Florence and Sausi, Towns of the Dukedom of Bouillon, to his other pieces.
7. Robert II. Son of Robert I. Sovereign of Sedan, and Duke of Bouillon, which Dukedom he purchased of Everhard his Brother, Bishop and Cardinal of Liege.
- 1534 8. Robert III. Son of Robert II. one of the Marshals of France, Sovereign of Sedan, and Titulary Duke of Bouillon.
- 1556 9. Henry-Robert, Son of Robert III.
10. Robert-William, Son of Henry-Robert, zealous in the Reformed Religion, and a great Follower of Henry of Vendosme, King of Navarre, to whom, dying at Geneva, anno 1588. he bequeathed the care of his Estates.
11. Charlotte, the Siller of Robert-William, married by Henry of Navarre (then King of the French) to Henry de la Tour, Viscount of Turenne.
12. Henry de la Tour, Viscount of Turenne in France, descended from the Heirs-general of Eustace Earl of Boulogne and Duke of Bouillon, by Marriage of the Lady Charlotte, and the gift of Henry IV. of France, succeeded in the Sovereignty of Sedan and Title of Bouillon; a Protestant, and the Founder of the Schola Illustris in Sedan.

13. Henry de la Tour, Son of Henry by one of the Daughters of William Prince of Orange, succeeded his Father in his Estates, but not in his Religion also, which, to ingratiate himself with the French King, he exchanged for Papistry, made thereupon one of the Marshals of France, and now living anno 1648. He was slain in the Year 1675, near Satzbach in Germany.

9. BRABANT. 10. The MARQUISAT. And 11. MECHLIN.

These I have joined together, though distinct Estates, because they have a long time follow'd the same Fortune, and that the two last do no otherwise differ from the first than the parts from the whole; the Marquisate and Mechlin being now reckoned as parts of Brabant, and included in it.

1. BRABANT is bounded on the East with Luyc-land or the Bishoprick of Liege, on the West with the River Scheld and a part of Flanders, on the North with the Maes, which severeth it from Holland and Gelderland, and on the South with Hainault, Namur, and a part of Luyc-land: so called quasi Brackland, that is to say, a barren Land, as at first it was; or from the old Brutus-pantium, which Cesar placeth in this Tract; but from whether of the two is not determined.

The Air hereof is generally very wholesom and good, and the Soil naturally fruitful, excepting Kempenland, (being the parts thereof lying towards the North) which being barren of it self, is made indifferently fertile by keeping Cattle, Soiling the Ground, and other arts of good Husbandry. The People live in most freedom, and are the best privileged of any in Belgium. A thing for which they are more beholden to the Prince's goodness, than their own great Wits: being noted to be none of the wisest, especially as they grow in age, when most Men learn Wisdom. Brabant, quo magis senescunt, eo magis stultescunt, as Erasmus.

The length hereof, from S. Gertruydenburgh to Gembours, North and South, is 22 Dutch or German miles; from Helmont to Bergen op Zoome, East and West, 20 of the same Miles; the whole compais 80. Within which circuit are contain'd 26 walled Towns and Villages, with Parish-Churches 718; of which the odd 18, called Franks or Market-Towns, enjoy the Privileges of walled Towns or Cities, though unwalled themselves.

Places of most importance in it are, 1. Hertogen Bosch, or the Bosch, as the Dutch Bois le Duc; or Bolduc, as the French; and Sylva Ducis, or Boscum Ducis, as the Latins call it: each name derived according to their several Languages, from a pleasant Wood, belonging to the Dukes of Brabant, where the Town now stands, situate on a little River call'd Dese, some two Leagues from the Maes, near the borders of Gelderland. A large and well-built Town, very strongly fortified, and of great trade for Clothing, here being made yearly in the time of Lewis Guicciardine 20000 Clothes, worth 200000 Crowns to the Clothier or Draper: Made an Episcopal See, anno 1559, the Cathedral, which is fixed in the Church of S. John, being fair and large, and beautified with one of the goodliest Dials in the Christian World. This is the principal Town of Brabant (properly and distinctly so called) comprehending under it the four Countries of Kempenland, Maessland, Peelland, and Ostervick; and was taken by the Confederate States from the King of Spain, after a long and chargeable Siege, anno 1628. 2. Tilmont, on the little River Oer, once chief of Brabant, but long since decayed. 3. Aerschot, on the little River Dennere, which gives the Title of Duke to them of the noble House of Croy, descended from the Kings of Hungary (of which we spake before at large when we were in Picardy) the Dukes hereof (advanced unto that honour by Charles the Fifth) being Men of greatest Revenue and Authority of any in Belgium.

4. Bergen-

4. Bergen-op-Zoom, so call'd from the River Zoom upon which it is situate, about half a League from the influx of it into the Scheld, and not far from the Sea, which gives it a reasonable good Haven. A Town of great strength by nature, but more strongly fortified; famous for being made a Marquissate by Charles the Fifth, anno 1553; more for the notable Resistance which it made to the Marquis Spinola, anno 1622. 5. Breda, upon the River Merck, a Town pleasantly seated, well fortified, and of great Revenue, having under it the Town and Territory of Steenberg, the Franchise of Rosendale, and the Seignoury of Ostcrhout; the Residence, Barony and chief Town of the Princes of Orange, from whom being taken by the Spaniard in the beginning of those Wars, it was again recover'd by some venturous Gentlemen, who hiding themselves in a Boat cover'd over with Turf, were convey'd into the Castle, which they easily master'd, and made the Prince Lord of it again; after retaken by the Spaniard, anno 1625, but now in the possession of its natural Owners, to whom it came by the right of the House of Nassau, by the Marriage of Engelbert the 7th. Earl of that House, with Mary Daughter and Heir of Philip the last Lord hereof, about the Year 1400. This place was made more famous, a Peace being here made between the English and Dutch in the Year 1667, after a bloody War of three Years. 6. Dijst, on the River Denmere, a good Town and invest'd with a goodly Territory, belonging to the Prince of Orange, whose Ancestors of the House of Nassau had it in exchange for some other Lands of the Duke of Cleve; and in right hereof he is Burgrave of the City of Antwerp. 7. Grinbergen, an ancient Barony, with a large Jurisdiction, descendible on the youngest Son only, after the manner of Burg English, as our Lawyers call it. 8. Gertrydenberg, standing on the Douze, not far from the influx of it into the Maes, the farthest Town in the North of Brabant, where it joins to Holland; which makes it a matter of dispute betwixt those Provinces, to which of them it doth belong. A Town of great trade for Fishing, plenty of Salmon and Sturgeon being taken here, but of Shads especially, whereof 18000 are sometimes caught in a day, salted, and sent abroad into Foreign Parts. It acknowledgeth the Prince of Orange for the Lord thereof, as doth also, 9. Grave, a good Town upon the Maes, bought by these Princes of the King of Spain without content of the States, without whose approbation no part of the Domain is to be dismembred. 10. Masstricht, (in Latin Trajectum ad Mosam) so called of a Ferry over the Maes in former times; supplied now with a goodly Stone Bridge in the place thereof. A fair and goodly Town, beautified with two Collegiate Churches, in one of which the Dukes of Brabant were always Canons; subject in part to the Bishop of Liege, and partly to the Duke of Brabant. The Children are subject to that Prince to whom the Mother was subject at the time of the Birth, without relation to the Father according to that Maxime of the Civil Law, Partus sequitur ventrem. And if a Stranger come to live there, he must declare to which of the two he will be subject. Yet is the Duke of Brabant the chief Sovereign of it, he only having the power of Coinage, and of granting Pardon to Offenders: and as a Town of this Dukedom it was besieged and taken by the Confederate States, anno 1632. In the Year 1673 it was taken after a sharp resistance by the French; in 1676 the Hollanders attempted the reduction of it by Force, but that failing, in 1678 they recovered it by the Treaty of *Nimieghe*n, and have since made it much stronger than it was before.

Here is also within the limits of this Dukedom the Town and Seignoury of Ravestein, situate on the Banks of the Maes, held by the Dukes of Cleve of the Duke of Brabant, but no otherwise subject: and on the same River the Town and Country of Horn, a Fief Imperial, beautified with a strong Castle and a goodly Territory, in which is Wiert, the Residence of the Earls of Horn, descended of the ancient House of Montmorency in France.

2. The MARQUISSATE of the EMPIRE, so called because the farthest Bounds and Marches of the German Empire fronting on Flanders, which appertained unto the Sovereignty of the Crown of France, comprehendeth four of the best Towns in Brabant, with very large and spacious Territories adjoining to them: viz. 1. Lovain, on the River Dille, about four English Miles in compass; but in that compass much of the ground is taken up with Vineyards, Gardens, Meadows and pleasant Fields, which make the situation far more delightful than if all built and peopled. It was the Mother Town of Brabant, and sometimes gave the Title of an Earl to the Dukes hereof: afterwards was made an University by Duke John the 4th. anno 1426. wherein are contained about 20 Colleges, such as they be, much privileged, and enriched with Pensions for Publick Readers, by King Philip II. This Prince in the Year 1606 Founded here a College for the English Jesuits. 2. Bruxels, (Bruxella) the Seat of the ancient Dukes of Brabant, and of the Dukes of Burgundy also, after they came to be Lords of those Countries; seated upon the Simme, and other sweet Springs and Riverets, which make it one of the sweetest situations in all Europe, having withal a goodly Channel made by Art from Brussels to the River Dille, and from thence to the Scheld, the charge whereof amounted unto 500000 Crowns. It is of the same compass with Lovain, the Building sumptuous, and the Town very rich, not only in regard that it is the ordinary Seat of the Prince or his Regent, and the Chancery for all Brabant and the Duchy of Limbourg; but in regard of the rich Manufactures of Armour and Cloth of Arras, of Silk, Gold and Silver, which are there industriously pursued. 3. Nivelle, on the borders of Hainault, in a very rich and fruitful Soil, remarkable for the abundance of fine Linen which is therein made, but most of all for a very rich Nunnery (or rather a Nursery) of noble Ladies of the same nature with those of Mons and others before described. 4. Antwerp, situate on a goodly Plain on the River Scheld, above 17 Leagues from the Sea, but furnished with 8 Channels, cut out of the River for the Transport of Commodities, one of the which is capable of 100 great Ships. The private Buildings are very handsome, but the publick sumptuous; the chief whereof were reckoned the Church of Nostre-Dame, the Bursle, the Town-house, and the House of the Eastlings or Eastern Merchants. Well peopled it is, and of so great Trade in former times, that it was held to be the richest Empory of the Christian World; the Commodities here bought and sold amounting to more in one month than those of Venice in two Years. The causes of which sudden growth and encrease of Trading are said to be these. 1. The two Marts holden here every Year, either of them during six Weeks, in which time no Man's Person could be arrested, or his Goods distrained. 2. The King of Portugal having in the Year 1503 diverted the course of Merchandise from Alexandria and Venice to the City of Lisbon, kept here his Factories, and sent hither his Spices and other Indian Commodities: for which cause the Merchants in the Year 1516 forsook Bruges in Flanders, and settled here. And, 3. Many of the Nobility and Gentry, during the long and bloody Wars betwixt France and Spain, forsook their Country-houses and repaired hither: by means whereof Antwerp, in a very little time grew bigger by 3000 Houses than it had been formerly. But as the growth hereof was sudden, so the fall sensible; occasioned through the yoking it with a Cittadel by the Duke of Alva, which made Merchants afraid to resort any longer thither, as a place of little freedom and less security; but chiefly by blocking up the Haven and intercepting the Trade at Sea, by the more powerful Hollanders, which hath removed this great Traffick to Amsterdam and other Towns of their Country. So that now the chief support of it is the Reputation which it hath of being an Imperial City, the place of Receipt for the King's Revenues, and a Bishop's See, Founded here in the Year 1559, which draweth hither some resort of Lawyers and Churchmen.

3. The Seignioury of MECHLIN consisteth only of that City and a small Territory of 9 Villages adjoining to it. The City is seated on both sides of the River Dille, which ebberh and floweth to the Town and a League above it, and runneth through the very midst, maketh in it a number of small Islands, to the great ornament and commodity of it. A goodly Town containing seven Parish Churches, besides the Cathedral, being the See of an Archbishop, founded here in the Year 1559. Strong, in regard it may easily be drown'd on all sides; and of great Wealth, by reason of the many Manufactures of Linnen, great Artillery of Brasses and Iron, Bells, painted Works, and others of like use and ornament. And being situate in a manner in the Centre of Brabant, distant 4 Leagues from Antwerp, Louvain, and Bruxels, it was made by Charles the Warlike (who loved the place) the ordinary Seat of the great Council of State, to which Appeals are made from the other Provinces. But yet it was more beautiful in former times than it is at the present; the City being much defaced by firing 200 Barrels of Powder, anno 1546. and by the Sackage of the Spaniard, by whom it was taken by force, anno 1572. Most memorable at this time for a famous Nunnery, like to that of Nivelle, wherein are sometimes 1600 Nuns, who when they please may leave their Cloister and be married. A Town though in Brabant, yet not of it, but a State distinct: for which cause many Women at the time of their Child-birth use to lay down their Bellies in some Village of Brabant, that their Children may be capable of the Privileges and Immunities of that Country. The principal of the Villages is named Leeft or Heyst, pleasantly seated on an Hill, the residue of the Burroughs lying at the foot thereof. Both Town and Villages were the Patrimony heretofore of the noble Family of the Bertholds; which failing in the person of Gaulter, slain in the Battel of Worancan by John Duke of Brabant, it fell the one half to the Bishop of Liege, who sold his moyety to John the 2d. Duke of Brabant; the other to the Earl of Geldres, who in the year 1333 sold his part unto Lewis of Malain, Earl of Flanders. But he sold nothing but the Title; John the 3d. Duke of Brabant having seized upon it, and added it to his Estate: the occasion of some quarrel between those Princes, composed by the Marriage of Lewis with the Heir of Brabant.

But to return again unto Brabant it self, the ancient Inhabitants hereof were the Aduatici and some part of the Tongri: it was accompted by the Romans a part of the Province of Germania Secunda, and by the French a Province of the Kingdom of East-France or Austrasia; the Southern parts thereof towards Hainault under the Governance and Command of the Earls of Ardenne; the Northern parts lying towards the Sea, and terribly infested with the Depredation of the Danes and Normans, committed to the care of some principal Officers, whom they called Lords Wardens of the Marches. Theodebert Son of Theodorick the first King of Austrasia, accompanied with Utilo a Boiarian Prince, having repulled these common Robbers, obtained for Utilo, of his Father, the command of those Countries, and possession of a great part of them also, by the Title of Lord Marquis of Antwerp: the fourth from whom, called Arnulph, was the first Mayor of the Palace (of this House) to the Kings of France, made as it were hereditary unto his Successors. By Dagobert the first, sole King of the French, that part of this Country which was under the Earls of Ardenne being taken from them, the whole Estate was conferred on Ansegisus, the Son of Arnulph, with the Title of Duke of Brabant. The Actions and Archievements of so many of them as were Mayors of the Palace we have already seen when we were in France. The whole Succession follows here in the ensuing Catalogue of

The Marquesses of Antwerp and Dukes of BRABANT of the German or Boiarian Race.

1. Utilo, Son of Theodore, the first Duke and Nephew of Aldiagerius, the last King of the Boiarians.
2. Hugopert, Son of Utilo.
- 563 3. Asopert, the Son of Hugopert, and Husband of Plythilda, Daughter of Clotaire the first of France.
- 579 4. Arnoldus, the Son of Asopert.
- 601 5. Arnulph, Son of Arnoldus, the first Mayor of the Palace of this Family.
- 641 6. Ansegisus, Son of Arnulphus, Marquis of Antwerp, and Mayor of the Palace by Dagobert the first made Duke of Brabant.
- 679 7. Pepin, surnamed the Fat, Son of Ansegisus, Successor to his Father in his Honours, Offices and Estates, and was herein succeeded by
- 714 8. Charles the bafe Son of Pepin, for his valiant Acts surnamed Martel, there being no lawful Issue of his Father living.
- 741 9. Pepin II. surnamed the Short, Son of Charles Martel, having managed the Affairs of France from the death of his Father for the space of ten Years, usurped the Kingdom, and was solemnly crowned King at Soissons by Boniface Archbishop of Mentz, on May-day, anno 751.

The Dukedom of Brabant returning by this means to the Crown of France, continu'd a Province of that Kingdom, till the division of the French Empire among the Sons and Nephews of Lewis the Godly; when it was made a Member of the Kingdom of Lorrain. Not long before the fatal period of that Kingdom, having been many years before divided by the River Meuse betwixt the Emperors of Germany and the Kings of France, (each taking to themselves the Title of Kings of Lorrain) it was by Lotharius the third of France, in whose share it lay, conferred on Charles his younger Brother, together with the Title of the Dukes of Brabant. But indeed this Donation proved of little worth, the greatest part thereof, together with the rest of that part of the Kingdom of Lorrain, which of right belonged unto the French, being conquered by the Emperor Otho the 2d. and by him added to the Empire. And yet this also fell out in fine to the profit of Charles, who being Cousin-german to this Otho the 2d. by the Lady Gerburg, (Sister of Otho the first, and Wife of Lewis surnamed Transmarine, King of France, the Father of Charles) was by him invell'd into the great Dukedom of Lorrain, that Dukedom in the full latitude and extent thereof containing the modern Dukedoms of Lorrain, Gulick and Brabant, with the Lands of Luyck, wath part of the Lands of Triers and Colen. Brabant at that time had the name of Bass (or Low) Lorrain, and as in memory thereof, there is a Court for criminal and civil Causes held at Gennap (one of the Franks or Market-Towns of Brabant) called La Cour de Lorrain to this Day: an Estate first erected, as before is said, by the Emperor Otho II. who giving it to the said Charles of France, reserved out of it as a Dower for his said Aunt Gerburg, the Towns and Territories of Louvain, Bruxels, Nivelle and Antwerp, lying on the Marches of his Dominions towards France, which (with reference perhaps to the old Marquisate of Antwerp) he honour'd with the Title of Marquisate of the holy Empire, anno 981. Gerburg, the Sister, and Heir of Otho the Son of Charles abovementioned being put besides her hopes of that fair Inheritance by her Brother Otho (who gave it to Geofrey of Ardenne) succeeded her Grandmother, the first Gerburg, in the Towns and Territories of Louvain, Nivelle and Bruxels, which she conveyed in Marriage to Lambert, one of the Sons of Reyner of Hainault, with the Title of Earl of Louvain. Henry his Son having made himself Master of Antwerp also, was by that means possessed of the whole Marquisate, but still retain'd the Title of Earl of Louvain. Geofrey the 6th Earl, having enlarg'd the the bounds of his Dominions by the Conquest of the rest of the Country, Godfrey and Baldwin, Dukes of Lorraine, being then absent in the Wars of the Holy Land, was by the Emperor Henry the 5th (whose Sister he married) created the first Duke of Brabant. John, the first Duke of that name, added hereunto the Duchy of Limbourg; and John the 3d, the Seigniorie of Malins or Mechlin. How it became united to the House of Burgundy is to be seen in the ensuing Catalogue of

The Earls of LOVAIN and Dukes of BRABANT of the Race of Charlemagne.

- 1004 1. Lambert, one of the Sons of Regnier Earl of Hainault, made the first Earl of Lovain, in Right of Gerburg.
- 1015 2. Henry the Son of Lambert, who took Antwerp, making it the head City of the Marquisate of the Holy Empire.
- 1046 3. Lambert II. Son of Henry.
- 1054 4. Henry II. Son of Lambert the second.
- 1068 5. Henry III. Son of Henry the second.
6. Henry IV. Son of Henry the third.
- 1096 7. Godfrey, surnamed Barbatus; Brother of Henry the Fourth, in Right of his descent from Charles Duke of Lorraine challenged the Country, and recovered it from the House of Ardenne; and finally by the Emperor Henry the fifth was created the first Duke of Brabant, anno 1108. Father of Adelize, the second Wife of our Henry the first, and of Josceline de Lovain, the Progenitor of the (late) Earl of Northumberland.
- 1140 8. Godfrey or Geofrey II. Son of Godfrey.
- 1143 9. Godfrey or Geofrey III. Son of Godfrey the 2d.
- 1183 10. Henry V. Son of Godfrey the third.
- 1230 11. Henry VI. surnamed the Good, Son of Henry the fifth.
- 1247 12. Henry VII. surnamed the Magnanimous, by whole Marriage with Sophia, Daughter of Lewis the sixth, Lantgrave of Thuringia, the Lantgravedom of Hassia came into this House invested in it the Person of Henry his Son by the said Sophia.
- 1260 13. John, Son of Henry the seventh, took in the Dukedom of Limbourg, and destroyed the potent Family of the Bertholds: his younger Brother Henry, by another Venter, succeeding in Hassia.
14. John II. Son of John the first, bought of the Bishop of Liege the moyety or one half of Mechlin.
- 1312 15. John III, Son of John the second, added the whole Estate of Mechlin to the Dukedom of Brabant.
- 1355 16. Joan the eldest Daughter of John the third, married to Winceslaus the first Duke of Luxemburg, but died without Issue.
- 1406 17. Anthony of Bargogn, Son of Philip the Hardy and the Lady Margaret his Wife, Daughter of Lewis de Malain, Earl of Flanders, and of Margaret the Sister and Heir of Joan, after the death of the said Winceslaus and Joan his Wife, succeeded in the Dukedom of Brabant, his elder Brother John giving way unto it, at the request of their great Aunt Joan, the Proprietary of it.
- 1415 18. John IV. Son of Anthony by his first Wife Joan, Daughter of Waleran, Earl of Saint Paul.
- 1426 19. Philip, the second Son of Anthony, and Brother of John the Fourth.
- 1430 20. Philip II. called the Good, Duke of Burgundy, Son and Heir of John Duke of Burgundy, elder Brother of Anthony, on the death of his two Cousin-germans, John and Philip, succeeded in the Dukedom of Brabant, as the direct Heir of the Lady Margaret, Wife to Lewis de Malain, and Daughter of John the third, the last Duke of Brabant, of the House of Lovain. Of whose Successors more in another place.

The Arms hereof are Sable, a Lion Or.

12. HOLLAND. 13. ZELAND. 14. WEST-FRIEZLAND.

HAVING thus spoken of those Provinces, which still continue in subjection to the King of Spain (except some few Towns in Flanders and Brabant, before mentioned,) let us next look on those which have withdrawn their Obedience from him; beginning first with Holland and its Appendices, as of more power and consideration than all the rest. Which though distinct Provinces, and acting in their several Capacities at the present time, yet having been always under the Command of the same Princes they must be joined together in the Story of them, but shall be severally handled as to the Chorography.

HOLLAND hath on the East the Zuider-See, Utrecht and some part of Gelderland, on the West and North the German Ocean, on the South the Islands of Zeland and some part of Brabant. So called, as some think, but with little reason, quasi Holt-land, that is to say, a woody Country; as others, quasi Hollow-land, from the Bogs and Marshes and unbound footing on the same; and some will have it called so, quasi Hay-land, from the great quantity of Hay. But the learned Junius, not relishing any of the three, conceives that both his Country and the Isles of Zeland, being planted by some Colonies of Danes and Normans (at the time of the Irruption of those Northern Nations) were called thus with reference to Seland and Oeland, two Islands of the Baltick Sea, out of which they came. The Reader hath good choice, and may please himself.

The Country for the most part lyeth very low, inso-much that they are fain to fence it with Banks and Ramparts to keep out the Sea, and to restrain the Rivers within their bounds; so that in many places one may see the Sea far above the Land, and yet repulled with those Banks: and it is withal so Fenny and full of Marshes, that they are forced to trench it with innumerable Dikes and Channels, to make it firm Land, and fit for dwelling; yet not so firm to bear either Trees or much Grain. But such is the Industry of the People and Trade they drive, that having little or no Corn of their own growth, they do provide themselves elsewhere; not only sufficient for their own spending, but wherewith to supply their Neighbours: having no Timber of their own, they spend more Timber in building Ships and fencing their Water-courses than any Country in the World: having no Wine, they drink more than the People of the Country where it groweth naturally: and finally, having neither Flax nor Wooll, they make more Cloth of both sorts than all the Countries in the World, except France and England.

The present Inhabitants are generally given to Seafaring Lives, so that it is thought that in Holland, Zeland and West-Friesland, there are 2500 Ships of War and Burthen. The Women are for the most part laborious in making Stuffs: Nay, you will hardly see a Child of four Years of age that is not kept to work, and made to earn its own living; to the great commendation of their Government. The greatest of their natural Commodities is Butter and Cheese; of which, besides that infinite plenty which they spend in their own Houses, and amongst their Garrisons and Ships, they sell as much unto other Countries as comes to 100000 Crowns per annum. By which means, and by the greatness of their Fish-trade, spoken of before, they are grown so wealthy on the Land, and so powerful at Sea, that as Flanders heretofore was taken for all the Netherlands, so now Holland is taken generally for all the Provinces confederated in a League against the Spaniards.

The

The whole Compass of it is no more than 180 Miles, no part thereof being distant from the Sea above three hours Journey: and yet, within that narrow Circuit, there are contained no fewer than 23 walled Towns and 400 Villages; some situate in North, and others in South-Holland, as it stands divided. In South-Holland (being that part hereof that lieth next to Zeland, and the middle Chancel of the Rhene, passing from Utrecht unto Leyden) the principal Towns are, 1. Dort, in Latin Dordrechtum, formerly the Staple for Rhenish Wines; a large, rich, and well-peopled Town; anciently joined to the firm Land, but in the year 1421 rent from it by the violence of the Sea, and made an Island; of great command upon the Traffick of the Maes and the Wael, upon whose Confluence it stands, but of most note in these latter times for an Assembly of Divines out of divers Countries following Calvin's Doctrine, for Condemnation of the Lutheran or Arminian Tenets, concerning Universal Grace and Predestination, Anno 1618. 2. Gorchum, situate on the Wael, where it meeteth with the Linge; a Town of great Trade and Riches, by reason of a daily Market of Cheese and Butter brought hither in very great quantity; beautified anciently with a strong Castle and a fair Church, from the Steeple whereof one may behold 22 walled Towns, besides an infinite number of Villages. The Country is round about it called by that People Van Arckel, or the Land of Hercules, from an opinion, that Hercules the German did there appoint his Camp, or rather from some Temple dedicated to him, in the place whereof the Lords of this Tract, who from hence took the name of Arckel, (Arcueli they are called in our Latin Writers) founded a Church unto the Honour of the Virgin Mary, in the time of Thierre the 2d Earl of Holland, by whom they were first settled in this Country. And here they flourish'd as Lords of Gorchum, Leerdam, and the parts adjoining, till the Year 1416; when falling to John Lord of Egmond, by Mary his Wife, Daughter of John of Arckelland, the last Lord hereof, and Mother of Arnold of Egmond, Duke of Geldres, it was by him sold to William the 6th, Earl of Holland, and so again united unto that Estate. 3. Rotterdam, seated on a Dike or Chancel called the Rotter; not far from which at a place named Rempen the Leck, one of the three main branches of the Rhene, falleth into the Maes: a strong fair and well-traded Port: the birth-place of the learned Erasmus. 4. Schoon-hoven, situate on the Leck, a fair Town, having a commodious Haven. 5. Goude, one of the six principal Towns of Holland, rich and well fortified, seated on the River called Yssel, which rising about Ysselstein, spoken of anon, falleth into the Leck at a place called Ysselmond, and therefore different from the branch of the Rhene so called, which giveth name to Over-Yssel. On the same River also stand, 6. Oudwater, and 7. Ysselstein; this last belonging properly to the Prince of Orange; the first of great Trade for making Cables and Cords for Shipping. 8. Leyden, or Lugdunum Batavorum, an University, founded Anno 1564. The Town consisteth of 41 Islands, to which they pass partly by Boats, partly by Bridges, whereof there are 144, and of them 104 builded with Stone. Here is in this Town a Castle, said to have been built by Hengist the Saxon at his return out of England. And not far off stood the famous Nunnery of Rainsburg, of the same nature with those of Monts and Nivelle before described; so liberally endowed, that 2000 Persons did there daily receive Relief. 9. Vianen, on the Leck, a Seignioury distinct from Holland, pertaining anciently to the Lords of Brederode: and so was also, 10. Huesden, a good old Town, once beautified with a fair Castle, and a goodly Territory, but belonging to the Earls of Cleve, of which House it had Lords of its own, as acknowledging no subjection to the Earls of Holland, from the Year 850, or thereabouts, to the Year 1290, at which time Theodorick the 9th of Cleve at a merry meeting transferred the Sovereignty thereof to Florence Earl of Holland, of that name the fifth. Finally, having continued in the possession of 20 Lords of that Family, on the expiration of that Line in the Person of John the 9th dying without Issue, Anno 1334, it was made a Member of this Earldom (after some sharp Disputes with the Dukes of Brabant, claiming it by a Resignation of the last Lord John) by William of Bavaria, Earl of Holland and Hainault, Anno 1361, or thereabouts. 11. Leerdam, upon the River Linge, which, together with Ysselstein before mentioned, fell unto Philip Prince of Orange, in right of his descent from the Earls of Bueren. 12. Delf, a Town of great Trade for Cloathing, but more by reason of the Cloth of England brought thither in great quantities by the English Merchants, than for any great store of their making; by reason of the concourse which that Trade brings with it, rich, large and well built, beautified with spacious Streets and goodly Churches; the birth-place of that monstrous Heretick David George, who called himself King, and Christ immortal, as is before said.

In that part thereof which is called North-Holland, lying betwixt the middle Chancel of the Rhene and the Zuider-See: The Towns or Cities of most importance are, 1. Alkmaer, encompassed with deep Fens and Marshes; a rich Town, in regard of the great plenty of Butter and Cheese which is made about it, more than in any place of Holland, and famous for the defeat which the Duke of Alva received before it. For he in the beginning of the Low-Country Troubles, having with the loss of 20000 of his own Men forced Harlem in the Year 1573, laid his Siege round about this Town. Had he left any way for the Soldiers to have fled thence, the Town had been abandon'd: but having environ'd them round, he put them to such a resolution, or desperation (choose you whither) that manfully they resisted three of his Assaults, and in the end made him depart with great loss, as well of his Soldiers, as his Reputation. 2. Amsterdam, a very fair Haven-Town, where divers times at one tide 1000 Ships of all sorts have been seen to go out and in. So truly said a modern Poet.

Quod Tagus atque Hermus vehit, & Pactolus, in unum Vere hunc congestum dixeris esse locum.

What Tagus, Hermus, and Pactolus bear,

One would conjecture to be heap'd up here.

The people thereby are so rich, that if a Fleet of 300 Sail should come into the Port fraught with all kind of Commodities, in five or six days they would be ready to buy all the Lading. Situate it is on the Gulf called the Tie, and the Dike or Chancel called Amstel, whence it hath the name of Amsterdam, in Latin, Amstelodanum; built upon Piles like Venice, and resembling it in so many points, that it may justly be called the Northern Venice. It was first fortified with Towers and Ramparts by Giselbert of Amstel, about 300 Years ago; but being burnt, through the envy of its Neighbours, it began to be walled, Anno 1482. Grown to this Wealth since the diverting of the Trade from Antwerp hither, and for that cause inhabited by Men of all Nations and of all Religions, and those not only tolerated and connived at in private, but openly and freely exercised without any dislike. A greater Confusion (in my mind) than that of Babel; this being of Religions, that of Languages only. 3. Harlem, on the Lake called Harlemmeer, the greatest Town of all Holland, and the second for Dignity; well built, and very pleasantly situated amongst many goodly Meadows, near a delightful Forest, and round about environed with wealthy Villages; famous for the invention of Printing, invented here, but perfected at Mentz in Higher Germany; the first Book which was ever printed being Tully's Offices. It was made a Bishop's See under the Archbishop of Utrecht by Pope Paul IV. in 1559, and taken and sacked by the Spaniards in 1573, with the loss of 20000 of their Men. 4. Naerden, on the Zuider-See, fortified with a strong Castle, held of the Earls of Holland by the Dukes of Brunswick, to whom it anciently belonged. 5. Enchuisen, on the very point of the Gulf of Zuider-See, opposite to Friesland, from which not distant two Leagues. A Town of great consequence to the the Prince of Orange in the first revolting of these Countries from the King of Spain. For siding with him in that War, and standing conveniently to obstruct the Passages by Sea unto Amsterdam, it compelled that City in short time, by stopping all supplies of Victuals and other Necessaries, to yield it self unto the Prince. 6. Horn, on the same Gulf also, a rich Town, with a very good Haven, and of so great strength by reason of the multitude of Dikes and Channells which are round about it, that it seems impregnable. 7. Edam, upon the same Gulf (of Zuider-See) remarkable for the great number of Ships which are built yearly in it, and an incredible number of the best Holland Cheeses made in the Country round about it. 8. Medemblick, on the Ocean, seated in the best Country of Holland for the feeding of Cattel; unwall'd, but enjoying all the Privileges which a walled Town hath, and fortified with a right strong Castle.

The chief of the Holland Villages is the Hague, or Graven Hague, in Latin Haga Comitum, because formerly the Court and residence of the Earls of Holland, who had here a very large and beautiful Palace, founded by Earl William, King of the Romans, and therein a choice and excellent Library gathered together by John Huire, a Canon Regular of this place, and by him given to Charles the Fifth. In former times the Residence of the Council for the Province of Holland; as it is now of the Commissioners or Delegates of the Confederate Provinces called by the name of the States General. It is now much increased in Buildings of what it was; and yet so great in the time of Lewis Guicciardine, that it then contained 2000 Households. The Inhabitants will not wall it, as desiring to have it rather accounted the chief Village in Europe, than the second City. The other Villages of note, 2. Egmond, 3. Brederode, 4. Wassenaar, which anciently gave names to three Noble Families; of which none so illustrious and Renowned as that of Egmond, descended lineally from Radbold, Son of Adgillis the King of the Frisons, the first Lord of Egmond, who died anno 791. Advanced by Marriages to the Dukedom of Gelderland, the Seigniouries of Yffelsstein and Bueren. And finally they were made Earls of Egmond by Maximilian the Emperor, anno 1592. Both this House and that of Wassenaar being now extinct, there is none left but that of Brederode for ought I can learn. Near to the last stood the famous Fortrels called Arx Britannica, built by Caligula in memory of his great Battel upon this Shore. For making shew of a Voyage into Britain, to subdue that Island, he boarded his Galley, embattail his Soldiers, caused the Trumpets to sound, gave them the Signal, and then commanded them to gather Cockles. Which Tower or Fortrels was at the Fall of the Roman Empire overwhelmed by the Sea; the Ruins whereof at a dead low Water are still to be seen.

Besides these places on the firm Land or Continent, there are some Islands which pertain to the State of Holland, called by the general name of Voorn, because situate directly against Holland: Voorn, signifying as much as before, or in old English, bevoerne; but known by their distinct and more proper names of Somersdike. 2. Gauwede, 3. Piersehill, so called of their principal Towns, and, 4. Voorn specially so named, the chief of them all, being of a Fat and Fruitful Soil, and plentiful of most sorts of Grain. The principal Towns whereof are, 1. Briel, (which we call the Brill) a strong Town, and the first that revolted against the Spaniard, anno 1572. Cautionary to the English with the Town of Flushing; chosen by them in regard of the great command it hath upon the Passage to Gertruydenberg and the rest of Brabant, as also to Delf, Dort, and Rotterdam, the greatest Towns of Trade in the South of Holland. 2. Geruliet, a small Town, but having a Jurisdiction over many Villages. There are also on the North side of Holland the Isles of Wierogen and Texel; of which little memorable, but that the last is furnished with a safe and capacious Bay for receipt of Shipping.

One special accident concerning Holland I cannot over-pass in silence, namely, how Margaret Countess of Henzenberg, and Sister to William King of the Romans, being of the age of 42 Years, was delivered at one birth of 365 Children, the one half Males, the other Females, the odd one an Hermaphrodite; all christened at the Church of Loofduynen, not far from the Hague, by the names of John and Elizabeth, in two Basins still to be seen in the said Church, by Guido the Suffragan of Utrecht; all which immediately after died; and with them the Mother.

The Arms of Holland of it self, as a State distinct, are Or, a Lion Gules.

ZELAND consisteth of seven Islands, the remainder of 18, the rest whereof the Sea hath swallowed, and in them 300 inhabited Towns. It is severed from Flanders with the left Branch or Arm of the Scheld, which they call Honte, and on the East from Brabant with the right Branch of the said River, which still keeps his name; on the North from Holland with the Gulf called the Vlack, and on the West with the main Ocean from the Kingdom of England. So called as some say, quasi Sea and Land; but as Junius rather thinks, from Seland, an Island of Denmark, as before was noted.

The Country is generally more Fruitful than the neighbouring Brabant, producing great quantity of excellent Corn, plenty of Coriander, and abundance of Madder used in Dying; the Soil also is very rich in Pasture, but low and marshy: which makes the Air to very unhealthy: and the whole destitute both of Fresh Water and Wood; the want of which last is supplied with Coal out of England and Scotland, or by Turf digged among themselves but very sparingly, for fear of weakening the Sea Banks.

The whole containeth 8 Towns, and 100 Villages. The Islands which remain are commonly divided into the Western and Eastern, according as they lie with reference to the River Scheld. The Western Islands are four in number: That is to say,

1. WALCHEREN, (Valachria in Latin) lying to the North of Schuys in Flanders, the richest and most populous of all this Province, in compass 10 Dutch, or 40 Italian Miles. The principal Towns of which are, 1. Middleburg, seated on a Creek of the Sea, well walled and fortified, the Streets spacious, the Houses and Churches well built, inhabited by wealthy Merchants, and industrious Traders, and of late time, (since the removing of the English Trade from Antwerp) a most flourishing Empory: So called because built in the midst of the Island; or because built (as saith Ortelius) by Prince Zelandus, of whom this Province was thus named, in honour of his Grandfather Metellus, and by him called Metelli Burgum. 2. Flushing, of great note for its good Port and invincible strength. One of the first Towns which the Low-Country Men took from the Spaniards by the diligence of Voorst a Seaman, and Monheur de Berland, then the Bayliff thereof, and not long after put into the hands of the English as a Town of Caution; the first Governor of it being the Renowned Sir Philip Sidney. A poor Town then it was, God wot, now the Key of the Netherlands, without whose Licence no Ship can pass either to or from the City of Antwerp; insomuch that if the Duke of Alva in the beginning of his Government had bestowed that pains in the fortifying this and others of the Maritime Towns, as he did in the strengthening Antwerp and some Midland Cities, he had in all probability hindred the remediless Revolt of these flourishing Countries. Not far off standeth the Fort called the Rammekins, once Cautionary to the English also, together with the Briel, the chief Town in the Isle of Voorn, (an Isle of Holland) all three being taken from the Spaniards, anno 1572. made Cautionary to Queen Elizabeth, anno 1585. and finally surrendered by King James as the States United, anno 1616. Robert Lord Lisse (afterwards created Earl of Leicester) the Brother of Sir Philip Sidney, then Governor of Flushing. 3. Ramne, or Armenyden, an unwall'd Town, but beautified with one of the goodliest and and most frequented Havens in all the World; out of which one may sometimes see 500 fail of Ships of great burthen set forwards on their Voyages to several Parts.

4. Vere, or Camfere, seated in the North part of the Island, which once gave Title to a Marquis, and from the which the Noble Family of the Veres (now and of long time Earls of Oxford) took denomination. So as it is no marvel that so many of that Family have ventured their Estates and Lives in the Wars of this Country, being their Grandmother in a manner, or their Primitive Parent, from whence they were transplanted into England.

2. SOUTH-BEVERLAND, situate betwixt Walcheren and Brabant, the greatest of the Isles of Zeland; heretofore 20 Dutch Miles in compass, but now much diminished by the Rage and Fury of the Sea, by which the Town and Seignoury of Borsfule, with all the Countries round about it, was swallowed up, anno 1532. That which remains hath in it many goodly Woods and pleasant Thickets, full of Fowl and wild Beasts for Hawking and Hunting. Chief Towns here are, 1. Romerfwale, seated on the East toward Bergen op Zoom, severed at the same time from the rest of the Island, and made an Island of it self, defended with continual charge from following the sad Fate of the Town of Borsfule. 2. Goes, or Tergoes, on the Northern Coast, a strong Town, well privileged, and the only walled Town in all the Island.

3. NORTH-BEVERLAND, lying betwixt South-Beverland and the Isle of Schowen, in former Times esteemed the Paradise of Zeland, and having in it a proper Town called Chort Cheen, but so destroyed by the Sea-breach, spoken of before, that there is nothing now remaining but a few poor Villages.

4. WOLFERSDIKE, lying betwixt the two Beverlands, the smallest of the Western Islands, as having in it no more than two Villages, but replenished with good Store of Pasture.

And these are all which fall in the division of the Western Islands, so called because they lay Westward of the River Scheld; as those which they call the Eastern Islands, on the East thereof. Of which last there are three in number.

1. SCHOWEN, lying on the South-West of Holland; so near unto North-Beverland in former times, that the Inhabitants could talk together from one shore to the other: but now the Sea hath set them at a greater distance. It containeth in compass six Dutch miles. Chief Towns wherein are, 1. Zireckzee, the ancientest Town of all Zeland, once beautified with a fair and commodious Haven, now choaked up with Beach, yet still reputed for the second Town of all the Province: the whole Trade thereof consisting in Salt and Madder; of which it yields good plenty. Most famous for the birth of Levinus Lemnius, that renowned Philosopher and Physician. 2. Brouwers-Haven, inhabited only by Fishermen, not else remarkable.

2. DOVELAND, so named from the multitude of Doves or Pigeons, situate between Schowen and Tolen, in compass about 4 Dutch Miles. It hath no good Town in it, but only Country Villages and Gentlemens Farms Surrounded by the Sea, anno 1530, but by the industry and diligence of Adolph of Burgundy, and the Lord of Basarecas in Flanders recover'd again, and at the excessive charge of the People hitherto preserved.

3. TOLLEN, so called from the chief Town of the Island, where the Earls Toll was wont to be paid, whence it had the name, is situate over against the North-West of Brabant, from thence disjoined by a narrow Creek or Arm of the Sea: the second Town of Note being called S. Martin's Dike; walled, but not otherwise considerable.

Agreeable to the quality of this Country of Zeland are the Arms thereof, being Or, a Lion Gules rising out of a Sea Wave Argent and Azure.

WEST-FRIESLAND, hath on the East Groening-land and a part of Westphalen in High Germany, on the South Over-ryssel and the Zuider-See, on the North and West the main Ocean. The Country is generally Moorish and full of Fens, unapt for Corn, but yielding great store of Pasturage: which Moorishness of the Ground makes the Air very foggy and unhealthy; nor have they any Fewel wherewith to rectifie it, (except in that part of it which they call Seven-Wolden) but Turf and Cow-dung, which adds but little to the sweetness of an unsound Air. Nor are they better stored with Rivers, here being none proper to this Country, but that of Leewards, the want of which is supplied by great Channels in most places, which do not only drain the Marshes, but supply them with Water: Which notwithstanding, their Pastures do afford them a good breed of Horses fit for service; plenty of Beeves both great and sweet, the best in Europe, next these of England; and those in such a large increase, that their Kine commonly brings two Calves, and their Ewes three Lambs at a time.

The Country is divided into three Parts. In the first part, called WESTERGOE, lying towards Holland, the principal Towns are, 1. Harlingen, an Haven Town upon the Ocean, defended with a very strong Castle. 2. Hindcopen, on the same Coast also. 3. Staveren, an Hanse-Town, opposite to Enchuisen in Holland, the Town decayed, but fortified with a strong Castle, which secures the Haven. 4. Francker, a new University, or a Schola Illustris, as they call it. 5. Sneck, in a low and inconvenient situation; but both for largeness and beauty the best in this part of the Province, and the second in esteem of all the Country. In OSTERGOE, of the East part, lying towards Groening-land, the Towns of most note are, 6. Leeuwarden, situate on the hinder Leewards, the prime Town of West-Friesland, and honoured with the Supreme Court and Chancery hereof, from which there lieth no Appeal: a rich Town, well built, and strongly fortified. Made a Bishop's See in 1559. 7. Dockum, bordering upon Groening, the birth place of Gemma Frisius, in SEVEN-WOLDEN, or the Country of Seven Forests, so called from so many small Forests joining near together, is no Town of note, being long time a Wood-land Country, and not well inhabited till of late. The number of the walled Towns are 11 in all; of the Villages or Burroughs 345.

To this Province belongeth the Isle of Schellink, the shores whereof are plentifully stor'd with Dog-fish, took by the Inhabitants in this manner. The Men of the Island attire themselves with Beasts Skins, and then fall to dancing; with which sport the Fish being much delighted, make out of the Waters towards them; Nets being pitched presently between them and the Water. Which done, the Men put off their Disguises, and the frightened Fish, halting toward the Sea, are caught in the Toils.

Touching the Frisons, heretofore possessed of this Country, we shall speak more at large when we come to East-Friesland, possessed also by them, and still continuing in the quality of a Free Estate, governed by its own Laws and Princes: Here only taking notice that the Arms of this Friesland are Azure, semy of Billets Argent, two Lions Or.

The ancient Inhabitants of these three Provinces were the Batavi and Caninofates, inhabiting the Island of the Rhene, situate betwixt the middle branch thereof and the Wael, which now containeth South-Holland, Utrecht, and some part of Geldres; the Frisii, dwelling in West-Friesland and the North of Holland; and the Mattiaci, inhabiting in the Isles of Zeland. By Charles the Bald these Countries, being almost unpeopled by the Norman Piracies, were given to Thierrie, Son of Sigebert, a Prince of Aquitain, with the Title of Earl; his Successors acknowledging the Sovereignty of the Crown of France, till the time of Arnulph the 4th Earl, who turned Homager to the Empire. In John II. they became united to the House of Hainault, and in William III. to that of Bavaria; added to the Estates of the Dukes of Burgundy in the Person

Person of Duke Philip the Good; as appeareth by the Succession of

The Earls of HOLLAND, ZEELAND, and Lords of WEST-FRIESLAND.

- 863 1. Thierrie, or Theodorick of Aquitain, the first Earl, &c.
- 903 2. Thierrie II. Son of Thierrie I.
- 988 3. Thierrie III. Son of Theodorick II.
4. Arnulph, who first made this Estate to be held of the Empire; slain in a War against the Frisons. From Sigefride the second Son of this Arnulph came the Lords of Bredrode, advanced by Marriages to the Seigniouries of Genap and Vianen, and many other fair Estates both in Brabant and Holland.
- 993 5. Thierrie IV. Son of Arnulph.
- 1039 6. Thierrie V. Son of Theodorick IV.
- 1048 7. Florence, Brother of Thierrie V.
- 1062 8. Thierrie VI. Son of Florence, in whose Minority the Estate of Holland was usurped by Godfrey le Bossu, Duke of Lorraine, by some accounted as an Earl hereof.
- 1092 9. Florence II. surnamed the Fat, Son of Thierrie VI.
- 1123 10. Thierrie VII. who tamed the stomachs of the Frisons.
- 1163 11. Florence III. a Companion of Frederick Barbarossa in the Wars of the Holy Land.
- 1190 12. Thierrie VIII. Son to Florence III.
- 1203 13. William the Brother of Thierrie, and Earl of East-Friesland, which Country he had before subdued, supplanted his Niece Ida, his Brother's Daughter, but after her decease, dying without Issue, succeeded in his own Right unto the Estate.
- 1223 14. Florence IV. Son of William.
- 1235 15. William II. Son of Florence IV. elected and crowned King of the Romans, slain in a War against the Frisons.
- 1255 16. Florence V. the first, as some write, who called himself Earl of Zeland: the Title to those Islands, formerly questioned by the Flemings, being relinquished to him on his Marriage with Beatrix, the Daughter of Guy of Dampierre, Earl of Flanders.
- 1296 17. John, the Son of Florence V. subdued the rebellious Frisons; the last of the Male-Issue of Thierrie of Aquitain.

Earls of HAINAUT, HOLLAND, &c.

- 1300 18. John of Avesnes, Earl of Hainault, Son of John of Avesnes, Earl of Hainault, and of the Lady Aleide, Sister of William II. and Daughter of Florence IV. succeeded as next Heir in the Earldom of Holland, &c.
- 1305 19. William III. surnamed the Good, Father of the Lady Philippa, Wife of our Edward III.
- 1337 20. William IV. of Holland, and II. of Hainault, slain in a War against the Frisons.
- 1346 21. Margaret, Sister and Heir of William IV. and eldest Daughter of William III. married to Lewis of Bavaria, Emperor of the Germans, forced to relinquish Holland unto William her second Son, and to content her self with Hainault.
- 1351 22. William V. second Son of Lewis and Margaret (his elder Brother Stephen succeeding in Bavaria) in right of Maud his Wife, Daughter and Coheir of Henry Duke of Lowest, succeeded in the Earldom of Leicester.
- 1377 23. Albert, the younger Brother of William V. fortunate in his Wars against the Frisons; Earl of Hainault, Holland, &c.

- 1424 24. William VI. Earl of Orléans, and by that name admitted Knight of the Garter by King Edward III. eldest Son of Albert.
- 1417 25. Jaqueline, only Daughter of Earl William VI. first married to John IV. Duke of Burgundy, the Son of Philip of Flanders from whom divorced under colour of Confiscation, she was married after to Henry Duke of Gloucester, and then to John of Beaufort, a private Gentleman being unlawfully married by Duke John of Burgundy, he surrendered her Estates to Duke Philip the Good.
26. Philip the Good, Duke of Burgundy, Son of John Duke of Burgundy, and of the Lady Margaret, Sister of Earl William VI. and Daughter of Albert, Earl of Hainault, Holland, &c. succeeded on the Renunciation of the Lady Jaqueline, his Confinergerman, transporting these Estates to the House of Burgundy. His Successors we shall meet with shortly in another place.

15. UTRECHT. 16. OVER-YSSSEL.

THE Bishoprick of Utrecht, I mean the temporal Jurisdiction and Estate thereof, contain'd once all that Tract of ground which now makes up the Provinces of Utrecht, Over-Yssel, and Groeninge. But Groeninge was long since dismembred. Utrecht and Over-Yssel remaining parts thereof till the Year 1528, then added to the rest of the Belgick Provinces by Charles V.

UTRECHT hath on the East Gelderland, on the West, North and South, environ'd with Holland. The Country is very Fruitful, much drier than Holland, and so fitter for all sorts of Grain. It containeth 75 Villages, and 5 walled Towns: that is to say, 1. Wyckat Duerstede, situate on the middle Channel of the Rhene, where it diverteth into the Leck; well built, and fortified anciently with a good Castle; supposed to be the Baravodurum (spoken of by Tacitus, the Mansion at that time of the second Legion. 2. Rhenen, upon the same branch or Channel, whence it hath the name: about which is digged abundance of Turf for Fuel. 3. Amersfort, on the River Ems, (called in Latin Amisus) a fair Town, and well peopled. 4. Montfort upon the Yssel, pleasantly seated, and of great strength, as being anciently a Frontier Town against the Hollanders. 5. Utrecht, situate on the middle Channel of the Rhene: first called Antonina, from one of the Antonines of Rome: but Dagobert King of France gave it the name of Trajectum (or Ultrajectum, we now call Utrecht) because there was at that time the common Ferry over the River. The Town is large, beautiful, and very sumptuously built, having in it many goodly Churches of which five were anciently Collegiate; besides two famous Monasteries of noble Women, such as those spoken of elsewhere: the private Houses well contrived, most of them having goodly Cellars, vaulted with wonderful Art and Skill, to which the People may resort in all times of danger. Sometime the Seat-Royal of Radbold, King of the Frisons, then of the Bishops; honoured of old with a Juridical resort for the parts adjoining, and now the principal of this Province. A City so miraculously seated amongst walled Towns, that a Man may go from hence in one day to any one of 50 walled Towns or Cities, thence equally distant; or to any one of 26 Towns to Dinner; and come home to Bed. Dagobert, King of France, built the present He in the year of Christ 642; Willebrord became the first Bishop of it in the year 650. In the year 1527 it submitted to Charles the V. In 1550 it was made an Archbishop's See. In 1577 it revolted from the Spaniards. In 1636 it was made an University. In 1676 it fell into the hands of the French for a short time, who used it very ill two years, and then it recovered its present Liberty.

OVER-YSSSEL, in Latin Transyl. lania, so named from its situation beyond the Yssel, is bounded on the East with Westphalen, on the West with Zuider-See, on the North with West-Friesland, on the South with Gelderland. The Country is very plain and without Hills, but wet and moorish affording excellent good Pasturage, and not defective in Corn. It is divided into three parts, that is to say, Twent, confining upon Westphalen; Yffel-land, on the River Yffel; and Drent, beyond the River Vecht; in all which are contained 11 Towns, and 100 Villages. The principal of which are, 1. Deventer, on the River Yffel, strong and well fortified, and withal beautiful and well peopled; an Hanse-Town, and the chief of all this Province; first taken from the States by the Earl of Leicester, then Governour of those Countries for Queen Elizabeth, Anno. 1586, treacherously re-yielded to the Spaniards by Sir William Stanley, but in the year 1590 again recovered by the States, taken by the French in 1672, and deserted in 1674. 2. Stol, standing on a little River which runs into the Vidre, anciently fortified with a double Ditch, and very strong Ramparts, an Hanse-Town; as is also 3. Campen, situate on the left Shore and fall of the Yffel into the Zuider-See, a fair and large Town, and of very great strength by reason of those inaccessible Marshes among which it is situate. These three are in that part thereof which is called Yffel-land, and by some Saland, by whom (erroneously) it is supposed to be the Country of the ancient Salii. In that part hereof which is called Twent, we have the Towns of 4. Oldenzeel, 5. Enschede, 6. Delde, 7. Almelo: of which little memorable. And in that of Drent, the Town and Castle of Vallenboven, standing upon the Zuider-See, well served with all sorts of Victuals, and for that cause made the ordinary Residence of the Governour, and supream Council for the whole Province.

The ancient Inhabitants of these two Provinces were some parts of the Batavi and Frisi minores, for that of Utrecht; the Bructeri and (as some say) the Salii in Over-Yffel. Both Provinces belonging anciently to the Episcopal See of Utrecht, founded by Dagobert King of France, who endowed it with great Lands and Territories; the first Bishop being Willibald, an English-man; who converted these parts to Christianity. His Successors grew to so great power, that they were able to bring 40000 men into the Field, and with great courage did maintain their Estate and Patrimony against the encroaching Earls of Holland: but at the last having continued for the space of 900 years, Henry of Bavaria Bishop hereof, being extremely distressed with War by the Duke of Geldres, and driven out of the City of Utrecht by his own Subjects, (perhaps upon some humour of Reformation) alienated all the Temporalities of his Bishoprick to Charles the 5th, An. 1527. and the next year the Imperialists by one of the Factions were let into Utrecht; at what time both the Estates of the Country, and Pope Clement the 7. confirmed the Alienation made by the Bishop. After which solemn Acts of theirs the Emperour caused himself to be invested in this Estate by the States of the Empire, (for Utrecht was of old an Imperial Fief,) and, for the better Government and Administration of it, divided it into two Provinces as it still continueth. But what this Bishop lost in Power his Successors not long after gained in Title; the Bishop of Utrecht being made an Archbishop or Metropolitan, Anno. 1561. But by Reason of the change of Religion which was then working, and the falling off of these Countries, which soon after followed, he had but little joy in his new Preferment.

17. GELDERLAND. 18. ZUTPHEN, and 19. GROENING.

THE Dukedom of Gelderland, at such time as it was first taken in by Charles the fifth, contained under it the Duchie of Geldres, properly and specially so called, the Earldom of Zutphen, and the Town and Seignoury of Groening; held by distinct Titles, and governed ever since their union with the Belgick Provinces as distinct Estates.

GELDERLAND is bounded on the East with Cleveland and the Earldom of Zutphen, on the West with Holland and Utrecht, on the North with Over-Yffel and the Zuider-See; and on the South with Brabant and the Land of Gulick. The Country is flat, having few hills in it, but many pleasant and commodious Woods, especially that called Echterwaldt, of Corn and Cattle very fruitful.

The whole Country is generally divided into two parts, 1. The Veluwe, contained within the Zuider-See, the middle Channel of the Rhene, and the Yffel; the barren of the two, and the worse inhabited; the people hereof preferring Health before Wealth, as in other places; but affording a more pure Air, and a pleasanter dwelling than the other; the Woods and Forests well replenished with most kind of Game. The Betuwe (so called of the Batavi, who possessed these parts) intercepted betwixt the said middle Channel of the Rhene and the Wael, exceeding fruitful in Corn, and of so excellent a Pasturage for the feeding of Cattle, that in the Year 1570. there was a Gelderland Bull sold in Antwerp which weighed 3200 pounds.

In both divisions (not reckoning in the County of Zutphen) are contained 300 Villages, and 16 walled Towns, besides some fortified of late since the Wars began. The chief whereof are, 1. Nimwegen, (in Latine Noviomagus) an Imperial City, ordained by Charles the Great, to be one of the three Sieges of the Empire for these outer parts: the other two being Theonville in Luxemburg, and Aix or Aken in the land of Gulick. And, as a Town Imperial, it had anciently the Priviledge of Coyning money: for which and other Freedoms or immunities indulged unto it, the people did no other service to the Emperours than once a year to send a man to Aix or Aquisgrane with a Glove full of Pepper. But the Town being sold to the Geldois by William Earl of Holland and King of the Romans for 21000 Marks of Silver, Anno. 1248, the power of Coinage fell to those Princes; and yet the Town was brought to do better Service than formerly it had done at Aken. The Town is high mounted on the top of an Hill, the Wael, which is there large and deep running at the foot of it, rich, great, and populous, having besides the modern Fortifications an ancient Castle, with so goodly a prospect, that from thence one may behold the best part of the Country; built, as some say, by Julius Caesar to command those parts. This City in the year 1672. Having made a vigorous Defence against the French, was at last forced to yield the year after it was Deserted and became the Seat of the Treaty for Peace, here concluded in the year 1678. between the Emperour and the Kings of France and Spain, and the States of Holland. Charles the 2d. of England, by his Faithful Minister Sir Leoline Jenkins, being the Arbitrator of all these Princes. Under the Jurisdiction of it are, 2. Tiel, and 3. Bomel, two walled Towns, both situated on the Wael, both strong, and having many rich Villages under their command; and 4. Ghent, on the Wael also, an unwalled Town, but having all the Priviledges which the walled Towns have. Not far off, at the first meeting of the Wael and the Maes, stands the strong Fort of S. Andrew, raised by the Archduke Albert to command the passage of those Rivers; but in the year 1600 taken in by Maurice Count of Nassau, (after Prince of Orange) and ever since garrisoned by the States to secure that passage. 5. Ruermond, seated on the mouth of the Ruer, where it falleth into the Maes; a beautiful and well-peopled City, strong by Art and Nature, and seated in a fruitful Country, heretofore of the Diocess of Luze, (as Nimwegen anciently of Colen) but made a See Episcopall by King Philip the Second, Anno. 1559. This is the second capital City of Gelderland, and hath under the Jurisdiction of it, 6. Vento, a strong Town on the Maes, in which the Duke of Cleve yielded himself to Charles Charles the fifth, An. 1543. 7. Geldres, heretofore of such reputation, that it gave name to all the County; and well it doth deserve to do so still, being the only Town in all this Dukedom which neither first nor last hath been won by the Hollanders, but still preserved themselves in their Obedience to their natural Princes. 8. Strael, or Straelen, a well fortified piece; but which, according to the chances of War, hath often changed its Masters. 9. Arnhem, the Arenacum of Tacitus, and in those times the Mansion of the tenth Legion, situate on the Rhene, not above a mile from the great Channel, which Drusus, to keep his Soldiers from idleness, caused them to dig, to let the waters of the Rhene into those of the Yssel; called therefore by the Ancients Fossa Drusiana, by the Modern Yssel Dort. The Town is large and well built: the ordinary Residence heretofore of the Dukes of Gelderland, who had here their Chancery, and other supreme Courts of Justice. In the Year 1672, it was taken by the French, but in 1674, was dismantled and forsaken by them. This is the Third Capital City of Gelderland, anciently of the Diocese of Utrecht) and hath under the Jurisdiction of it, besides divers Villages, 10. Wageningen on the Rhene, the same which Tacitus calls Vada. 11. Harderwick on the Zuider-See, burnt to the ground Anno. 1503, but since re-edified, and now more strong and beautiful than ever formerly. 12. Hattem, upon the Yssel, a good Town of War, but not else observable.

Within the Limits of this Dukedom stands the Town and County of Culemborg, erected into a County by King Philip the 2. by reason of the fair Territory which belonged unto it; formerly held in Fee of the Dukes of Gelderland, but otherwise not reckoned as a Member of it. 2. The Town and Earldom of Bueren, situate on the River Linge, having a strong Castle anciently, and a goodly Territory, holden immediately of the Empire, as a Fief Imperial. It was first made an Earldom in the Person of Frederick Lord of Egmond, Brother's Son to Arnold of Egmond, the sixth Duke of Geldres, created Earl of Bueren by Maximilian, the first, An. 1492. which Frederick was Grandfather of the valiant Maximilian of Egmond Earl of Bueren, who died Anno. 1549. after whose death it fell at last to Philip of Nassau, eldest Son of William Prince of Orange, and of Ann the Daughter and Heir of the said Maximilian upon the death of the said Ann, Anno. 1551.

ZUTPHEN, accounted formerly for the fourth capital City of Gelderland, now a distinct Province of it self, is bounded on the East with Westphalen, on the West with that part of Gelderland which is called Veluwe, on the North with Over-Issel, on the South with Cleveland. It containeth 8 walled Towns, besides many Villages; that is to say, 1. Doetum, standing on the old Yssel, rising out of Westphalen. 2. Doesburg, where the old Yssel falleth into the new Yssel, or the Trench called Fossa Drusiana, communicating thereunto its name. 3. Bronckhorst, a County of it self, which anciently had its particular Governour. 4. Lochem, upon the River Berckel. 5. Tjheerenburg, a Town and County. 6. Groll, taken by the Prince of Orange, for the States Confederate Anno. 1627. 7. Bredervord, a Town of War, and subject to the change of Masters, as such places are. 8. Zutphen, or Zuidjen, so called of the Southern situation of it amongst the Fens, on the right shore of the Yssel, where it receiveth into it the River Berckel, which runs through the Town. A Town indifferently well built, as well for private as publick Edifices; a distinct State in Civil matters, but in Spiritual subject (in former times) to the Bishop of Munster. A thing observable and not to be paralleld elsewhere; that the four chief Towns and Quarters of one Province only should appertain (as here in Gelderland) to four several Dioceses. Of which there may some reason be assigned for Zutphen, in regard it is a State more ancient than that of Gelderland it self, and not depending anciently on the fortunes of it; united to it by the Marriage of Orbo of Nassau, the first Earl of Gelderland, with Sophia, Daughter and Heir of Wickman the last Earl of Zutphen. So as this Earldom ended, when that first began. After this it continued Subject to the Earls and Dukes of Geldres, till the revolt of Holland and the other Provinces from the King of Spain; at what time it was besieged for the States by the Earl of Leicester: at the Siege whereof fell that gallant Gentleman Sir Philip Sidney, of whom our British Epigrammatist thus versifieth.

*Digna legi scribis, facis & dignissima scribi;
Scripta probant doctum te tuu, facta probum.*

Thou writ'st things worthy reading, and didst do things worthy writing too:

Thy Acts thy Valour show,

And by thy works we do thy Learning know.

And though upon the loss of that gallant man (Nephew and Heir unto that Earl) the Siege was raised at the present; yet was it re-inforced again, An. 1590, and the Town then taken, continuing ever since in the Confederacy of the States United. Having been in vain Attack'd by the Bishop of Munster, in the Year 1672.

GROENING-LAND hath on the East East-Friesland, on the West West-Friesland, on the North the main Ocean, on the South Over-Issel; so wedged in as it were betwixt both Frieslands, that some hold it to be but a part of the West. It containeth under it the Country called the Ommelands, (corruptly for the Emmelands, as I conjecture, because lying along the River Em) and therein 145 Burroughs and Villages. The chief thereof are, 1. Dam, near the Ems, bordering on East-Friesland. 2. Keykirk, 3. Old-Haven standing on the Sea. 4. As for the Town of Groening it self, it is rich, great, and very well built, situate amongst divers small Streams which run through it, and having also divers Channells for conveyance of waters, which adds much to the safety and strength thereof. A Town of great Jurisdiction both within and without, judging absolutely without Appeal in Causes both Civil and Criminal; in Spiritual, subject heretofore to the Bishop of Munster, till made one of the new Bishopricks by King Philip the second, Anno. 1559. And though the Prince in Civil Causes had his Officer or Lieutenant there; yet in Criminal the Town was Sovereign, and granted Pardons as Sovereign of the whole Estate, paying to the Prince for all Duties yearly but 6000 Crowns. Both Town and Country anciently belonging to the Bishops of Utrecht, for whose negligence in defending them they submitted their Estate to the Duke of Gelderland. But the Dukes of Saxony laying some claim to it, disturbed this agreement for a time; during which Fzardus the Earl of East-Friesland possessed himself of it; but not able to make good his unjust possession sold his Estate therein to the Duke of Geldres, An. 1513, to whom of right it did belong. Afterwards in the year 1536, they put themselves under the command of Charles the fifth, but with the reservation of all their Privileges and ancient Liberties, for preservation of the which, in danger to be over-born by the power of the Spaniard, they confederated with the rest of the United States, Anno. 1594, and so still continue. In the year 1672, it was taken by the French, and continued 2 years in Bondage.

The ancient Inhabitants of these Countries were the Menapii and Sicambri, very valiant people, possessing Gelderland and the maiores Frisi, which were planted in Groening and the rest of Friesland. Of these the Sicambri were accounted the most valiant People, uniting with other Nations in the name of French, and by that name possessing with the rest of those Nations the mighty Empire of the West. In the division whereof by the posterity of Charles the Great, these Countries were first part of the Kingdom of Austrasia or East-France, afterwards of the German Empire; governed at the first by Guardians or Protectors created by the people in the Reign of Charles the Bald, the two first being Wickward, and Lupold, (or Leopold) two Brethren, who fixing their chief Seat in the Castle of Geldres, occasioned the whole Country to be called Gelderland. But they and their Successors, by what Name or Title soever called, were in effect but Provincial Officers, accountable to the Emperors for their Administration; the first free Prince hereof being Otho of Nassau, who having to his first Wife the Lady Aleide, Daughter of Wickard the last Guardian, was by the Emperor Henry the third made first Earl of Gelderland, adding thereto the State of Zutphen by a second Marriage, as is said before. In Rainold the ninth Earl it was made a Dukedom by the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria, anno 1339. Sold by Duke Arnold (justly incensed at his ungracious Son Adolph) to Charles Duke of Burgundy for 92000 Florens of ready Money, and an annual Pension, anno 1472. But notwithstanding this Agreement, Adolph (upon the death of Charles) possessed himself of it, and left it unto Charles his Son, who finally surrendered it unto Charles the fifth, anno 1547.

- 1079 1. Otho of Nassau the first Earl.
- 1131 2. Gerard the Son of Otho by his first Wife Aleide.
- 1162 3. Henry the Son of Gerard.
- 1180 4. Gerard II. Son of Henry.
- 1202 5. Otho II. Brother of Gerard.
- 1229 6. Gerard III. Son of Otho II.
- 1271 7. Otho III. Son of Gerard, who wall'd the Towns of Ruermond, Arnhem, Bomel, Goch, Wageningen, and Harderwick.
- 1326 8. Rainold, Son of Otho III. taken and imprison'd till his death by
- 1343 9. Rainold II. his own Son, created the first Duke of Geldres by the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria at Francfort, anno 1339. liberal to the Poor, and a great Patron of the Muses.
- 1371 10. Rainold III. Son of Rainold II. molested with continual Wars with his Brother Edward, by whom he was taken and imprisoned till his dying day.
- 1371 11. Edward, the Son of Rainold II. by Eleanor the Daughter of Edward III. of England, his second Wife, died the same Year with his Brother; the last of the male issue of Otho of Nassau.
- 1371 12. Mary (by some call'd Joan) Sister of Edward, by the same Venter, and Wife of William Earl of Gulick.
- 1371 13. William, Son of William Duke of Gulick and Mary of Geldres, admitted Knight of the Garter by King Richard II.
- 1371 14. Rainold IV. the Brother of William.
- 1371 15. Arnold of Egmond, Son of John Lord of Egmond and Mary his Wife, Daughter of Joan, the Sister of Rainold and William, the two last Dukes, succeeded in the Estate of Geldres; the Dukedom of Gulick being seized on by Adolph, Son of William the first Duke of Berg, as the next Heir-male to the two last Dukes. Being afterwards taken, imprisoned, and most barbarously handled by his own Son Adolph, and delivered by Charles the Warlike, Duke of Burgundy, he sold to him his Estates of Geldres and Zutphen, to be enjoyed by him after his decease, anno 1472.
- 1473 16. Adolph, the wicked Son of Arnold, dispossessed of his Estate by the said Agreement, which Duke Charles enjoyed for his Life, after the death of the said Charles was restored to liberty by the Gauntois, anno 1467. and made the General of their Forces against Lewis XI.
- 1477 17. Charles, Son of Arnold, after long Wars with the Princes of the Houses of Burgundy and Austria, pretending the Sale and Legacy of Duke Arnold to Charles the Warlike, surrendered his Estates unto Charles V. to be enjoyed by him after his decease, if he left no Issue. According to which Contract the Emperor Charles succeeded him in Geldres and Zutphen, anno 1538, being the Year of his Decease; after which time they were accounted in the number of the Belgick Provinces.

The Arms hereof were quarterly, 1. Azure, a Lion Or, crowned Gules for the Dukedom of Gelderland; 2. Azure, a Lion Gules, for the Earldom of Zutphen.

Thus have we seen a Country which at the first erecting of these States was nothing in a manner but Bogs and Marshes, and at the best but a continual Wilderness of Woods and Forests, by the great Providence of the Princes, and extream Industry of the People, made the most populous, best planted, and the wealthiest Estate (for the bigness of it) in the whole habitable World. And we have seen those several Estates and Principalities, by Marriages and other Contracts, reduced into the hands of the House of Burgundy: under the Princes of which great and illustrious Family, inferior to no Kings of Christendom for Power and Riches (especially under Duke Philip the Good) the Subjects hereof did so abound in Wealth and Plenty, that Philip de Comines, who then lived, affirmeth, that this Country seemed like the Land of Promise. Some thought there was a purpose in this Duke Philip of erecting these States into a Kingdom, from which he was diverted by the difference and variety of Laws and Privileges which those People severally lived under, not to be brought without great difficulty and distaste to one form of Government: yet might he have done it, if he would, as himself openly affirmed to the Ambassadors of King Lewis XI. But Charles his Son, being more bent on the design, negotiated to that end with the Emperor Frederick, whom he met at Triers, anno 1473. and doubtless had obtain'd his purpose, upon the Marriage of his Daughter with Maximilian, Frederick's Son (which was then propounded) had not his rash Engagement against the Swissers, and his untimely death therein, broke the course of these Projects: which Projects had they took effect, as in all probability they had, but for that Engagement, he had extended his Dominions all along the Rhene, and on both sides of it, from the Alps to the German Ocean, and been the most considerable Prince at that time in Christendom; all Alsace in High Germany being sold or mortgaged to him by the Duke of Austria, the Dukedom of Lorraine at his mercy; besides the hopes he had of the Earldom of Provence, intended to him by King Reny, which would have opened him a way into the Mediterranean. He being dead, the Government continued as before it was; each Province having its distinct Laws, and living according to ancient Privileges, till the attempt of Philip the second, King of Spain, most resolutely (but unfortunately) bent to bring them under the command of that Crown, to cancel all their Privileges, and new-mould the Estate according to his own will and pleasure; occasioning thereby the Revolt of a great part of the Country, and the setting up of a new Estate opposite unto him, and destructive of his Interest in it. But before we come unto this Change, we will first look upon the Prince's Power, Revenue, and other things considerable touching this Estate, whilst it stood entire under the Princes of the House of Burgundy and Lords of B E L G I U M.

- 1369 1. Philip the Hardy, Duke and Earl of Burgundy, Earl of Flanders and Artois, the first great raiser of this House.
- 1404 2. John the Proud, Duke of Burgundy, &c.
- 1419 3. Philip the Good added to his Estates the Dukedom of Brabant and Limburg, the Marquissate and Mechlin by the death of his Cousin Philip, the Earldoms of Hainault, Holland, Zeland, and the Lordship of West-Friesland, by

- by the resignation and death of the Countess Jaqueline, whose next Heir he was; the Dukedom of Luxemburg, and the Earldom of Namur, which he bought for Money.
- 1467 4. Charles the Warlike, who bought the Estates of Geldres and Zutphen, and held them peaceably all his Life.
- 1476 5. Mary, the Daughter and Heir of Charles, married to Maximilian, Son of the Emperor Frederick, from whom King Lewis the XI. of France took the Dukedom of Burgundy, and the greatest part of the Countries of Burgundy and Artois, unfortunately killed with a fall from her Horse, and an unseasonable Modesty in not suffering the Chirurgeon to dress her wound, the hurt which she had taken being on her thigh.
- 1482 6. Philip III. Son of Mary and Maximilian, to whom Charles VIII. of France restored all the places in Artois and the County of Burgundy, taken by his Father, married Joan, Daughter of Ferdinand and Isabel, King and Queen of Spain.
- 1506 7. Charles II. Archduke of Austria, King of Spain, and Emperor of that name the fifth, added to his Estate in these Countries the Dukedom of Gelderland, the Earldom of Zutphen, the Lordships of Utrecht, Over-ysse and Groening.
- 1558 8. Philip IV. of Belgium, and the second of Spain, invading these Countries against their Privileges, was by a great part of them rejected from being their Prince, anno 1581, which made him, after a long and bloody War, to surrender all his Interest in them to
- 1599 9. Isabella Clara Eugenia, his Daughter, and Albert, Archduke of Austria, whom he married to her; during whose Government a Truce for 12 Years was made, and in the Preface to that Truce, the Confederate Estates declared to be treated with as a Free State, to whom the King of Spain could pretend no Title.
10. Philip V. of Belgium, and the 4th of Spain, on the decease of the Archduchess Isabella his Aunt, succeeded in the possession of some, and the Title unto all the Belgick Provinces.
- 1665 11. Charles II. King of Spain, succeeded Philip his Father, being then an Infant of 4 years of Age.

The ordinary Revenue of these Countries to the Dukes of Burgundy, and after to the Kings of Spain, before the Breach, were estimated at Three Millions of Crowns yearly; which was more than any King in Christendom at those times received, the French only excepted; the very measuring of Corn in the City of Antwerp being Farmed yearly for 10000 Crowns in ready Money: but the extraordinary was far greater; the Estates of these Countries in the year 1550 granting to Charles V. an Aid which they call the Noventale, amounting to 150000 Crowns a Month; and yet the Provinces of Luxemburg, Limbourg, Geldres and Groening, were not rated to it. And it is said, that Philip II. at his first coming to the Estate, was presented with a Grant of 40 Millions of Florens, to be paid in a few Years. So that these Countries were the true Correlative of both his Indies; the loss of which, before the making of the Truce, anno 1609, cost him above 100 Millions of Crowns, and the loss of 400000 Men.

The Forces of these Princes by Land may best be seen in the expedition of Charles (then Earl of Charolais) against Lewis XI. whom Duke Philip the Good, his Father, furnished to that Enterprize with 9000 Archers, and 1400 Men at Arms, every one of which had five or six great Horses attending on him; and at his setting forward he was told by his Father, (never accompred for a Braggart) that if he fell into any danger, he should not be abandoned for the want of 10000 fighting Men. The said Duke having thus sent away his Son, and being provoked by the Indignities of those of Liège and Dinant, who revolted from him, suddenly raised an Army of 28000 Horse, and a proportionable number of Foot, for the chastisement of that proud and rebellious People. And Charles himself, succeeding on the death of his Father, in his unprosperous attempt upon the Switzers, had no less than 80000 Men at the Battle of Moratz. As for their power at Sea, I find not that they kept any standing Navy, nor needed they so to do, as the case stood with them; considering that when they had occasion of any such service, they used to take up all the Ships which they found in their Harbours, (of which there never wanted good store) employing as many as they pleased, and dismissing the rest.

The principal Order of Knighthood ordained by these Princes was that of the Golden Fleece, first instituted by Duke Philip the Good (in imitation of the Order of St. George in England), Anno 1430. The Name and Fancy was borrow'd, as some conceive, from Gideon's Fleece; from Jason's Fleece, as others think; but more probably from the Golden Fleeces of England, which brought him in so much Gold and Treasure in the way of Custom. Their Habit is a Collar of Gold interlaced with Irons, seeming to strike fire out of a Flint, (Ex ferro flammam being the word;) at the end whereof hung the Toison d'Or, or Fleece of Gold. Their number at the first was but 25, (which is the number of Knights of the English Garter) increased afterwards by the same Duke Philip unto 31. Charles the first raised them to 51; and now the King of Spain hath assumed a liberty of making as many as he pleaseth: This being the only Military or Civil Order of which those Kings have the bestowing; the Orders of Alicantara, Calatrava, and the rest of Spanish Institutions; being rather Religious and Monastical, at the best but mixt. St. Andrew's Day is the day of Installation.

In this great Pomp and Glory did these Princes live as long as they continued in good Terms with the subject Provinces, being Masters of more goodly Jewels, magnificent Furniture for their Houses, and costly Moveables, than any three of the greatest Princes in all Europe. And on the other side, the Subjects, whilst they lived in Duty under so great Princes, attained unto the height of all worldly Happiness; in their Apparel excellently gorgeous, in their Feasts and Banquets over-sumptuous, in their Manners dissolute; Vices which usually accompany that kind of Felicity. An Happiness too great to continue long. By the Ambition and Violence of Charles the Warlike they were first plunged into a War against Lewis the Eleventh, of which they did not only feel the present Miseries, but lost all the Towns and Holds which they had in Picardy, with the whole Duchy of Burgundy. And by a like, but better-grounded, Ambition of Charles the Fifth, they were exercised in continual Wars against the French, who miserably harassed and ransacked the Countries of Luxemburg, Hainault and Artois, bordering next unto them. Charles at his death commended them to the special care of Philip his Son, advising him to use them kindly, as those that were the chief Supporters of his State and Glory; adding, that if he should deal otherwise with them, it would prove the ruine of his Fortunes. And on the other side, the People to obtain his Favour, presented him at his first entrance on the Government with a Grant of Forty Millions of Florens, as before was said. But he, transported with Ambition and a Catholick Zeal, not only forgot their Love, but his Father's Counsel; and had no sooner concluded a Peace with France, effected by the Treaty of Cambray, anno 1559, but presently he cast his Thoughts on the Subjection of this People to his will and pleasure. For they were so fortified with Priviledges, which their former Princes had granted, and the latter had sworn to observe, that he wanted much of that absolute and uncontrollable controllable command which he strongly aimed at. Some of which Priviledges were, 1. That the Prince could place no stranger amongst them with Jurisdiction over their Estates and Persons, in Offices of War or Justice. 2. The Prince could give nothing to the Clergy; nor 3. Leavy any subsidies without the States of the Country. 4. But the main Prerogative was that of the Brabanters, (viz.) That if the Prince by violence or wrong did infringe any of the said Charters and Franchises, the people, after declaration thereof made, might go to election of a new Prince. This not a little grieved the Spaniards, that such base and unworthy people (for so they esteemed them) should in such liberty possess so brave and rich a Country, their King bearing no title of Majesty or absolute command over them. Besides the Reformation of Religion, which then began to grow to some strength, moved the King to reduce them back to the Church of Rome by the power and terrour of the Inquisition; and by the erecting of some new Episcopal See amongst them, (for before there were but three in all) to settle some more constant course of Ecclesiastical Discipline. Against both which, when the people violently opposed, he then resolved of bringing them by Spanish Rhetorick (that is, by the Sword and the Canon) to their old obedience. To these ends he sends the Duke of Alva, an old and expert Captain, (as having 60 years been a Souldier) with a puissant Army, to be his Vice-Roy amongst them. He also gave him a Commission of that large extent, that he might place and displace whom he would, and execute all such as he could find opposite to his designs. At that time the two chief men amongst them were the Prince of Orange, and Count Egmont; the first more potent with the People, the latter with the Souldiers. Had these two joyned together, they might easily have prevented D. Alva's entrance; but Egmont was so soothed up with the Letters from Spain, that he believed not the intelligence which the Prince had concerning the Duke's Commission. The Earl exhorted the Prince to submit himself to the pleasure of the King, and so to prevent the ruine of his House. The Prince desired the Earl to maintain the Liberty of the Country, as for himself, He had rather be a Prince without a House, than a Count without an Head. Being thus resolved, the Prince retires to his County of Nassau in High Germany; the Earl stayeth to congratulate the entrance of the new Governour: who had no sooner settled himself, but he entrapped the Counts of Horn and Egmont, and beheaded them, An. 1567. Being thus rid of these two, with divers others of good quality, who living would have much hindered his proceedings, he quarter'd his Spaniards in the Towns and Provinces, spoiled the people not of their Priviledges only, but their Liberty. Amongst the Reformed he brought in the bloody Inquisition; and indeed so tyrannically did he behave himself, that the people were forced to a Defensive War, as well for their Lives as Substance. This was a War of State, not Religion, the most part of the Hollanders being Papists at the time of their taking Arms. During these Troubles the Prince of Orange was not idle, but he in one place, and Count Lodowick his Brother in another, kept Duke Alva employed, though divers times not with such fortunate success as they did expect. In the year 1572. Flushing was surpris'd by Voorst and Berland, as we have before said: so also was the Briel in Voorn, an Island of Holland, by the Count de la March. And not long after all Holland, except Amsterdam, followed the fortune and side of the Prince: together with all the Towns of Zeland, Middle-berg excepted. Anno. 1573. Duke Alva being recalled, Don Lewis de Requesens was appointed Governour; during whose rule many of the Belgians abandoned their Country, some flying into Germany, others into France, most into England. After his death, and before the arrival of Don John, the Prince and his Party recovered strength and courage again till the coming of the Prince of Parma, who brought them into a worse case than ever. Yet, Anno. 1581. they declare, by their Writings directed to all people, that Philip of Spain, was fallen from the Government; and take a new Oath of the People, which bound them never to return to the Spanish Obedience. This done, they elect Francis Duke of Anjou, Heir apparent to the French King, and then in no small hopes of marrying Queen Elizabeth of England, to be their Lord. But he intending rather to settle a Tyranny in himself, than to derive it from the Spaniard, attempted Antwerp, put his men into the Town, but was by the valour of the Burgers shamefully repulsed: shame of this ignoble enterprise, especially grief for its ill success, took him out of the world. About which time the Estates of these Countries were thus by the Hieroglyphick expressed. A Cow represented the Body of Belgium, there stood the King of Spain spurring her, the Queen of England feeding her, the Prince of Orange milking her, and Duke Francis plucking her back by the tail, but she foul'd his fingers. During his unfortunate Government, Parma prevailed in all places, especially after the death of William Prince of Orange, treacherously slain with a Pistol, Anno. 1584. Now were the poor Hollanders truly miserable, desperate of Pardon from their Prince, and having none to lead them, none to protect them, but such as were likely to regard their own profit more than theirs. England was the only Sanctuary they had now left; to which they sue, offering the Queen thereof the Sovereignty of their Provinces, who had, if not a Right, yet a plausible Title to them, as being lineally descended from Edward the third and Philip his Wife, who was Sister and (as some say) Heir to William Earl of Hainault, Holland, &c. If Margaret from whom the Right of Spain is derived, were Daughter to Earl William, then was our Queen to succeed after Philip, who was rejected: If that Margaret were (as many write) his younger Sister, then was our Queen the undoubted Heir, her Predecessor Philippa being Earl William's elder Sister. But that Heroick Queen not disputing the right of the Title, nor intending to her self any thing save the honour of relieving her distressed Neighbours, and providing for her own Estate by this diversion, took them into her Protection. Under which the Belgian Affairs succeeded so prosperously (I will not now stand upon the particulars) that before they would hearken to any Treaty of Peace, they forced the King of Spain to this Conclusion, that he treated with them as with a free Estate, abstracted from all Right and Title which he might pretend unto the places which they were possessed of. This Peace was concluded Anno 1609. Since which time they have kept Garrisons well disciplined, and as well paid: so that these Countries have in these latter days been the Campus Martius, or School of defence, for all Christendom, to which the youth of all Nations repair to see the manner of Fortifications, and learn the Art of War, and the use of their Weapons. Thus did they for 40 years hold the staff against a most puissant Monarch, and in the end capitulated with a great advantage; that it is observed, that whereas all other Nations grow poor by War, these only grow rich. Whereupon it is remarkable to consider into what follies and extremities Princes run by using their People to the War. The Kings of France place most of their hopes in their Cavalry, because in policy they would not that the vulgar should be exercised in Arms, Lycorgus gave a Law to the Lacedemonians, that they should never fight often with one enemy: the breaking whereof made the Thebans a small Commonwealth, to be their equals in power: whereupon it was tartly said by Amalcidas to Agessilaus King of Sparta, that by his frequent warring on them and fighting with them, he had made the Thebans good Soldiers against their wills. The Turks won the vast Empire they now possess by making many and speedy Wars. But now that policy being worn out of Fashion, we see that (to omit Persia) the little and distracted Kingdom of Hungary hath for 200 years resisted their Forces. So was it betwixt the Dukes of Austria and the Switzers, and so it is between the Spaniard and Low-Country-

Country-men; who formerly being accounted a dull and heavy people, altogether unfit for the Wars, by their continual combating with the Spaniard, are become ingenious, full of Action, and great managers of causes appertaining to fights, either by Sea or Land. We may hereby also perceive what advantage a small State gaineth by fortifying places and passages: there being nothing which sooner breaketh a great Army, and undoeth a great Prince than to beleaguer a well-fortified Town; for that herein he consumeth his time, and commonly looseth his men, credit and money; as the Romans before Numantia, the great Turk in Malta, and Charles of Burgundy before Nancie. For where War is drawn out of Field unto the Walls, the Mattock and Spade being more necessary than the Sword and Spear, there the Valour of the Assailant is little available, because it wanteth its proper object.

Thus as before we brought these several Estates and Provinces into one hand, so now we have broke them into two; the one part continuing in Obedience to the Crown of Spain, the other governing themselves as a State apart. Under the King remain the Dukedoms of Luxemburg, Limbourg and Brabant, some few Towns excepted) the Marquisate of the Empire, the Earldoms of Hainault, Namur, Artois and Flanders, (except only Schays) and the Lordship or Seignoury of Mechlin, with many places of importance in the Dutchie of Geldres, to countervail the Towns that are held from them in Flanders and Brabant. This is by far the greater part of the Country, and more fruitful in regard of the Commodities there naturally growing, but as much inferiour to the other in power and riches, by reason of their strength in Shipping, by which they have the command at Sea, and thereby draw the whole Trade of Christendom, driven before at Antwerp, to Amsterdam, and other Towns of their Confederacy. Since our Author wrote, a great part of this Country has in three Great and Bloody Wars been extorted by the French, and the rest which remain in the hands of the Spaniards is preserved more by the Hollanders, English, and Germans, than by any strength the Spaniards have of their own: So that it is now one of the Poorest, weakest and most broken States in Christendom, Harra's'd on all occasions, and without any hope of Deliverance.

For the General Government of these Provinces there is a Regent sent from the Court of Spain, whose Authority is generally as great as that of the King; save that all matters of moment pass under the Kings name, and that all Officers of any great trust and concernment are appointed by him, and that all Laws, Decrees, Sentences, and Negotiations are dispatched in his name also. For the assistance of the Regent there is a Privy Council, a Council of State, and a Council of Finances, by whom all things are ordered which concern the Publick, the Regent's Authority co-operating and concurring with them, without which, though they may consult, they can execute nothing. And for the Governance and well ordering of their several Provinces there is in every one of them a Lieutenant or Provincial Government, subordinate to the Regent, and accountable to him; and in each Province a particular Council held in the King's name, consisting of more or less Counsellors, (as the bigness of the Province is) for the most part Doctors or Licentiates of the Civil Laws, with a President at the Head thereof, which in some places they call the Parliament, after the manner of the French, and in some the Chancery. To these Courts all the Subjects do resort for Justice, in Causes both Criminal and Civil: to these are brought Appeals from inferior Judicatures, such as the Courts of great Towns and particular Franchises: and from these lyeth an appeal to the great Council at Mechlin, supreme and superintendent unto all the rest.

When any thing is to be done which concerns the profit of the Prince, or otherwise is of publick moment, the Regent sendeth out Letters in the King's name, to command the Estates, that is to say, the Clergy, the Nobility, and the Principal Towns of every Province, (except those of Luxemburg, Geldres, West-Friesland and Over-Iffel, who by special Priviledge cannot be called out of their own Countries) to come before him. The place of their Assembly is for the most part at Bruxels, the Court and Residence of the Regent; because the Libertiers are also Priviledged not to be summoned out of the Precincts of their own Province. Where being come, the States Assemble not altogether, but those of one Province at a time, so one after another: to whom the President, or some one of the Council of State proposeth in the Princes name that which he demandeth. To which if any Town oppose, then all which the rest have done is of no effect, nothing being granted by the Deputies or States of any Province, but with this condition, that all the rest of the Estates do agree unto it. Without this punctual consent of all parties interrested, the Prince can impose nothing, by their Laws upon the Subject nor alter any thing at all in the publick Government.

And as the people are thus Priviledged in regard of the Prince, so are the Princes and Prelates priviledged in regard of the Pope, it being agreed upon between them.

1. That the Prince is to give Clergy-Benefices, and the Pope to confirm them.
2. That neither Prelate nor Lay-person may be cited to Rome, but the Pope to send his Delegates or Commissioners into the Country.
3. The Pope not to give a Benefice, nor grant a Pardon, nor send a Bull into the Country, without the leave of the Prince.
4. That no Clergy-man can buy Lands or other immoveables, without the Princes consent. And
5. That the Prince hath power to visit the Clergy, to see if they be well governed or not; and if they be not, to reform the Abuses.

Great Priviledges, if consider'd rightly, greater than which few Protestant Princes do pretend to in their own Dominions.

As for the Revenue raised by the Spaniard out of his part of this Estate, it is not easy to be guessed at; and of that which is, there comes but little to his Coffers. The expences of his Court there is as great as ever under any of the former Regents; and his charge of entertaining Souldiers for his Towns and Garrisons greater than before. Nor doth it now stand with reason of State to lay any Arbitrary Taxes upon the people, lest he exasperate them to a second Rebellion, or startle them to some new Confederacy against his Quiet.

Under the Government of the Confederate States are the Dukedom of Gelderland, excepting some few Towns in the hands of the Spaniard, the entire Earldoms of Holland, Zeland and Zutphen, the Seignouries of West-Friesland, Streecht, Over-Iffel, Groning, the Town of Schays, with the Isle of Cassand in Flanders, and many pieces of importance in the Dutchy of Brabant. This is the lesser part by far, and far inferiour to the other in regard of the Soil, but the more populous of the two, and by the Industry and great Trading of the people the more rich and powerful. They are governed after their own old Laws, by the particular Estates of every Province, not yet united into one entire Body of a Common-wealth; saving that for the better preservation of their Confederacy, the Commissioners of the several Provinces do consult together, whom they have honoured with the name of the States General.

The Estates of the particular Provinces elected out of the principal Towns and Places of most importance, do order the Affairs thereof according to their ancient Priviledges, Rights, and Customs, as well by themselves as by their Collegues and Officers whom they do appoint; and that as well for matters of State as in point of Justice. For Administration of the which, the Governours, President, and Counsellors of the Provincial Courts, have the cognizance of all Cases, both civil and criminal, Criminal, and in all Causes of Appeal from inferiour Courts; in each of which they proceed without Appeal, making their Acts and Commissions in the name of the said Governors, Presidents and Council; but pronouncing Sentence and executing Judgment in right of the Sovereignty of the said Province. And these provincial States are chosen generally out of the Plebeians or common People; and the Burghers (at the best) of the greater Townships: the Nobility and Gentry being so worn out, that in all Holland and Zeland there are not left above three Families of Gentlemen, and those compelled to live after the Plebeian Fashion for fear of Envy, and to avoid the Insolency of the saucy Clowns, who out of rudeness and the desire of Equality, hate nothing more among them than the name of a Gentleman.

Out of these Provincial States, which hold not for any certain and determinate time, but only during the pleasure of the Community for which they serve, are chosen one or more for each several Province, according to the Condition and Capacity of those which are chosen, to reside at the Hague, there to consult of the Affairs which concern the Publick: but so, that be they more or less out of every Province they make amongst them but one Suffrage, when any thing is put unto the Vote. And these they call the States General, first because a collected Body out of all the Provinces; and, secondly, because they are not properly to deal in any matters of particular Concernment, which are determinable absolutely by the States Provincial, but only in such things as concern the General Good of the whole Estate, as treating with Ambassadors, making War and Peace, &c. For their Assistance in the which, there is a Council of State, made up of the Governors and some eminent Men of every Province, (in which the Ambassador of England, as long as we held Flushing and the other Cautionary Towns, had his Voice or Suffrage) by whose Advice they dispose of all things which concern the Publick: but so, that if any difficulty do appear in the Businesses, they conclude nothing till they have the Approbation and Consent of the particular Cities and Provinces for which they are chosen; to whom they are accountable for their Administration, and by whom revocable whensoever they please.

The Revenue of this Estate doubtless is exceeding great, the Army which they keep in continual Entertainment consisting of no less than 30000 Men; which they can draw into the Field, leaving the Forts and Towns very well provided; yet so well paid that we never read of any Mutiny amongst them for want thereof. The whole Charge, with the Entertainment of Captains and superior Officers, is said to amount to 500000*l. per Annum*; raised on the People by Excise laid upon all Commodities, and many Taxes of like nature, so insupportable in themselves, and amongst Men which would be thought to live in a Free State, that should the Spaniard or any Prince in Christendom lay but half so much on their Subjects, it would occasion a Revolt. So that whereas one of the first Causes of their falling off from the King of Spain was to free themselves from Taxes and Impositions illegally (as they said) enforced upon them; they have drawn on themselves more arbitrary and illegal Payments than any Nation in the World. So little have they got by the Change of Government. Touching their Power at Sea, we have spoke of already. All I shall now add to it is by way of Instance, which is, That in the Year 1587 the King of Denmark, on pretence of some displeasure, arrested 608 Ships of theirs of all sorts at one time in the Sound; and that the next Year after they set out, upon very short warning, an Hundred good Men of War, to join with England against the invincible Armado, which then threatened both. To conclude, there is nothing wanting to these Countries wherewith the God of all Blessings doth enrich a Nation, but a gracious Prince, unity of Religion, and a quiet Government: which if it pleased the Almighty to confer upon them, they would surpass all Neighbouring States in Treasure, Potency, Content, and all worldly Happiness.

The Form of their Government is excellently described by Sir William Temple, which is done with that accuracy that the Hollanders themselves have approved of it, and honoured him by placing his Picture in their State-House at Nimmeghen. Their miraculous delivery from that horrible Outrage of the French in the year 1672, by the Courage and Prudence of the present Prince of Orange, the second Founder of these States, will be also celebrated by Posterity according to its worth, but shall for the present be omitted.

O F G E R M A N Y.

GERMANY is bounded on the East with Prussia, Poland and Hungary; on the West with France, Switzerland, and Belgium; on the North with the Baltick Seas, the Ocean, and some part of Denmark; on the South with the Alps, which part it from Italy. By which account the modern Germany much differeth from that described by Tacitus and others of the Roman Writers: that comprehending the three Kingdoms of Denmark, Norway, and Sweeden, with so much of the Kingdom of Poland as lieth on this side of the River Vistula; but bounded on the East with the Rhene, and on the South with the Danow: the modern Germany containing on the farther banks of those Rivers five whole Roman Provinces, that is to say, Noricum Ripense, and Mediterraneum, Rhatia secunda, Belgica and Germania prima, with some parts of Rhatia prima and Germania secunda: but terminated with the Danes and the Baltick Sea.

It was first called thus by the Romans, (as some conceive) who seeing the People both in Customs, Speech and course of Life so like those of Gallia, called them the Germani to the Gauls; the word Germanus in the Latin signifying a Brother of the whole Blood, (as our Lawyers phrase it) that is to say, a Brother both by Father and Mother; those which have the same Mother, but divers Fathers, being called Fratres germani. And of this mind is Strabo, who speaking of the great resemblance which was betwixt these Nations in Manners, Speech, Customs and way of Life, concludes it thus, that the Romans did with very good reason call them Germani, cum fratres, eos, Gallorum hoc nomine vellent ostendere; intending to signifie by that name, that they were the Brethren of the Gauls. But this is to be understood of those People only which dwelt next to Gaul, and not of all the Nations which inhabited in this vast Continent according to the ancient extent thereof; it being very well observed by Tacitus, that Germany was at first Nationis, non Gentis, nomen, the name of some of the Nations only, not of all the Country; the name in process of time spreading over all that large Tract of ground and those scattered Nations which were either conquer'd by them or incorporate with them. Others will have the name to be meerly Dutch, deriving it from Ger, which signifieth All, and the word Man, signifying in that Language as in ours; whence also they derive the name of Almans, by which they would imply that the Almans or Germans are a very warlike Nation, a People that have in them nihil nisi virile, nothing not worthy of a Man. Bochartus, somewhat near to this, telling us that Ger in the ancient Gallick did signifie as much as Guerre in the modern French, would have them at their first coming over the Rhene to be called Germans by the Gauls, that is to say, Men of War (or Gens de Arms in the present French) by reason of the great and many Victories obtained by them.

The like diversity I find for the name of Almans. For though some gave them the name of Almans from the same Originals from whence they fetch the name of Germans, as was said before, yet others as probably conjecture that they had that name because they consisted of so many several Nations coming out of the North and North-East hither, that they seemed to be a Hotch-potch of all sorts of Men, kneaded into one Name and Nation; which is the conceit of Asinius Quadratus. But for my part, I do conceive (supposing the name of Almans to be Dutch originally) that the whole Country was not called Almain till such time as the Princes of the Dukedom of Almany (since called Saccia, or Schwaben) did possess the Empire, which continuing in that potent Family near 100 Years, might very well occasion them to be called the Emperors of Almain, or the Almain Race, and so impart that name to the Empire also. And for the Almans naturally and properly so called (of whom we shall speak more when we come to Suevia) I see no Etymology more agreeable to true Antiquity, than to derive the name from Mannus the Son of Tuisco, one of their Gods, and a principal Founder of this Nation, (Tuiscum Deum & filium Mannum; originem gentis conditoresque,) as it is said by Tacitus; the People being called Alemanni (with a double n) in all ancient Writers, as Men that did derive themselves from this Mannus, the Son of Tuisco. In like sorts as (I think) the Marcomanni, inhabiting the Countries of Moravia, were so called, as being the Manni of the Marches, or Outborders of Germany, and not the Markmans, as if they were Men of Mark, the only Men of Fame and Honour of all those Nations; which might as well be pressed from the Dutch Original as that of A'-mana, in the meaning by them pretended. And unto this Opinion I am swayed the rather, because I find the Dutch Nation generally so much inclined to derive their Original from Tuisco, (from whom the Teutones, inhabiting about Brandenburg, may well fetch their Pedegree;) the name of Dutch! and or Dutchmen coming near in sound to Tuisc-land and Tuisc-men. In which I shall subscribe to Verstegan's Opinion, though for the most part I look upon him but as the second part of Goropius Becanus.

But being the Etymologies of the Names of most ancient Nations are very uncertain, and for the most part founded on Conjectures only; let us leave the name a while, and survey the Countrey: the length whereof (according to the truest and exactest measurement) from East to West, that is to say from the Vistula or Weissel to the Rhene, is estimated at 840 Italian Miles; the breadth from North to South, that is to say, from the Ocean to the Town of Brixen in Tyrol, 740 of the same Miles. So that the Figure of it being near a Square, it may take up 3160, miles in compass, or thereabouts. Situate in the Northern temperate Zone, betwixt the middle Parellels of the sixth and tenth Climates, the longest day in the most Southern parts, being 15 hours and an half, and in the most Northern 17 hours and a quarter.

In this compass and extent of Ground are supposed to live 10 millions of People. The Men of the poorer sort are laborious, painful, and of a sincere and honest Carriage; the Nobles for the most part either Scholars or Soldiers, and true lovers of Honour; though Tacitus hath otherwise resolved it, affirming that the Gauls fight for Liberty, the Belgians for Honour, and the Germans for Gain. Which yet is true enough of the common Soldiers, who, if they fail of Pay, fail in Courage presently. Of both sorts they are generally tall and big, of great Bones, much Fleth, and large Sinews, but commonly of such a phlegmatick Constitution, that they have not Spirit enough to manage such a mass of Fleth as they bear about them. Which want of natural heat to concoct that Humour makes them for the most part to be Men of a bright or light brown Hair, and fair Complexions. They are little addicted to Venus, and very much to Bacchus; whence the Proverb, Vivere Germanorum est bibere; and the old Verses,

O utinam possent tam bene ferre sitim.

The Dutch themselves to labour well inure.

O would they Thirst could half so well endure.

This love unto their Liquor, together with their natural Temper, maketh them fat and corpulent. Whereupon Pope Julius the second, stiling the Spaniards Birds of the Air, because of their Ambition; the Venetians and Genoefes Fishes of the Sea, because so much accustomed to Navigation; called the Germans by the name of the Beasts of the Field. And when Augustus was resolv'd to take unto himself the supreme Government of Rome, he was advis'd by Agrippa to chuse a Guard of Germans to attend upon him. The reason was (as Dion giveth it) Because in those great Bodies there was little Malice hidden, and less Subtilty; and that they were a People that took more pleasure to be commanded than to command. In matters of War this People have been formerly in a measure famous; yet not so much by the Valour or Conduct of their Captains (for they have had but few such) as by their own hardiness. They withstood the Romans 210 years, afflicting and troubling them more in that space than either the Carthaginians, Spaniards, Gauls, or Parthians; and even at the last (saith Tacitus) Triumphati magis sunt quam victi, They were rather Triumph'd over than Conquer'd. In our times the Rutters and Lansknights of Germany (for so they called their Horse and Foot) have been much employ'd: but more by reason of their numbers, easily rais'd out of so large a Country, than any opinion of their Valour; being slow of motion, dull of apprehension, fearful of putting any thing to the chance of War. By reason of which fearfulness, as they are very cruel upon all advantages, not sparing either age or sex when they get the Victory; so are they apt to run upon any Alarm, not to be rallied, if once routed, upon any persuasions. Inasmuch as Charles Count of Mansfield, General of an Army of 50000 fighting Men, but most of this Nation, was forced to suffer a small Army of 10000 Turks to pass by his Trenches, being then strongly encamp'd before Sri-gonium, (now Gran) a Town of Hungary, and to victual the Town before his face; not daring to set upon them or disturb their purpose, for fear least, being lustily charg'd, his Germans would give back and endanger all. (Their latter Wars with the French and Turks under the prudent and brave Conduct of the Duke of Lorraine have within this 20 Years so exalted the Courage and Experience of this Nation, that at this day 10000 Germans would as bravely and by God's blessing as successfully Attack and Overcome 50000 Turks.) And yet besides these weaknesses, they have some great faults. One of which is a custom, if their Wages be not duly paid (tho' it be in the very midst of a Battel) to cry Guelts, Guelts, throwing down their Weapons, and suffer themselves to be cut in pieces by the Enemy. And so they served Frederick the Elector Palatine at the Battel of Prague. The other is an extreme humour of Spoil and Plunder; on which they are so bent wheresoever they come, that such as entertain them have just cause to say, that they receive more damage by them than they do by their Enemies. Two undecivable notes of mercenary Valour.

The Women are of a good Complexion, but by reason of their intemperance in eating and drinking, much given to corpulency; Women of a good Carriage (as the saying is) good Bearers, and as fruitful Breeders; servilely obsequious to their Husbands, whom many of good Rank serve at the Table with Trenchers and other necessities; and take away when he hath done, eating the residue apart with and amongst their Maids, scarce sitting down with him once a week; and then too at the lower end, or at some such distance. And though the Women by their Laws have a propriety in their Goods, which they bring with them at their Marriage, or are given them after (so as the Husband hath but the use of them only) and may dispose of them by their last Will at the time of their death; yet is their condition thereby little better, the Husband being no less churlish and imperious than he would be otherwise. Which made Caracalla to say often, that only that Nation knew how to rule their Wives, which added the Feminine Article to the Sun, and the Masculine to the Moon, as the Germans do. Most of them, as well Wives as Virgins, (except Persons of Honour) use to go bare-footed within doors, and seldom put on Shoes or Stockings, but when they are to go abroad on their occasions. A thing that seems the more strange in regard of the extrem coldness of the Country, which is so fierce that generally they lodge between two Feather-beds both in Summer and Winter: and the most Houses have their Stoves, of which the doors and windows are kept very close, as well to retain the heat, as to keep out the cold. Which tho' they may be useful and inoffensive in Gentlemen's houses, yet in the common Inns, where all sorts of People are necessitated to throng together, the ill smells, never purged by admitting any fresh Air, are ready to stifle and choak up the Spirits of raw Travellers, not accustomed to them.

The Diet of Germany, France and Italy, is by a Traveller thus censur'd: The Germans have much Meat, but sluttishly dress'd; the French little, but nearly cooked; the Italians neither the one nor the other. And to say truth, the Germans have meat enough; the People being generally of good stomachs, and either by nature or ill custom excessive both in eating and drinking, seldom rising from the Table till they have devour'd all which was set before them. Inasmuch that in some places it is provided by Law, that in their Feasts they shall not sit above five hours at the Table. During which time, if by Intemperance either in eating or drinking a Man disgorge his foul Stomach in his fellow's Lap, or piss under the Table, it is no disgrace to him, nor at any time taken notice of to his reproach. Which humour of gormandizing and excessive drinking is not only cherish'd among the Vulgar, but even amongst their greatest Princes; who, besides what they do in this kind themselves, have their drinking Champions, as well to answer all Challenges, as to challenge all comers, contending with each other, as a point of State, whose Cellar shall afford the greatest and most capable Vessels.

The Title of the Father descends to all the Children; every Son of a Duke being a Duke, and every Daughter a Dutchess: a thing which the Italians hold so ridiculous that they put it in the fore-front of this facetious Satyr. The Dukes and Earls of Germany, the Dons of Spain, the Monsieurs of France, the Bishops of Italy, the Nobility of Hungary, the Lords of Scotland, the Knights of Naples, and the Younger Brethren of England, make a poor Company. For by this common assuming of the Father's Honour, and the parting his Lands among all the Brethren, the Nobility is beyond reason multiplied; and no less impoverish'd; there being not long since seventeen Princes of Anhalt, and twenty-seven Counts of Mansfield; to most of which their Arms have been the best part of their Riches, & nihil nisi arma & manus & in his omnia, as Tacitus once said of the ancient Britains. And yet there is not one of this poor Nobility that will vouchsafe to marry with the Daughter of the wealthiest Merchant, or suffer any of their Sisters to be married to any under the degree of a Nobleman; nor any juster cause of a Dithering their Children than ignoble Marriages: they never permitting the Issue of such a Bed to succeed in any of their Fees, Estates or Titles: by means whereof, tho' they debar themselves of such accessions of Wealth as Matches of that kind might bring them; yet, to the great honour of their generosity in this particular, they preserve the pure Stream of their Blood from running into muddy Channels, and keep the Spirits of brave Men though they want the Fortunes.

The Languages here spoken are, the French in Lorraine, and in some Towns of the Bishop of Triers; the Italian in the highest part of Tyrol, which lie next to the Commonwealth of Venice; the Slavonian spoken in Bohemia, Moravia, and some parts of Lusatia; and the High Dutch, the general Language of the Country. A Language

Language very ancient doubtless, (though I am not so much a Geropian as to think it spoken in Paradise, or before the Flood) and such as, by reason of the little or no impression which the Roman Armies made upon this Country, hath less commixture with the Latin than any which is used in these Western parts, (the Welch excepted) and is very harsh by reason of its many Consonants.

This Country was esteemed by Tacitus to be rude and barren, containing nothing but unpeopled Forests, unprofitable Heaths; and unhealthful Pools. Germaniam informem terris, asperam cælo, tristem cultu aspectuque, Germany is a deformed Land, under a sharp Air and both as to the sight and Habit of it sad or unpleasant, as he farther addeth. And such no doubt it was in those times wherein Tacitus lived; the people not being civilized, nor the Country cultivated, nor any means found out to rectify the sharpness of that Northern Air. But he who doth observe it now, cannot but confess that there is no Country in the World either better planted, or replenished with more goodly and gallant Cities; being also in most parts both pleasant, healthy and profitable; abounding with Mines of Silver and inferiour Metals, plentiful in Corn and Vines, with which they supply the defect of other Nations, as also with Flesh, Fish, Linnen, Quicksilver, Alum, Saffron, Armour and other Iron-works. The Arable Lands are so spacious in the Eastern parts, that the Husbandman going forward with his Plough in the morning, turneth not back again till noon; so making but two Furrows for his whole daies work. For this Verstegan is my Author; and if it be not credible, let him bear the blame.

Souldiers of most eminency in the elder times were 1. Aminius the Prince of the Cherusci, who overthrew Quintilius Varus and the Roman Legions. 2. Wittikind, the last King of the Saxons. For the middle Ages, 3. Otho, the first, 4. Frederick Barbarossa, 5. Rodolph of Habsburg, Emperours and Kings of Germany; 6. Henry, surnamed the Lion, Duke of Saxony. And in the last Century of years, 7. Frederick the second, Elector Palatine, who made good Vienna against the Turks; 8. Albert of Brandenburg, of whom more hereafter. 9. Ernest Earl of Mansfield, 10. John-George of Jagerndorf, 11. Albert Wallenstein Duke of Fridland, and divers others of late days.

Scholars of note the elder times afforded none, nor the middle many; Learning being here so rare in the middle of the eighth Century, that Vigilius Bishop of Salzburg was condemned of Heresie, for holding that there were Antipodes. In the next Age there flourished Rabanus Maurus, Haimo of Halberstadt, Walafridus Strabus, men learned for the times they liv'd in. And in the following times, Ockam, a stout defender of the Rights of the Empire against the Encroachments of the Pope, Otho Frisingensis the Historian, Albertus Magnus the Philosopher; of which last it is said, that he made the Statua, of a Man, which with the help of Artificial Engines could speak articulately, and was the work of 50 years. Then in the days of our Grandfathers we have 1. Martin Luther, that great instrument of the Reformation. 2. Philip Melancthon, his Coadjutor in that work, but of more excellent parts, and far better temper; thence called the Phoenix of that age. 3. Joachim Camerarius, a great friend of Philip. 4. Martin Chemnitz, a solid and laborious Writer. 5. Flacius Illyricus, the chief Author of the Magdeburgian Centuries, and Father of the Rigid Lutherans. 6. Sebastian Munster, and industrious Cosmographer, and a learned Linguist. 7. Silburgius, and 8. Buxtorfius, as great Linguists as he, and John Steidan, the Learned and Industrious Author of the History of the Reformation. Not to descend to farther instances in those who have so filled the Marts of Frankfort in these latter times.

But the greatest excellency of this people lieth in the Mechanical part of Learning, as being eminent for many Mathematical Experiments, strange Water-works, Medicinal Extractions, Chymistry, the Art of Printing, and inventions of like noble nature, to the no less benefit than admiration of the World. Amongst which I cannot chuse but instance in that work of Regiomontanus, an excellent Mathematician, and a cunning Artizan, spoken of by Keckerman; who at the coming of the Emperor Maximilian to the City of Nuremberg, made a wooden eagle, which flew a quarter of a mile out of the Town to meet him; and being come to the place where he was, returned back of its own accord, and so accompanied him to his Lodging. A thing if true (as the Relator was a man of too much gravity to abuse the World with an untruth) exceedingly beyond that Miracle of a flying Dove, for which Archytas is so famed amongst the ancients. Exceeded only by himself in a like invention, which was that of an Iron Fly, (the greater Miracle of Art, because less in quantity) which at a Feast, to which he had invited some of his special Friends, flew from his hand about the Room and returned again, as is affirmed by Peter Ramus; expressed thus by Divine Du Bartas.

Once as this Artist, more with mirth than meat,
Feasted some Friends, whom he esteemed great,
From his learn'd hand an Iron Flie flew out,
And, having flown a perfect Round-about,
With wearied wings return'd unto her Master,
And as judicious on his arm he plac'd her.
O divine Wit, that in the narrow Womb
Of a small Flie could find sufficient room
For all those Springs, Wheels, Counterpoise & Chains, Which stood instead of Life, and Spur, and Reins!
And amongst these I reckon Bertholdus Smart, a Franciscan Frier, the Inventer (though by accident) of that fatal Instrument, the Gun. Studious in Chymistry, he mingled dried Earth, Sulphur, and some other Ingredients, which he had put into a Mortar covered with a stone; and striking Fire to light a Candle, as the night came on, a spark by chance fell into the Mortar, and catching hold of the Sulphur and other Minerals, with great violence blew up the stone wherewith it was covered. Amazed at which, he made trial severally of these Ingredients, to find out which of them it was that produced that effect: which having discovered, he cauled an Iron Pipe to be made, crammed it with Sulphur, Saltpetre, and Stones; and putting fire to it, saw with what violent noise and fury it discharged it self. This Invention he is said to have first communicated to the Venetians, Anno 1330, or thereabouts, who having been often vanquished by the Genoeses, and driven almost to a necessity of yeilding to them, by the help of their Guns (Bombards they were then called) gave unto their enemies a notable discomfiture. And this was the first Battle that ever those warlike Pieces had a part in; which not long after put to silence all the Engines and Devices wherewith the Ancients were wont to make their Batteries. The next that made use of this instrument were the Inhabitants of the Baltick Sea: and not long after them the English at the Siege of Cullice, Anno 1347; about which time they began also to be used in France: The French, it seemeth, learned the use of them from the English, and the first benefit received by them, was the death of that famous Leader, Thomas Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, who at the Siege of Orleans was slain with a great shot, An. 1425. Twenty years after this, An. 1446, they were first used in Spain, at the Siege of Setteville, a Town of the Kingdom of Granada, by the Castilians; and after by degrees made common to the rest of that Continent. And being grown common in this Continent, as well unto the Jews and Moors as unto the Christians, it was not long before they taught it the Turks. For the Jews being forced to abandon Spain, Anno 1492, betook themselves to Greece and other parts of the Turks Dominions, to whom they shewed the Art of making Ordnance, Gunpowder, Harquebusses, sufficiently since used by that people to the hurt of Christendom. But somewhat before this the Turks had been in part beholden for them to the Wars they had with the Venetians; beholden, I say, for notwithstanding the harm received by them at first, ye afterwards growing expert in managing of them, they gave unto Ussan Cassanes and Hismael two of the most mighty Emperours of Persia, two memorable Overthrows by the help of their great Ordnance only. The Portugals were in this Art the Tutors to the Persians: for as Solyman the Turkish Emperour objected against them, they not only aided Tamas the Sophi with certain Harquebussiers, but also lent him workmen to shew him the use and making of Artillery. These great Pieces at the first invention were rude unwieldy, and charged with Stone-bullets only, but by degrees they came to that perfection, both for the wall and the hand, which now they have. Whether now Archery or Gunning be to be preferred, I stand not here to determine; only this I am sure of, that Victories have been of late purchased with less expence of blood and life than ever formerly. But of this Theam more perhaps hereafter, when we shall come to take the Parthian Archery into consideration.

The Religion of this Country it is not easie to name, considering so many are here allowed; Jews being intermixt with Christians, and these divided into Papists and Protestants; the latter also divided into Lutherans, Calvinists, &c. The Christian Faith was first planted here, if Dorotheus Bishop of Tyre be of any credit, by St. Thomas surnamed Didymus, one of the Twelve. But being there is little truit unto his Relations, the best were to say with the Magdeburgians and the Martyrologies, that the Germans had not all the same Apostle; that the Gospel was first preached amongst the Rhatians and Vindelici by S. Lucius of Cyrene, amongst those of Noricum by S. Marick, by S. Crescens at Mentz, S. Clement at Metz in Lorraine, all of them Apostolical men, and of the number of the 70; after that by S. Maternus at Colen, and by S. Eucherius at Triers. That the Faith was planted very early in these Countries, Irenaus, the renowned Bishop of Lions, An. 170, is sufficient evidence, who takes notice of it; and that it prospered very well and took very good root, appeareth by the Bishops of Mentz, Triers, Worms, Spires, Basil, and Strasburg, subscribing to the Council of Colen in the Reign of Constantius, the Son of Constantine the Great, An. 347. But the light hereof being extinguished for a time by those barbarous Nations who fell upon these out-parts of the Roman Empire, began to shine again on the Conversion of the French in all parts of this Country; the Conquests and example of this puissant Nation giving great encouragement thereunto. In which as those of other Countries do not want their honour, so the greatest part thereof belongs to the English Saxons; Wilibrode the first Bishop of Utrecht, Winnald of Aichstat, Swibert of Verden, Willibald of Breme, and especially Boniface the Archbishop of Mentz, being most gloriously fortunate in that sacred service. The Moravians, Bohemians, and other farther off, came not in till afterwards. Not fully converted to the Faith, they began to suck in the Corruptions of the Church of Rome; discerned and oppressed by J. Huss and Hierome of Prague, Bohemian Divines, who by reason of the Marriage of King Richard the second of England with the Daughter of Wenceslaus Emperour and King of Bohemia, had opportunity to be acquainted with the Preachings of Wicliff, the Point of whose Doctrine they approved and propagated. But these two being burnt at Constance by the decree of that Council, their followers in Bohemia would not so give over, but after many sufferings and much blood shed, obtained at last a Toleration of the Emperour Sigismond their King, more able to make good his word in his own Dominions, than he had been to save the two Martyrs from the fire at Constance, to whom he had granted his safe Conduct for their coming and going. In this condition they remained under the name of those of the Sub utraque or Calistini, because of their administering the Sacrament in both kinds, till the rising of Luther; who justly offended at the impious and unwarrantable Assertions of Friar Tokel, and others of the Pope's Pardon-mongers; first opposed their doings, and after questioned their Authority by which they acted, falling from one point to another, till he had shaken the Foundations of the Roman Fabrick. Of the success of his undertaking we shall speak but little, as in a thing well known to all men of knowledge. Suffice it in this place to say that his Doctrine was not only received in Germany, but generally imbraced in the great Kingdoms of Denmark and Swetthland, with the Provinces and Islands appertaining to them, in a great part of Poland, Hungary, and Transylvania, as far almost as to the banks of the Euxine Sea; but for the progress of it here (which we are more especially at this time to enquire into) it was so well approved of, that the Dukes of Saxony, Brunswick, Lunenbourg, Wirttemberg, Mecklenberg, and Pomerania, the Marquiss of Brandenburg, the Lantgraves of Hassia, and most of the free Imperial Cities did adhere unto it, who from their Protestation made at Spires (the Imperial Chamber) to that effect, An. 1529. had the name of Protestants. The next year following they delivered in the Confession of their Faith at Ausburg, a City of Suevia, thence called Confessio Augustana; authorized, or tolerated at least, after a long War, with variable success on both sides, by the Emperour Charles the fifth, at the Pacification made at Passaw, An. 1552. and afterwards more fully at Ausburg, (where their Confession had first been tendred, Anno 1555).

But not to pass over this matter in these generals only, we may know once for all, that in the year 1530, the Protestant Princes having tendred their Confession at Ausburg, (as before is said) and finding it not so well received as they did expect, entred into a Confederation at the Town of Smalkald (belonging to the Duke of Saxony) for defence thereof, and for the Defence of one another in pursuance of it. Into this Confederacy first entred John Frederick the Duke of Saxony and his Son, Ernest, and Francis Duke of Lunenbourg, Philip the Lantgrave of Hassia, George Marquiss of Brandenburg, the Cities of Straesberg, Neurenberg, Heilbrun, Ruteling, Ulm, Lindaw, Constance, Memming, and Campedune. Afterwards, Anno 1535, there entred into it Barnimus and Philip Princes of Pomeran, Ulrick Duke of Wirttemberg, Robert Duke of Zweibrucken, (or Bipont, as some Writers call him) William Earl of Nassau, George, and Jouchim Earls of Anhalt, the Cities of Francford, Hamborough, Ausburg, Hanover, and not long after the Palsgrave and King of Denmark. But this Confederacy was like to have dashed the business. For Charles the fifth looking upon it as a matter of a dangerous consequence to the power and safety of the Empire, and withal instigated thereunto by the Popes of Rome, whose interest was no less concerned in it, considering that he could not otherwise untie this Gordian knot, resolved to cut it with the Sword. At first the War succeeded luckily with the Protestant Princes, who armed themselves upon the noise of his Preparations: But there being an equality of Command between the Duke John Frederick and Philip the Lantgrave, the one sometimes not approving, otherwhiles thwarting the other's projects, the end proved not answerable. Besides the politick Emperour knowing full well that the Forces of confederate States are oftner broken by Delays than Battle, avoided all occasions of fighting, and thereby wearied out this great Army, which, without performing any notable exploit, disbanded it self, every man hasting home to defend his own. But none had more reason so to do than the Duke Electour: For in his absence his Cousin Maurice (forgetting the Education he had under him, and how formerly the Duke had conquered for him, and estated him in those parts of Misnia (maugre all opposition of the Popish party) which formerly had belonged to Duke George his Uncle) combined himself with the Emperour, and invaded the Electours Country; who notwithstanding recovered not only all his own, but a great part also of those Lands and Territories in which he had before estated his ungrateful Kinsman. But while he was in this Career, the Emperour perour suddenly falls upon him not far from Mulberg, (where the Duke was then hearing a Sermon) and by the suddenness of his coming routed his timorous unprovided Army; the Duke himself with some few resolute Gentlemen making head against him, till the most of them were slain, and the Duke taken Prisoner. The next morning he was condemned to loose his head, but pardoned at the last upon some conditions: amongst which it was none of the least, that he should surrender his Estates, and resign the Electoral dignity to be disposed of by the Victor, as also that he should without ransom release Marquis Albert of Brandenburg, (a busy and unquiet Man) who was then his Prisoner. This done, the Emperour fraudulently intrapped the Lantgrave, as we shall shew more at large hereafter in another place; and carrying on the Wars from one free City to another, compelled them to receive the Mass, and to submit to such Composition as he pleased to grant them; in so much as it was thought that the Emperour gained in this journey a Million and 600000 Crowns, and 500 pieces of great Ordnance. But these Successes were too great and too unjustly grounded to continue long. For Maurice, the new Duke Elector, who had married the Lantgrave's Daughter, and engaged himself unto his Children both by Word and Bond (and that too at the Emperour's instance) for his safe returning, conceived himself unworthily dealt with so to be made the instrument of his Father's thralldom, and therefore that he was obliged both in love and honour to leave no way untryed which might gain his Liberty. And withal, finding cause to fear that the course of the Emperour's great successes might end at last in the subversion of the common Liberty, he secretly by an under-hand practice called in the French, and raising Forces under the colour of the Emperour's service, gained Marquis Albert before mentioned) who had then a running Army in the field) to associate with him, and fell so suddenly on the Emperour, lying then at Innspruck, that he compell'd him to run away in post-hast by torch-light, and the Prelates to break off the Council of Trent, where at that time they were assembled. Upon which turning of the balance a Peace soon ensued, which brought forth the Edicts of Passaw and Ausburg, spoken of before, the best and surest Pledges of the Peace of Germany.

In the mean time, while the Lutherans thus played their game, there started up another party, begun at first by Zuinglius amongst the Switzers, of whose both Doctrine and Success we have spoken there. These, not communicating Counsels, went two several ways, especially in the Points of Consubstantiation and the Real presence; not reconciled in their times, nor like to be agreed upon amongst their followers. For Calvin, rising into the esteem and place of Zuinglius, added some Tenets of his own to the former Doctrines touching Predetermination, Free-will, Universal Grace, Final Perseverance; (Points fitter for the Schools than a popular Auditory;) by which the differences were widened, and the breach made irreparable: the Cause being followed on both sides with great impatience, as if they did not strive so much for Truth, as Victory. And of the two, those of the Lutheran party seemed more violent, (though the other was altogether as irreconcilable) who could not chuse but stomach it, to see themselves undermined and blown up by a new form of Doctrine not tolerated in the Empire, but under colour of Conformity to the Confession of Ausburg. For Zuinglianism being entertained amongst the French, a busy and active people, spread it self farther in few years than it was propagated by the Switzers, (men of the same temper with the Dutch) in all times before. Inasmuch as it did not only prevail in France, but by the reputation of Calvin, and the diligence of his Followers, was wholly entertained in the Kingdom of Scotland, the Netherlands, in many parts of the Kingdom of Toland, and even in Germany it self, in which it got footing in all the Territories of the Counts Palatines of the Rhene, in some of the Lantgraves of Hussia, in the Imperial City of Straesburg, many of the Hanse-Towns, and amongst other Princes and free Cities of inferior note. The rest of Germany, containing the Paramount Estates of the House of Austria, the Duke Dux of Bavaria and Lorraine, the Territories of the three Spiritual Electors, and of all the other Bishopsricks in the hands of the Clergy, some of the Marquises of Bass, part of the subjects of Cleve, and but three of the Imperial Cities, (and those small ones too) that is to say, Germund, Uberlingen, and Dussell-Spyel, (unless some more be added by the great late Successes of the House of Austria) remain in their Obedience to the See of Rome; all which together will hardly make up one fifth part of this spacious Country, the other four being in the power and possession of the Protestant party: yet so that there be as many Protestants in Bohemia, Austria, and in other the Estates of the Popish Princes; as there be Papists in the Free Cities of Framford, Nuremberg, Ulm, Aken, and some other places, besides the late increase of them in both the Palatinates. Of such a speedy growth was the Reformation, that within the space of 40 years it was not only received in all those Countries which do now profess it, but had also got some footing both in Spain and Italy.

And here perhaps it will not be improper to look upon the means which were chiefly used for the promoting of this Work; by which it came to spread so far in so little time, and next upon the stops and hinderances which were given unto it, by which it was restrained from spreading farther. 1. For the means used in the Advancement of this Work, (next under the Almighty power of the most wise God) they were these especially. 1. The translating of the Scripture into vulgar Languages, which easily discovered the Corruptions of the Church of Rome, both in Doctrinals and Forms of Worship. 2. The diligent Preaching of their Ministry, both in Towns and Villages for the expounding of the Scriptures, and fitting them to the Capacities of the meanest Auditors; which gained exceedingly both on the judgment and affections of the common people; the course of Preaching having been formerly neglected by the Parish Curate, and turned off wholly in a manner to the begging-Friars. 3. The publishing of Books of Practical Piety and Devotions, which mightily inflamed the hearts of all sorts of men; accustomed before to no other Duties than to tell over their Credo's and Pater-Nosters, and to keep a just account of their Ave-Maries, and that most commonly in a tongue which they understood not. 4. The Education of youth, especially in Catechisms containing the whole body of Christian Religion; which once well planted in their minds, could not so easily be pulled up and removed thence by any contrary persuasion. 5. Their continual offers of disputation with the adverse party in a publick audience; which being denied (as generally at the first it was) gave great assurance of the truth and soundness of the one side, as of the falsehood and weakness of the other. 6. Their compiling of Martyrologies and Histories of the Church, which could not but produce an admirable Zeal and Constancy both in the Readers and the Hearers, animated thereunto by those brave Examples which therein was presented to them. One point of Prudence hath been wanting, which is the calling of a General Council of all the Protestant and Reformed Churches, for the composing of the differences which have grown between them. And this I look on as the first and greatest stop to the Reformation from proceeding farther; many men (not improbably) thinking there must be some want of truth in the Foundation of that building, which had such wide and open breaches in the Superstructures. The Tyranny and Terrour of the Inquisition, by which it is kept out of Spain, and kept down in Italy, and all other parts of the Pope's Obedience, together with those other Policies both to discountenance and suppress it, (which we have spoken of in our description of the Papacy) may come next to this. Then add to these the cares and diligence of the Jesuits and Seminary nary Priests, in applying themselves to all those means which they found so effectual on the other side, thereby not only countermining their Endeavours, but fighting them upon even ground with the self-same Weapons. And last of all, the Plots and Practices of the Papal Ministers in working on the Humours of the opposite Parties, thereby enraging them not only into Tongue-combat and velitations of the Pen, but even to try it out by blows in an open War, once I am sure. By these means they have not only stopped the Progress of the Reformation, but would fain give themselves some hopes to destroy it utterly, and thereby to restore the Pope to that power and splendor which formerly he had attained unto in these parts of Europe. But of these and such like self-flatteries I shall say with Seneca, or rather in his words applied to my own Intention:

— He manus Trojam erigent?

Parvus habet spes Troja, si tales habet.

That is to say,

Shall these small Jars restore the ruin'd Pope;
Small hopes he hath, if this be all his hope.

As for the Government of their Churches, those that continue in Obedience to the See of Rome are under the old form of Archbishops and Bishops, coeval in all Germany (as in most places else) with the Faith it self. The Calvinists (by which name the Zuinglianist now also passeth, if not eaten out) submit themselves for Doctrine, Discipline and Forms of Worship, to Calvin's Model; whereof we have spoken more at large when we were in Geneva. And for the Lutherans, they have divided the Episcopal Function from the Revenues; giving these last to some of their younger Princes, with the Title of Administrators of such a Bishoprick; the Function or Jurisdiction to some of the more eminent Clergy, with the Title of a Superintendent, assigning to them a Priority both of Place and Power before other Ministers, which they enjoy for term of Life, together with some liberal Maintenance, in proportion to it. In other things, as Order, Habit, and Title of Dignity, they differ not at all from the other Ministers. And over them, in the place of Archbishops, they have their General Superintendents; all of them of each sort accomptable to the Supreme Ecclesiastical Consistory, (as formerly to the Provincial or National Synod) made up of Counsellors of State, and the Heads of the Clergy. So that the Form seems to be much the same as in elder times, but is indeed more different than it seems to be; a great part of the alteration being in the Names; and that no other in a manner than by changing the old Greek word Episcopus into the new Latin word Superintendents, both signifying an Overseer, though in different Languages. And so Ex Gracis bonis Latinis facere non bonas, in the Poet's word. Which brings into my mind the Story of a People of Africk, who having received much hurt by Tigers, made a Decree that no Man from thenceforth should call them Tigers, but give them a more harmless or less hated name, and then all was well. And as they do conform thus far to the elder times in form of Government, so do they also come up to them in their Forms of Worship; retaining still a settled and prescribed Liturgy for all their Churches, most of the Holy-days observed in the former Ages, the Cross in Baptism, Kneeling at the Communion, and many other innocent and significant Ceremonies, commended to the Church by most pure Antiquity. In point of maintenance they are as defective as the Calvinists are; few of their Ministers having Tithes, most of them Pensions or Stipends, and those small ones also, seldom exceeding 2 or 300 Guldens, besides Wood for fuel, Corn, and some other Necessaries.

Now because mention hath been made of the Hanse-Towns and Imperial Cities, we are to understand that the Cities of this Country are of three sorts. 1. Such as are holden in possession by some of the Princes in way of Inheritance, part of their Patrimony and Estates; as Heidelberg, Vienna, Munich, Wittemberg, &c. 2. Such as are held originally of the Empire it self: which are called Free Cities, for their great Prerogatives of their Coining Money, and governing themselves by their local Ordinances; Imperial, in regard they know no Lord or Protector but the Emperor only, to whom they paid two third parts of such Contributions as are assessed in the Assemblies or general Diets, and 1500 Florens yearly for themselves and their Territories. They are in number about 60, many of which are of a fair and large Estate; such as are Nuremberg, Ausburg, Ingolstadt, Spire, Wormes, &c. Of which thus Guicciardine: Those, saith he, are called Free Cities, which acknowledging by a certain determinate Tribute the Authority of the Empire, do notwithstanding in all other things govern themselves after their own Laws, not seeking to amplify their Territories, but defend their Liberties. 3. The third sort is of those which are called Hanse-Towns, or Hansesteden, that is (say some) An zee steden, Towns upon the Sea; such as those were who first entred into this Confederacy: but at this time the name extends to many in-land Cities, and of no great Trading, joined with then in a League for their common Defence and Preservation. A League made first against the Danes and the Earls of Holstein by some of the Maritime Towns bordering next unto them, that is to say, Lubeck, Hamburg, Rostock, Wisnar, Straelsund, and Lunenburg: but afterwards many other of the Imperial Cities and Towns of Trade associated with them in an offensive and defensive League against all Enemies whatsoever. In number about 72, those of Livonia and Prussia being taken into the reckoning: many of which are able to put to Sea 150 good Sail of Ships; such as lie more within the Land contributing in Money or otherwise to the common Charge. First handfelled by Waldemar III. of Denmark, whom they vanquish'd in a Naval Battel. After that, growing into credit, and driving a great Trade in most parts of Christendom, they enjoyed many large and ample Privileges wheresoever they came: call'd amongst us sometimes by the name of Easterlings, from their Easterly dwelling: and Merchants of the Steelyard, from the place where they stowed their Commodities; and Guilda Teutonicorum, in regard of their Nation, for the most part Dutch. But the English learning so much wit at the last as to make use of their own Shipping, they began here by little and little to decay, and are now almost worn out of memory with us; though still of good esteem and credit in other Countries.

The principal Rivers hereof are, 1. Danubius, or the Danow, which rising out of Nigra Silva, or the Schwarzenwald, that is, the Black Forest, as the Germans call it, at a little Village of Schwaben call'd Den Eschingen, about two Dutch Miles from the shores of the Rhene passeth through Schwaben, Bavaria, Austria, &c. by the Cities of Ulm, Regensburg, Passau, Vienna, Rab, Buda, and Belgrade, beyond which it beginneth to be called Ister, by that name most generally known amongst the Gracians; and receiving into its Channel, from the long tract of the Alps, the Sarmatian, and Carpathian Mountains, about 60 navigable Rivers, besides lesser Brooks, disgorgeth his full Stomach by several mouths (the names whereof we shall find in Dacia) into the lap of the Euxine Sea; the whole length of his course 1500 Miles, inso-much as we may say with a Modern Poet,

*Cedere Danubius se tibi, Nile, negat,
O seven mouth'd Nile, I plainly see,
Danow will scarce give way to thee.*

2. Rhene (of whose original and course we have spoken more fully when we were in Belgium) which running from Switzerland through Germany and Belgium, after a course of 800 Miles, emptieth it self into the German Ocean. All which shall be here added is, that it gives the Title of the Reine-grave to some Princes of as good Blood as the best in Germany, whose Possessions and Estates bordering near unto it they were from thence so called; but of late time decayed (almost to nothing) in their Estates, and living for the most part on the Entertainment of other Princes, whom they serve in their Wars; the the Palsgraves of the Rhene, and two at the least of the three Bishops Electors raising themselves upon the ruine of this House. 3. Elb, (Albis) which springing out of the Mountain of Risenberg in the skirts of Bohemia, runneth a course of 400 miles and passeth by the Cities of Dresden, Meissen, Torgaw, Wittenberg, Magdeburg, and Lawenburg, Cities of the Electoral and ancient Saxony, and so betwixt the Dukedom of Holstein (now part of Denmark) and the rest of Germany. 4. Oder, which hath its Fountain in the highermost parts of Moravia; and after it hath run its course through Brandenburg and Pomerania, of some 300 miles in length, falleth at last into the Baltick Sea. 5. Visurgis, or the Weser, which issuing out of the Hills of Thuringia, runneth through Hessia and Westphalen, to the City of Breme, not far from which it falls into the German Ocean. 6. Fistula, or the Weyssel, which rising out of the Capathian Mountains betwixt Poland and Hungary, first passeth by Cracovia, the chief City of Pole, then betwixt Pomeran and Prussia, and so into the Baltick Sea; the ancient Boundary of this Country, dividing it from Sarmatia Europea. 7. Moselle, which rising out of the Mountain Vague, in the Confines of Lorrain and the County of Burgundy, passeth directly thorough Lorrain, and the district of Triers, by the Cities of Toul, Metz, and Triers it self, beyond which last it falleth into the Rhene, at the Town called Confluentz. 8. Sala, or Salza, which rising in the Mountains of Fitchelberg in the Borders of the Upper Palatinate, and passing by the skirts of Misnia and Saxony (specially so called, falleth into the Elb beyond Wittenberg, having first watered the Cities of Naumberg, Mensberg, and Jenc, very observable for being the most Eastern Bounds of the Saxon Conquests, by this River parted from the Slaves. 9. Manus, or the Maine, which hath its Spring in the Mountains of Bohemia, and passing by the Cities of Bamburg and Wurtzburg, is received into the Rhene, beneath Frankford. 10. Amisus, or the Ems, which hath its Fountain near Paderborn in Westphalia, and passing between the two Frieselands, falleth into the German Ocean not far from Emden.

Chief Mountains of this mighty Country, besides the Alps spoken of before, which run in a long tract betwixt it and Italy, are, 1. Abnoba, now called Schwartzenwald, i. e. Black Hills, (the present name both of this Mountain and the Forest of Martina, which doth overshadow it) out of which rise the springs of Danow and the Neccar, two principal Rivers of this Country. 2. The Sudeta, incircling Bohemia, covered with the Woods called anciently Gabreta and Luna, now called the Wolds, of Passaw and Behaimer, from the places adjoining. 3. Citius in Austria, now called Culember, the ancient Bounds betwixt Pannonia and Noricum, two Roman Provinces. 4. Vogesus, commonly called Vague, and by some French Writers le Monte de Faucities, which incircling Lorrain, divideth it on the East and South from Alsace and the County of Burgundy. As for the Forests of this Country, besides those spoken of already, that of most note was the Forest of Hercynia, (of which all the rest were but Limbs or branches) the beginning whereof was about the Borders of Switzerland and Alsacia, from thence running Eastward along the course of the Danow unto Transylvania, and their declining on the left hand through the vast Countries of the Lituanians, Moscovites, and Russes, in which last there are still many vast Deserts of it; the greatest part thereof in Germany being long since consumed, in place whereof are many goodly Corn-fields and well-built Cities. A Wood so formidable to the Romans, that they durst never venture to search to the end of it; the length thereof after the end of 60 days Journey being undiscoverable, and the farther search into it quite laid aside.

These Boundaries and Land-marks being thus described we shall the better follow the Chorography of this great Continent, according to the several Principalities and Estates therein, having first taken a survey of the ancient condition of it, with so much of the Story as concerns the whole, before it came to be divided into so many hands. The Country was first planted by the posterity of Gomer, who, descending from the Mountains of Albania, their first Seat, in memory thereof first called Gomerini, after Cimmerini, by that name known to Pliny, Strabo, and others of the Ancient Writers, removed into the more fruitful Plains of Phrygia, and there built the City Cimmeris, which Pliny speaks of. But that small Province proving of too narrow a compass to contain his Off-spring, and the adjoining Countries being taken up in the former Plantations, they removed unto the North-west of the Euxine Sea, where we find a City of their building called Cimmerium, mentioned both by Pliny and Strabo, and the adjoining Streight or Fretum, called by the name of Bosphorus Cimmerius by the Greeks and Latins. Driven from these Dwellings by the more powerful Scythians, they spread themselves into the West, where they began to be called Cimbri, and by that name, and under those of the Ambrones and Tentones, several Branches of them, intended an Invasion and Conquest both of Gaul and Italy: wherein they had prevailed in all probability, nisi isti seculo Marius contigisset, had not Marius happened to have lived in that Age, by whom they were discomfited and destroyed. That these Gomerians or Cimbri were the first Inhabitants of Gaul, Germany, and all the Nations of the North and West of Europe, is generally agreed upon by all the Learned. Divided they were into several Nations, and those also subdivided into lesser Tribes, and more obscure Families; amongst which those of Tentones or Tuscones, from which the Dutch do so affect to derive themselves, might be some of the principal there settled, and not pleased with that desert dwelling, such of them as dwelt nearest to the Rhene passed over that River, and bearing the Gauls farther up into the Country, possessed themselves of their Dwellings, enjoying them (till conquered by Julius Caesar) without any Rival. But Caesar, who moved with the complaints of the Gauls, and the insolencies of Ariovistus a King of the Germanes, (for by that name for the reasons aforesaid the Romans called them) marched into their Quarters: the Roman Legionaries being so afraid of this dreadful Enemy, ut testamenta passim in principis scriberentur, (saith the Historian) that many of them made their Testaments at the Gates of their Camp, before they fell upon the Enemy. Vanquished by Caesar, and Ariovistus being fled over the Rhene, the Romans, by command of their General made a Bridge over the River, and rather terrified than conquered the neighbouring Germanes; who were more fully brought into subjection by Drusus, the adopted Son of Augustus Caesar, from thence called Germanicus, by whom not only the Rheti and Norici, then lying out of the bounds of Germany, now included in it, were subdued in fine, and brought into the form of Roman Provinces; but the whole Country in a manner to the very Ocean was forced to yield obedience to the Roman Empire. But this was for so short a time, that it was both won and lost during the Reign and Government of Augustus Caesar. So that the whole established Conquests of the Romans upon this Country, as it is now bounded, contained no more than the Provinces of Germania, and Belgica Prima, with part of Germania Secunda, belonging unto the Diocels of Gaul; the greatest part of the two Rhetia's being under the Diocels of Italy; Noricum Mediterraneum and Ripense, with some parts of Pannonia, parts of the Diocels of Illyrium. But none of these (as lying on the West side of the Rhene, and the South of the Danow) did ever pass in the account of the ancient Germany, the Germanes not enduring the yoke so long as to be brought within the number of the Roman Provinces. Provoked with the Lust and Insolencies of Quintilius Varus, who succeeded Drusus in that charge, they set upon him under the conduct of Arminius, a chief Prince amongst them, kill him, and utterly cut off three Legions; as we shall see more particularly when we come to Brunswick, the ancient Seat of the Cherusci, by whom the Forces of that Empire were driven over the Rhene. After which defeat Augustus laid aside the Affairs of Germany, confining his Empire within the Rhene, which Drusus had extended to the banks of the Ocean. Hac clade factum, ut Imperium quod in littore Oceani non steterat, in ripa Rheni fluminis staret, saith the Historian. Nor did the Romans only forbear to revenge this Loss by making a new War upon them; but seemed more careful to defend themselves against those Invasions, than to incur the hazard of a new Defeat; quartering eight Legions with their several Wings and Aid on the shores of the Rhene, and four upon the banks of the Danow, to keep these People from incroaching on the Roman Provinces. But the fatal period of that Empire drawing on a pace, the French, Burgundians, Almans, and other Dutch Nations break through their Guards, dispossess the Romans of all Gaul, Rhetia, and Noricum, which they share amongst them: till in the end the French, prevailing over the rest, extend their Empire over all the modern Germany; chiefly perform'd by the valour of Charles the Great, created Emperor of the West by the People of Rome, and crowned with the Imperial Crown by Pope Leo IV. on Christmas-day, Anno 801. So that now the old Prophecie of the Druides, concerning the removing of the Empire into the West, came to be accomplish'd; tho' Tacitus in his time accounted it for a vain and idle Prediction. For when Civil: raised a Rebellion amongst the Batavi (the Hollanders and parts adjoining) against Vespasian then newly made Emperor, possessionem rerum humanarum Transalpinis gentibus portendi Druidæ, canebant, the Druides prophesied of the Translation of the Empire to the Transalpine Nations: accomplished, as before is said, in the person of Charles the Great, King of France and Germany. By whom it was divided (for the better ordering or Governance of it) into West-France, or West-rieck, in the barbarous Latin of those times called Westrasia, containing the modern France, and so much of the Netherlands as lieth on the French side of the River M.; and Osternick, (i. e. the Eastern Kingdom) in the Latin of those times Austrasia, containing so much of the modern Germany and Pannonia as was possessed by the French, with the rest of the Netherlands. This was afterwards subdivided into the Kingdoms of Lorrain and Germany: whereof the first contained all Germany within the Rhene, together with the Belgick Provinces before described, the Counties of Flanders and Artois excepted only; the Kingdom of Germany taking up the rest. For in the time of Ludovicus Pius, the Son of Charles, the great Empire of his Father was parcelled out into many Members, as Italy, France, Burgundy, Lorrain and Germany, distributed amongst his Sons and Nephews with the Title of Kings: by means whereof the Kingdoms of Germany and Lorrain, united in the Person of Lewis the Ancient, in little time were alien'd from the House of Charles, and left off to be French, possessed by the great Princes of Lorrain, Saxony, Schamphen, and Bavaria; by them dismembred into many Principalities and inferior States, all passing under the accompt and name of the Dutch or Germans. The Kings and Emperors of which here follow.

The Kings and Emperors of GERMANY.

A. Ch.

- 801 1. Charles the Great, Emperor, King of France and Germany.
 815 2. Ludovicus Pius, King of France, Germany, and the Emperor of the Romans.
 841 3. Lewis, surnamed the Ancient, second Son of Ludovicus Pius, King of Germany, to which anno 876. he united that of Lorrain also.
 4. Charles the Gros, Son of Lewis the Ancient, reigned at first jointly with Carloman and Lewis his elder Brethren, after their deaths sole King of Germany, anno 880. he succeeded Ludovicus Balbus in the Title of Emperor, continued unto his Successors; and during the minority of Charles the Simple by a Faction of the French Nobility was chosen King of France: the whole Estate of Charles the Great becoming once again united in the person of one Sovereign Prince.

- 891 5. Arnulph, the natural Son of Carloman, the Brother of Charles, King of Germany, and Emperor.
 903 6. Lewis or Ludovicus IV. (Lewis the Brother of Charles and Carloman, being reckoned for one) King of Germany, and Emperor, the lawfully begotten Son of Arnulph.
 913 7. Conrade, the Son of Conrade, the Brother of Lewis the 4. the last Prince of the masculine Issue of Charles the Great. After whose death the Francones and Saxons, seeing Charles the Simple, King of France, overlaid by the Normans, or embroiled by the Princes of the House of Anjou: took that advantage to transfer the Empire to themselves: and they made choice of Henry Duke of Saxony to be their Emperor. A worthy Prince, by whom some Nations of the Slaves, the Hungarians, and part of Lorrain were subdued or added to the Empire.
 929 8. Henricus, surnamed Auceps, or the Fowler, Duke of Saxony, elected by the German Princes, but designed by Conrade, as being eldest Son of Otho Duke of Saxony by Luitgardis, Daughter to the Emperor Arnulph, and consequently a branch of the Caroline Stock.
 938 9. Otho, surnamed the Great, the Son of Henry, Emperor and King of Italy 36 Years.
 974 10. Otho II. Son of Otho the first, Emperor and King of Italy. 10.
 984 11. Otho III. Son of Otho II. Duke of Saxony, and the last of that House which had the Title of Emperor and King of Italy. After whose death all right of Succession being disclaim'd, the Emperors became elective; but for the most part the Election was engrossed or monopoliz'd (since the Failure of the House of Saxony) by the Dukes of Franconia, Suevia, Bavaria, and Austria, notwithstanding the liberty or freedom of Election pretended to by the Electors. The business was first projected in the Court of Rome, to make the Emperors less powerful, and distract the Germans, whom they feared, into Sides and Factions: confirmed by a Decree of Pope Gregory the Fifth, being a Native of that Country.
 1002 12. Henry II. surnamed the Saint, Duke of Bavaria, the first Emperor elected according to the Constitution of Gregory the fifth, but so elected, that he challenged it in a manner by the right of Blood, as being the Grandchild of Henry surnamed Rixofus, the first Duke of Bavaria of the Saxon Race) the second Son of Henry the first, and consequently the next Heir-male of that House after Otho III. compelling some of the Electors, who oppos'd his Title, by the force of Arms to yield unto it. So that the first Emperor who came in by a clear Election, but not without pretension of a Title also, was 1025 13. Conrade II. Duke of Franconia, surnamed Salicus, Husband to Luitgardis, one of the Daughters of Otho I. and consequently not a Stranger to the former Family.
 1040 14. Henry III. surnamed Niger, the Son of Conrade.
 1056 15. Henry IV. Son of Henry the Third, in whose days the Popes began to usurp Authority over the Emperors; insomuch as Leo the ninth,

- ninth, having received the Popedom at the Emperours hands, repented himself of it, put off his Papal Vestments, went to Rome as a private person, and was there new chosen by the Clergy. This was done by the persuasion of a Monk called Hildebrand, who being afterwards made Pope by the name of Gregory the 7. excommunicated this Henry, the first Prince that was ever excommunicated by a Pope of Rome. From which time till the year 1254, there were continual Wars and Thunders betwixt them and the nine following Emperours, some of them being excommunicated, some forced to put their Necks under the Feet of the Pope, others to quit the care of the Common-wealth, and betake themselves unto the Wars of the Holy Land, leaving the Pope to do what he list in Germany.
1106. 16. Henry V. Son of Henry the 4. armed by the Pope against his Father; whom he had no sooner succeeded in the Empire, but the Pope excommunicated him, for being too stiff in the business of Investitures, and raised up the Saxons against him; by whom being vanquished, and otherwise afflicted by the Pope's practices, he was forced to submit unto his commands, and was the last Emperour of the House of Franconia.
1125. 17. Lotharius Duke of Bavaria, seizing on the Empire without any Election, was reconciled unto the German Princes by the means of St. Bernard. He settled the Affairs of Italy in two Journeys thither. 13.
1139. 18. Conrade III. Son of Frederick, the first hereditary Duke of Sueve or Schwaben, and Sister's Son unto Henry the fifth, vanquished Henry surnamed the Proud, Duke of Saxony and Bavaria; and going to the Holy Wars with Lewis King of France, discomfited the Turks near the banks of Meander. 15.
1153. 19. Frederick, surnamed Barbarossa, Duke of Sueve crowned at Rome by Adrian the 4. and not long after excommunicated by Pope Alexander the 3, to whom he was fain at last to submit himself, the Pope insolently treading on his Neck. He went after to the Holy Land, where he died, having discomfited the Turks in three great Battles. 37.
1190. 20. Henry VI. Son of Frederick, and King of Sicily, in right of Constance his Wife, crowned by Pope Celestine, who employed him in the Wars of the Holy-Land; in his Journey towards which he died at Alessina. 8.
1198. 21. Philip, Duke of Sueve, Brother of Henry the 6. excommunicated by the Pope, (who loved not this Family) by whose means Otto, the Son of Henry the Lion, Duke of Saxony, was set up against him. The occasion of great Wars among the Germans, reconciled by Marriage of Otto with a Daughter of Philip. 9.
1207. 22. Otto IV. Son of Henry surnamed the Lion, Duke of Saxony and Bavaria, crowned at Rome by Pope Innocent the 3. by whom not long after he was excommunicated, for taking into his hands some Towns of Italy which belonged to the Empire: vanquished in Brabant by the Faction raised up against him, he relinquished the Empire to his Competitor.
1212. 23. Frederick II. King of Sicily and Naples, Son of Henry the 6. having settled Germany, disposed himself for the Wars of the Holy-Land, where he recovered the possession of the Realm of Jerusalem. He was excommunicated by the Pope at his return into Italy, and not long after poisoned.
1250. 24. Conrade IV. Son of Frederick the last Emperour of the House of Solms. After whose death the Empire being distracted by the Pope's practices into many Factions, each Faction chose an Emperour or King of the Romans: so that at one time there were elected Henry Earl of Guingua, William Earl of Holland, and Alphonso King of Castile, the renowned Author of the Alfonso Tables, and 1254. 25. Richard Earl of Cornwal, Brother of Henry the third of England, the best monied man of all his time, supposed therewith to buy the Suffrages of the Archbishop of Colen and Elector Palatine, by whom he was elected and crowned King of the Romans, Aug. 1254. and after he had dealt in the affairs of the Empire 6 years, he returned into England, where he died. After whose death, or an Interregnum of 12 years from his Exit rather, the Title was at last accepted by 1273. 26. Rodolph Earl of Habsburg, a petit Prince, (others of greater Estates and Fortunes not daring to take up the honour) the Raiser of the present Austrian Family. This Rodolph was the Son of Albert the Wise Earl of Habsburg, and Landgrave of Alsacia, and his Mother was Hedewig Countess of Keyburg, he was born the 1st. of May, 1218, and educated in the Court of Frederick II. He gained Austria for Albert his Eldest Son, and Suabia for Rodolph his 3d. Son in the Dyet of Arsburg in the year 1282, by which he laid the Foundations of the Present Grandure of this Family.
1292. 27. Adolph, Earl of Nassau, who served in person under King Edward the 1. of England against the French; for which being dis-relished by the Germans, he was encountered and slain near the City of Spires.
1298. 28. Albert Duke of Austria, Son of Rodolphus the Emperour, to whom Pope Boniface the 8. gave the Realm of France, of which he had deprived King Philip the Fair. But Albert would not meddle out of Germany, and did nothing in it. He Married Elizabeth, Daughter of the Duke of Carinthia, and Count of Tirol and Gorickum. His Empire was not pleasing to any, nor Happy, because he employed all his Thoughts in amazing Treasures. After a short Reign, he was slain at Rhinefield, by John Duke of Suabia his Brother's Son, in the year 1308. This Prince was born the 29th of July, 1289, and was the first that brought Carinthia and Tyrol into this Family. Rodolphus his Son, was chosen King of Bohemia in the year 1307, and died without Issue. Frederick the Fair, his 2d. Son was chosen Emperour in 1314, and maintain'd a War against Lewis of Bavaria, wherein he was defeated in 1323.
1308. 29. Henry, Earl of Luxemburg, who made a Journey into Italy to recover the Rights of the Empire, (wherein an Emperour had not been seen in 60 years:) supposed to be poisoned in the Chalice by a Frier at Benevent, a Town of the Pope's, in 1313. 6.
1314. 30. Lewis, Duke of Bavaria, crowned at Aix in the wonted manner; opposed by Frederick Duke of Austria, chose by another Faction, and crowned at Ronna, a Town of the Archbishop of Colen: but he being defeated, Lewis remained sole Emperour, and was excommunicated by Pope John, 22, 33.

- 1347 31. Charles IV. Son of John King of Bohemia, and Grandson of Henry VII. crowned with the Iron Crown at Millain 1354; the framer of the Golden Bull. 32.
- 1378 32. Wenceslaus, King of Bohemia, and Earl of Luxemburg, deformed and vicious; depos'd by the German Princes. 22.
- 1400 33. Rupertus, Elector Palatine, passed into Italy for the recovery of the Dukedom of Millain, sold by Wenceslaus; but was well beat by John Galeazzo, and so returned. 10.
- 1410 34. Jodocus Barbatus, Marquis of Moravia, Uncle to Wenceslaus.
- 1411 35. Sigismund, Brother of Wenceslaus, King of Hungary and Bohemia, and Earl of Luxemburg, crown'd at Rome on Whitsunday 1432. He travelled exceedingly for establishing the Peace of Christendom, distracted at that time with three Popes at once; and was a great promoter of the Council at Constance. This Prince was very unfortunate in his Wars, and was overthrown by the Turks near Nicopolis in 1395, and was often beaten by the Hussites in Bohemia, after he had broken his Faith in the Council of Constance. He died in the Year 1437.
- 1438 36. Albert II. Duke of Austria, Son-in-law of Sigismund, whom he succeeded in all his Estates and Titles, excepting Luxemburg. 1. This Albert was the Son of Albert IV. the Son of Albert III. the Son of Frederick the Fair; and was elected Emperor in the Year 1338. From his time the Imperial Crown fixed in this Family though he enjoyed it but one year.
- 1440 37. Frederick III. Duke of Austria, the Son of Ernest of Austria, and next Heir of Albert II. He procured the calling of the Council of Basil for the Peace of Christendom, travelling for that cause to Rome, where he was declared Emperor, Anno 1442. 54.
- 1494 38. Maximilian, Son of Frederick, Duke of Austria, who first united the Estates of Burgundy to the House of Austria. A Prince that undertook many great Actions, but went thro' with none. 25. This Prince was born at Naples in the Year 1459. He was of a good Disposition and Wit, and a Lover of Learning and learned Men. He was elected King of the Romans in the Life of his Father, in the Year 1486. Under him the Reformation began. Philip his Son was born in the Year 1478, and died in the Year 1506, leaving Charles V. Emperor of Germany after his Grandfather; and Ferdinand who succeeded Charles his Brother in the Empire.
- 1519 39. Charles V. King of Spain, Son of Philip King of Spain, and Archduke of Austria, Son of Maximilian by the Lady Mary of Burgundy. A puissant Prince, who had Prisoners at the same time the French King and the Pope of Rome. He ruin'd the League made by the Protestants at Smalcald; took Prisoners the Elector of Saxony, and the Landgrave of Hassia, drove the great Turk from Vienna, won the Kingdom of Tunis, and in the end resigned all his Estates, and died in a Monastery in the Year 1558. 39.
- 1558 40. Ferdinand, Archduke of Austria, the Brother of Charles, King of Hungary and Bohemia, elected King of the Romans by the procurement of Charles, Anno 1531. Upon whose Resignation he was chosen Emperor, Anno 1558. This Prince was born in Spain in the Year 1503. He was crowned King of Hungary and Bohemia in the right of his Wife, in 1527. He had three Sons, Maximilian II. Emperor, born in 1527. Ferdinand, Archduke of Austria, born in 1534. Charles, Count of Stiria and Corinthia, born in 1540.
- 1565 41. Maximilian II. the Son of Ferdinand, elected King of the Romans in the life of his Father, Anno 1562, succeeding the Empire after his decease. This Prince reigned peaceably. He died in the Year 1576.
- 1577 42. Rodolphus, the eldest Son of Maximilian, had great Wars against the Turk, with whom in the Year 1600 he concluded a Peace; but being undermined by his Brother Matthias, was forced to surrender to him the Kingdoms of Hungary and Bohemia, and to content himself with Austria and the Empire only. These eight last Emperors were all of the Order of the Garter. This Prince was born in the year 1552. He lost Rab to the Turks in 1594, but recovered it again; Felaw in 1596; Canisa in 1600; and Grim in 1605; which are all recovered again by the present Emperor Leopold II. This Emperor was never married.
- 1612 43. Matthias, Brother of Rodolphus, King of Hungary, Bohemia, and Archduke of Austria, in whose time were sown the Seeds of that terrible War which had almost destroy'd the Empire. Having no Children of his own, he procured Ferdinand of Gretz to be declared Successor into his Estates. This Prince was born in the Year 1557, and elected Emperor in 1612. He was married but had no Children, and died in 1619. 7.
- 1619 44. Ferdinand of Gretz, Archduke of Austria, Son of Charles of Gretz, the younger Son of Ferdinand the first; succeeded Matthias in all his Estates and Titles. A Prince more zealously affected to the See of Rome than any of his Predecessors, and a great Enemy of the Protestant Religion, occasioning thereby that long and bloody War in the Empire of Germany, not yet fully ended. This Prince was born in the Year 1579, crown'd King of Bohemia in 1617, of Hungary in 1618, and elected Emperor in 1619. He began the War in Bohemia in 1620.
- 1637 45. Ferdinand III. Son of Ferdinand II. born in the Year 1608: the 13th of July crowned King of Hungary in 1625, of Bohemia in 1627, chosen King of the Romans in 1636, and crown'd Emperor the next Year; broke the great power of the Swedes, (call'd in for the support of the German liberty, and against the violent resolutions of his Father at the Battel of Norlingen) the twelfth Emperor of the House of Habsburg, and the ninth of the House of Austria without intermission. The cause of which is to be attributed to Charles V. who procured in his life time that his Brother might be chosen Rex Romanorum, as his Successor in the Empire: a policy which hath been ever since continued by his Successors. And the Germans are the more willing to hearken to it, because the Austrian Princes are not only Natives of this Country, but better able to back out the Empire in its compleat Majesty than any of the rest of that Nation are. This Prince in the Year 1648 put an end to the destructive Wars of Germany by the Peace of Osnaburg. He died the 2d of April, 1657.
- 1658 46. Leopold IV. Son of Ferdinand III. born the 9th of June, 1640. was elected Emperor of Germany after the Death of his Father, the 8th of July, 1658. at Francfort (Ferdinand his his eldest Brother having been chosen King of the Romans in 1653, and Dying of the Small Pox, before his Father in 1654.) This Prince was unfortunate in his first Turkish Wars, and in his Wars with the French, has not had any great advantage, but in the present War with the Turks, has in the space of five years recovered Transylvania and almost the whole Kingdom of Hungary, and reduced that Potent Empire to the brink of Ruine. This Prince married the third time, Eleonora Daughter of Philip Duke of Newburg, and now Elector Palatine, the 6th. of January, 1677, by whom he has Joseph, born the 16th. July 1678. Crowned King of Hungary in 1688. King of the Romans in 1689. II. Charles, born 1st. of October 1685, all his Sons by his 2 first Wives are Dead.

And to say truth, it is but need that some great Prince or other be elected to it, who by the power and reputation of his own Estate may preserve the Honour of the Empire, confined in a manner within Germany, and there so weakened by the alienating of whole Countries from it, (some Titulary acknowledgment excepted only) that it is nothing in effect but magni nominis umbra, the shadow of a mighty body, a meer empty Title. For if we look upon the present state and condition of it, we shall find it otherwise too weak to support the great and swelling Title of the Roman Empire. For as for the Empire it self, it hath some Countries reputed as parts of it, which yet acknowledge no Subjection; as Belgium, Switzerland and Denmark: Some do acknowledge a kind of Subjection, but the Princes of them come not to the Imperial Diet; as the Dukes of Savoy and Lorraine, and some of Italian Potentates: Finally, some both confess the Emperour to be their Sovereign, and that they owe Service to his Courts, which are the Princes and Cities of Germany only; but those so privileged, so exempted from his commands, so absolute and uncontrollable in their own Estates; that they care little for his power, and not much (if any thing) for his person; of which we shall speak more hereafter, when we come unto the form of the publick Government. In the mean time, if we would know by what occasions the Empire became so infeebled, it may be said, that the reasons and occasions of it have been very many. As first, the weakness and improvidence of the Caroline Race, dismembring from it many powerful and wealthy Provinces, reserving only a bare Homage and some slight acknowledgment. 2. The Cunning of the Popes, who from the time of Henry the 4. to Rodolph of Habsburg had by their Excommunications and other practices so exercised the Emperours with intestine troubles, that they forced them in a manner to abandon Italy: insomuch that the said Rodolph finding the inconvenience of it, sold most of his Estates there to the fairest Chapmen. 3. This done, and the Popes knowing well enough that they could not wax strong in Italy, if they did not weaken the Emperour's Estate in Germany, they first wrested out of their hands the Investiture of the Bishops, Abbots, and other Ecclesiastical Preferments; who being now made their own Creatures, were so increased both in Revenue and Power by little and little, and fortified with so many Immunities, that some of them grew in time to be free Estates, all of them Princes of the Empire. 4. But fearing that this might not bring the Emperours low enough, they baited them with continual Factions and perpetual Broils: which put them to a necessity of making what Friends they could, though they paid very dearly for them; and taking up what monies they could of the wealthier Cities, paying them in Exemptions and Royal Privileges, when they could not otherwise cancel or discharge the Debt. 5. And unto this, the making of the Empire Elective gave no little help, few of them looking on the Empire but as Tenants for term of life, and therefore were more likely to discharge such Debts by impairing the publick Patrimony, which they had no hold in, than to diminish any thing of their own Estates. 6. But being the Title of Emperour was the greatest Honour which any of that Nation could be capable of, and such as by good husbandry might be made beneficial unto their posterity, (as we see what good uses have been made of it by the Austrian Family, ever since the time of Rodolph of Habsburg;) who would not part with some of the Imperial Rights, to advance his own House to an equal greatness. And herein many of the Emperours were exceeding faulty, who, to get the Empire to themselves, or leave it after them unto their posterity, dismembred from the same many Towns and fair possessions, given by them to the Electors for their Votes and Suffrages. 7. A thing which the Electors understood sufficiently, and therefore were resolved to make the best of the market, knowing that the Commodity could be bought of none but themselves: as in the Election of Winceslaus Son of Charles the 4th. of whom it was but Ask, and have what they have a mind to. By means whereof the Princes grew in time so strong, that there were few of them who durst not undertake a War against their Emperours. And this appeareth by the Story of Charles the fifth, who though the most puissant Emperour which had reigned in Germany since Charles the Great, yet found himself so over-matched by these ruffling Princes, that he was willing to resign the Empire to his Brother Ferdinand.

But to proceed: By these and every of these means the Body of the Empire came to be divided into many Estates, and those Estates to be made absolute and independent, as before is said. The principal whereof which being described will make up the Chorography of this great Continent are those of 1. Cleveland, 2. the Estates of the three Spiritual Electors, 3. the Palatinate of the Rhene, 4. Alsatia, 5. Lorraine, 6. Suevia or Schwaben, 7. Bavaria, 8. Austria and its Appendixes, 9. The Confederation of Wideraw, 10. Franconia, 11. Wirttemberg, and 12. Baden, 13. the Palatinate of Northgoia, or the Upper Palatinate, 14. Bohemia and the incorporate Provinces, 15. Pomerania, 16. Mecklenburg, 17. the Marquissate of Brandenburg, 18. Saxony, and the Members of it, 19. The Dukedoms of Brunswick and Lunenbug, 20. the Lantgrave of Hessia, 21. Westphalen, 22. Frisland. Such lesser States as, being absolute and free, are of lesser moment, shall be reduced (together with the Imperial Cities) to those several Provinces in which they are included, or out of which they were taken. As for the Province of Holslein, or Holsatia, though it be Imperial, and in this respect by some accounted as a Province of Germany; yet being under the command of the King of Denmark, and by all Writers reckoned as a part of that Kingdom, I shall there speak of it. Some of these are thus censured by Aubanus, a late Writer. They of Suevia (saith he) are Whores, they of Franconia Ravishers and Buggerers, they of Bohemia Hereticks, those of Bavaria Thieves, they of Saxony Drunkards, they of Frisland and Westphalia Swearers, and they of the Palatinate Gluttons. But I hope more charitably of them all than so. I know there is another division of this Country, made by the Emperour Maximilian at the Diet at Colen, Anno. 1522. who, for the better raising both of men and money for all publick services, caused it to be divided into the ten Circles of 1. Lower Saxony. 2. Upper Saxony. 3. Westphalia. 4. Of the Rhene. 5. Of the four Electors of that part. 6. Franconia. 7. Suevia. 8. Bavaria. 9. Austria, and 10. Burgundy. But that before proposed being the more particular, I shall follow that, according to the order before laid down; beginning first with those which, together with the Belgick Provinces and the Dukedom of Lorraine, contained anciently the Provinces of Belgica and Germania Prima, and some part of Germania Secunda, and made up the Kingdom of Austrasia strictly and specially so called.

1. CLEVELAND.

CLEVELAND, or the Estates of the Duke of Cleve, before dismembred and divided betwixt the Competitors for the Dukedom on the death of the last Duke hereof Anno 1609, contained the Dukedoms of Cleve, Gulick and Berg, and the Earldom of Mark, or March, all lying in a ring together. And though these two last lie on the other side of the Rhene, and not so properly within the old Precincts of the Kingdom of Lorrain, or any of the Roman Provinces before named; yet being they belonged all to the same Prince, not parted by the interposition of other Countries, they shall be handled here together as the same Estate.

1. The Dukedom of CLEVE, properly and distinctly so called, hath on the East the Countries of Mark and Berg, with some part of Westphalen, on the West Gelderland, and some part of Limberg, on the North the Earldom of Zutphen and the Land of Over-Yssel, and on the South Gulick, and the Land of Colen. So called from Cleve the chief Town of it.

The Country is very fruitful both for Corn and Pasturage, well stocked with Cattle of all sorts for necessary use and pleasure; hath good store of Fowl, both tame and wild, is blessed also with an healthy Air, and, in a word, with all things needful for the life of man, well water'd with the Rhene, the Roer, the Dussel, the Ezfat, and the Nirs, common to this and the rest of the incorporate Provinces.

The places of most importance in it are, 1. Cleve, (in Latine Clivia) so called because built on the sides of three little Hills, (which the Latines call Clivi) gently descending towards the Banks of the Rhene, which not far off divides it self into several Channels. An ancient Town, and of great note in former time, as appears by many old Foundations and other monuments of Antiquity continually digged up in the Fields adjoining; but chiefly by an old four-square Tower built on the highest of the three Hills, of great height and state, Founded by Julius Caesar as a Bulwark against the Germans inhabiting the farther side of the River. For proof of which, besides the old Tradition constantly maintained, there is an Inscription on the Gates of the Duke's Palace, near adjoining to it, which saith Anno ab Urbe DCXCII. C. Julius Dictator, his partibus subactis, hanc Arcem fundavit, i. e. that in the year, 698, from the building of Rome, Julius Caesar the Dictator, having subdued those parts of the Country, caused this Tower to be built. Dr. Burnet, who lately saw this City, saith it has a charming Situation and Prospect, and a very pure and pleasing Air. The Dutch under Mauritius their General, in the year 1628, seized on this City, which they kept, till the year 1672, when they were outed of it by the French, they again being forced to withdraw, they left it to the Elector of Brandenburg, who was possess'd before of the greatest part of this Dukedom. 2. Santen, on the banks of the Rhene, a Town of great Antiquity, as the Ruins of it do declare; supposed by Pighius to be the Trajana Colonia of the Ancients. 3. Wesel, (in Latine Vesalia) a fair and rich Town, seated on the Confluence of the Rhene with the River of Lippe, which, rising in Westphalia, doth here lose it self: of great note for a Colledge of Secular Canons built here by Eberard the 9th Earl, Anno 840, or thereabouts; and an Hospital liberally endowed for old impotent persons, Founded by Henry de Baers the Dukes Chancellour. A Town not subject to these Dukes, though within the Dukedom, being reckoned an Imperial City, and one of the Hanse-Towns; now neither so Imperial nor so free as formerly: possessed first for the Spaniard with a Garrison of 3000 men (at the beginning of the War of Cleve) by D. Lewis Valasco, and from them taken by the States of the United Provinces, Anno 1628, it has since had the same Fate with Cleve. 4. Burick, on the French side of the Rhene, over against Wesel, amongst goodly Corn fields and pleasant pastures. 5. Duysburg, or Tuitzburg, in Latine called Teutoburgum, a Town of the ancient Germans, (as the name importeth) situate on the Rhene, betwixt the Angra and the Roer, two noted Rivers. A Town formerly of great Trading, and notably well built; Imperial, and one of the Hanse: but ceased to be Imperial when sold by Rodolph of Habsburg to Theodorick the ninth of that name, Earl of Cleve; together with 6. Cranenburg, another Town of his Dukedom, but of lesser note. 7. Emmerick; on the Rhene, a well frequented Town, remarkable for a very fair School. 8. Rees. 9. Griet, and 10. Griethuisen, all upon the Rhene. 11. Calcar, a Town more within the Land, but not far from the River; grown wealthy by the trade of Cloathing, and the best Beer or Ale in all these parts, sold thence abundantly into the Country round about. Not far from whence, at a place called Auff de Baern, it is supposed that Caesar Germanicus built his Bridge over the Rhene, when he went from Vetera Castra against the Marfi a Nation of Germany. 12. Gennep, upon the Niers nor Nirs, not far from its influx into the Maes: which together with Duiffle and Riexwald were bought of Sigismund, the Emperour, by Adolph the first Duke of Cleve, for a great sum of money.

South of the Land of Cleve, betwixt it and Colen, lieth the County of MUERS, extended all along on the banks of the Rhene; a distinct State, the Earl of which is subject to no other Prince but the Emperour only; so called from Muers, the chief Town of it, situate on the French side of the Rhene, over against Duysburg. Next Towns to which are, 2. Orsey, 3. Augur; of which little memorable. A small Territory, but in a very fruitful Soil. The Neighbourhood whereof to the Land of Colen (to which it serveth as an Outwork upon that side) preserved it in former times, from the Dukes of Cleve, who otherwise, no doubt, either by Arms or Marriage had been Masters of it, as they were of the adjoining Provinces on both sides of the River; this is now under the Prince of Orange.

2. GULICK-LAND, or the Dukedom of Gulick, hath on the East the County of Muers, and the Land of Colen, on the West Gelderland and Limbourg, on the North Cleve, and on the South the rest of the Land of Colen. The Air and Soil are much of the same nature as in Cleve; save that here is a greater plenty of Woad for dying, and a better breed of Horses than in the other. The Seat of the Menapii in the times of old.

Places of most importance in it, are, 1. Gulick, in Latine Juliacum, (whence the French call it Juliers) known by that name in the Itinerary of Antoninus, sufficient proof for the Antiquity thereof, but not otherwise famous; seated upon the River Roer, the chief Seat heretofore of the Dukes of Gulick, before the uniting hereof with Cleve; and since the dissolution of that Estate, possessed sometimes by the States of the united Provinces, and sometimes by the Spaniards, called in by the Competitors to assert their Titles. In the year 1660, it was put by the order of the King of Spain, (who then had it) into the hands of the Duke of Newburg. 2. Ducren, on the same River, the Marcodurum of the old Writers; and of late memorable for the long Siege which it held against Charles the fifth, in his Wars against William Duke of Cleve and Gulick for the Dukedom of Geldres in the year 1545, but in the year 1659, it was also restored by the Spaniards to the Duke of Newburg. 3. Munster Eysel, (in Latine Monasterium Eysalia) so called to distinguish it from Munster of Westphalen, pleasantly seated in a valley begirt with Mountains, not far from the Spring or Fountain of the River Exp, under the Duke of Newburg. 4. Caster, so called of a stately and magnificent Castle, built for defence of this part of the Country. 5. Berken, on the River Exp. 6. Merodon, beautified with a strong Castle, which gives name to an honourable and ancient Family. 7. Enskirck, 8. Berlin, &c.

There is also within the limits of this Dukedom the famous famous Town of Aix, as the French, or Aken, as the Germans call it; famous of old time for the hot Baths both within and without the Town, whence it had the name of Aix, or Aquen, (in Latine Aquisgranum;) situate on the edge of Limbourg, in a fruitful Soil, but the Buildings nothing answerable to the fame of the place; inhabited for the most part by Smiths and Brasiers, who drive the greatest Trade herein, working continually on Iron and other metals, with which they are supplied abundantly out of Liege and Limbourg. The Town is Imperial, but under the Protection of the Dukes of Cleve: at the expiration of which Family, under colour of some quarrels about Religion, it was seized on and garrisoned by Marquis Spinola for the King of Spain in 1614. It was of great fame formerly for the death and sepulture of Charles the Great, by him made one of the three seats of the Western Empire, and designed by him to be the place in which the King of the Romans should receive his Crown for the Kingdom of Germany at the hands of the Archbishops of Colen. The Town is supposed to be formerly the wintering Camp of the Romans, called in Tacitus Vetera, which was taken by Civilis in the beginning of his Rebellion against Vespasian; during which Wars it is often mentioned by the Writers of those times. They were built and strengthened by Augustus, the better to keep under the Germans; quippe illis hybernis obsideri premique Germanias Augustus crediderat, because that Garrison was a Curb, as Augustus thought, to the Germans, as Tacitus. At this day, this Town and Triers are reputed famous for holy Reliques; here being said to be amongst others the Bearing-cloth wherewith our Saviour was wrapt when he was in his Swadling-clouts, which the Emperor solemnly worshippeth at his Inauguration, Concerning the ambition which the Papists have to be thought possessors of these Reliques: see, I beseech you, how pitifully they have mangled the Head of S. John Baptist. They of Amiens brag that they have his Face, and so do they of S. John d' Angelic. The rest of his Head is at Malta; yet is his hinder part of his Scull at Namer; and his Brain at Novum Rostovienfe: another part of it is at Maurienne, another piece at Paris; his Jaw at Wesel, his Ear at S. Floures, his Forehead and Hair at S. Salvadore's in Venice: another part of his Head is at Noyon, and another at Luca: Yet is his whole Head entire and unmaimed in S. Sylvester's Church at Rome. And so no doubt is this Bearing-cloth at more places than one. In the year 1656, This City was all most intirely Ruin'd, by a dismal Fire, and in 1668, there was a famous Treaty concluded here between the present King's of France and Spain. This City is still Imperial and Free, but under the Protection of the Duke of Newburg.

But to return to Gulick again. It was once part of the possessions of the Dukes of Lorraine; whether laid to it at the first erection of that Dukedom, as some Writers say, or added to it by the Princes of the House of Ardenne, when they succeeded in the same, I dare not possibly determine; although the lying of this Country within the ancient Verge or Perambulation of the great Forest of Ardenne makes the last in my opinion not to be improbable. It was first made an Earldom of it self in the person of Eustace, Brother of Godfrey of Bouillon, Duke of Lorraine, who seized upon it as his part of the Estate, on the death of Godfrey, his eldest brother Baldwin being absent in the Holy-Land. In the person of William the fourth of that name it was made a Marquisate, advanced unto that honour by the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria, Anno 1329, created not long after Duke of Gulick by Charles the fourth, Anno 1356. His Estate was much augmented about that time, or but shortly after, by his Marriage with Mary, Sister and Heir of Rainold and Edward Dukes of Geldres, adding thereby that Dukedom unto this of Gulick. His two Sons William and Rainold, both Dukes successively, dying without Issue, the Estate fell to Adolphus Duke of Berg or Monts, as the next Heir-male, Anno 1425; and finally, together with that of Berg, was added to the Dukedom of Cleve, by the Marriage of Mary Heir hereof with John the 3. Duke of Cleve, and with it conjoynd till the expiration of that noble Family; whereof more anon.

As for the Estates of Berg and Mark they had one original, begun by two Brothers, the Sons of Theoderick Lord of Teisterbant, of the House of Cleve: out of which House as they descended, so into that they finally were again resolved, as their first materials. Of these two Brothers, Adolphus being the elder, was by the Emperor Henry surnamed the Fowler, made Earl of Altena Anno 930, or thereabouts; and Eberard the younger, by the said Emperour made Earl of Berg. But Eberard entering a Monastery of his own Foundation, left his Estate and Earldom of Berg to the Elder Brother. United thus into one Estate, they became again divided betwixt the Sons of Adolph, the 3. of that name, and fourth Earl of Altena and Berg; Engelbert the younger Son enjoying the Estate of Berg, and Eberard the elder succeeding his Father in that of Altena. How they became united to the House of Cleve, we shall see hereafter, having first looked over the Chorography or description of them.

3. The Dukedom of BERG is bounded on the East with Westphalen and the Country of Mark, on the West with the Rhene from Wesel up as high as Colen, by which 'tis parted from the Dukedom of Cleve, on the North with the River Lippe, which separates it from the rest of Cleve, and on the South with the Land of Colen. So called from the Hilliness of the Country, Berg in Dutch signifying an Hill; (as Burg doth a Town or Borough;) from whence the Earls and Dukes hereof are called Montenses in Latine, and les Contes and Ducs de Mont in French. The Country for the most part, in the Vales especially, yields a great store of the best Wheat, and consequently of the purest Bread; and in the Hill-Countries rich Mines of Cole, wherewith they do supply their neighbours.

Chief places in it are, 1. Dusseldorp, so called of the River Dussel, upon which it is situate, the River not far off falling into the Rhene, Fortified in the year 1613, by the Duke of Newburg. 2. Adenburg, built by Eberhard the first Earl of Berg, the Seat of him and his Successors, till removed to Dusseldorp. 3. Keisersword, situate on the Rhene, belonging anciently to the Empire, but bought for a great sum of Money of Charles the 4. by John Earl of Cleve. 4. Mulheim, on the Rhene also, just against Colen on the other side of the Water; fortified in the year 1614, and made the Receptacle of the Protestants of that Bishoprick, prohibited the free exercise of Religion in their own dwellings; but razed not long after by Marquis Spinola, on complaint made by those of Colen to the Emperor Matthias. 5. Stelt, or Steltium, on the Roer, among the Coal-mines. 6. Angermund, on the mouth of the River Angra, as the name imports. 7. Essen, or Essendia, on the borders of the County of Mark, once an Imperial, but under the Protection of the Earls of Berg, of most note for a Monastery here built by Alfride the 4th Bishop of Hildesheim, for Fifty Two Nuns and Twenty Canons, liberally endowed, and having great command on the Dorps adjoining.

How Berg at first was made an Earldom, how joyned unto Altena, and disjoyned again, hath been shewed before. No sooner made a State distinct; but it was added to the Patrimony of the Earls of Gulick, by the Marriage of Earl William with the Daughter and Heir of Berg. Parted again betwixt William and Adolphus, Sons of Gerrard the 2. An. 1247. the first succeeding in the Earldom of Gulick, and the last in Berg. During this Partage it was made a Dukedom in the person of William the first of that name by Wenceslaus, the Emperor, Anno 1389. whose Son Adolphus, as next Heir, succeeded in the Dukedom of Gulick, anno 1423. How both were added unto Cleve hath been said already.

1475 13. William V. of Berg, and VI. of Gulick, Son of Gerrard.
1511 14. Mary, Daughter and Heir of William, Dutches of Gulick and Berg, convey'd the whole Estate in Marriage to John the 3d. Duke of Cleve, and Earl of Mark, continuing in that Family till the expiration of it in the Person of John-William, the last Prince hereof, Anno 1610.

4. The Earldom of MARCH, or MARK, hath on the East and North Westphalia, on the West the Dukedom of Cleve, on the South that of Berg or Monts. So called, as being seated in the Marches of Westphalen, out of which it was taken. The Country for the most part, like the rest of Westphalen, is more fit for Pasturage than Corn, woody, and yielding store of Pawnage to those Herds of Swine with which it plentifully abounds.

Chief places in it are, 1. Werden, upon the River Ruer, on the edge of Westphalia, the People whereof get great Wealth by grazing of Cattel. 2. Soest, (in Latin Susatum) for Wealth and Greatness not inferiour to any in Westphalen, (except Munster only) consisting of ten Parishes, and lording it over many rich and pleasant Villages. Anciently it belong'd to the Bishops of Colen; but in the Year 1454, did voluntarily yield it self to the Duke of Cleve, (being then Earl of March also) and was by Duke John the 4th courageously defended against those Prelates. 3. Arnsberg, a fine and pleasant site, used for a retiring-place by the Electors of Colen, unto whom it belongs. 4. Dortmund (in Latin Tremonia) a County anciently of it self, and held immediately of the Empire, possessed by the Trotmanni, a Tribe of the Saxians, from whence called Trotmania, and at last Tremonia. 5. Blancostein, built commodiously by Adolphus the Fifth of that Name, and first Earl of March; as was also, 6. Ham, or Hammonc. 7. Unna, of which nothing memorable. 8. Altena, the first Title of the Earls of this House, before they assumed that of the Earls of March, assumed first by Adolphus the 4th, on the Conquest of some Lands in the Marches of Westphalen, continuing in that Family till united with Cleve. This Earldom, upon the expiring of the Family of Cleve, was seiz'd on by the Duke of Brandenburg, who now enjoys it.

As for the Earldom or Dukedom of CLEVE, out of which it was taken, and to which the rest of those Estates did in time accrue; it was one of the most ancient Estates or Principalities in these Parts of the World, continuing in a direct Line for the space of 900 Years, held by them of the Kings of France, and afterwards of the Kings of Lorraine, till the incorporating of that Kingdom with the German Empire. Begun first by Elius Grallius, Companion to Charles Martel in his Wars against the Frisons, Saxons and Bavarians, whose Son Theodorick added hereto by Marriage the County of Teisterbant, containing the Towns and Seigniouries of Altena in Westphalen, as also of Bornel, Heunson, Bueron, Culemburg, in the Belgick Provinces. By Baldwin the sixth Earl was added the Territory of Twentzen (in Latin Regio Tucana) given him by Ludovicus Pius: By Theodorick the fifth, the Town and Seignioury of Dinslack, settled upon him on his Marriage with Maltida, the Heir thereof: By Theodorick the 9th the County of Hulkenrade, near Nuys in the Land of Colen, together with the Towns of Duysburg and Culemburg, bought of Rodolphus Habsburgensis: By John his Son, the Town and Territory of Keiserfwerd, bought of Charles the 4th: By Adolph the 29th Earl, the Earldom of March, formerly taken out of it, was again united: By Adolph his Successor (made the first Duke hereof by the Emperor Sigismund, Anno 1417.) were added the Lordships of Gennep, Duissle, and Riexwald, bought of the said Emperor; together with the County of Ravenstein, the Towns of Leoburg, Limers, and Hatteren, for the Ransom of William Duke of Berg, and other noble Persons taken Prisoners by him, Anno 1397. By John, the first Duke of that name, the Town and Territory of Soest: And finally, by John the 3d, the Dukedoms of Berg and Gulick, as Heir thereof by his Mother Mary, sole Daughter and Heir of William the 5th and 6th, the last Duke thereof. To which great height this ancient and noble Family had not long attained, and thereby made themselves and their Sons and Daughters fit Matches for the greatest Princes, but it pleased God to bring it to its fatal end, and by that means to dissipate this brave Estate in the hands of Strangers, as shall be shew'd in the conclusion of this Catalogue of

The Earls and Dukes of CLEVE.

 1389 30. Adolph II. of Cleve, and VIII. of March, created the first Duke of Cleve by the Emperor Sigismund at the Council of Constance, anno 1417.
 1443 31. John III. Son of Adolph Duke of Cleve, Earl of March, and Lord of Ravensstein.
 1481 32. John II. of the Rank of Dukes, and the IV. of the Earls.
 1521 33. John III. Duke of Cleve, and Earl of March, &c. by descent from his Father; and Duke of Gulick and Berg in Right of his Wife, Daughter and Heir of William the last Duke thereof.
 1539 34. William, Son of John the 3d. and Mary his Wife; Daughter and sole Heir of William the last Duke of Gulick and Berg, Father of Earls of ALTENA and MARCH.

A. Ch.

834

1. Robert, Son of Baldwin, to whom the Country of Teisterbant was given by Eberhard.
2. Theodorick, Son of Robert, the first Lord of Altena.
3. Adolphus I. Earl of Altena.
4. Adolphus II. Earl of Altena and Berg.
5. Conrade, Earl of Altena and Berg.
6. Adolph III. Earl of Altena and Berg.
7. Eberhard, Earl of Altena; his younger Brother Engelbert succeeding in Berg.
8. Frederick, Earl of Altena.
9. Adolphus IV. created the first Earl of March.
- 1249 10. Engelbert, Earl of March and Altena.
11. Adolphus V. Son of Engelbert.
12. Engelbert II. from whom, by a second Wife, the Masculine Issue, of Daughter and Heir of Aremberg, descended that Branch of the House of March, which till of late were Sovereigns of Sedan, and Dukes of Bonillon.
13. Adolph VI. Husband of Mary (or Margaret) Daughter and Heir of Theodorick the 9th. Earl of Cleve.

the Lady Anne of Cleve, one of the Wives of Henry the 8th of England. He contended very strongly against Charles the 5th for the Dukedom of Geldres; but, being too weak for so great an Adversary, made his Submission to him at Venlo, and so saved his Estates.

1584 35. John-William, Son of the former William, during the Life of Charles Frederick, his elder Brother, was Bishop of Munster; on whose death, anno 1575. he resigned that Dignity, and in the end succeeded his Father in his whole Estates, which he managed with great Piety and Prudence till the Year 1610. and then died Issueless; the last of that ancient and noble Family of the Dukes of Cleve. After whose death much quarrel and contention grew about the Succession betwixt the several Competitors and Pretenders to it: of which the principal were, 1. Leopold, Archduke of Austria, pretending an Investiture from the Emperor Rodolphus in the Dukedom of Juliers, to whom, for want of Heirs-males the Estate was said to be escheated. 2. John-George, Duke of Saxony, descended from Sibyll, Daughter of Duke John the third; at whose Marriage with John-Frederick the Elector of Saxony, anno 1535, it was said to have been solemnly agreed upon, that on the failing of the Heirs-males of Cleve, the Issue of that Marriage should succeed therein. 3. George-William, Duke of Prussia, Son of John Sigismund the Elector of Brandenburg, by the Lady Anne his Wife, eldest Daughter of Albert of Brandenburg, Duke of Prussia, and of Maria Eleonora, the eldest Sister and next Heir of the Duke deceased. 4. Wolfgangus-Gulielmus, Palatine of Newburg, Son of Magdalen, the younger Sister of that Mary, who claimed the Estate as nearest Kinsman by one degree to the said last Duke. And though the Right seem'd most apparently on the side of Brandenburg, the Estate in tail, pretended by the Duke of Saxony, being formerly cut off by Imperial Authority, and that pretended to by the Duke of Newburg not of force in Germany: yet being that Leopold was in Arms, and had already forced a Possession of Juliers and of most parts of that Country, the two Princes of Brandenburg and Newburg soon agreed the controversy, and by the help of the Protestant Princes their Confederates recovered the greatest part of it from the hands of Leopold. But the Palatine of Newburg, not content with his Partage, first married with a Daughter of the Duke of Bavaria, then reconciled himself to the Church of Rome, and called in the Spanish Arms, under the command of the Marquis Spinola, to abet his Quarrel: which made George-William, Son of the Elector of Brandenburg and the Lady Anne, to call in the Forces of the States, under the command of Maurice, Earl of Nassau, after Prince of Orange. The issue of which War was this, that Spinola possessed himself of Wesel, Aken, Mulheim, Dusseldorp, and most other places of importance in Berg and Gulick, since surrendered to the Duke of Newburg; and the States got into their power some Towns of Gulick, with Ries and Emerick in the Dukedom of Cleve, and almost the whole County of Mark; all since put into the hands of the Duke of Brandenburg. And though most parts of these Estates have been delivered since to the rightful Owners, yet other places of importance are detained from them. Which notwithstanding that they both pretend to keep for the use of those Princes in whose cause they stood: yet when such strong Parties keep the Stakes, it is most easie to determine who will win the Game: Such Alterations as have happened in the chance of War, by the reciprocal winning and losing of some Towns on both sides, not much conducing to the benefit of the rightful Owners.

The Arms of these Princes were, 1. Gules over an Escutcheon in Fesse Argent, a Carbuncle pierced, powdered and flower'd Or, for the Dukedom of Cleve. 2. Or, a Lion Azure, armed Gules, for the Dukedom of Gulick. The Arms of Berg and March I have no where found.

2. The Estates of the Three ELECTOR-BISHOPS.

ADjoining to the Estates of Cleve are those of the Spiritual Electors of the Empire of Germany, Colen, Mentz and Triers; not so contiguous and conterminous as those of Cleveland, and therefore to be laid out severally by their Metes and Boundaries. And first for COLEN-Land, or the Estate of the Archbishop and Elector of Colen. It is bounded on the East with the Dukedom of Berg, divided from it by the Rhene, on the West with Gulick, on the North with Cleve it self and the County of Muers, and on the South extending to the Land of Triers. The ancient Inhabitants hereof were the Ubii, in former times possessed of the Countries of Berg and Marck; but being warred on by the Germans bordering next upon them, they were by the Clemency of Agrippa, then Lieutenant of Gaul, received into protection, and by him placed along the French side of the Rhene, as well for defence of the Borders of the Roman Empire, as for their own security against that Enemy. Won from the Romans by the French in the Reign and under the Conduct of Childerick, anno 412. or thereabout; and from the French by the Emperor Otho the first, anno 949. By Otho the second made a part of the Dukedom of Lorrain, or at the least given by him unto Charles of France, the first Duke thereof: after whose death, deceasing without Issue-male, the Town of Colen and many other pieces upon the Rhene were seized on by Otho the third, and by him restor'd to the Empire. Since that time the City of Colen hath remained Imperial, and of late times incorporated amongst the Hanse-Towns; but the Territory near unto it, and a great part of Westphalen, subject immediately to the Bishop. The Bishop's See was first Founded here by S. Maternus, one of the Disciples of S. Peter, as hath been constantly affirmed by old Tradition: but howsoever it was an Episcopal See, without all question, in the time of Constantine, Maternus, Bishop hereof, subscribing amongst others to the Council of Arles, anno 326. And being Colen was in those times the Metropolis of the Province of Germania Secunda, the Bishop had the power of a Metropolitan; according to the Rule and Observation so often mentioned. Afterwards when the Empire was made Elective, these Bishops, with their Brethren of Ments and Triers, were made three of the seven which were to nominate and elect the succeeding Emperor: After which time it is no wonder that they grew both in Power and Patrimony.

Places of most importance within this Electorate are, 1. Bonn, situate on the banks of the Rhene, in the most pleasant and fruitful place of all the Country; the ordinary Residence of the Archbishop, whose House or Palace here is said to be one of the fairest in all Germany. By Tacitus it is called Bonna, and sometimes Castra Bonensia, the wintering Camp in his time of the Sixth Legion. Dr. Edward Brown, who say this Place in the year 1686, assures us it was then not long before Fortified by the Order of the then present Archbishop, and the Direction of one Colonel Riser, a blind Man. In the Year 1688, the French, under pretence of supporting the Interest of the Cardinal of Furstemberg, who was elected Archbishop of this See, put a strong Garrison into Bonn, and spent the following Winter in strengthening its Works the 11th of July, 1689, the Elector of Brandenburg came before it and took by Assault the Fort of Beul over-against it on the opposite side of the Rhene, from which time it was blockaded to the 21th of August; at a distance then he began to fire upon it with his Cannon and Mortars, and drawing Lines of Circumvallation to prevent Sallies: Mentz being in the mean time surrendered to the Duke of Lorrain the 9th of September, the 10th the Elector summoned the Town, which refusing to yield, the 11th he opened the Trenches and began the Approaches, and the 12th of October it was surrendered on good terms; the Countercarp having been taken the 9th day by Storm. 2. Nuys, by the same Writer called Nivesium (Nivesu by Antoninus) seated on the Rip, not far from its fall into the Rhene; the break-neck of the Glories of Charles Duke of Burgundy, who being resolved to get this Town into his hands, as a convenient pass into Germany, lay so long before it, that he lost the opportunity of joining with King Edward IV. of England, whom he had purposely invited to the War of France, and yet was fain to go without it. By means whereof he grew so low in Reputation, that he was undermined by the French, defied by the Lorrainer, forsook by the English, baffled by the Smitzers, and at last overthrown and slain by that beggarly Nation. 3. Ernace, or Andernach, by Marcellinus called Antenacum, one of the ten Garrisons erected by the Romans on the Banks of the Rhene, to secure their Province from the Germans; the other nine being Confluentz, Boppard, Worms, Bing, Za-bern, Altrip, Seltz, Straesburg, and Wassenburg. 4. Lintz, seated on the same River also. 5. Sontina, a Town of good repnte. 6. Zulp, now a Village of no esteem but for the Antiquities of it, by Tacitus and Antoninus call'd Tolliacum, most memorable for the great Victory which Clovis the first Christian King of the French (upon a Vow made in the heat of the Fight to embrace the Gospel) obtained against the whole power of the Almans, never presuming after that to invade his Territories. 7. Rhin-berg, commonly called Berck, the most Northern Town of all the Bishoprick, situate on the Rhene (as the name imports) there where the Lands of this Bishop, as also of the Dukes of Cleve and the Earls of Muers meet upon a point. A Town which for these 60 Years hath been of little use or profit to the right Owner, possessed sometimes by the Spaniards, sometimes by the Confederate States; for each commodiously seated, as opening a Passage up the River, and receiving great Customs on all kind of Merchandise passing to and fro. But having finally been possess'd by the Spaniard from the year 1606 till 1633, it was then regained for the States by Henry of Nassau, Prince of Orange, with the loss of no more than 60 Men: there being found in the Town 30 brass pieces of Ordnance, 70 barrels of Powder, with Victuals and Ammunition of all sorts thereunto proportionable. In the year 1672 this Place was taken by the French, and restored to the Archbishop of Colen. 8. Colen, situate on the Rhene, first built by the Ubii before-mentioned, and by them called Oppidum Ubiorum; afterwards, in honour of Agrippina (Daughter of Germanicus, and Wife of Claudius) who was here born, made a Roman Colony, and called Colonia Agrippina, and sometimes by way of eminency Colonia only; thence the name of Colen. A rich, large, populous and magnificent City, containing about five miles in compats, in which are numbred 19 Hospitals, 37 Monasteries of both Sexes, 30 Chapels of our Lady, 9 Parishes, and 10 Collegiate Churches, besides the Cathedral, being a Church of vast greatness, but of little beauty, and not yet finished: the Metropolitan whereof is Chancellor of Italy, the second of the three Electors, and writes himself Duke of Westphalen and Angrivaria. Nigh to this Town did Cesar with incredible expedition make a Bridge over the Rhene, which more terrified the barbarous Enemy than the reports of his Valour. So powerful is laborious Industry, that it overcometh all disasters, and maketh the most unpassable Waters yield to heroick Resolutions.

In this Town also is said to lie the Bodies of the three wise Men, which came from the East to worship our Saviour, vulgarly called the three Kings of Colen. The whole Story is at large written in Tables which are fastened unto their Tombs: the pith whereof is this: The first of them, called Melchior, an old Man with a large Beard, offer'd Gold, as unto a King; the second, call'd Gasper, a beardless young Man, offer'd Frankincense, as unto God; the third, called Balthasar, a Black-moor, with a spreading Beard, offer'd Myrrh, as unto a Man ready for his Sepulchre. That they were of Arabia, the Table saith is probable; 1. Because they came from the East, East, and so is Arabia in respect of Hierusalem; and, 2. Because it is said in the 72 Psalm, The Kings of Arabia shall bring gifts. As for their Bodies, they are there said to have been translated by Helena, the Mother of Constantine, unto Constantinople; from thence by Eustorfius, Bishop of Millain, removed unto Millain; and finally brought hither by Rainoldus, Bishop hereof, anno 1164. This is the substance of the History; which for my part I reckon amongst the Apocrypha, (except it be their coming from some part of Arabia) but have not leisure in this place to refel the Fable.

As for the temporal Estate of the Bishops of Colen, it came unto them specially by the munificence of the Emperors of the House of Saxony; the Dukedom of Engern, containing a good part of Westphalen, being acquired unto this See by Bruno, once Archbishop hereof, one of the younger Sons of the Emperor Henry the first, surnamed the Fowler, with the consent of Otho the first, his elder Brother. To which was added not long after the whole Land of Colen (as we have formerly described it) by Otho the second, which being formerly a part of the Kingdom of Lorrain, was taken out of it, and settled on the Bishops hereof, at such time as the Dukedom of Lorrain was erected by him; such pieces only as are found on the other side of the Rhene (neither great nor many) being added by the Wit and Industry of the following Bishops: exceedingly increased both in Power and Patrimony by the addition of Liege to this Electorate; it being of late the constant custom of the Canons of Liege to chuse the Archbishop of Colen for their Prince and Pastor.

This was made the pretence of a War by Lewis XIV. |

Next to the Bishoprick of Colen lieth the Land of TRIERS, extended all along the course of the Moselle, from the Dukedom of Lorrain on the South, beyond the Influx of that River into the Rhene at the City of Confluentz, where it bordereth on the Land of Colen. It is bounded on the West with Luxemburg, as on the East with that part of Franconia which lieth below the confluence of the said two Rivers, and is now called Rhineweg; more Southward on that side with the Country of West-reich and the Dukedom of Zweibruck, parts of the Palatinate of the Rhene. The Country towards Lorrain and Luxemburg is somewhat wild and barren, more fruitful about Triers it self and the Bank of the Rhene; in all parts generally more pleasant than profitable, the greatest Riches of it lying in Woods and Minerals. The Bishop's See was here first erected by Eucherius, a Disciple and Follower of S. Peter. The reality whereof is not only testified by the Martyrologies, but by Methodius, a Writer of approved Credit, who adds Valerius and Maternus for his next Successors; the line Episcopal continuing till the Council of Arles, anno 326. Agritius Bishop of Triers subscribing to the Acts thereof. From this time forwards, and before, the Bishop had the Reputation and Authority of a Metropolitan, the City of Triers being anciently the Metropolis of Belgica prima, within which it stands. It increased exceedingly by being made one of the three Electors of the Spirituality, tho' the last in order, and Chancellor to the Emperor for the Realm of France: the Fortunes of which Realm it followed, till wrested from it, with the rest of the Kingdom of Lorrain, by the German Emperors.

Places of most importance in it are, 1. Confluentz, or Coblentz, the Confluents of Antoninus, so called because seated on the Confluence or Meeting of the Rhene and the Moselle; the Station anciently of the first Legion. A populous and well built Town, and seated in a pleasant and fertile Country. This City was taken by Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, who drove out the Spanish Garrison, and kept it till the Peace of Munster. 2. Ehrenbreitstein, over against Coblentz, on the other side of the Rhene, beautified with a strong Castle of the Bishop's, mounted upon a lofty Hill, which not only gives a gallant Prospect to the Eye, but commands both the Town and River. It was yielded up into the hands of the French by Philip-Christopher, Elector of Trier, for which he was carried Captive to Vienna by the present Emperor's Orders, and in the end of the War the Castle was restored to the Elector. This Castle was began by Hilinus Archbishop of Trier in the year 1166. 3. Boppard, seated on the Rhene, and call'd so quasi Bonport, from the commodiousness of the Creek (upon which it standeth) for the use of Shipping: one of the Forts (as Confluentz before mentioned) also was erected by the Romans on the Rhene for defence of Gaul against the Germans; occasioning in time both Towns. It was miserably waited by Richard Earl of Cornwall and King of the Romans, because cause the Bishop of Triers agreed not unto his Election; but soon recovered of those hurts. The ancient name hereof in the Itinerary of Antonius is supposed to be Bodobrica. It was pawned to the Bishops of Triers by Henry the 7. and not yet redeemed. 4. Sarbrucken, on the edge of Lorraine, (by Antonius called Pons Sarnix) seated on the River or Brook called Sar, (whence it had the name) at the fall thereof into the Moselle: possessed at the present by a Branch of the House of Nassau, (but Homagers of this Elector) entituled hence, according to the Dutch fashion, Counts of Nassau in Sarbruck, 5. Veldentz, and 6. Beilstein, on the Moselle, of which nothing memorable. 7. Treves, or Triers, in Latine, Augusta Trevirorum, the principal City of the Treviri, who possessed this Tract; seated upon the Moselle also; the Metropolis of the Province of Belgica Prima, and honoured with the Residence of the Vicar or Lieutenant-General for the whole Diocess of Gaul; by consequence the Seat of a Metropolitan when it submitted to the Gospel. Of such antiquity it is, that it is said to have been founded 150 years before the City of Rome: of no great beauty of it self, and as little Trading; the River nor being capable of Ships of burthen, and the Air generally so clouded and inclined to rain, that it is by some called merrily Cloaca Planetarum. It passed sometimes among the number of Imperial Cities, but now acknowledged the Elector for the Lord thereof; by whom it was made an University, one of the ancientest in all Germany, and of as much resort for the study of good Arts and Sciences as the best amongst them. This City in the year 1632, was put into the hands of the French, to preserve it from the Swedes, and continued under them till the year 1645, when it was recovered by the Imperialists. The French took it again in 1672, but were forced to surrender it in 1675 with great loss. 8. Ober-Wesel, or Vesalia superior, (so called to distinguish it from Wesel in the Dukedom of Cleve, which is Vesalia inferior, or the Under-Wesel) the farthest place of this District, seated on the Rhene, not far from Baccharach 2 Town of the Palatinate; of no great note, but that it is accounted for a Town Imperial.

This Country anciently was part of the great and famous Earldom of Moselle, denominated from the River Moselle, along the Course whereof it was first erected; an Estate founded by the disherited Sons of Clodian, second King of the French, at the same time (and on the same occasion also) in which the Earldom of Ardenne was erected by them, of which we have already spoken, when we were in Belgium: this, of the two, the more obnoxious to the power of the Kings of Metz, as lying nearer to the Court, and so more in sight; the other being farther off, in Countries far less cultivate, but more defensible. This Earldom comprehending, besides this of Triers, the Countries of Zweibrucken and West-reich, and so much of the Lower Palatinate as lieth on the French side of the Rhene, occasioned the Princes of it to be much looked after; and they maintained their Port to the very last: insomuch that Gislebert or Gilbert Earl of Moselle, in the time of the Emperor Henry the first, surnamed the Fowler, was thought by him a fit Husband for his Daughter Gerberg, married after his decease to Lewis surnamed Transmarine, King of France; and Gertrude, Daughter of Theodorick, who came after Gilbert, was married to Henry surnamed Gozelo, Duke of Saxony and Bavaria; and by him made the Mother of another Henry, Successor unto Otho the 3. in the Roman Empire. Impoverished, not a little, both in Power and Patrimony by the erection to the Dukedom of Lorraine, there grew some Feuds between those Houses, occasioning the Death of Albert, another of these Earls, slain (as it is said by Lacinius) by Godfrey, Son of Godfrey of Bouillon, Duke of Lorraine: more probably by some other Prince of the House of Ardenne, it not being founded in any other approved Author, that Godfrey of Bouillon was the Father of any Children. But this Difference being reconciled by the Marriage of Bertha, Daughter of Simon Earl hereof, with Thierrie the 9. Duke of Lorraine, and the Family of these Earls expiring in a short time after, this part of the Estate was seized on by the Bishops of Triers; that part of the Palatinate which lieth on the Gallick side of the Rhene, by the Bishops of Metz, Spires, Worms, and the Princes Palatine; the rest being taken in by the Dukes of Lorraine, who do still enjoy it: the Emperors of those times being either willing to it, or not able to help it.

3. The Bishoprick of METS is not laid out by Bounds and Limits, as the other, because the Patrimony and Estate thereof doth not lie together, dispersed for the most part about Franconia, intermixed with the Lands and Towns of the Princes Palatine, the Bishops of Wormes, Spires, and others. So that the Temporal Estate of this Elector is every way inferior unto those of Triers and Colen; though superior unto both in place and dignity, he being the first in rank of the whole Electoral Colledge, Chancellour for the Empire, and in all Meetings sitting at the right hand of the Emperor. The Bishop's See was first placed here, as some report by S. Crescens, one of the Disciples of S. Paul, of whose being sent by him into Gallia (for so the ancient Writers understand Galatia) the Apostle speaketh 2 Tim. 4. Though others with more probability sent him at Vienna in Danphine. But whether it were here or there, certain it is, that anciently this City was a See Episcopal; Martine, the Bishop hereof subscribing to the Acts of the the Council of Colen, anno 347. And if a Bishop, certainly a Metropolitan Bishop, this City being in those times the Metropolis of the Province of Germania Prima. But Christianity being worn out of these parts of Germany by the Conquest of the French, Almans, and other Infidels, was again restored in this Tract by Boniface; an Englishman, the first Archbishop of Mentz of this new Plantation, (in and about the time of Pepin, surnamed the Gross, Major of the Palace to the French Kings, and Father of C. Martel) who, for the Orthodoxy of his Doctrine, and the number of Churches planted by him, hath been deservedly honoured with the Title of the Apostle of Germany.

Towns of most note belonging to the Bishops hereof are, 1. Mentz it self, the Moguntiacum of the Ancients, so called from the River of Maine, formerly Mogus and Mogonus in the Latine, (now better known by the name of Mainus) opposite to the fall whereof into the Rhene it was built of old, so having the command of both Rivers; and for that cause made the Seat of a Roman Officer, commonly called the Duke of Mentz, who had a charge of the Frontiers, and especially of those ten Garrisons planted on the Banks of the Rhene, spoken of before. It is stretched out in great length on the River's side, but not of answerable breadth; well built, and populous towards the water, in other parts not so well inhabited. The publick Buildings generally are very large and beautiful, the Houses built according to the old Roman Model: the most magnificent whereof is the Bishop's Palace, who is the immediate Lord both of the Town and Territory, extended on both sides of the Rhene, fruitful in all natural Commodities, and abounding with most excellent Wines. Of good note also for an University here founded by Theodorick, one of the Electors; but especially for the Art of Printing, which was here invented, or perfected at the least, and made fit for use. This City was taken by the Spaniards in 1631, and 1635, and remained in their hands till the Peace of Munster in 1648, and paid to Goustavus Adolphus above 10000 Dollers for a Ransom. This Prince built a Bridge over both the Rhene and Main, the latter of which, was found so convenient, that it is still continued, though the former is taken away. 2. Bing, seated on the Rhene, another of the Garrison-Towns erected by the Romans on the Banks of that River. In a small Island of which, not far from this Town, is a Tower or Castle called the Moufe-turm, i. e. the Tower of Mice, built by one Hatto (or Hanno) Archbishop of Mentz, anno 900, or thereabouts, who, in a year of great scarcity, pretending to relieve the poor people oppressed with Famine, caused them to be gathered together into an old Barn, where he burnt them all, saying, they were the Rats and Mice which devoured the Corn. After which barbarous act he was so persecuted by these Vermin, that to avoid them, he was fain to build a Palace in the midst of the Rhene, whither the Rats and Mice followed him, and at last devoured him. 3. Laustein. 4. Hasford. 5. Oxenford. 6. Aldenburg. 7. Middleburg. 8. Carolsstadt, the birth place of Carolsstadius, of great note in the time of Luther. 9. Bischoffstein. 10. Koningsburg, (Mons regius in Latine) the Birth-place of Joannes de Monte regio, a famous Mathematician, as appeareth by his Comment upon Ptolomy's Almagest. Most of which Towns being in Frankenland, though of his Electorate, were not gained in gross by these Electors, as were the Land of Colen and District of Triers, but piece-meal in a manner, and by retail; partly upon the failure of the House of Schwaben, Dukes of Franconia also, partly by the munificence of the German Emperors, but specially by making the best use of their Votes and Suffrages in the Choice of the Emperors, which they did not part withal for nothing. Such Towns hereof as lie on the French side of the Rhene were gained by like means upon the expiration of the House of Moselli.

3. The PALATINATE of the R H E N E.

THE PALATINATE of the R H E N E is bounded on the East with the Dukedom of Wurtemberg and some part of Franconia, with the residue thereof and the River Maine on the North, on the South with Elsas or Alsacia, and on the West with the Land of Triers: extended in length from Coub to Gernersheim, North and South, 72 miles, and in breadth from Zweibrucken to Lauden, East and West, 90 miles.

It is called the Lower Palatinate, to difference it from the Palatinate of Bavaria, which is called the Upper. The Palatinate of the Rhene, because lying on the banks of that famous River. The whole Country is said to be the most pleasant part of all Germany, stored with all sorts of Fruits and Metalls, abounding with those cool Wines which growing on the banks of the Rhene, have the name of Rhenish; adorned with many goodly Towns both for strength, populousness, and beauty; and finally, watered with the famous River of the Rhene, and the Neccar.

The Religion of this Country, and that of the Upper Palatinate, which depends upon it, hath much varied since the first Reformation established by Frederick the second according to the Form and Doctrine of the Confession of Ausburg; the Doctrine and Discipline of Calvin being introduced by Frederick the third; the Lutheran Form restored again by Lewis or Ludowick the fifth, after his death exchanged by Frederick the fourth for that of Calvin, as more conducing to the ends of some needy Statists, who could not otherwise raise their Fortunes than by the invading the Tithes and Glebe, and other poor remainders of the Church's Patrimony; of which the Clergy being universally deprived throughout this Country, and reduced to miserable short Stipends, by the name of a Competency, became so contemptible and neglected by all sorts of men, that at the last the Church of the Palatinate was in the same condition with the Church of Israel under the Reign of Jeroboam, when Priests were made out of the meanest of the People. And for the Government of the Churches, though moulded to the Geneva Plat-form as near as it might be, yet were those Princes loth to leave too much power in the hands of the Elderships, and therefore did appoint some superior Offices to have an eye on them, whom they called Inspectores & Præpositos, their Power being much the same with that of the particular Superintendent amongst the Lutherans; and over them a standing Consistory consisting of three Ministers and as many Counsellors of State, of the Prince's nominating, who in his name were to take care of all things which concerned the Church. A Temperament for which they were beholden to Erastus a Doctor of Physick in the University of Heidelberg, who made this Pill, to purge Presbytery of some Popish humours which secretly lay hid in the body of it. But this whole Model and Religion of the Country is much changed of late; and the Religion of the Church of Rome, restored in most parts thereof since the Conquest of them by the Spaniards and Bavarians, which before we spake of.

Chief Towns hereof are, 1. Mospach, a pretty neat Town on the banks of the Neccar, and a Præfecture, not far from the borders of Wirttemberg. 2. Ladenberg, near the influx of the same River into the Rhene; the moiety whereof was bought by Rupertus, the Emperor and Palatinate of the Earls of Hohenloe, An. 1571, the other moiety belonging to the Bishop of Wormes. 3. Weinheim, a small Town not far from Ladenberg, belonging once to the Archbishop of Mentz, but on some controversie arising about the Title, adjudged unto the said Rupertus and his Heirs for ever. 4. Scriffen, in the same Tract, well seated but not very large, sold with the Castle of Straluberg to the said Rupertus by Sifride (or Sigefride) of Straluberg, the right Heir hereof, Anno 1347. 5. Heidelberg, on the right shore of the Neccar, (going down the water) compassed on three sides with Mountains and lying open only toward the West; which makes the Air hereof to be very unhealthy. The chief Beauty of it lyeth in one long Street, extended in length from East to West: on the South-east side whereof is a fair and pleasant Market-place, and not far off a very high Mountain called Königsstall, (that is to say, the Kingly Seat) upon the middle ascent whereof is the Castle, where the Princes Electors use to keep their Courts; and on the very Summit or top thereof, the ruins of an old Tower blown up with Gun-powder. A Town of no great bigness, nor very populous, there being but one Church in it, which was used in the time of my Author for Prayer and Preaching: the rest being either ruined, or employed unto other uses, if not repaired again, since the Spaniards became masters of it, for more frequent Masses. However, it hath the reputation of being the chief City of this Palatinate; not long since furnished with a great and gallant Library, which for choice and number of Books (especially Manuscripts) was thought not to be fellowed in all Europe, till matched, if not over-matched, by the famous Bodleian Library of Oxford. Most of them to the great prejudice of the Protestant Cause were carried to Rome, and other places of that party, when the Town was taken by the Spaniards, anno 1020. Finally for the Town it self, it was once part of the possessions of the Bishop of Wormes, from whom it was taken by the Palatines, and it is now famous for being the Seat of the Palsgraves, the Sepulchre of Rodolphus Agricola, and for a University founded by the Emperor and Palatine Rupertus, An. 1346. This City was taken, and retaken several times in the Swedish War, but after the Treaty of Munster in the year 1649, was at last restored to its own proper Master, the Elector Palatine, and is now recovering its ancient Splendor, which was much abated in these troubles. In the year 1688, this City, and with it the whole Palatinate, was taken by the French with small resistance. 6. Baccharach, on the banks of the Rhene, so called quasi Bacchara, for the excellent Wines. 7. Coub, on the other side of the water; near unto which is the old and fair Castle called Pfalts, from whence the name Pfalts-grave, or Palsgrave seemeth to some to have been derived. 8. Openheim, a strong Town; which together with Keisers-Lautern and Ingelheim were given to the Palatines by Wenceslaus, and after settled on them by Rupertus then Emperor and Palatine for 100000 Florens, Anno 1402. 9. Creutznach, called anciently Staronesiu. 10. Frankendale, lately a Monastery only, but being well peopled by such of the Netherlands who to avoid the fury of the Duke of Alva fled hither, is now a Town of principal strength. 11. Gernersheim; and 12. Manheim, a well fortified Town, seated on the Confluence of Rhene and Neccar. The 5th of November 1688, it was Invested by the Forces of France, under the Dauphine, the 8th the Trenches were opened, and the 10th the Town was surrendered.

On the Eastern part of the Country standeth 13. Laden; situate on the little River Tauber, the farthest bound of the Palatinate towards the North-east, there adjoining to the rest of Frankenland. And on the West-side the Towns of 14. Newstat, 15. Keisers-Lautern, in Latine called Cæsarea Lutra, once a Town Imperial, from which, and from its situation on the River Lauter, it received this name. This Town was taken the 30th of September 1688, by the Marquis de Boufflers; after it had been twice Storm'd, the Garrison surrendring it, almost the whole Palatinate followed it without any considerable resistance. 16. Zweibrucken, invested with a large and ample Territory round about, called the Country of Zweibruck, the Patrimony and Title of a younger House of the Pfaltsgraves, whom the Latine Writers call Principes Biontani, the French the Princes of Deuxponts. 17. Simmeren, on the North-west point of it, where it meets with the district of Triers; the Title of another Branch of the Palatine Family, called the Duke of Simmeren, situate in that part of the Country which is called Westreich, of which Zweibrucken is also part. In all there are contained within the Palatinate 24 walled Towns, and 12 fair Palaces of the Prince, most of which they have added to their Estates within little more than 400 years. Such excellent managers have they been of their own Estates, so potent in ordering the affairs of the Empire both in War and Peace, and so ingrafted themselves into the most notable Families of Germany, that I may well say with Irenicus, Non est alia Germanicæ Familia cui plus debeat Nobilitas.

Denpont, one of the places mentioned in this Paragraph, gives Title to one of the Families of the Illustrious Palatine Family, Founded in the Person of John, Son of Wilsing Duke of Deuxpont, his Son John was Born 1584, he Died in the year 1635, succeeded by Frederick his Son, Born 5th of April 1616, he having no Male-Issue, his Estate went to Frederick Lewis, Son of Frederick Cassimer Brother of John II. This Prince was Born in 1619, became Duke of Deuxpont in 1661, and being driven out of of it by the French, he Dyed 1st. of April 1681, without Issue-Male. So the Right of this Dukedom returned to Charles Gerard Son of John Cassimir, youngest Son of John I., who afterward upon the Resignation of Christina Queen of Sweden, became King of Sweden, and is now in Charles his Son, at present King of Sweden, to whom Lewis the 14th in the year 1689, offered to restore it, if this Prince would stand Neuter in the present War, which was rejected by that brave Prince. The French seized these Countries in the year 1676.

Within the Limits of this Country, and intermingled with the Lands of the Princes Palatine, are the Bishopricks of Spires and Worms; both anciently of great Revenue, but Feudataries for a great part of their Estates to these Electors. Of these more toward the head of the Rhene, and on the Gallick side thereof, stands the City of Spires, by Ptolomy called Neomagus, from the newness of the building when that name was given; by Antoninus, Civitas Nemetur, from the Nemetes, who possessed this Tract; and sometimes Spira, by which name it doth still continue. A Town Imperial, and anciently a Bishop's See; Tessis the Bishop hereof subscribing to the Acts of the Council of Colen, Anno 347. A neat Town, and very delectably seated, of great resort, by reason of the Imperial Chamber, the Sovereign Court of Judicature of all the Empire, capable of Appeals from the Tribunals of all Princes and free States thereof. A Court which first followed the Emperor in all his Removes, (as anciently the King's Bench in England) but by Maximilian the Emperour first made sedentary, and fixed at Frankford; removed after to Wormes, and finally to this City by Charles the fifth. Sufficiently famous in that the name of Protestants was here taken up, given to the Princes and free Cities following the Reformed Religion, upon their legal Protestation here exhibited. This City was taken, and dismantell'd by Gustavus Adolphus King of Sweden, so that it was the more easily recovered by the Imperialists in the year 1635. In the year 1688, the French took it and carried away all the Records of the Court, and in 1689, Burnt the whole Town down to the Ground, not leaving one building standing, whereupon the Dyets agreed to settle this Court at Weslar, a City in Hassia, 7 Miles from Frankfort to the North. More down the water and on the same shore thereof, stands the City of Wormes, one of those built upon the Rhene for defence of Gaul against the Germans; by Ptolomy called Borbetomagus by Antonine Civitas Wormensis, whence the modern name; but generally Civitas Vangionum, from the Vangiones, the old Inhabitants of those parts, whose chief City it was. A Town Imperial as the former, and a See Episcopal as that is, and as ancient too; Victor the Bishop hereof subscribing to the Acts of the Council of Colen before mentioned. A Town to be observed for the first appearance which Luther made before Charles the 5th. (the Imperial Chamber then being holden in this City) who, being dissuaded from that Journey by some of his Friends, returned this resolute Answer, That go he would, though there were as many Devils in the Town, as there were Tiles on the Houses. Chief Towns belonging to this Bishop are, 1. Udenheim, a Town belonging to the Bishop of Spires, whose Residence it sometimes is; conveniently seated for the command of the Country, and therefore upon some design which was then in hand fortified strongly by the Bishop. But this new Fortification, being begun in a time of Peace, gave great occasion of distrust to the neighbouring Princes, who interposed with Frederick the fifth, then Prince-Elector, (of whom it was held in chief) to cause the Bishop to desist from the finishing of it. Which when he had refused to do, pleading a Plea from the Emperor Matthias to complement the work, the Prince-Elector with the rest of the Confederates beat it down by force. For this contempt they were cited to Spires, the Imperial Chamber, in which it was also resolved to proceed suddenly and severely to their condemnation. One of the chief Motives which occasioned that unfortunate Prince to entertain the offer of the Crown of Bohemia, and consequently the chief cause of the German Wars. In managing whereof this Town was thought so commodious, that Marquis Spinola caused the works to be raised again, made it the strongest Hold in all those Countries, and caused it to be called by the name of Philipsburg. This Fort was taken in the year 1634 by the Swedes, surprized the next year after by the Spaniards, and in 1644 taken from them by the French, in 1676, it was retaken by the Duke of Lorrain, and by the Treaty of Nimwegen in 1679, restored to the Bishop of Spire, the French having much improved its Fortifications whilst it was in their hands. In the year 1688, the French suddenly entered into a War against the Germans, upon no other provocation than the Jealousie of the prosperity of their Arms against the Turks in Hungary, and began the War with the Attack of this place. The 27th of September, their Forces came before it, the 3d. of October the Trenches were opened, the 6th the Dauphine came thither, and the first of November, it was surrendered to him after a stout defence, which it might have maintain'd much longer, the Garrison being Great, and the French much incommoded by the Waters, Raines and Cold Season of the Year. 2. Rottenberg, originally belonging to the Bishops of Spires, but of late times possessed by the Princes Palatine. Others of lesser note I forbear to mention. In the year 1688, Lewis the 14th (of France) having began a War on the Eight pretences against the Empire, and more particularly against this Elector, after he had taken Philipsburg, proceeded and took Heidelberg, Wormes, Spires, Oppenheim, and Manheim, and a War ensuing of all Europe for the recovery of these Countries, he burnt and destroyed all these Cities, and Ruin'd all the Palatinate in Cold Blood, alledging he ought to destroy what could not be kept, that it might be of no use to his Enemies, he carrying the Inhabitants Captive into Alsacia and France.

The first Inhabitants of this Country on the French side of the Rhene where the Nemetes and Vangiones spoken of before the other side the Intuerge. That on the West side of the River was first conquered by the Romans, and from them by the French, of whose Empire it remained a part, but so that it was subject more immediately to the Earls of Moselle, first under the Sovereignty and Vassalage of the Kings of Metz, and after of the Kings of Lorrain. In the dividing of which Kingdom between the Emperors of Germany and the Kings of France, it became subject to the Empire, but still possessed by those of Moselle as it was before. Elcheating to the Empire on the expiration of that Family, partly by force of Arms, partly by paying down ready Money, and partly too by selling of their Voices, as they saw occasion, it was gained by the Electors Palatine: and so also that part of it which lies on the Dutch side of the Rhene, which being anciently and properly a part of Frankenland, followed the fortunes of that Country, till the failure of the House of Schwaben, and then devolved unto the Empire, as the other did. By little and little it got into the hands of the Princes Palatine, who being originally Officers of the Emperor's Household, (such as the Majors of the Palace to the French Kings at the first institution) had first the honour of Counts Palatine bestowed upon them, and afterwards the place of an Elector in the choice of the Emperor. But where their Estates then lay, where they fixed their dwelling, and what Provinces or people they had subject to them nullo inveni scriptum, I could never find any good Reason to build on, saith the Learned Munster; their habitation and possession in and of these parts (acquired for the most part by Arms and Money) not being above 460 years standing at the utmost. Likely it is, they had their Residence for the most part in the Emperor's Palace, living upon their Rents (as other great Officers of Court in these latter times) the Dignity and Authority of so great a place seeming sufficient to content them: but were called Count Palatines of the Rhene, because their Jurisdiction and Authority lay most especially in those parts of the Empire which were towards that River.

ver. Afterwards, on the Marriage of Otho, the second of that name, Duke of Bavaria, with Gertrude, the Daughter of Henry the Elector Palatine, this Office with the Electoral Dignity fell into that House, possessed at that time of those parts of Franconia, and the Earldom of Moselle, who not long after, on the dividing of that Estate betwixt Rodolphus and Ludovicus, the Sons of Ludovick the 2d, Elector Palatine and Duke of Bavaria, made up this Palatinate. A State which suddenly received a great augmentation, partly by the care and good husbandry of Rupertus, Emperor and Elector Palatine, partly by the weakness and ambition of Wenceslaus, Emperor and King of Bohemia, and partly by the valour of Frederick the Prince Elector. Of these the first bought in the Towns of Weinheim, Ladenburg, Scrieffen, and the Castle of Straluberg, with their Lands and Territories. The second gave unto the Palatines, for their Voices in his Election, three strong Towns of the Empire, viz. Keisers Lautern, Ingelheim, and Openheim. And the last took in Battel, anno 1452, the Earls of Wirttemberg, the Marquis of Baden, the Bishop of Spire, and the Archbishop of Mentz, and ransomed them on what condition he pleased. More particularly the Earl of Wirttemberg (for it was not yet erected into an Dukedom) payed for his ransom 100000 Florens; the Bishop of Mentz redeemed himself for 450000 Florens; the Bishop of Spire gave for his liberty the Towns of Rottenberg and Wersaw; and the Marquis of Baden yielded up in lieu of his freedom the Country of Spanheim, of which Crcutz-nach is a part, the Towns of Besiken and Binheim, the right which he pretended to Eppingen, a Town over against Gernersheim, and his Royalties between this Gernersheim and Seltz, a Town of Alsatia, in Fishing and Hunting. So having brought these Princes unto their Estates, let us next take a view of those who have successively enjoy'd both the State and Title, as far as we can go by the light of Story.

Electors Palatinate of the R H E N E.

A. Ch.

1. Henry, Count Palatine in the time of Otho the third, by him ordained to be one of the six Electors.
2. Sigefride, the Son of Adelheid, Wife of this Henry the Elector, by a former Husband.
3. Ezeline and Conrade, Sons of Sigefride.
4. Ludolphus, Son to Ezeline.
5. Conrade, Elector Palatine in the time of Henry the fifth.
6. Frederick, Son to Frederick Duke of Schmaben, Nephew to the Emperor Conrade the third.
- 1180 7. Henry II. surnamed the Lion, Duke of Saxony and Bavaria.
- 1195 8. Henry III. Son of Henry the Lion, and Husband of Clementia, Daughter of Conrade, Duke of Schmaben and Elector Palatine.
9. Henry IV. Son of Henry the third, in the life of his Father, the last Elector Palatine of the nomination and appointment of the Emperor, the Dignity from henceforwards becoming hereditary.
- 1227 10. Otho, Duke of Bavaria, of that name the second, Elector Palatine of the Rhene in right of Gertrude his Wife, Sister and next Heir of Henry the fourth, whom he succeeded in the Electoral Dignity, confirm'd therein by the Emperor Frederick the second.
- 1269 11. Ludovicus, Elector Palatine and Duke of Bavaria, the Son of Otho: Born in 1229.
- 1294 12. Rodolphus, the eldest Son of Lewis or Ludovicus, succeeded his Father in the Palatinate and Electoral Dignity; Northgoia, or the Palatinate of Bavaria, being added to his part, to make even the Scale, his younger Brother Ludovicus succeeding in Bavaria.

This Prince was the second Son of Lewis, he was born in the year 1274, and was the Founder of the Rudolphian Line; and opposing Albert the Emperor he was forced into England in the year 1315, and there died in the year 1319.

- 1313 13. Adolphus, surnamed the Simple, resigned the Electoral Dignity to his Brother Rodolphus, as the fitter Man to undertake it. Born in 1300.
- 1327 14. Rodolphus II. on the Resignation of Adolphus: Born in 1309.
- 1337 } 15. Rupertus, the Brother of Rodolphus the second, Founder of the University of Heidelberg, anno 1346.
- 1353 }
- 1390 } 16. Rupertus II. Son of Adolphus the Simple. This Prince maintained a War against the Hanse-Towns, and vanquish'd their Armies. He also in the Year 1387 refounded the University of Heidelberg, and died in the year 1398, the 12th of February.
- 1385 }
- 1398 17. Rupertus III. elected Emperor in the place of Wenceslaus, King of Bohemia, Anno 1406. made Knight of the Garter by King Henry the Fourth.
- 1410 18. Ludovicus II. surnamed Cacus and Barbatus, the eldest Son of Rupertus the Emperor, married Blanch, Daughter to King Henry the Fourth of England.
- 1439 19. Ludovicus III. Son of Lewis the second. He managed divers Wars against the Turks in Palestine; and in Germany, being President of the Council of Constance, gave Sentence to John Huz and Jerome of Prague. He died in the Year 1439, and was succeeded by Lewis the Peaceable, who died in the Year 1449.
- 1451 20. Frederick, Brother of Ludovicus, during the Minority of Philip, his said Brother's Son, succeeded in the Electoral Dignity, and added much to that Estate by his personal Virtue.
- 1478 21. Philip, the Son of Lewis the third; pretended to the Dukedom of Bavaria in right of Margaret his Wife; but after a long and bloody War was forced to go without it.
- 1508 22. Ludovicus IV. Son of Philip: Born in 1478. This Prince was a great lover of Peace, he saved Luther in the Dyet of Worms when designed to be burnt as John Huz. In the year 1532 he obtained the first Peace of Religion, and died the 16th of March, 1544.
- 1544 23. Frederick II. Brother of Lewis the Fourth, who first introduced the Reformed Religion into the Palatinate in 1546. He was born 1483, delivered Vienna from the Turks, and died in 1556.
- 1556 24. Otho-Henry, Son of Rupertus, the Brother of Frederick and Lewis, the last of the direct Line of this House of Bavaria. Born in 1502, he was Heir by his Mother to the Duchy of Newburg; embraced the Reformation in 1542; and after he was Elector began the Library of Heidelberg.
- 1559 25. Frederick III. Duke of Simmeren, descended from Stephen Palatine of Zweibruck or Bi-pont, younger Son of the Emperor Rupert, succeeded on the decease of Otho-Henry without Issue. He was born in 1515. This Prince introduced the Calvinist way into the Palatinate, by which he reaped much trouble.
- 1576 26. Ludovicus V. Son of Frederick the third, a munificent Benefactor to the University of Heidelberg: Born in 1539, July 4. He was as much addicted to the Lutheran, as his Father

Father was to the Calvinist Religion, but was a peaceable and a wise Prince, that hated to embroil himself in other Mens Concerns.

- 1583 27. Frederick IV. Son of Lewis the Fifth, married Ludovico or Louisa, Daughter of William, and Sister of Maurice, Princes of Orange. Born in 1547, the 5th of May. He Fortified Manheim in 1606, and improved the University of Heidelberg: His Father, tho' a Lutheran, finding his Subjects most Calvinists, brought up his Son in that Religion.

- 1610 28. Frederick V. Son of Frederick the 4th. Born in 1596; married the Princess Elizabeth, Daughter of James King of Great Britain. In danger of being proscribed for demolishing the Works of Udenheim, he accepted the Crown of Bohemia. But worsted at the Battle of Prague, and warred upon by the Bavarian and the Spaniard, he lost both that and his own native Estates and Dignities; of which he was deprived by Ferdinand the prevailing Emperor: the Lower Palatinate being assigned over to and conquered by the King of Spain; the Upper Palatinate, with the Electoral Dignity, bestowed on the Duke of Bavaria. Restored to the possession of the most part of his Country by the power of the Swedes, he died at Mentz, November 29. 1632. the whole Country falling again not long after under the Power and Government of the former Conquerors.

- 1631 29. Charles Ludovick, born Decemb. 22. 1617. the Heir both of his Father's Estates and Misfortunes too; not yet admitted to his Honours, (contrary to the Fundamental Constitution of the Empire, by which the Sons of the Electors and other Princes are not involved in the guilt of their Father's Offences) but in fair hopes to be restored thereto in part, by the Pacification made at Munster this present year 1648: which I pray God to prosper, for the peace of afflicted Christendom. This Prince recovered part of his Dominions by the Treaty of Munster in the Year 1648, and was made the eighth Elector. He died the 28th of August, 1680.

- 1680 30. Charles-Lewis, Son of the former, born the 31th of March, 1651. succeeded his Father the 28th of August, 1680. being then in England. This Prince married William-Ernestina, Daughter of Frederick the third, King of Denmark, the 20th of September, 1671, and was a Prince of great Prudence and Clemency, greatly honoured and beloved by his Subjects. He died without Issue, and in him ended the Male Line of Frederick III.

- 1688 31. Philip-William, Duke of Newburg, born the 25th of October, 1615. succeeded in the Palatinate; who is descended from Lewis the Black, Brother of Frederick III. Duke of Simmeren, both Sons of Stephen the younger Son of Rupert III. Emperor of Germany. He is said to be a Magnanimous, Prudent, and Religious Prince, extremely zealous for his Religion (which is that of the Church of Rome) and the publick Peace. By Elizabeth the Daughter of George, Landgrave of Hess, he is the Father of Eleonora Magdalena Theresa, the present Empress of Germany, who was married to that Prince in 1676. His eldest Son is John-William.

- 1688 32. Joseph, born the 19th of April, 1658. A War being made upon the Palatinate in the Year 1688 by Lewis XIV. King of France, the old Prince seeing his Country likely to be ruined, surrendered it to the Prince his Son, as better able to defend it. The French however took all the Palatinate; and a War ensuing, and they not able to defend it, they burnt to the Ground Heidelberg, Wormes, Spire, Oppenheim, and Manheim, and all the Villages and Castles in this delicate Country, not sparing any thing Sacred or Profane which they could destroy by Fire and Gunpowder in the Year 1689, and then were forced to leave it. He died September 2. 1690. Aged 75.

- 1690 33. John-William, Son of the former.

Now to proceed to the Civil State, and the Concernment of these Princes. The Palgrave hath many Privileges above the Electors of either sort. He taketh place of the Duke of Saxony, and Marquis of Brandenburg, because Henry the Palatine was descended of Charles the Great: for which cause he is also, in the vacancy of the Empire, Governor of the Western parts of Germany. In which Office he had power to alienate or give Offices, to take Fealty and Homage of the Subjects, and which is most, to sit in the Imperial Courts, and give Judgment of the Emperor himself. And look whatsoever shall in the vacancy of the Empire be by the Palatines enacted, that the new Emperors are by Oath to confirm and ratifie.

The Revenues of these Princes were conceived to be about 100000*l.* per Annum; nor could they be supposed at less: the Silver Mines about Amberg only in the Upper Palatinate, yielding 60000 Crowns a Year, and passage of one Bridge over the Rhene about 20000 Crowns more; besides the Demefine Lands, and the Lands of the Church, incorporated (since the Reformation) into their Estate.

4. ALSATIA.

ALSATIA (or ELSAZ, as the Dutch call it) is bounded on the East with the Rhene, which parteth it from the Marquissate of Baden, and some parts of Schwaben; on the West with the Mountain Vange or Vogesus, which separateth it from Lorraine; on the North with the Palatinate; on the South (where it groweth very narrow) with a point of Switzerland. A Country for the pleasantness and fertility of it inferior to none in Germany: called therefore Elisaz, (as some think) quasi Edelsaz, that is to say, a noble Seat; derived more probably by others from the River Ill, the only River of note in all this Tract, and called so, quasi Illisaz, the Seat or situation on the River Ill.

It is divided generally into the Lower and Upper, to which the Country called Singow may come in for a third. The LOWER ALSATIA is that which bordereth on the Palatinate, so called because farther off from the Mountains, and down the Water in respect of the course of the Rhene. A Country so abundantly fruitful in Wine and Corn (with which it furnisheth some parts of Germany, and not a few of the neighbour-Countries) that it is generally called Germanie Nutrix, or the Nurse of Germany; by Winphlegius, the Epitome, or Abstract of it. Chief Towns therein are, 1. Strasbourg, so called from the multitude of Streets (the Dutch call them Stracts) anciently Argentoratum, and then Argentina, from the Roman Exchequer or Receipt, here kept in the time of their Greatness; or from some Mines of Silver which were found about it. A stately, rich, and populous City, well stored with publick Garners and Cellars of Wine against times of Dearth; situate on the two Rivers Ill and Brusch, where they both fall into the Rhene, by which, and by the helps of Art, it is very strongly fortified: designed from the first Foundation for a Town a Town of War, this being another of the Towns which the Romans built to defend the Rhene against the Germans; now an Imperial City, and a See Episcopal, the Bishop whereof is Lord of the Lower Alsatia. The Church Cathedral is one of the fairest in all Germany, much famed for a Clock of most admirable Workmanship, and a Steeple of as curious a frame as that, mounted 574 Foot in height, the highest of any in Christendom, higher (if the measure of it be not mistaken) by 40 Foot than the Steeple of St. Paul's in London before the firing of it.

Of this thus saith the Poet in Adrianus,

Urbs praeclara situ, ripis contermina Rheni,

Maxima cui celsæ metiuntur moenia turris.

Straesburg on Rhene's inamell'd Banks doth lie,

Whose Tower even bids defiance to the Sky.

The Reformation began to be entertained in this City in the Year 1522, and was settled in 1529. For the defence of which it entred into a League with the Reformed Cantons in 1638, and opened an University in 1566. The 29th of September, 1681, the present King of France, Lewis XIV. suddenly surprized this City in a time of Peace, who has since spent very much in the Fortifying of it, but has not as yet attempted any change of the Religion publicly professed. 2. Zabern, or Alsfaz Zabern, the Taberne of Antonine and Marcellinus, another of the old Roman Garrisons, destroyed by the Almans, and repaired again by Julian the Apostate, then Emperor; now the chief place of Residence for the Bishops of Straesburg, and well frequented in regard of the Courts of Justice kept by his Officers in this City for the Lower Alsatia. 3. Altrip, so called from Alta ripa, from the high banks of the River on which it is seated; another of the Towns or Forts, which the Romans, like politick Conquerors, built on the West side of the Rhene, to prohibit the Incurfions of the barbarous Nations. And so was, 4. Seltz, seated on the Rhene, betwixt Straesburg and Zabern. And, 5. Weissenburg, more towards the Palatinate, now a Town Imperial, but seated on the River Lutra, not far from its fall into the Rhene; encompassed with little Hills and delightful Groves, the River gently washing the Walks thereof, and adding much to it both of strength and beauty. 6. Hagenaw, between Seltz and Straesburg, but not so near unto the Rhene as either of them; first Walled by Frederick Barbarossa, Anno 1164, and since that time of great importance for command of the Country, but seated in a sandy and unfruitful Soil; frequented chiefly heretofore by the old Lantgraves of Elfsass for the Commodities of Hunting. This City by the Treaty of Munster was assigned to the French, and in the Year 1675 was besieged unsuccessfully by the Imperialists, yet the French have since Demolished its Works. More from the Rhene, 7. Stechfelt, corruptly so called for Steffansfelt, from the Monastery of S. Stephen there Founded. 8. Hafle, on the Brusch, &c.

Places of the most importance in the HIGHER AL-SATIA are, 1. Ruffach, on the River Ombach, belonging to the Bishops of Straesburg, of old called Rubeanum, from the red colour of the Earth, well built, invironed with a double Suburb; in ancient times of great resort by the Roman Nobility much taken with the Fruitfulness and Pleasures of it, and well inhabited at this day, as is all the Country round about it, by reason of their vigorous proceedings against Thieves; from whence the Germans have a Proverb, That the old Gallows at Ruffach is made of Oak. Taken by Turenne in 1675. 2. Ensheim, or Ensfheim, on the River Ill, anciently the Station of the Tenth Legion, and then called Aruncis; now of most note for the Supreme Court of Justice there held for Brisgow, Sungow, and this part of Alsatia, by the Archdukes of Austria, the chief Lords thereof. 3. Colmar, an Imperial City, raised out of the Ruines of old Argentaria, destroyed by Attila and the Huns; well built, and situate almost in the very Navel of Alsatia, not above an hours Journey from the foot of the Mountains, but in a fruitful and rich Soil both for Corn and Pasturage, the Country hereabouts being very well watered with the Lauch, Duro, Fech, and Ill. The French in the Year 1673 dismantled this Place. 4. Schlestad, in the modern Latin, Selestadium, but by the Ancients called Eleebus, the Station at that time of the Nineteenth Legion; afterwards of great Fame for a Church here built by Hildegardis, Dutcheß of Schwaben, anno 1044. according to the pattern of the Temple of Jerusalem, which in tract of time became the richest Monastery in all these parts. It is situate in a very fertile and delightful Soil, having the Rhene on the one side, and some spurs of the Mountain Vauge, shadowed with Groves of Chestnuts upon the other; walled in the time of Frederick the second, about the Year 1216, and on the East defended with impassible Fens. Dismantled at the same time with the former. 5. Gebwiler, and 6. Watweil, both seated near the aforesaid Mountains, and both subject to the Abbot of Murbach. 7. Keisersberg. 8. Turcheim, two Imperial Towns, but not otherwise memorable; as neither are many of the rest, but for name and number: there being reckoned within this small Province of Elfsass (not including Sungow) 46 Cities and Towns begirt with Walls, besides Castles, Forts and Villages, almost innumerable; and amongst them more Free and Imperial Cities than in any one Province of the Empire, except Schwaben only.

The Southern part of Elfsass, bordering on the Canton of Basil, is commonly call'd by the name of SUNGOW, in Latin, Sungovia and Sungoia, but in former times the Dukedom of Pfirt, from Pfirt the chief Town of it, and the Duke's Seat. The Country is very plentiful in Corn and Wine, (as the rest of Elfsass) affording good store of each to the neighbouring Switzers. Chief Towns hereof are, 1. Mulhausen, on the River Ill, heretofore under the command of the Bishops of Straesburg, as were also Keisersberg and Colmar; but being taken in by Rodolph of Habsburg, after his advancement to the Empire, it was made Imperial, and is now confederate with the Switzers. 2. Befort, remarkable for a Collegiate Church there founded by the Earls of Pfirt, in which lie buried 13 Earls and as many Countesses. 3. Maszmunster, so called from a Monastery of Nuns there Founded by Maso, a Prince of the old Almans. 4. Thann, a neat Town, beautified with the fair Castle of Engelburg, mounted upon the top of a lofty Hill. 5. Morsmunster, so named of an ancient Monastery there Founded by the Earls of Pfirt, most of them great Builders of Religious Houses. 6. Altkirk, not far from the head of the River Ill. 7. Pfirt it self, seated on the Ill, not far from Altkirk, in a Country heretofore overgrown with Woods and Forests, whence it had the name, called by the French, le Paris de Ferrette, (corruptly for le Pai de Forest) by the Dutch moulded into Pfirt: by which name (of the County of Ferrette) it is called by Philip de Comines and other French Writers; and by that name pawned by Sigismund the Archduke to Charles Duke of Burgundy, made by that means too near a Neighbour to the Switzers, as it proved in fine.

Westward hereof, betwixt it and the County of Burgundy, lyeth the Town and Earldom of MONTEBELGARD, (Montis Belgardium in the Latin) united by the Marriage of Henrica, Daughter and Earl of Henry the first Earl hereof, anno 1396. to the House of Wirtenberg. Chief Towns whereof are, 1. Clarewang, 2. Passewang, 3. Grans, all anciently beautified with Castles; and 4. Montbelgard, a Town of great strength, proud of a Castle-Royal on the top of a fair and lofty Mountain, whence it took that name: once the Seat of its proper Earls, as after of the Princes of the House of Wirtenberg; but now both Town and Castle in the power of the French, who after their good luck in the Dukedom of Lorraine, caused a good Garrison of their own to be put into them, anno 1633, under pretence of keeping them for the Children of a Brother of the Duke of Wirtenberg, to whom the Inheritance belonged. Eberhard the sixth Earl of Wirtenberg, by a Marriage in the Year 1439, obtained ained this Dukedom, it continued united to that Dukedom to the year 1608, when it was separated and given to,

- 1608 1. Lewis Frederick, Son of Frederick Duke of Wittenberg, who was born the 29th of January 1586, was the first of this Line.
- 1631 2. Leopold Frederick Son of Lewis.
- 1662 3. George, II. Son of Lewis, Brother of Leopold, in the year 1684, he was expelled out of his Dominions by the French, and lives now in Exile. He has one Son, Leopold Eberhard, who was born the 21th of March, 1670. And may one day succeed in this Dukedom.

The ancient Inhabitants of this Tract were the Tribochi, with parts of the Nemetes and Rauraci; first conquered by the Romans, then subdued by the Almans, after by the French, and by them made a part of the Kingdom of Lorraine; in the fall of which Kingdom it was reckoned for a Province of the German Empire. Governed for the Emperors by Provincial Earls, in the Dutch language called Lantgraves: at first officary only and accountable to the Emperours under whom they served; in the end made hereditary, and successional unto their posterities. The first hereditary Lantgrave is said to be Theodorick in the Reign of Otho the third: after whose death the Empire being made elective: gave the Provincial Governours some opportunities to provide for themselves. In his Male-Issue it continued till the Reign of Frederick the 2. who began his Empire, anno 1212, and died anno 1250; during which interval this Estate was conveyed by Daughters to Albert the 2. Earl of Habsburg, Albert Earl of Hohenburg, and Lewis Earl of Oetingen. Rodolph of Habsburg, Son of this Albert, afterwards Emperor of the Germans, marrying with Anne the Daughter of the Earl of Hohenloe, became possessed also of his part of the Country; which added to his own, made up the whole upper Elfsa, continued since that time in possession of the House of Austria, descended from him. The third part, comprehending all the Lower Alsatia, was not long after sold by the Earl of Oetingen to the Bishop of Strasbourg, whose Successors hold it to this day, assuming to themselves the Title of the Lantgraves of Elfsa. But as for Saugom, or the County of Pfirt, that belonged anciently to the Princes of the House of Schwaben: in the expiring of which potent and illustrious Family, by the death of Conradine the last Duke, anno 1268, that great Estate being scattered into many hands, it was made a distinct Earldom of it self. And so it continued till the year 1324, when Ulrick the last Earl dying without Issue-Male, left his Estate betwixt two Daughters: whereof the one, named Anne, conveyed her part in Marriage to Albert Duke of Austria, surnamed the short, Grandchild of Rodolphus the Emperor before mentioned; the other, named Elizabeth, sold her moiety to the said Albert for 8000 Crowns. Since that it hath been always in the possession of the Dukes of Austria, (save only for the time in which it was pawned or mortgaged, together with Alsatia, to the Duke of Burgundy) governed in Civil matters and points of Judicature by the Parliament or Court of Ensheim in the Upper Elfsa. This intire Country is now in the hands of the French, and was yielded to them by the Treaty of Munster in 1648, and by the surprize of Strasbourg, in the year 1681. They are become the intire Masters of it.

5. L O R R A I N.

THE Dukedom of LORRAIN is bounded on the East with Elfsa, and that part of the lower Palatinate which passeth by the name of West-reich; on the West with the River Meuse, or Maes, with part of the Country of Barrois in France, (belonging to the Duke hereof) and part of Champagne; on the North with Luxemburg and the Land of Trier; and on the South with the County of Burgundy, from which, and from the Province of Elfsa, it is parted by the Meuse or Maes, wherewith it is encompassed on the sides. Assigned unto Lotharius, second son of Lothar the Emperor, (who was eldest Son of Lewis the Great with the style of a Kingdom; from thence called Lorraine by the Dutch, Lot-reigne by the French; from which the modern name of Lorraine, and the Latin Lutharugia are to fetch their Pedigree.

The Country is in length about four days journey, almost three in breadth, much overgrown with Forests, and swelled with Mountains, the spurs and branches of Vogesus, and the once vast Wilderness of Ardenne; yet so sufficiently stored with all manner of necessities, that it needeth no supply out of other places. Some Lakes it hath which yield great quantity of Fish; one more especially 14 miles in compass, the Fish whereof yields to the Duke's Coffers 20000 l. yearly. It affordeth also divers Metals, as Silver, Copper, Tin, Iron, Lead, in some places Pearls: Chalcedonians also of such bignets, that whole Drinking-cups are made of them, and a matter of which they make the purest Glasses, not to be parallell'd in Europe. They have also a goodly breed of Horses, equal to those of Barbary, or the Countrey of Naples.

The people, by reason of their neighbourhood to and commerce with France, strive much to imitate the French in garb and fashion; but one may easily see that it is not natural: they have much in them also of the Dutch humour of Drinking, but far more moderately than the Dutch themselves. Generally they are a politic and an hardy Nation; not otherwise able to have held their Estate so long against the French Kings, and the Princes of the House of Burgundy. They lived very happily in former times under their own Dukes, not being at all oppressed with Taxes; which made them very affectionate towards the Prince, and useful unto one another. Their Language is for the most part French, as in Artois, Luxemburg, Triers, and other of the bordering Provinces, members of the French Monarchy in former times: not so refined and elegant as is spoke in France, nor so corrupt and coarse as that of Montbeliard and the County of Burgundy.

I know that many, in respect of the French language, spoken here among them, account this Country among the Provinces of France, and usually describe it so in their Charts and Writings: but I have placed it with more reason (as I conceive) amongst those of Germany; first, in regard that a Duke hereof is a Prince of the Empire; but especially because that, in the division of the Kingdom of Lorraine betwixt the Emperors of Germany and the Kings of France, whatsoever lay on the East-side of the River Meuse (as this Dukedom of Lorraine for the most part doth) was reckoned in the share or portion of the German Emperors.

The Rivers of chief note are, 1. Meuse, or the Meurte, which receiving into it many Rivers, and passing with a swift stream by the walls of Nancy, glides along fairly for a good space within sight of the Moselle, into which at last it falls near Conde. 2. Meuse, the Merse, or Maes, whose spring and course hath been already described in Belgium. 3. Moselle, famous for the design which Lucius Verus, Governour for the Emperor Nero, had once upon it. For whereas it ariseth in the Mountain Vange, not far from the head of the River Saône, and disburtheneth it self into the Rhene at Confluentz; he intended to have cut a deep Chancel from the head of this unto the other, so to have made a passage from the Ocean to the Mediterranean, the Saône emptying it self into the Rhose, a chief River of France, as the Moselle doth into the Rhene. 4. Selle, which mingleth waters with the Moselle not far from Metz. 5. Sar, 6. Marne, 7. Voloy, with others of less note: all of them plentiful of Salmons, Perches, Tenches, and the best sorts of fish, as in their Lakes are great store of Carps, some of them three foot long, and of excellent taste.

Principal Cities in it are, 1. Metz, by Ptolomy called Dividorum, Metis and Civitas Mediomatricum by Antoninus, the chief City of the Mediomatrices, who possessed this Tract. It is seated in a pleasant Plain at the confluence of the Selle and Moselle; the Royal Seat, in former times of the French Kings of Austrasia, hence called Kings of Metz; long before that a Bishop's See, as it still continueth. 2. Toul, the Tullum of Ptolemy, the Civitas Leucorum of Antoninus, so called from the Leuci, the Inhabitants of it and the Tract about it; pleasantly seated on the Moselle, and anciently honoured with a See Episcopal. 3. Verdun, an ancient Episcopal See also, the Civitas Verodunensium of Antoninus, seated on the Meuse or Maas. The Town or Territory adjoining in preceding times belonged to the great Princes of the House of Ardenne, at and before the time that they attained the Dukedom of Lorraine: but whither they had it in right of their Patrimonial Estate, as lying in the North part of this Country towards Luxemburg, as it well might be, or that it came to them in the right of Marriage with some Daughter of the House of Moselle, or other Heirs thereof, I have no where found. But howsoever it came to them, it gave unto this House the Title of Earls of Verdun, used in their Style, till swallowed with the rest in that of Lorraine. The Bishop whereof, as also those of Metz and Toul, (being the only ones of this Country of Lorraine) acknowledge the Archbishop of Triers for their Metropolitan. All of them were in the number (heretofore) of Imperial Cities, possessed of large and goodly Territories and of great Revenue; but taken by the French King Henry the 2. Anno 1552, during the Wars between Charles the fifth, and the Protestant Princes of Germany, under colour of aiding them against the Emperor. And though Charles tryed all ways to recover them to the Empire again, and to that end maintained a long and desperate Siege against the City of Metz: yet was the Town so gallantly defended by the Duke of Guise, that he was fain to raise his Siege, and go off with dishonour. Since that, they have been always under the subjection of France; a Parliament being erected at Metz for the ease of the people, as in other Provinces of that Kingdom.

Of such Towns as immediately belong to the Duke of Lorraine, the principal are Nancie, not great, but of a pleasant and commodious site, well watered by the River Alenche or Alante, and fortified better than before, in the year 1587, on occasion of a great Army of the Germans passing into France to aid the Protestants: most commonly the Duke's Seat, and famous for the Discomfiture which Charles Duke of Burgundy here suffered, with the loss of his life. In the Year 1633, it was taken by Lewis 13 King of France, and in 1661, by Lewis the 14th, who dismantled it, but in 1673, he began to Fortifie it again, and has since made it much stronger than before. 2. S. Nicolas, a Town so populous, well seated, and neatly built, that were it walled, it would hardly yield precedence unto Nancie it self; so called from a Church here built to the honour of S. Nicolas, Bishop of Myra in the lesser Asia, whose body they pretend to be buried here, or at least some part or Relick of it to be here inshrined, occasioning a great resort of Pilgrims and other people. Pont a Mousson, about 4 leagues from Nancie, so called from a Bridge on the River Mousson upon which it standeth, of special note for a small University lately founded in it, and for giving the Title of a Marquess to the eldest Son of the Dukes of Lorraine, called commonly and contractedly Marquess du Pont, Marchio Muso-Pontanus by our modern Latinists. 4. Vaucouleur, the Birth-place of Joan the Virgin, to whose Miracles and Valour the French attribute the delivery of their Country from the power of the English. But being at last taken Prisoner, she was by the Duke of Bedford, then Regent of France, condemned and burnt for a Witch. Of which crime, I for my part do conceive her free. Nor can I otherwise conceive of her and her brave exploits, than as of a lusty Lass of Lorraine, tutored and trained up by the practice of the Earl of Dunois, commonly called the Bastard of Orleans, and so presented to Charles the seventh, the King, as if sent immediately from Heaven. A proper carried on of purpose, (as the most intelligent of the French Writers say) pour faire revenir la couronne des Francois, to revive the drooping spirits of the beaten French, not to be raised again but by help of a Miracle. Upon the sight of her Statue on the Bridge of Orleans, a friend of mine did adventure on a Copy of Verses in her commendation, too long to be inserted here, but they ended thus,

She dy'd a Virgin: 'Twas because the earth
Bred not a man whose valour and whose birth
Might merit such a Blessing. But above
The Gods provided her an equal Love,
And gave her to Saint Denys. She with him Protects the Lillies and their Diadem.
You then about whose Armies she doth watch,
Give her the honour due unto her Match:
And when in field your Standards you advance,
Cry loud, Saint Denys and Saint Joan for France.

Next these we have, 5. Vaudemont, which gave the Title of an Earl to a younger Branch of the House of Ardenne, succeeding at the last in the Dukedom of Lorraine, in person of Duke Rhene 2. and since a Title of the younger Son of the Dukes hereof. 6. Neuf-Château, on the edge of the Country towards Barrois. 7. Amance, seven leagues on the South of Metz, sometimes the Chancery of Lorraine. 8. Riche Court, near the Lake called Garec-Lake, out of which floweth a River which runs into the Mourte. 9. La Mothe, seated on a River which falls presently into the Moselle. 10. Charmes, seated on the Moselle, the place of Treaty between the Duke of Lorraine and the Cardinal Richelieu; the result whereof was the surrender of the Town of Nancie, and by consequence of all the Dukedom, into the hands of the French, September 1633. 11. Stenay, in the extrem North of all this Country, a well fortified Town and of great consequence and importance to the Dukes hereof; but whether properly belonging to the Dukedom of Lorraine, or wrested from the Sovereignty of Sedan, upon which it bordereth, (as Jamais near unto it was) I have no where found. It was taken by the French in 1654. Of less note there are, 1. Saint Die. 2. Saint Hippolite. 3. Bouquenon, and 4. Saverden; the first Towns of this Dukedom taken by the Swedes, Anno 1633, in the War against Lorraine. 5. Saint Miel, 6. Oden Chateau, 7. Airecourt; all taken the same year by the French, in the prosecution of that War, before the Treaty at Charmes. 8. Romberville, 9. Espeul, 10. Gorbeuillier, &c.

The old Inhabitants of this Country were the Mediomatrices and the Leuci spoken of before, together with the Viridunenses; all of them conquered by the Romans, under whom this Country and the district of Triers made up the whole Province of Belgica prima. From them being taken by the French, with the rest of Gaul, it was made a Kingdom; the Provinces of Germania prima and secunda (containing all the parts of Germany before described, and so much of the Netherlands as lie on the West side of the Rhene) being added to it: called first, from the Eastern situation, by the name of Osternreich, or Austrasia; the portion of Theoderick, the fourth Son of Clovis, the first Christian King of the French, from the chief City of his Kingdom called the King of Metz, whose Successors follow in this order.

The Kings of AUSTRASIA, or METS.

- 514 1. Theoderick; the base Son of Clovis the Great, vanquished the Thuringians, and extended his Kingdom as far as Hassia and Thuringia, as we call them now.
- 537 2. Theodebert, the Son of Theoderick, repulsed the Danes infesting the Coasts of the Lower Ger-

- Germany, and added Provence (taken from the Goths of Italy) unto his Estates.
- 548 3. Theobaldus, the Son of Theodebert, subdued the Almans, and added much of their Country to his own Dominions.
- 555 4. Clotaire, King of Soissons, the youngest Son of Clovis the Great, succeeded Theobald in this Kingdom, as afterwards his Brother Childebert in the Realm of France, anno 560, uniting in his person the whole French Dominion.
- 565 5. Sigebert, the Son of Clotaire, vanquished the Huns, then falling into his Estates: killed in his Tent by the practices of Fredegonde, the Wife of Chilperick King of France.
- 577 6. Childebert, the Son of Sigebert, Successour to his Uncle Guntram, in the Realm of Orleans.
- 598 7. Theodebert the II. the Son of Childebert, vanquished and outed of his Kingdom by Clotaire the second of France, from whose eldest Son Sigebert descended the illustrious Family of the Earls of Habsburg.
- 617 8. Clotaire II. King of France, on the death of Theodebert King of Austrasia, and his Brother Theodorick King of Orleans, the sole King of the French.
9. Dagobert, in the life of his Father King of Mets or Austrasia, whom he succeeded at his death in the Realm of France.
- 645 10. Sigebert II. the eldest Son of Dagobert, made choice of this Kingdom for his part of the whole French Empire; therein preferring it to West-France, or France it self, which he left to Clovis the 2. his younger Brother. He brought the Suevians to obedience, and subdued the Slaves.
- 656 11. Childebert II. Son Grimoaldus, Maior of the Palace to Sigebert, was by the power of his Father made King of Metz, Dagobert the Son of Sigebert being shorn a Monk, and sent into Scotland.
12. Clovis the 2. King of the French, having vanquished and beheaded Grimoald, dispossessed Childebert of the Kingdom, which he took to himself.
- 662 13. Childerick, the 2. Son of Clovis, after the death of Clotaire his elder Brother, succeeding in the Kingdom of France, united all the French Dominions into one Estate. In which condition it remained (but with some enlargement of the Bounds) till the Partition made by and amongst the Children of Lewis the Godly; the name of Austrasia, or East-France, being extended by Charles the Great over all Pannonia, and so much of Germany as was under the command of the French. In which division, Lewis the second Son, surnamed the Ancient, being invested in the Kingdom of Germany, or so much of East-France or Austrasia as lay on the East-side of the Rhene; Lotharius, the eldest Son, had for his share the Title of Emperor, and therewith Italy, Provence, Burgundy, and so much of Austrasia or East-France as lay on the French side of the River. Afterwards being subdivided into three Estates, Italy, with the Title of Roman Emperor, was given to Lewis the eldest Son; to Charles, the youngest, Provence, with the Kingdom of Burgundy; and to Lothaire, the 2d. Son, Austrasia on this side of the Rhene, from hence called Lot-reich, Lot-reigne, and Lotharingia, as before was said. But Lothaire dying without issue, the Kingdom of Lorraine, containing all the Netherlands, (except Flanders and Artois) and all the parts of Germany before described, became divided betwixt Charles the Bald Emperor and King of France, and Lewis surnamed the Ancient, King of Germany; the one calling himself King of Lorraine on that side, the other King of Lorraine on this side of the Maes; the River Maes or Meuse parting their Possessions. But this Partition held not long amongst their Successors: For Lewis and Carloman King of France (the Sons of Ludovicus Bulbus) resigning their part hereof to Charles the Gros, Emperor of the Romans, and King of Germany, the said Charles, Arnulph, Lewis and Conrade, successively Emperors of the Romans and Kings of Germany, (together with Zwentobald the Ballard-Son of Arnulph interloping in the very middle of them) enjoyed it wholly to themselves. And so did also Charles the Simple King of France, on the death of Conrade, till forced thereto by Henry the first, (who succeeded Conrade in the Empire and Kingdom of Germany) he gave way to the old Partition (spoken of before: the Germans after that encroaching more and more on that part hereof, which of right belonged unto the French, till in the end (after much vicissitude and interchangeableness of affairs) both Princes laid aside the Title of Kings of Lorraine, incorporating so much as they held thereof into the rest of their Estates; Orto the third of Germany and Lewis the fifth of France being the last that pleased themselves with that broken Title. In the mean time this Country of Lorraine it self, as it is now bounded, together with the Country of Luyck-land, a great part of Brabant, some parts of the Land of Triers, Colen, and as some say, the Country of Gulick also, (but in this of Gulick I demur) as before was said, being taken out of it, were by Orto the Second made a Dukedom, anno 981, and by him given with the Title of Duke of Lorraine to Charles of France, Son of Gerberge, his Aunt by Lewis the 4. of France surnamed Transmarinc, Son of Charles the Simple. Charles thus advanced by his Cousin, and forgetting that he had been made Duke of Brabant not long before by Lothaire the French King, his Brother, shewed himself so alienated from the French, and wedded to the Germans, that the French, after the death of his Nephew Lewis the fifth, (whose next Heir he was) rejected him, and accepted Hugh Capet for their King. Orto, the Son of this Charles, dying without issue, left his Estate to Geofrey Earl of Ardenne, Bouillon, and Verdun, his near Kinsman by the Mothers side; from whom the present Dukes of Lorraine do derive themselves. From Hermingrade, one of the Daughters of this Charles, married to Albert (some call him Charles, and others Godfrey) Earl of Namur, by Alice their Daughter, married Baldwin the 5. of Hainault, descended Baldwin Earl of Flanders and Hainault, the Father of the Lady Isabel of Hainault, Wife of Philip the 2. King of France, thereby uniting the Blood of Pepin and Hugh Capet, to the great content of Lewis the 9. her Nephew: of whom it is said, that being a man of a tender Conscience, he never joyed in the Crown of France, till it was proved, that he was lineally descended, by his Grandmother, from Charles of Lorraine, whom Hugh Capet had so unjustly dispossessed. But to return again to the Dukes of Lorraine, I find not any great improvement made of the Estate, by any of them, more than the accession of the remaining Patrimony of the Earls of Ardenne in the person of Godfrey or Geofry the 3d. Duke hereof, and the adding of the Duchy of Bar in France by Rene Duke of Anjou, and titular King of Naples; but on the contrary; a great weakening and distraction of it by the Dukes hereof: Luyck-land and the Dukedom of Bouillon, being sold unto the Bishops of Liege by Godfrey surnamed of Bouillon, after King of Hierusalem; Brabant torn from it by Geofry Earl of Lovain, in the time of Baldwin, Brother of Godfrey; and Gulick-land by Eustace the Brother of Baldwin; the Bishops of Triers not being negligent, all this while of the opportunity. Besides which, somewhat had been done by the Emperor Orto the Third, to the diminution of this Estate, seeing that Orto the Second Duke, Son of Charles of France, had no Issue-Male, and thinking this Estate to be great enough without those Additions, and some other pieces on the Rhene, by him restored unto the Empire. The rest of this Estate was conferr'd on Godfrey of Ardenne, and not without good reason neither: it being probable enough that as it was first given by Otho II. unto Charles of France, with reference to his Mother Gerberge that great Emperor's Aunt; to Otho of Lorrain, Son of Charles, might look on Godfrey of Ardenne as most capable of it, with reference to his Mother Matilda, the same Emperor's Daughter. And unto this he might be moved not only in a noble gratitude to the blood of Otho, from whom his Father had receiv'd so great a benefit, but on the solicitation of the Emperor Henry II. (a Prince of the same House of Saxony) to whom the Alienation of it from the Daughters of Charles is ascribed by some. Which said, we have no more to do, but to present the Reader with the Catalogue of

The Dukes of LORRAIN.

- A. C.
- 981 1. Charles of France, took Prisoner by Hugh Capet, in which state he died. He married Bona, Daughter of Ricvine, and Sister of Godfrey the elder, Earls of Ardenne.
- 1001 2. Otho, Son of Charles and Bona.
- 1004 3. Godfrey, Earl of Ardenne, Son of Godfrey the elder, and Cousin of Otho by his Mother, confirmed herein by the power of the Emperor Henry II.
- 1019 4. Gozelo of Bouillon, the Brother of Godfrey.
- 1044 5. Godfrey II. Son of Gozelo.
- 1070 6. Godfrey III.
- 1078 7. Godfrey IV. of Bouillon, Son of Eustace Earl of Boulogne in Picardy, and of Ida his Wife, the Daughter of Godfrey II. created King of Hierusalem, anno 1099.
- 1100 8. Baldwin, Brother of Godfrey, Duke of Lorrain, and King of Hierusalem.
- 1119 9. Thierrie, Son of William the Brother of Baldwin.
- 1128 10. Simon, Son of Thierrie.
- 1141 11. Matthew, Son of Simon.
- 1176 12. Simon II. Son of Matthew.
- 1207 13. Frederick, Brother of Simon.
- 1213 14. Theobald, Son of Frederick.
- 1219 15. Matthew II. Son of Theobald, no great Friend of the Pop'es.
- 1259 16. Frederick II. Son of Matthew.
- 1303 17. Theobald II. Son of Frederick.
- 1311 18. Frederick III. Son of Theobald.
- 1329 19. Rodolph, Son of Frederick.
- 1346 20. John, Son of Rodolph.
- 1382 21. Charles, Son of John.
- 1430 22. Rene, Duke of Anjou, and King of Naples, &c. in right of Isabel his Wife, the Daughter of Charles.
- 1452 23. John II. Son of Rene and Isabel, succeeded on the death of his Mother.
- 1470 24. Nicholas, Son of John.
- 1473 25. Rene II. Son of Frederick, Earl of Vaudemont, and of Violand or Yoland, Daughter of Isabel and Rene the first; the Vanquisher of Charles of Burgundy at the Battel of Nancy.
- 1508 26. Anthony, Son of Rene the 2d. who in the year 1542 covenanted with Ferdinand, King of the Romans, that the Dukedom of Lorrain should for the future be Free.
- 1544 27. Francis, Son of Anthony.
- 1545 28. Charles II. Son of Francis.
- 1608 29. Henry, Son of Charles, married Katharine, Sister to Henry the 4th of France.
- 1624 30. Francis, Brother of Henry.
- 1630 31. Charles, Nephew to Francis by his Brother the Earl of Vaudemont, and Son-in-Law to him by the Marriage of Nicholaa his Daughter and Heir, succeeded by a mixt Title of Descent and Marriage. Being resolved to hold it in his own Right, he put away his Wife the Daughter of Francis, and took another to his Bed, which he better faulced. Punished not long after by the loss of his whole Estate: For immediately he engaged himself in the Wars of Germany, in behalf of Ferdinand II. but being beaten by the Suedes at the Battel of Pfaffenhofen in the County of Hannam, he lost a great part of his Country to the Victors, who pursued him home. And on the other side, Louis XIII. of France, picking a quarrel with him for receiving the Monsieur his Brother, and the Marriage of his Monsieur with the Lady Margaret the Duke's Sister, deprived him of the Duchy of Burgundy, and falling into Lorrain with a puissant Army at such time as the Suedes were there, compelled him to put into his hands the City of Nancy, and by consequence all the rest of his Estates, September 1633. Since which time the Duke hath never been restored thereto, nor hath any thing left him in it, for ought I can hear, but the Town of La Motte, (if that) together with a good Cause, many Hearts, and an invincible Courage. Nicholaa the Daughter of Francis, and Wife of Charles the last mention'd Duke of Lorrain, dying in the year 1657 bequeathed all her Right to the present King of France, who by the Pyranean Treaty in 1659 restored him to the Possession of it on certain Conditions. In the Year 1662 he resigned, or as some say sold, this Dukedom to the King of France again, and had it regranted; he soon repented and was herein opposed too by Charles the Son of Francis-Nicholas his Brother, who thinks himself the right Heir. In the Year 1663 the French forced him to another surrender, and he ended his unhappy Life the 17th of December 1675, at Burckenfeld in the Palatinate of the Rhine.

- 1675 32. Charles-Leopold, Son of Francis, Brother of Charles the last Duke, who formerly was a Cardinal, but renounced that Order and married Claudia, Sister of Nicholaa, by whom he had this Charles, born in the Year 1643; and being kept out of his Dukedom by the Forces of Louis XIV. in the year 1672 became General of the Imperial Forces against the French, and since against the Turks; and he has had such prodigious Success against the latter; that he has almost entirely recovered the Kingdom of Hungary out of their hands. This Prince married Eleonora Maria, Sister of Leopold the present Emperor of Germany, the 8th of Feb. 1678. She was the Relict of Michael Wisnowitzky, King of Poland. He died the 18th of April, 1690. of an Apoplexy at Wells in Germany, being extremely afflicted by almost all Christendom: He left three Sons, the eldest of which at his death was about ten years old.

- 1690 33. Leopold-Joseph Charles, Son of Charles-Leopold, born the 11th of Sept. 1679. is the present Duke of Lorrain. He has also four other Brothers besides himself, and all younger, so that this House is in no danger to be extinguish'd in this Generation.

The Revenues of this Prince are said to be 700000 Crowns; whereof 200000 arise from the Customs of the Salt made in his Country, and the other 500000 from his Coronet-lands. He is an absolute Prince, and giveth for his Device an armed Hand coming as it were from Heaven, and grasping a naked Sword; to shew that he holdeth his Estate by no other Tenure than God and his Sword; the only hope at this time, of the present Duke. For though he be accounted a Prince of the Empire, and his Dukedom reckoned for a part of the fifth Circle thereof, thereof, which is called the Circle of the Rhene; yet he neither comes unto the Dyets, nor holdeth himself bound by any of the Orders or Decrees which are made therein, as do the rest of the great Princes of Germany; his neighbourhood to the French formerly securing his Estate against any Force which the Empire durst bring against him for those neglects.

The main Reason why France has with so much greediness seized this small Dukedom, and since Alsatia, and the Franche Comte, was a desire to gain the Protection of the Rhene, that it might be the Barrier between them and Germany as it was of old; and by the surprize of Strasbourg they have in a great measure gain'd that point, if they can keep what they have thus gotten.

The Arms of Lorraine are Or, a Bend Gules charged with 3 Larks Argent. But herein I find Bara, an old French Herald, to differ from Paradine, the most exact Genealogist of the French Nation. For Bara charg'd the Bend not with 3 Alouettes, Larks, as Paradine doth, but with 3 Allerions, which are in Blazon small Birds wanting Beaks, Feet and Legs. Of this last Opinion is the most worthy Antiquary Carabden Clancieux; who withal telleth us, that when Godfrey of Bouillon was at the Siege of Hierusalem, shutting at S. David's Tower there, he broached three feeble Birds called Allerions upon his Arrow, and thereupon assumed this Arms.

6. SUEVIA, or SCHWABEN.

THE Dukedom of SUEVIA, or SCHWABEN, according to the ancient Limits and Extent thereof, was bounded on the North with Frankenland and the Lower Palatinate; on the South with Switzerland and the Alps of Tyrol; on the East with the River Leck, parting it from Bavaria; and on the West with the Rhene, dividing it from Sungow, and both Alsatia's. But now the Dukedom of Wirtemberg, the Marquisate of Baden, and other lesser Estates being taken out of it, it is contracted and restrained within narrower Bounds, having on the East Bavaria, on the West the Dukedom of Wirtemberg, and so much of the Rhene as serveth to divide it from Sungow and the Upper Elsass, on the North Franconia or Frankenland, and on the South a little of the Rhene, with some part of the Switzers.

The Country for the most part is Mountainous and Hilly, overspread with some Spurs of the Alps, and the Woods of Nigra Sylva or Swartzenwald, recompenced notwithstanding with great plenty of Springs and Rivers (and amongst them the Necar, and the Renowned Danubius) which do issue from them: which makes the Vales hereof to be very fruitful, sufficiently stored with all necessary Provisions. Nor are the Woods and Mountains so unprofitable, But that besides the great plenty of Fuel and the pleasures of Hunting, they do afford some Mines of Iron and other Metals.

The People in regard of their mountainous Situation are more fierce and warlike than the rest of the Germans, and so accounted of by Plutarch in former times; industrious in several Trades and Manufactures, especially in the weaving of Linnen-cloth, which is made here in great abundance: and by reason they have so much in them of the South, they are supra modum in Vanerem prout, as Ambrosius tells me, at least more given to Venus than the other of the Germans are; the Women also being said to be very forward in this kind, as tractable and easie as the Men could wish them.

The whole is generally divided into the Hegow lying next to the Lake of Constance; the Algow extending to Bavaria; Brissgow, upon the West of the River Rhene; and North Schwaben, on the Northern side of Danubius. Principal Cities in the HEGOW are, 1. Lindau, situate like an Island in the Lake of Constance, encompassed almost with the Waters thereof, but joined to it with a Causeway of 200 Paces long: one of the Free or Imperial Cities, made so for Money, by the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa, who did not The natural strength of this City helped to preserve it from Count Wrangel, who in the year 1647, besieged it for the Swedes. 2. Buchorn, and 3. Überlingen, on the same Lake; both Imperial also. 4. Schauß-hausen, seated on both sides of the Rhene, not far from the efflux thereof out of Lake Cell, (so called from a Town of that name belonging to the Arch-dukes of Austria, but anciently known by the name of Lacus Venetus) and near those dreadful Falls or Cataracts of that River no less than 50 Cubits downwards, with great Noise and Violence. For which cause all Vessels that go down the Rhene are fain to unlade themselves, and by Carts to carry their Goods to this Town, where they embark them again. Which as it yieldeth great benefit unto the Town by Tolls and Imports, so doth it always keep it stored with abundance of Barks and other Vessels: whence it hath the name of Schauß-hausen, that is to say, the house of Skiffs, or the Town of Skip-boats. The Town is conveniently seated amongst rich Pastures and sweet Groves on both sides of the River; not without some pleasant Hills, and those well planted with Vines, near adjoining to it: Imperial once, but now a Canton of the Switzers, as hath there been shewn. In 1529 this City imbraced the Reformation. 5. Arbon, upon the Lake it self, (the Arbor Felix of Strabo) belonging to the Bishop of Constance. 6. Meßpurg, the ordinary Seat and Residence of the Bishop of Constance, Lord of the most part of this Tract, on the same Lake also. 7. Constance it self, situate on both sides of the Rhene, where it issueth out of the Lake, called from hence the Lake of Constance, but by the Dutch, Boden-see, from the Castle of Bodmen; by Italy and other Antients Lacus Aconicus, and Brigantium; made by the Confluence of the Rhene, and some other Rivers falling out of Switzerland. The Town is Imperial, an Episcopal See, and a flourishing Empory: famous for the Council here holden, Anno 1414, of great Renown as well for the multitude and quality of the People which were there assembled, as for the importance of the matters which were therein handled. The People of most note there assembled were Sigismund the Emperor, 4 Patriarchs, 29 Cardinals, 346 Archbishops and Bishops, 564 Abbots and Doctors, 10000 Secular Princes and Noblemen, 450 common Harlots, 1600 Barbers, and 320 Minstrels and Jesters. The business there handled was, first the pacifying of a Schism in the Church, there being at that time three Popes (or rather Anti-Popes) viz. Gregory the 12. resident at Rome, John the 23. at Bononia, and Bennet the 13. in Spain; all three deposed by the Council, and Alexis the 5. made sole Pope by the unanimous content of the Council, declaring both by matter of Fact, and by a publick Constitution here made and ratified, that a Council is above the Pope. The other main business was the proceeding against John Huss and Hierome of Trague, (spoken of before) both which notwithstanding the Emperor's safe conduct, were here condemned of Heresie, degraded and burnt. Now the manner of degrading a Priest is this: (I hope to be excused for this Digression) The Party to be degraded is attired in his Priestly Veiements, holding in the one hand a Chalice full of Wine and Water, and in other a gilt Plate (or Patten, as they call it) with a Wafer. Then kneeling down, the Bishop's Deputy, 1. taking from him all those things, commands him to say no more Masses for the quick and dead. 2. Scraping his Fingers ends with a piece of Glais, he commanded him from that time forwards not to hallow any thing. And, 3. stripping him of his Priestly Habit, he is clothed in a Lay Attire, and so deliver'd over to the secular Magistrate. But to return again to the City of Constance: Being proscribed by Charles the 5th. for refusing the Interim, and not able to withstand such Forces as were raised against them, they put themselves under the protection of Ferdinand, then King of the Romans, and Brother of Charles. But herein they fell out of the Prying-pan into the Fire, as the saying is: For Ferdinand being possessed of the Town, seized on the common Treasury, and upon all Records and and Writings which belonged unto them; set out an Edict, that all the Ministers within eight days should depart the City; and that no Citizen from thenceforth should wear any Weapon. And so instead of a Protector he became their Master. The Swedes in 1634 attempted to Recover this City from the Austrians, but without any Success.

Chief Cities in the part hereof lying towards Bavaria which is called the ALGOW, are, 1. Buchau, on the Lake called Feder-see, a Town Imperial. 2. Ravensburg, a Free City, seated amongst Mountains, whereof one hangeth over it, the River Ach running by it in a bed so narrow that not able to receive the Waters which fall down from the Hills, it much endamageth all the Country by frequent Land-floods. 3. Wangen (the Nemavia of Antoninus) Imperial also. 4. Kempten, the Campodunum of Strabo, and 5. Memmingen, the Drusomagus of Ptolomy, both Imperial Cities; the last about three miles in circuit, populous, rich, and very well Traded. 6. Pfullendorf. 7. Zeukirk. 8. Bibrach; all three Imperial; the last supposed to be the Bragodurum of the Ancients. 9. Augsburg, on the River Lech, looking into Bavaria, first made a Roman Colony by Augustus Caesar, A. V. C. 739. and by him call'd Augusta Vindelicorum, the principal City in those times of the Vindelici, a potent People of this Tract. A City of great Wealth and State, containing about nine Miles in circuit, and very strongly Fortified; by Nature on the East and North, where the ground lies low and under Water, and on the West and South by Art. The Buildings for three parts of it are of Clay and Timber; but on the West part, seated on an Hill, built of Free-stone, six or seven Stories high; in which are many fair Houses of the principal Citizens, and many stately Palaces, which belong to the Fuggers, a Family of very great (almost Princely) Revenues, possessed of many goodly Dwellings both in the City and the Suburbs, and adjoining Territories; who though they have of late obtained the Honour of Barons, in regard of their Wealth, still keep themselves (contrary to the custom of Germany, where Traffick is counted a disgrace to a Noble-man) to the Trade of Merchandise. The publick Edifices of it are very decent, especially the Cathedral Church, a majestick Building; the other Churches, being ten in number, and the Religious Houses, correspondent to it. Of old time Ceres was here worshipped, from whence (or from the fruitfulness of the Soil) the City gives a Sheaf of Corn for the Arms thereof. Since their Conversion unto Christianity it was made a Bishops See. Destroyed by Attila and his Huns; it was after built more beautifully than it had been formerly; at last made Imperial (by Frederick I. in the Year 1162.) and the Mistress of as large a Territory as most Cities of Germany. Famous for the Confession of Faith exhibited in this place to Charles the Fifth, by the Protestant Princes, hence called Confessio Augustana, Anno 1530. 2. For the Interim, or mixt Form of Doctrine, containing some Points of Protestantism, but most of Popery, here tendred to both Parties by the said Emperor (but received by neither) to be subscribed to and observed till the Differences could be settled by a General Council. And 3. for the publick allowance here given by a Decree of all the States of the Empire to the Protestant Party, to profess openly their Religion without any Impeachment, Anno 1555. a Limitation only laid on the Ecclesiasticks, that if they changed their Religion, they should lose their Preferments; which were to be bestowed on others more addicted to the See of Rome. This City embraced the Reformation 1533, the Exercise of which was continued, tho' the City was in the hands of the Austrians till the Year 1629; which by the Treaty of Munster, in 1649, was again restored.

In the third part hereof, called BRISGOW, lying on the East of the River Rhene, and the West of Wirttemberg, and on the South closed in with the Canton of Basil. Places of most importance are, 1. Friburg, upon the Triesse and other Streams descending from the Mountains of Swartzen-wald, under which it lieth: Founded by Berchthold the third, Earl or Duke of Zerlingen, (the Castle of Zerlingen, Founded by Berthold the first, Son of Gebizo, the youngest Son of Guntram the second Earl of Habsburg, once the chief Seat of those Princes, being then near adjoining to it) in the Reign of Henry the fifth Emperor, Anno 1112. or thereabouts. Famous in those Days for Silver Mines, now for an University here established, Anno 1459, and being in present estimation the chief of the Country, of which more anon. 2. Offenbach. 3. Gengenbach, both upon the Kinrich, and both Towns Imperial: the first so named from Offa, an English Saxon, the Apostle of these Parts of Germany. 4. Hochberg, which gives the Title of a Marquis to the Marquises of Baden, who are Lords thereof. 5. Zell, once Imperial, but of late times belonging, as doth also, 6. Badenweiler, to the Marquis of Baden; this last accruing to them by the Marriage of Rodolphus the sixth of that name, Marquis of Hochberg, with a Sister of John Earl of Friburg, the then Lord thereof. 7. Waldshut, upon the Rhene, in a barren, cold and mountainous Country, but well stor'd with Woods. 8. Brisac, by Antonine called Mons Brisacius, a Garrison in his time against the encroaching Almans, and situate at that time on the French side of the Rhene, the course of the River being since turned on the other side, where now it runneth. It is built Castle-wise on the top of a round Hill, in which there is also a strong Tower or Fortrets, raised by Berchthold the third, for defence of the place; otherwise strong enough by its own natural situation, and might be made impregnable, but for want of Water, which is all drawn from one deep Well in the heart of the Town, or brought with great charge and trouble from the Rhene, which runs underneath it. The Town is fair, populous, and well built, once of most note in all the Country, from hence called Brisac-gow, or Brise-gow; but after the Building of Friburg by Berchthold the Fourth, it grew by little and little to be less frequented, the other being seated more conveniently for Trade and Business: Here also, not far off from the Castle of Zerlingen, stood that of Kiburg, somewhat the ancients of the two; of such Authority and Repute in those elder Times, that the Emperors do still retain the Title of Earls of Kiburg in the Style Imperial: descended on the House of Habsburg by the Marriage of Elizabeth, Daughter and Heir of Hartman the last Earl hereof, to Eberhard of Habsburg, Cousin-german to the Emperor Rodolph; on the expiring of which Line, Anno 1356, it fell, together with many fair Estates among the Switzers, to Albert Duke of Austria, surnamed the Short. In the Year 1638, this City was taken by the French, and is still in their hands.

Finally, in the fourth and last part hereof, called NORTH-SCHWABEN, because on the North-side of the Danow: the places most observable are, 1. Gemund, on the Rheims. 2. Dinckel-Spyel, on the Warmitz, two Imperial Towns; which with Uberlingen or Werlingen, (all three but mean in Building, Territory, or estimation, spoken of before) are the only three Imperial Cities in all Germany which totally adhere unto the Doctrines of the Church of Rome. 3. Bopfingen, on the Egra, an Imperial City. 4. Norlingen, on the same River, but in a low and moorish Ground, yet of great resort, populous and well traded; most memorable for the Defeat here given the Swedes by Ferdinand the third, now Emperor, at his first entrance on the Government; in which Bannier, one of the principal Commanders of that Nation, was slain on the place, Gustavus Horn, another of as great Eminence, taken Prisoner, their whole Forces routed; and thereupon so strange an Alteration of the Affairs of Germany, which they had almost wholly conquer'd, (though not for themselves;) that the Palatinate, not long before restored to its proper Owner, was again possessed by the Spaniards, Frankendale by the Imperialists, and the remainder of the Swedes forced to withdraw into their Holds on the Baltick Seas,

Anno

Anno 1637. 5. Entweil, not far from the head of the Neccar, an Imperial City, and a Confederate of the Switzers. 6. Donauert, seated on the Confluence of the Donau and the Werd, whence it had the Name, most commonly called only Werd; an Imperial Town, the Habitation of John de Werd, once a Brewer herein, but afterwards a chief Commander of the Forces of the Duke of Bavaria, in the late German Wars. 7. Villingen, on the Bregenz, a small River falling into the Danub; a Town belonging to the Princes of the House of Austria. Not far from which stands, 8. Furstenburg, an ancient Castle. The Earls hereof are Princes of the Empire, and Lords of a great part of the Country, descended lineally from Eginon, or Eggow, the youngest Son of the Lady Judith, Sister and Heir of Berthold the Fifth, the last Duke of Zerigen, and consequently a Branch of the illustrious House of Habsburg; exceedingly increased both in Power and Patrimony, by the Marriage of Frederick Earl hereof (in the time of Charles the fifth, under whom he served in his Wars against the Protestants) with Anne the Daughter and Heir of Christopher the last Earl of Werdeberg, possessed of many fair Estates amongst the Switzers and the adjoining parts of Schwaben. In a Village of this Earl, call'd Den Eschingen, is the head of Danubius. A Cardinal of this Family is now Bishop of Strasbourg, a great Favourite of Lewis the 14th of France, who in the Year 1687 procured him to be chosen Coadjutor to the Elector of Cologne; and in the Year 1688 opposed him to Prince Clement of Bavaria upon the Death of that Elector. 9. Ulm, an Imperial City, situate on the meeting of the Blave, the Iler, and the Danub, the principal City of North-Schwaben; about six Miles in compass, rich, populous, well fortified, and stored with an Armory for Ordnance and all manner of Ammunition, not inferior to any in Germany. The Town is but new, taking its first rise from a Monastery, here Founded by Charles the Great, which after grew to be a great City; and took the name of Ulm from the Elms about it. At first it belonged unto the Monks; of whom having bought their Freedom in the time of Frederick the Third, it became Imperial. The Danub hereabouts begins to be navigable, having so violent a Stream, that the Boats, which go down the Water use to be sold at the place where they land, it being both difficult and chargeable to bring them back again. Not far hence, on the Banks of the Danub, lie the Suevian Alps, and amongst them the old Castle of Hohenberg; the Lord whereof, on the Ruin of the House of Schwaben, became possessed of a great Estate here and in Upper Italy, sold afterwards to Rodolph of Habsburg, the Founder of the now Austrian Family. This City embraced the Reformation in the Year 1529, and still persisted in it.

The ancient Inhabitants hereof were the Brixentes, Simetes, Ingufci, and Calcones, who, together with the Vindelici (of whom more hereafter) and other Tribes of the Rhena, (of whom somewhat hath been said before in the Alpine Provinces) possessed themselves of that Country, which lieth betwixt the River Im and the head of the Rhene, East and West, Danubius and the Alps of Italy, North and South. Within which compass are the greatest part of the Grisons, the Dukedoms of Schwaben and Bavaria on this side the Danub, and part of the County of Tyrol, and not a few of the Cantons of Switzerland. Subdued by Drusus and Tiberius Nero, Sons-in-Law of Augustus, they were made a Province of the Romans; divided into Rhetia prima, taking in all the Countries from the Rhene to the Leck, or Lycus; and Rhetia secunda, lying betwixt the Leck, and the River Im, which by another name was called Vindelicia. By which account all Schwaben on the South side of the Danub was part of the Province of Rhetia prima, continuing so till vanquished and subdued by the Almans in the time of Valentinian the third, Emperor of the Western parts. As for the Almans who succeeded in possession hereof, they were originally some Tribes and Families of the Saxa, the most warlike Nation of the Germani, inhabiting upon the Banks of the River Albi; who jealous of Charl's great Successes, brought against him 40,000 fighting Men, of which 8000 were slain, and many drowned. They used to stay at home and go to the War by turns: they which staid at home tilling the Land, to whom the rest returning brought the Spoil of the Enemies. But after this blow we hear little of them till the time of Caracalla the Son of Severus; during whose Reign, descending towards the Banks of the Rhene and the Danub, and mingling with other Nations as they passed along, they assumed first the name of Almans; either from that promiscuous mixture of all sorts of Men, or (as I rather think) from Almanus the Son of Frifia, one of the great and national Gods of the Germani. And though they were well beaten by him at their first coming down, near the River Albia, and afterwards more broken by Dioclesius, who slew at least 6000 of them at one time in Gaul; yet never left they to infect the Provinces of the Empire which lay nearest to them, till in the end following the tract of the Marci, who had gone before them, and beaten down many of the Forts and Garrisons which were in their way, they made themselves Masters of Rhetia prima, Germania prima, and part of Maxima Sequanorum, containing, besides the Countries spoken of before, Alsacia, and so much of the Lower Palatinate as lies on the French side of the Rhene. But quarrelling with the French, their next Neighbours, (of whose growth and greatness they began to be very sensible) they were first vanquished by Chlovis, the first Christian King of the French, in that great and memorable Fight at Zulph near Colen, and afterwards made wholly subject to the Conqueror, who oppressed them with an heavy and lasting Servitude. About this time they returned again to their old Name of Suevians, their Estate being erected into a Dukedom, called many times the Dukedom of Almain; and when so called, divided into the Upper Almain, comprehending the Country of the Grisons, with some parts of Switzerland and Tyrol, and the Lower or the proper Almain, which contained the rest of the Estates of the ancient Almans, called for the most part by the name of the Dukedom of Saxia or Schwaben, and finally transmitting that name to this Province only, the best part thereof. These Dukes were at first officary only, removeable at the will of the Emperor, and accountable to him; not seldom many at one time, especially whilst under the command of the French, some of them being Dukes of the Upper, and others of the Lower Almain. So that there is no great certainty of their Succession: nor much care to be taken in searching after it; though otherwise Men of great Authority and command in their several Times. The most remarkable amongst them was Rodolph, Earl of Reinfelden and Duke of Schwaben, (descended from the Earls of Habsburg) in the Reign of Henry the 4th, against whom he was chosen Emperor by the practice and procurement of Pope Hildebrand, but overcome and wounded at the Battel of Hysser, he died not long after of his Wounds, with great repentance for rebelling against his Sovereign. After his death, some Provinces being dismembred from it, and other lesser Estates first erected out of it, it was made hereditary in the person of Frederick Baron of Hohenstauffen, surnamed the Ancient, by the Munificence and Bounty of the said Henry the Fourth, whose Daughter Agnes he had married. His Successors follow in this order.

The Dukes of SCHWABEN.

1. Frederick the Ancient, the first hereditary Duke of Schwaben.
2. Frederick with one eye, Son of Frederick the Ancient.
3. Frederick III. surnamed Barbarossa, Son of Frederick with one eye, Duke of Schwaben, and Emperor: he succeeded the Emperor Henry

- Henry the fifth in the Dukedom of Franconia, and left the same unto his Successors.
1190. 4. Frederick IV, second Son of Barbarossa; his elder Brother Henry succeeding in the Empire by the name of Henry the sixth.
5. Conrad, Brother of Frederick the fourth.
6. Philip, Brother of Conrad, after the death of Henry the 6. elected Emperor.
- 1207 7. Frederick V. Son of Henry the sixth, elected Emperor by the name of Frederick the second, King of Naples and Sicily also in the right of his Mother.
- 1250 8. Conrad II. Son of Frederick the fifth, King of both Sicilies, and Emperor of Germany after the death of his Father; poisoned, as was supposed, by his base Brother Manfred, who succeeded in his Kingdom of Sicily.
- 1254 9. Conradine, the Son of Conrad, pursuing his Right unto the Kingdoms of Naples and Sicily, was overcome and taken prisoner by Charles of Anjou, Successor unto Manfred in those Estates, and by his command beheaded at Naples, anno 1268. After whose death (being the last of that powerful and Imperial Family) this vast Estate was brought unto a second dismembring, and divided amongst the Bishops, Princes and Free Cities hereof: of which last there are more within the old Precincts of this Dukedom than in all Germany besides. So that beholding it in the first and second Dilapidation, we find many goodly Patrimonies and fair Estates (besides what belongeth to the Cities and Episcopal Sees) to have been raised out of the Ruins of this great Dukedom: that is to say, the Dukedoms of Zeringen and Wirtemberg, with the Marquisate of Baden, dismembred from it when conferred on Frederick of Hohenstauffen; the Earldoms of Pfirt, Hohenberg and Friburg, (besides a great improvement of the Earldom of Habsburg) advanced out of the second Ruine. How Pfirt and Hohenberg were united to the House of Austria hath been shewn already; and what becomes of Wirtemberg and Baden shall be shewn hereafter. Here it is only to be noted, that the Family of Zeringen, possessed of almost all Brisgow and a great part of Switzerland, owe their Original to Berthold, the Son of Gebizo, a younger Son of Guntram the 2. Earl of Habsburg. Which being extinguished after a Succession of seven Princes only in the person of Berthold the fifth, (who died the same day in which the Emperor Rodolph of Habsburg was born) anno 1218, the Rights hereof descended on the Earls of Friburg, the principal City of that Country: Cuno, the first that bare the Title of Earl of Friburg, being the eldest Son of Judith, Sister and Heir of Berthold the last Duke of Zeringen. Eggon, the last Earl of which House, being overlaid by his undutiful and rebellious Subjects, sold his Estate therein for 12000 Ducats to Albert and Leopold Dukes of Austria, Sons of Albert the Short, whose Successors enjoy all Brisgow to this very day.

The Arms of Schwaben were Argent, 3. Leopards Sable, as is said by Bara: But Paradine will have them to be three Leopards Sable, crowned Gules, in a Field Or.

7. B A V A R I A.

BAVARIA is bounded on the East with Austria, and the Bishoprick of Salzburg, on the West with the River Leck or Lycus, which parts it from Schwaben, on the North with Northgoia, or the upper Palatinate, and Bohemia, and on the South with the Earldom of Tyrol and Carinthia. It containeth the whole Province of Rhetia secunda, and so much of Noricum Mediterraneum as now maketh up the Bishoprick of Salzburg, and by a distinct name was called Vindelicia, as being the ancient habitation of the Vindelici; so named from the two Rivers of Vindis and Lycus, (now the Werd and the Leck) upon which they lived. According whereunto it is thus versified by a German Poet.

*Respicit & late fluvios Vindium que Licum que
Miscentes Undas, & nomina Littoris, unde
Antiquam Gentem, populunque, Urbemque vocarunt Vindelicam.*

In English thus,
Vindis and Lycus, Floods of noted Fame,
He next beholds, mingling their Streams and Name;
To which the old Vindelici do own
The name of both their Nation and their Town.

Meaning by their Town, as I conceive, Augusta Vindelicorum, their Metropolis or Capital City. But after such time as the Boii or Boiurians had driven out the Romans, and got possession of this Country, the name of Vindelicia and Rhetia secunda grew into disuse, that of Boiaria succeeding in the place thereof, mollified or corrupted into Bavaria, the present name of the Country amongst the Latines; but by the Dutch called Bayeren, by the French Bavier. By the Treaty of Munster, all the upper Palatinate of the Rhene, was taken from that Family, and given to the Duke of Bavaria.

The whole is divided into three parts: the Higher, lying towards the Alps of Tyrol, the Lower, extending all along the banks of the Danow; and the District of Salzburg, situate betwixt the Inn and the Dukedom of Austria: all three much over-spread with Woods and Forests, remainders of the Hercynian Forest described before. But more particularly the Higher, lying towards the Alps, is cold and barren, affording no Wines, and but little Corn: the Lower being more fruitful, and better planted, for some parts (especially about Regensperg and Landshut) inferiour unto none in Germany for Richness and pleasantness of the situation. Of the District of Salzburg we shall speak by it self, because by some not reckoned as a part hereof. In all there is great quantity of Fuel for the fire, and of Timber for Building; no lets of Swine fattened in the Woods, and sent away by numerous Herds into other Countries.

The Christian Faith was first preached here amongst the Boiurians by Rupertus Bishop of Wormes, driven from his See by Childebert King of the French, anno 540, or thereabouts, and here made the first Bishop of Salzburg: corrupted at this time with the Leven of the Church of Rome, to which this Country (setting aside the Imperial Cities) is more entirely devoted than any other in all Germany.

Principal Cities in the HIGHER are 1. Munchen, (in Latine Monachium) the Duke's Seat, seated on the Isar, or Isara, in a very sweet and delightful Soil, among Ponds and Groves, daintily interlaced with pretty Riverets, and enriched with many excellent Gardens; that of the Duke being hardly to be paralleld in all this Continent: first founded by Henry Duke hereof in the time of Otto the first, anno 972, now grown a large and populous City; the publick Buildings, as Churches, Turrets, Libraries, the Senate-House, or Guild-hall, and common Market-place, of such excellent Structure, that they serve not only for Use and Ornament, but for Admiration. Amongst them none is more eminent than the Library in the Ducal Palace, wherein are conceived to be 11000 Volumes, the most part of them Manuscripts. A Town made choice of by Maximilian, the now Duke of Bavaria, to be the receptacle of the Spoils got by him in the Wars of Germany: here being found (at such time as the Town was taken by the King of Sweden) 140 Brass pieces (besides other great Guns) hidden under the ground, one of the which was charged, instead of Powder and Shot, with 30000 Crowns in Gold. 2. Landspurg, upon the Leck or Lycus, near the Alps of Tyrol: once of great strength, because a Frontier towards Schwaben; but proving a dangerous neighbour to the Swedish Garrisons planted in these parts, during that War against the Duke of Bavaria, was by them taken and dismantled, and is now an open Village only. 3. Martenwald, now a place of no note or beauty, heretofore the the Inutrium of Ptolomy, seated near the Alps. 4. Fridberg, well fortified by Duke Ludowick or Lewis the second, for a Bulwark against those of Augsberg. 5. Here stood also the old Castle of Schyre, built by Arnulph 2 Son of Arnulph the first, Duke of Bavaria, the Seat and Honorary Title of his Posterity, (Dynastia Schyrensis in the Latine) till Orho of Wittlesback, by the favour of Frederick Barbaroff, and his own good fortune did attain that Dukedom.

In the LOWER Bavaria there first offers it self to consideration the Town of Rain, seated on the Leck, not far from the fall thereof into the Danow; memorable for the Skirmish near to it betwixt the Swedes and Bavarians at the first passing of the Swedish Forces over that River, in which John Earl of Tilly, so famous for his long and fortunate Conduct of the Imperial Armies, received his death's wound, of which he died at Ingolstadt within few weeks after. 2. Newburg, upon the Danow, not far from Rain; the first Town of Bavaria taken in by the Swedes after the said defeat of Tilly. 3. Ingolstadt, said to be built by a Tribe or Nation of the Sueves called Angeli, and thence called Angeloſtadium or Angleſtade; first made a City by Ludowick of Bavaria Duke and Emperor, and in the year 1410 made a University, much privileged by Duke Lewis or Ludowick the fifth, and Pope Pius the second. A Town is strongly fortified both by Art and Nature, that it seems impregnable, and indeed proved so to Gustavus the late King of Sweden, in the year 1632, who here found the first check to his prosperous Fortunes, being forced to raise his Siege without endangering it, and find work elsewhere. 4. Regenspurg, (in Latine, Ratisbona) on the Danow also, where it receives the River Regen, whence it hath its name: built in the place of Tiberina, or Augusta Tiberii, so called of a Colony brought hither by Tiberius Caesar about the time of our Saviours Passion, afterwards called Rhatopolis, or the City of the Rhatians, the chief of Rhetia secunda. At this time it is a fair, rich, and populous City, beautified with an infinite number of Churches and Religious Houses: anciently an Episcopal See, and of late made the ordinary place for the general Diets of the Empire. In former times it was the Seat of the Kings and first Dukes of Bavaria, then made Imperial, and now mixt, or both: for being still Imperial, at the least in name, it was seized on unexpectedly by the now Duke of Bavaria, when the Swedes first got footing within his Dominions, held by him with a very strong Garrison, after the loss of Munchen his chief place of Residence, till at last won from him by the Swedes, anno 1633. 5. Passam, by the modern Latinists Patavia; but by some thought to be the Boiodurum of Ptolomy, then a Roman Garrison: seated on the Danow, where it meeteth with the Inn and the Ilz; by which it is divided into three Towns, Passam, Inſtadt, and Iſtadt, the whole Compositum being a rich, fair, and well traded City: a See Episcopal, and subject immediately to the Bishop as chief Lord hereof, who hath his dwelling in the Castle of Oberhausen, adjoining to that part hereof which is called Iſtadt. A place remarkable for many Meetings and Consultations of the German Princes, especially for that of the year 1552, in which, all former Quarrels being laid aside, the Protestants were first permitted the free Exercise of their Religion, by the consent and Edict of Charles the fifth, who had most laboured to suppress it. More in the land is 6. Friſing, on the swelling of a fine round Hill near the River Ambra, which runs beneath it, called anciently Fraximum, conceived to be built by some of the Presidents or Lieutenants for the Roman Emperors honoured with an Episcopal See about the year 710. One of the Bishops whereof, commonly called Orho Friſingensis, was the best Historian of his time. 7. Landshut, upon the River of Iſer, in the richest and most pleasant Country of all Bavaria; a beautiful and well built City, the work of Lewis Duke hereof, in the year 1208, adorned with a Church of most curious building for the service of God, and a magnificent Palace for the use of the Duke. 8. Erciſtat, the only Imperial Town (except Regenspurg) in all this Dukedom. The whole number of Cities and great Townes in both Bavaria's is supposed to be 80: that is to say, 34 Cities, and 46 great Towns, of which these are the principal.

Lewis the II. the Elector Palatine, was the Founder of the line of Newburg, which at this time enjoys that Electorate, he succeeded his Father in the Dukedom of Bipont, and the Earldom of Weldenz and Sponheim, and having Eradicated Popery, settled the Augustine Confession in these Countries.

1532 2. Wolfgang his Son Succeeded him, who was born in the year 1526, Orho Henry Elector Palatine gave this Prince Newburg, upon the Danube and Saltzbach, and by his Will he declared him the Heir of the Palatinate, if his own Male Line failed.

1569 3. Philip Lewis born in the year 1547, 1. Oſto. A good manager of his Estates, and a Zealous Protestant, he married Ann the Daughter of William Duke of Cleves.

1614 4. Wolfgang William, born the 28th of October, 1587. This Prince returned to the Roman Catholick Religion, in the year 1614, and was much disliked on that account by his Mother and Brothers, and Son after was involved in a War on the Account of the Dukedom of Juliers.

1653 5. Philip William, born the 24th of November 1615, he continued the War his Father had began, till the year 1666, when that Controversie was ended, and in the year 1685, Charles Elector Palatine Dying without lawful Issue, he succeeded by the Fifth Article of the Treaty of Osnabruck in that Electorate, out of which he was driven by Lewis the 14th. in the year 1688, but the next year Recovered the most of it, This Prince was very happy in the Marriage of his Daughters, Maria Sophia in 1687, Married Peter King of Portugal, Maria Anna in 1689, Married Charles the II. King of Spain, Eleonora Magdalena the Eldest, in 1676 Married Leopold Emperor of Germany.

Of John William Joseph his Eldest, born the 19th of April 1658. I shall speak in the Catalogues of the Elector Palatine.

The Bishoprick or District of SALTZBURG, being the third part of Bayeren or Bavaria, (according to our former division of it) extendeth from the Inn or Oenus towards the Confines of Austria. The Soil hereof is rocky, dry, and barren, excepting some few Vallies only, as seated in the midst of the Julian Alps, the habitation heretofore of the Norici mediterranei, of whom more hereafter. The principal Town hereof is Saltzburg, seated upon the River Saltzach, whence it had the name; raised out of the Ruins of Juvavia, placed herabouts by Antoninus, the Station of a Cohort of Roman Souldiers belonging to the first Legion. An Alpine City, strongly situate among the Mountains; but no less beautiful than many of the lower grounds. The Royal Seat of some of the Bavarian Kings, after of the Archbishops hereof, the most powerful Prelates for Revenue or Jurisdiction of any in Germany. The See was first fixed here by Rupertus or Ruberius, the first Apostle of these parts, spoken of before; whose Image or Impress is stamped to this day on the Coins of this Bishoprick. At the time when Luther first endeavoured a Reformation. Cardinal Matthaus Langius was Bishop here, who did ingeniously confess, that the Mals did not want its faults; that the Court of Rome was much corrupted, and the lives of Priests and Friars fit to be reformed: sed quod miscellus Monachus omnia reformet, id non esse tolerabile; but that such a sorry fellow as Luther should attempt the work, was by no means to be endured. 2. Newkirch, on the same River, near the head thereof. 3. Rottenburg, on the East-side of the Inn, bordering on Bavaria. 4. Traunheim, upon the Traun, rising out of the Lakes. 5. Wildeshut, one of the farthest Northwards, and 6. Bishops-stoffe, one of the most Southern in all this Tract. In the year 1685, the Inhabitants of a Valley of Tyrol, subject for the Main of it to the Archbishop of Saltzburg, were forced to leave their dwelling by that Archbishop. They seemed to be some Remains of the old Waldenses, because they Worshipped neither Saints nor Images, and believed the Sacrament to be only a Commemoration of the Death of Christ, and in many other points they differed from the Church of Rome, but then they knew nothing of the Lutherans or Calvinists, and were not known to the Grifons their next Neighbours; and they had Mass said amongst them. Some few years before this, some of them Travelling into the Palatinate, were better instructed in matters of Religion, and brought back with them some Books, which prevailed so far upon the rest, that they gave over going to Mass, some of their Priests concurring with them in the change, the rest complain'd to the Archbishop, who commanded them to return to the Mass upon severe Threats, whereupon all the Inhabitants of this Valley, old and young, to the number of 2000 Persons, divided themselves into several parties, some of them went into Brandenburg, others into the Palatinate, and about 500 of them dispersed themselves amongst the Switzers and Grifons.

The first Inhabitants of Bavaria (excluding the District of Saltzburg) were the Vindelici, as aforesaid: a people so resolutely bent to maintain their Freedom against the incroachment of the Romans, that when Drujuss, the Son in Law of Augustus, and Father of Germanicus Caesar, made War upon them, the very Women thereof took the Alarm; & deficientibus telis, Infantibus in ora militum adversa miserunt, and when their Darts were spent, threw the young Infants (saith the Historian) at the heads of the Romans. After them, in the declining of the Empire, succeeded the Boiarians, some of the many Tribes of the Boii, the most diffused and multitudinous Nation of Gaul and Germany. Originally they were of Gaul, inhabiting the Dukedom of Bourbon, from whence some of them passed with the Senones and other of the Gauls to the farther side of the Alps (in respect of them) where they took up the Country between the Apennine and the Po. Wearied with many Bickerings, at last with sharp and bitter Wars against the Romans, and by them deprived of half their Country, some of them passed into Germany, and mingled themselves with the Taurisci, then dwelling in those parts which we now call Stiermark: others advancing further, thrust themselves into the Norici (of whom more anon) and some retired themselves into the shelters and fast places of the Hercynian Forest. Driven from this last by the Marcomanni, they fell into the Countries of the Hermundur and Norici, (now the Upper Palatinate) who, mingled into one Nation with them, took the name of Boiarians, and were by that name first known in the time of Clovis the fifth King of the French; by whose perswasion, in the 17th year of Anastasius Emperour of the East, they passed over the Danow, and possessed themselves of Vindelicia, or the second Rhatia, with some part of the Noricum, to which they gave the name of Boiaria, as before was signified. They were governed first by Kings, (as all Nations were) of whom we meet with none but Aldigerius, (and he the last of that Race) slain fighting on the side of the Almans against the French, at the great Battle of Zulph near Colen. After which they were made subject to the Conquerors, as their Neighbours and Confederates the Almans were, but suffered to live under the command and Government of their own Princes, by the name of Dukes. Of these, from Theodo the Son of Aldigerius to Tassilo the last Duke, outed of his Estate and Honours by Charles the Great, for conspiring with the Lombards against him, are reckoned 15. Dukes in all; whose names (for there remaineth little of them but the empty names) we shall subjoyn in the ensuing Catalogue of the

Dukes of the BOIARIANS.

| 735 | 14. Utilo . |
| 765 | 15. Tassilo III. the last Duke of the Boiarians , of whom more anon. |

Amongst these, few were of any note but 1. Theodo the first, Son of Aldigerius, who abandoning the name of King, because less pleasing to the French, who had newly conquered them, assumed that of Duke, and passing over the Danow, extorted the whole Province of Rhatia secunda, with part of Noricum from the Romans, anno 508, or thereabouts. 2. Theodo the second, named the great, for his great and many Victories against the Romans, whom he outed of all Noricum and Vindelicia, and whatsoever they held on the Dutch side of the Alps. 3. Theodo the third of that name, and the fourth in number of the Dukes, converted with his people to the Christian Faith by the Preaching of Rupertus before mentioned, anno 580. 4. Tassilo the third of that name, and the last of their Dukes of the Race of Aldigerius, or of the old Boiarian blood; who being deposed by Charles the Great, the whole Country became immediately subject to the French, governed at first by their Lieutenants. Disinherited from the French Empire by Lewis the Godly, it was made a Kingdom, (Pannonia being added and united to it) by whom it was conferred on Lotharius his eldest Son, who was afterwards Emperor of the Romans: after his death possessed by the Kings of Germany, but as a distinct Kingdom both in name and Title, till the decease of Lewis the Son of Arnulph, the last of the direct Line of Charles the Great. He being dead, and the Bavarians loth to be made a Subject Province to the Kingdom of Germany, one Arnulph of the Issue of the said Charles, with the general liking of the Boiarians, took upon himself the Title of King; but being opposed therein by Conrade the Brother of Lewis, Emperor and King of Germany, and also by Henry the first who succeeded, he changed the Title of King into that of Duke; the Founder of the present House of

The Dukes of BAVARIA.

| | 3. Berchthold , the Brother of Arnulph , confirmed in the Estate by the said Emperor Otho . After whose death it was conferred on Henry the Brother of Otho the 1st. who had married Judith , Daughter of Arnulph the first Duke, and Sister to Eberhard . |
| 947 | 4. Henry , Brother of Otho the first, surnamed Rixofus , or the Quarrellom. |

5. Henry

5. Henry II. Son of the former Henry, surnamed Hezzelo.
6. Henry III. surnamed the Saint Son of Henry the 2d. the first Emperor who came in by Election, according to the Order made by Pope Gregory the 5. After whose coming to the Empire this Dukedom was transferred for 14 Successions from one great Family to another, according to the power and pleasure of the present Emperour, in manner following.
7. Henry IV. surnamed Hezzel, Brother to Cunegund, the renowned Wife of Henry the Saint; by whom he was preferred to this Dukedom, and by him deposed.
8. Henry Guelph, Son of Robert Earl of Altorff in Schwaben, (of the strange Original of which Family we shall speak in Brunswick) made Duke by the Emperor Conrade the 2.
9. Guelpho, Son of Henry Guelph, or Henry the 5.
10. Ernest, created Duke hereof by the same Conrade the 3. and by him deposed again for conspiring against him.
11. Henry VI. the Black.
12. Cuno, accused of Conspiracy, and displaced by Henry the 3. to make room for
13. Henry VII. Son of the said Emperor Henry the 3. whom he succeeded in the Empire by the name of Henry the 4.
14. Agnes, the Mother of the said Henry the 4. by the gift of her Son.
15. Otho, by the gift of the Empress Agnes, deposed not long after by Henry the 4.
- 1071 16. Welfo III. Son of Coniza, the Daughter of Guelph the 2. by Azon an Italian Marquis made Duke hereof by the said Emperor Henry the 4.
17. Welfo IV. Son to Welfo the 3. he dyed in 1119.
- 1119 18. Henry VIII. surnamed the Proud, by others called Henry the black, Brother of Guelpho the 4. by the Marriage of Gertrude Daughter of Lotharius the second, Duke of Saxony also. In the year 1137. Deprived of both by the Emperor Conrade the 3. He dyed in 1139.
- 1138 19. Leopold, Son to Leopold the 4. Marquis of Austria, made Duke by the said Conrade the Third.
20. Henry IX. Brother of Leopold, after Marquis, at last Duke of Austria.
- 1154 21. Henry X. surnamed the Lion, Son of Henry the Proud, restored by the Arbitrement of Frederick Barbarossa, (the Duke of Austria being otherwise satisfied) by whom he was not long after prescribed, and deprived of both his Dukedoms. After which this Estate became fixed and settled in the person and posterity of Henry the Xth. died in the year 1195.
- 1180 22. Otho of Wittlesback, so called from the place of his birth or dwelling, descended lineally from Arnulph the Lord of Schyre in the Upper of Bavaria, and 2. Son of Arnulph the first Duke hereof; advanced unto his honour by Frederick Barbarossa, sensible of the too great power of the former Dukes: the whole extent of this Estate being reduced by this time to the limits of the modern Bavaria, and the Palatinate of Northgoia.
- 1183 23. Ludowick, or Lewis Son of Otho.
- 1231 24. Otho II. Son of Lewis, who, by marrying Gertrude, the sole Daughter of Henry Count Palatine of the Rhene, brought the Electoral Dignity into the House of Bavaria.
- 1290 25. Henry, Duke of Bavaria and Count Palatine of the Rhene, the Son of Otho 2.
- 1294 26. Ludowick or Lewis II. Brother of Henry Duke of Bavaria, and Elector Palatine of the Rhene.
- 1312 27. Ludowick or Lewis the III. second Son of Lewis the 2. succeeded in the Dukedom of Bavaria, Rodolph, the eldest Son, succeeding in both Palatinates and the Electoral Dignity. He was afterwards elected and crowned Emperor, known commonly by the name of Ludovicus Bavaricus. This Prince was born in the year 1287, Chosen Emperor in 1314 upon the Death of Waldemar, Marquis of Brandenburg, he gave that Electorate to Lewis his Son, in the year 1323: Frederick Titcher of the House of Austria, and in the year 1347, was slain by a fall from his Horse.
- 1347 28. Stephen, the eldest Son of Ludowick the Emperor; William and Albert, his two Brethren, successively enjoying the Earldoms of Hainault, Holland, &c. in right of their Mother. He succeeded in Bavaria, and was a Prince of Great Piety and Vertue.
- 1375 29. Stephen II. Son of Stephen the first; his Brothers, Frederick and John, sharing with him parts of the Estate.
- 1413 30. Ludowick II. surnamed Barbatus, deposed and imprisoned by his own Son Ludowick, who yet died before him without Issue. The deposed Prince, was a Turbulent and Unjust Prince, and would have disinherited Lewis his Son, to set up a Bastard in his stead. He dyed in Prison in the year 1447, his Son dying in 1445.
- 1447 31. Henry the II. Son of Frederick, the second Brother of Stephen the 2. succeeded on the death of Ludovicus Barbatus.
- 1450 32. Ludowick V. surnamed the Rich, the Son of Henry the 2. banished the Jews out of his Estates and seized their goods in 1450.
- 1479 33. George, surnamed the Rich also, the Founder of the University of Ingolstadt; whose sole Daughter and Heir was married to Rupertus Prince Elector Palatine, with the Dukedom of Bavaria for her Dower. But Maximilian the Emperor, not liking so much greatness in the German Princes, confirmed the same on,
- 1503 34. Albert III. Son of a former Albert, Nephew of John Munchen by his Son Ernestus: which John was youngest Brother to Stephen the 2. who by the power and favour of Maximilian the Emperor succeeded unto George the Rich: the cause of a long and unhappy War betwixt the Electors of the Rhene and Dukes of Bavaria; the worst whereof, besides the loss of this Estate, fell upon the Palatines, proscribed and outed of their Country upon this quarrel: but, upon their Submission restored again.
- 1508 35. William, the Son of Albert the 3d, William the Son of Albert, was born in the year 1493.
- 1577 36. Albert IV. a great Champion of the Doctrines and Traditions of the Church of Rome; and so extremely affected unto the Jesuites, that he built Colledges for them at Landsburg, Ingolstadt and Munchen, his three principal Towns, he was born in 1526.
- 1579 37. William II. Son of Albert the 4. as zealous as his Father in the cause of the Church of Rome: therein exceeded very much by Maximilian his eldest Son, to whom this Prince resigned his Government in the year 1597, and retired into a Monastery, he Dyed the 27th of February 1626, being then in the 78th year of his Age. Born in 1548.

- 1597 38. Maximilian, eldest Son of William the 2. born the 17th of April 1573, who chiefly out of the same zeal sided with Ferdinand the 2. in the Wars of Germany, anno 1620. and took upon him the conduct of the Armies of the said Emperor against Frederick Count and Elector Palatine, chosen King of Bohemia: in which having done great service to the Imperial and Romish Interest, he was by the said Ferdinand invested in the Upper Palatinate, called anciently (but not more properly than now) the Palatinate of Bavaria, together with the Electoral Dignity. This last was conferred at first upon him but for term of life in the Dyet at Regensburg, 1623. the Electors of Mentz, Saxony and Brandenburg then protesting against it; but afterwards, in the Dyet at Prague, anno 1628. conferred upon him and his Heirs for ever, to the great prejudice of the Princes of the Palatine Family, who by reason of their simultaneous Investiture with the first of their House, are not to be deprived of their Estates and Dignities for the offence of their Fathers; the punishment not being to extend beyond the person of the Offender. But notwithstanding their Pretensions and Allegations, the Duke is still possessed of the Title and Dignity, and confirmed therein by the Conclusions of the Treaty of Munster, and a new Electorate being to be erected for the Palatine Princes.
- 1651 39. Ferdinandus Maria, Son of Maximilian, born in the year 1636, the 21st. of October, he succeeded his Father in the year 1651, and dyed suddenly in 1679, the 26th of May.
- 1677 40. Maximilian Maria Emanuel, the present Duke and Elector of Bavaria, was born the 11th of July 1662. He having signalized his Valour in the present War against the Turks, especially in the Sieges of Buda in 1684, and in 1686 was preferred before all others in the Marriage of Maria Antonia, &c. Eldest Daughter of Leopold the present Emperor of Germany, and Maria Anna the Eldest Daughter of Philip the IV. King of Spain, so that if the present King of Spain, should happen to die without Issue (as he has none yet) this Prince will succeed him in the Kingdom of Spain, His younger Brother is Joseph Clemens, &c. born the 5th of December 1671, Elected Archbishop of Cologne, the 14th of July 1688.

The growth of this Family of Bavaria, is thus represented by a late German Author. 'After Henry the Lion, Duke of Saxony and Bavaria, was proscribed by Frederick Barbarossa the Emperor, and deprived of all his Territories. The same Emperor about the year 1180, gave into the Possession of Otho I. both the Upper and Lower Bavaria, to which at that time belonged the Earldoms of Scherdingen and Newburg, and the Territory of Burchhausen; this Otho purchased also the Earldoms of Dachovien and Rittenburg, and the Territories of Rotenburg, Rheningen. Otho II. Grandchild of the former, in the year 1227, in the Right of Gertrude, Daughter of Henry, Count Palatine of the Rhene, his Wife became Elector Palatine; and in the year 1256, he purchased the Castle of Lindensels and the City of Nusloch in Cregow, and he obtained of Henry of Waldorf the Emperor, the City of Wieselach. In the year 1281, Rodolph the Emperor gave to Lewis Count Palatine, the Earldom of Mosburg, and he obtained by Inheritance Werden, Landberg, Vilsbiburg, Chagen, Landau, Mumuro, Elbrecht, Kirchen, and Libenau, &c. And afterwards, upon the beheading of Conradin Duke of Swabia, he acquired Lavingen, Hochstadt, Schongau, Swabeck, Fussen, Moringen, Mewmarck, Amberg, &c, and he purchased Schrisheim, and the Castle of Strahlenberg, and the City of Bretten in Cregow. In the 1392, Rupert and his Lady had given them half the Earldom of Sponheim, and the other half, and the City of Pfirtzheim came into their hands in the time of Frederick the I. Elector Palatine. About the same time, the Earldom of Sinieren was Mortgaged to Rupert by the Emperor, and afterwards it was fully settled in this Family; the same Rupert for 25000 Florens, bought the Earldom of Deuxpont. In the year 1443, the Marquits of Baden sold Fppingen in Cregow to Lewis the Elector; and about the same time came the Earldom of Kirchbergen. In the year 1410, Stephen II. in the Right of his Wife, obtained the Earldom of Veldenz. In the year 1441, Frederick obtained the Earldom of Lomstein, and in 1452 that of Sutzelstein, and he had in Mortgage from the Bishop of Mentz, Bergstrasse. In the year 1607, Maximilian I. got into his hands the Free City of Donowerd, or Donawert. In the year 1618, he purchased the Earldom of Mindelheim in Swabia, and in 1646, he had by the League of mutual Succession, the Landgraviate of Zenchtzenberg. In the year 1655, Charles Crustanns Duke of Deuxpont of this Family, obtained the Kingdom of Sweden, and his Brother Adolph John, had great Possessions given him in Sweden. In the year 1666, there was given to Maximilian, Duke of Bavaria, the 8th. Electorate. In the year 1666, Philip William Duke of Newburg, one of the Branches of this House, by a Treaty obtained of the Elector of Brandenburg, the Dukedoms of Juliers and Monts, and the Earldom of Ravenstein.

The greatest Losses this Family has receiv'd, have happened in this Age. Maximilian Duke of Bavaria by the Treaty of Osnabruck in 1648, being forced to part with the Upper Austria to the Emperor, and the Bergstrasse to the Archbishop of Mentz, both Mortgaged to this House. In the War with France in 1673, the French King seized the Dukedom of Deuxpont, and the Earldom of Veluentz, and many other Towns as dependancies of the Landgraviate of Alsatia. In 1689, he seized the Earldoms of Sponheim, Sinieren and Lauteren, and took and Burnt the greatest part of the Towns and Cities in the Palatinate of the Rhene, on the West of that River.

The Arms of this Duke are Lozenges of 21 pieces in Bend, Argent and Azure.

8. The Archdukedom of AUSTRIA.

THE Archdukedom of AUSTRIA, reckoning in the incorporate Provinces and the Members of it, is bounded on the East with Hungary, and part of Sclavonia; on the West with Bavaria, and some parts of the Switzers and the Grisons; on the North with Bohemia and Moravia; and on the South with Istria and some part of Friuli in Italy. Within which circuit are contained the several Provinces of Austria properly so called, Stiria, Carinthia, Carniola, and Tyrol. The quality of the whole will be best discerned by the Survey of particulars.

The ancient Inhabitants of the whole were the Norici of the Romans, parted into the lesser Tribes of the Sevaces, Alauni, Ambisontii, Ambilici, and Ambidrauni; subdued by Drusus, Son-in-law to Augustus Caesar, and made a Province of the Empire. After by Constantine the Great divided into Noricum Mediterraneum, comprehending the Countries of Carinthia, Carniola, Stiria, and some parts of Tyrol, with the Bishoprick or District of Salzburg; of which Solva was the Metropolis or Capital City: and Noricum Ripense, containing only Austria, and those parts of Bavaria which lie Eastward of the River Imn, extended all along on the Banks of the Danow. It was known by no other names while possessed by the Romans; from whom being conquered by the Avars and other Nations, it gained those several names and appellations specified before.

1. AUSTRIA

1. AUSTRIA properly so called hath on the East the Kingdom of Hungary, on the West Bavaria, on the North the Bohemian Mountains towards the West, and on the other side the Teyc, which separates it from Moravia, on the South Stiria, or Stiermark. It is called by the Dutch Osternreich, and contractedly Ostreich, that is to say, the Eastern Kingdom, (a part assuming to it self the name of the whole) this being the extreme Province of East-France, or the Eastern Kingdom of the French, in the barbarous Latin of those times called by the name of Austrasia, whence the modern Austria.

The Air is generally very healthy, and the Earth as fruitful, yielding a plentiful increase without help of Compost or other Soiling, and of so easie a Tillage to the Husbandman, that on the North side of the Danow it is Ploughed and managed by one Horse only. Exceeding plentiful it is of Grain, and abundant in Wine, with which last it supplieth the Defects of Bavaria; it hath great store of Saffron, some provision of Salt; and at the foot of the Mountains, not far from Haimburg, some Gager also. Nor wants it Mines of Silver in a large proportion. It is divided by the River Danow into the Lower, and the Higher: that lying on the North side of the River, towards Bohemia and Moravia; this on the South side towards Stiermark.

Places of most importance in the HIGHER AUSTRIA, are, 1. Gmund, seated on a Lake call'd Gmunder-See, bordering on Bavaria, at the efflux of the River Draun, which ariseth out of it. 2. Lintz, seated on the Confluence of the said Draun with the famous Danw; the Arcade of Ptolomy: a Town before the late Wars almost wholly Protestant; but then being put into the hands of the Duke of Bavaria, began to warp a little to the other side. 3. Walkenstein, on the Ens or Anisus, near the borders of Stiermark. 4. Ens, on the Fall of that River into the Danow, raised out of the Ruines of Laurexum, sometimes the Metropolis of Noricum Ripense, the Station at that time of the 2d Legion: afterwards an Archbishop's See, made such in the first planting of Christianity amongst this People by S. Severine, anno 464. On the Reviver whereof (suppressed by the Huns, Boiarians, and others of the barbarous Nations) by the diligence and preaching of S. Rupertus, the Metropolitan Dignity was fixt at Saltzburg. 5. Weidhoven, near the head of the River Ips. 6. Ips, seated at the Influx of that River, and from hence denominated; the Gesodunum of Ptolomy and other Ancients. 7. Newside, on a great Lake so named. 8. Wels, on the main Stream of the Danubius. 9. Haimburg, on the Confluence thereof, and the River Markh. Near to which, at the foot of the Mountains now call'd Haimburgerberg (from the Town adjoining) but antiently named Mons Cagnamus, is some store of Ginger: a wonderful great rarity for these colder Countries. 10. Newsta, first called so from the newness of it, being built of hre. 11. Vienna, by the Dutch, Wein, the principal of all these Parts, by Ptolomy call'd Juliobona; Vindebona, by Antonine; the Station in their times of the tenth Roman Legion; of whose being settled here there are many Monuments both within the City and without. Seated it is on the Banks of Danubius, well built, both in regard of private and publick Edifices; each private House having such store of Cellarage for all occasions, that as much of the City seems to be under the ground as is above it. The Streets for the most part are spacious, and all paved with Stone, which makes them very clean and sweet in the midst of Winter. It is fenced with a mighty Wall, deep and precipitious Ditches on all parts of it, and many Bulwarks, Towers and Ramparts in all needful places. The Walls hereof were first raised with some part of the Money paid unto Leopold Duke of Austria, for the Ransom of K. Richard the First of England, taken Prisoner by him as he passed homewards through this Country from the Holy Land: Esteemed to this day the strongest hold of Christendom against the Turks; and proved experimentally so to be in that most notable and famous Repulse here given them, Anno 1529. at what time 200000 of them, under the conduct of Solyman the Magnificent, besieged this City; but by the valour of Frederick the second, Elector Palatine of the Rhene, and other German Princes, were gallantly resisted and compelled to retire, with the loss of 80000 Soldiers. It was again besieged in the year 1532. And in our Days, in the year 1683, Mahomet the Fourth sent an Army of 100000 Men, which from the 14th of July to the 12th of September lay before this City, employing all the modern Arts of War and Battery, by which they had reduced it to the utmost Extremity, and in a few days more had in all probability carried it, but it was then relieved by John Sobiesky, the late King of Poland, and Charles Duke of Lorrain: The Princes of the Empire appearing in Person, or sending in their Forces in great numbers. The Turks maintained the Siege with that obstinacy, that being forced to fly at last they lost all their Tents, Cannon, Ammunition and Carriages, and saved nothing but their Lives, and what they carried about them; and, which was worst of all, they lost all their Valour, Reputation and Union, and are in five Years time reduced to the brink of Ruine. May this Empire rise no more! Nor doth the strength hereof so diminish the Beauties of it, but that it is one of the goodliest Towns in all the Empire; the Residence for these last Ages of the Emperors: made an University by the Emperor Frederick the second; reviv'd and much advanc'd by Albert Duke of Austria, anno 1356. adorn'd with an Episcopal See, many magnificent Temples and stately Monasteries: but above all, with a most sumptuous and Princely Palace, wherein the Archdukes and Emperors use to keep their Courts; built by Ottacar, King of Bohemia, during the little time he was Duke of Austria. In the middle Ages, as appears by Otho Frisingensis, it was called Fabiana: but being ruined by the Huns, and again re-edified, was first called Biana, (the first Syllable omitted by mistake or negligence) from whence the Dutch Wein, and the Latin Vienna.

We should now take a view of the Towns and Cities in the LOWER AUSTRIA, if there were any in it which were worth the looking after. The Country having never been in the hands of the Romans, hath no Town of any great Antiquity; nor many new ones built or beautified by the Austrian Princes, since it came into their possession: the only one of note being Cremis, or Cremia, on the left-hand shore of Danubius, going down the Waters. 2. Recz, on the River Teyc, bordering on Moravia; and 3. Frieftat, at the Foot of the Mountains on the skirts of Bohemia.

2. STIRIA, or STIERMARK, is bounded on the North with Austria, on the South with Carniola, on the East with Hungary, and on the West with Carinthia; extendeth in length 110 Miles, but in breadth not above 60, or thereabout. For the most part mountainous and barren, as being overspread with the Spurs and Branches of the Alps, and rich only in Minerals. The reason of the name we shall have anon.

Towns of most consequence are, 1. Gratz, seated upon the River Mur, and the chief of the Province, from which the third Branch of the House of Austria (since the time of Ferdinand the first) was called de Gratz, and had the Government of the Country for their part of that Patrimony. A Town once full of Protestants, and those so strong, that they could neither be forced out, nor hindered from the free Exercise of their Religion, till the Year 1598, in which Margarer the late Queen of Spain, Sister to the Archduke Ferdinand de Gratz, was by the Citizens solemnly entertained; with whom entered so many Soldiers, that the City was taken, and Fourteen Ministers of the Reformed Religion presently banished. 2. Rackelsburg, and 3. Pruck, both situate also on the Mur. 4. Steckhaw, an Episcopal See, seated on the Dra or Dravus, a well known River, not far from the fall of the Mur into it. 5. Petam, the Patavia of Antoninus, seated somewhat higher upon the Dravus. 6. Lambach, the Ovilabis of Antoninus, on the Dravus also. 7. Voirsparg, Sparg, upon the River Kainach. 8. Celey, the Celeia of Pliny, of great Antiquity, as appeareth by many Roman Inscriptions and other evident signs of Age which are upon it; for this cause thought by some to be that Celia, or built at least out of the Ruines of it, which Ptolomy placeth in this Tract. It is situate on the River Savus, and hath a large Jurisdiction over the adjoining Countries. 9. Canisia, seated in a Marsh on the edge of this Country: a place of great strength both by Art and Nature; once one of the strongest Bulwarks against the Turks in all these parts, and a great eye-sore to them for many years; but taken by them at last, Anno 1600, and never regained by the Princes of the House of Austria, though many times in vain attempted; till the 13th of April, 1690. it was delivered up into the hands of the Germans, when it had suffered a Blockade of three years continuance, and the Count de Budiani. The Turk that delivered up the Keys said, I herewith consign into your hands the strongest Fortrefs in the Ottoman Empire. This was the last place the Turks had in all the Lower Hungary, of which it was esteemed a part as long as it was in their hands. There marched out of it 3000 Turks, 600 of which were Soldiers. The Germans found in it 80 Pieces of Cannon, and great stores of small Arms and Ammunition. Before they could enter the Town they passed a Bridge of 320 Foot, and another 220, which are great signs of the strength of its Situation.

The whole Country being mountainous and hilly, generally over-spread with the spurs and branches of the neighbouring Alps, and rich only in Minerals, as before was said, was anciently the Inhabitation of the Taurisci, (part of the Norici) from whom it took the name of Stiermark, the Germans calling that a Stier which the Latins call Tauriscus, or a little Bullock. By which account Stiermark is nothing but the Borders or Marches of the Taurisci, the utmost Bounds of their Possessions; as indeed it was. Laid to Iannonia in the distribution of the Roman Provinces, it was called Valeria, in honour of Valeria, the Daughter of Dioclesian. But once dismembered from the Empire, it fell unto the name of Stiermark, with reference to the Taurisci spoken of before. First made an Earldom in the person of one Ottacarus, advanced unto that Honour by the Emperor Conrade the 2d: Leopold the 4th, from this Ottacarus (two other Ottacars intervening) was made Marquis of Steirmark; and his Son, Ottacar the 4th, was made Duke hereof by the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa. But being without hope of Issue, and infected with the incurable Disease of the Leprosie, he sold his Country to Leopold the fifth of Austria; who bought it with some part of that vast Sum of Money which he extorted for the Ransom of King Richard the First. It hath continued ever since in the possession of this potent Family, but so, that it hath many times been assigned over for the Portion of the younger Brethren: as, namely, to Leopold the ninth of that name, one of the younger Sons of Albert the Short; Ernest the youngest Son of that Leopold: and lastly, to Charles the youngest Son of Ferdinand the First, called Charles of Graz, Father of Ferdinand the Second, Successor to Matthias in Austria it self, and all the rest of the Estates incorporate with it: not like hereafter to be so impolitically dismembered from the chief of the House, as in former times.

3. CARINTHIA, by the Dutch called Karnten, is bounded on the East with Stiermark and the River Lavand, on the West with the District of Salzburg and the River Salzach, on the North with Austria it self, and on the South with Carniola, and the River Dravus, which having its Original in the Skirts hereof, passeth through these Austrian Provinces into Hungary, and falls at last into the Danow. The Country, being situate in the worst part of the Alps, is generally poor and barren, except only in Minerals; extending all along the Dravus for the length of 100 English Miles, and 47 in breadth, betwixt that River and the Mur, by the which it is bounded.

Places of principal note in it are, 1. S. Veit, or Sancti Viti, the chief Town of the Country, situate at the meeting of the Glan and the Wunies, two small Rivers adorn'd with a spacious Market-place and a beautiful Conduit. 2. Villach, seated on the Dravus, in a pleasant Valley encompassed about with Rocks, the Houses thereof adorned on the out-side with painted Stories, very delightful to behold. 3. Gurck, a small Town, but an Episcopal See. 4. Clagenfurt, on the Lake call'd Wera-See, a well-fenced place, called anciently by the name of Claudia. 5. Wolfsperg, upon the Lavand, so near to Stiermark, that it is by some reckon'd for a Town thereof. 6. Lavamundt, on the same Border, an Episcopal See, situate at the Influx of that River into the Dravus. 7. Friesach, a Town of much Antiquity, seated on the Oleza. 8. Spital, &c. The Story and Succession of the Dukes hereof, before the uniting of it to the House of Austria (this Province and Carniola making but one Estate between them) we shall see anon.

4. CARNIO LA, by the Dutch called Krain, is environed with Sclavonia East, Friuli West, Carinhia and part of Stiermark North, and Istria South. It is in length from East to West, (extended along the River Savus) 120 Italian miles, and about 76 in breadth. The Alps here being lower and less cold and rocky than more towards the West, maketh it to be the more rich both in Corn and Wine, and other the productions of Nature, than it would be otherwise.

The chief Towns are, 1. Newmarkt, 2. Efling, 3. Marspurg, 4. Pogonock, and 5. Saxenselt, all upon the Savus, which, arising in this Country, runneth through the very middle of it, and after falleth into the Danow. 6. Laibach, seated on a small River of the same name; by Ptolomy called Pamportus, but by Pliny, Vauprtus, famous in old Mythology for the transport of the Ship called Argo, wherein Jason and his Comrades brought the Golden Fleece: who coming out of Portus, or the Euxine Sea, took their course up the Danow, so into the Savus, then into this Town; hence carried their Ship over land into the Adriatick, and from thence sailed into Greece, where they first began the undertaking. 7. Goritz, call'd anciently Noreia, or seated in the place where Noreia stood, is situate on the River Lipnzo, an Italian Water, which not far off falleth into the Adriatick. A Town of so much note, that anciently it was an Earldom and in the division of the Estate of Majnard Earl of Tyrol, (to whom it formerly belong'd) was given to Albert his second Son, with the Stile and Title of Earl of Goritz; continuing in his House till the Year 1500, when on the death of Leonard the last Earl hereof, it descended upon Maximilian the first, as next Heir unto it; whose Successors, not only in the Estates of Austria, but the Empire also, do still retain the Title of Earls of Goritz in their usual Stile.

The first Inhabitants of both these Provinces of Krain and Karnten, were the Carni of Pliny and other Ancients, who made them part of Vmetia, the Tenth Region of Italy; but afterwards, in the distribution of the Roman Provinces, they were cast into Noricum, and made a Member of the Diocesis of the Western Illyricum, but subject, or subordinate rather, to the Præfectus Prætorio of Italy. From them not only the Alps adjoining had the name of Carnica, but these two Countries had the names by which now they go. They were united a long time in the Persons of the Dukes of Karnten, of whom the first mentioned upon good Record was Henry, Son to Berchthold, a Nobleman of Bavaria, in the time of the Emperor Otho the Third, by him advanced unto this Honour and Estate; disposed of in succeeding times at the Will of the Emperors, and given from one Family unto another, as their Fancies served them; not fixed in any House till it came to Henry the Son of Engelbert, President or Præfect of Istria: in which Family it continued under this Henry, and his Brother Engelbert, Ulric the first, Henry the second, Herman, and Ulric the second, the last Prince hereof, who by his Marriage with with Agnes, Sister and Heir of Otho the second, Duke of Meran, added that Estate to his former Patrimony. But being old, and without Children, he sold his whole Estate to Ottacar, King of Bohemia and Duke of Austria; by whom these Countries were surrendred unto Rodolphus of Habsburg, on the conclusion of the Peace which was made between them. And although Rodolphus gave Carinthia to Mainard Earl of Tyrol, (in right of whole Daughter Elizabeth, Albert the Son of Rodolph was possessed of Austria;) yet on the death of Henry the Son of Mainard without Issue-male, it fell (according to the Contract) unto Albert the Short; younger Son of Albert, and Grandchild of Rodolphus; continuing ever since in that Family, tho' not always in the chief House of the Dukes of Austria.

The strange and observable Ceremonies with which the Archdukes of Austria are acknowledged Dukes of Carinthia take here out of Munster. In the Meadows adjoining to the Town of S. Veit a certain Country-man, to whom that Office by inheritance belongeth, sitteth on a Marble-stone there being, holding in his right hand a Cow with a black Calf, and in his left hand a Mare as lean as a Rake. Then cometh the new Duke attired in a plain rustick Habit, his Courtiers attending him in their richest Apparel: at whose approach the Country-man above mentioned demandeth, What is he that so majestically cometh hitherward? And the People answer, that it is the future Duke. He again asketh, Whether he be a just Judge, and one that will maintain the Liberty of the Country, and Sincerity of the Religion? The People answer, He will. Then he asketh, By what right he will displace him of his Marble-Seat? To whom the Steward of the new Duke's House replieth, He shall give thee 60 Pence in Silver, the Cattle now standing by thee, the Clothes which he hath at this time on, and thy House shall ever be free from Tax and Tribute. The Fellow upon this taking the Duke by the hand, and bidding him to be a good Prince, giveth him a gentle cuff on the Ear, setteth him on the Marble-stone, and taking away the Cattle departeth. This done the new Duke goeth to S. Veit's Church, and having done his Devotions, putteth off his rustick Weeds, and dresseth himself in Cloths befitting a Prince: for such after their Ceremonies he is acknowledged.

The Arms of these Dukes were Argent; three Lions Leopards Sable.

4. TYROL is bounded on the East with Friuli and Marca Trivigiana, by the interposing of which or some parts thereof, disjoin'd from Carniola; on the West with the Grisons, and some part of Switzerland; and on the North with Bavaria; and on the South with Lombardy. It is extended over the greatest parts of the Alps Rhetica, and some part of the Julia; yet intermixt with many rich and fruitful Vallies, those especially which lie on the Banks of the Inn and the River of Adise. Nor are the Hills so void of profit unto the Inhabitants, but that they afford good store of Metals digged out of them, especially of Bras and Silver; which last have yielded to the Archduke 230000 Crowns yearly.

Towns of most note are, 1. Oenipons, or Inspruck, so called from a Bridge on the Inn or Oenus, which gave denomination to the second Branch of Austria, descended from Ferdinand, the second Son of the Emperor Ferdinand; the House of Graitz issuing from Charles the third, Son of that Emperor. Most memorable for the hasty Flight of Charles V. in the Year 1552. upon the News that Duke Maurice, whom he had lately made Elector of Saxony, was coming against him with his Forces, which so terrified him, that he fled away by Torch-light with some of his Followers; the residue of his Court, (most of which were persons of great Eminency) trudging in the dark on foot, with the black Guard and the Scullery. The Town hath been many times the Residence of the Dukes of Austria; who have here a very Royal and Magnificent Palace. And to say truth, the Town deserveth to be so honoured; being sweetly seated amongst pleasant Meadows, spacious Corn-fields, and shady Mountains, the Houses fairly built of Stone, enriched by the Courts of Judicature here settled for all the Country, and provided of a gallant Armory. 2. Trent, (Tridentum it is called in Latin) situate in the Confines of Germany and Italy; for which cause the Inhabitants speak both Languages: built on the Banks of the River Athesis or Adise; honoured with an Episcopal See; but made more famous by the Council which was there begun by Pope Paul the Third, Anno 1546. against the Lutherans: It was for 22 Years together before their meeting dashed by one Pope, and animated by another; advanced by Charles the 5th. upon worldly Policies, and for as worldly Policies retarded by the Court of Rome: for 18 years after this first Convention of it, at sundry times assembled, suspended, and dissolved: and finally, when fixed here seriously by Pope Pius the Fourth, Anno 1562. managed with so much art and cunning by the Papal Party, that nothing was determin'd among the Prelates but what had been formerly resolved on in the Roman Conclave, and certified accordingly by especial Posts; occasioning that most bitter Jest of one of the Hungarian Bishops who was present at it, That the Holy Ghost was sent unto them in a Clock Bag from Rome. The effects of which Council, so artfully carried on by the strength of Wit, I cannot better describe than in the words of the History of it, which are as followeth. 'This Council, desired and procured by godly Men, to reunite the Church which began to be divided, hath so established the Schism and made the Parties so obstinate, that the Discords are irreconcilable; and being managed by Princes for Reformation of Ecclesiastical Discipline, hath caused the greatest deformation that ever was since Christianity did begin; and hoped for by the Bishops themselves to regain the Episcopal Authority, for the most part usurped by the Pope, hath made them lose it altogether, bringing them into greater servitude: on the contrary, feared and avoided by the See of Rome, as a potent means to moderate the exorbitant Power thereof, mounted from small beginnings, by divers degrees, to an unlimited excess; it hath so established and confirmed the same over that part which remained subject unto it, that it was never so great nor soundly rooted. So far the words of the History. The next of note is, 3. Falkenstein, remarkable for Mines of Bras; as, 4. Hall, upon the Inn, for Salt Wiches; and, 5. Schwas, for the richer Mines of Silver. 6. Mallk, near the head of the River Athesis. 7. Pollen, upon the Borders of Italy, by the People thereof called Bolgiano, and Bolsano. 8. Tyrol, an ancient Castle, the first Seat of the Earls or Governors hereof, and giving name for that reason to the Country adjoining. 9. Meran, neighbouring the old Castle of Tyrol, which gave the Title of Dukes to a branch of the Caroline Race, descended from Rathboldus, a base Son of the Emperor Arnulph, possessed of many large Estates in these Alpine Counties, now appertaining to the Princes of the House of Austria. From one of the which Dukes called Otho of Meran, married to Beatrix, Heir of the County of Burgundy, the Earls of Burgundy (since that time) do derive themselves.

The Earls hereof were at the first no other than Provincial Officers: when made Proprietaries, I am yet to seek. The first of whom we have any certainty was Mainard, Earl of Tyrol and Goritz, who died in the year 1258. leaving his Earldoms to that Mainard who by Rodolphus Habsburgensis was infeoffed with the Dukedom of Karnten. But Henry the Second, Son of this last Mainard dying without Issue-male, his Daughter Margaret by the consent of all her People, settled her Estate therein on the Sons of Albert called the Short; which continues ever since in the House of Austria, though sometimes made the Portion and Inheritance of the younger Princes. By Ferdinand the first it was given in Appennage to his second Son Ferdinand, surnamed of Inspruck for that reason, who by marrying with Philippina, a Bürger's Daughter of Augsburg, so displeased his Brethren, Brethren, that, to buy his Peace of them, and enjoy his own content with her, it was finally agreed upon amongst them all, that Tyrol should not descend upon his Children of that Venter. In pursuance whereof, after his decease, Tyrol fell to the House of Gratz; his eldest Son Charles being made Marquis of Burgh, and Andrew his youngest Cardinal of Brixia. Who were the old Inhabitants of the Roman Austria we have seen already. The old Inhabitants of the other part are supposed to be the Quadi, in that part which lieth next to Bohemia; the Marcomanni, in those parts which are next Moravia: who intermingled with the Boii, and united with them into the name of Boiarians, won from the Romans the whole Province of the second Rhatia, and so much of Noricum as lieth betwixt the Inn and the Ens, leaving the rest to the Avares, who possessed that and the two Pannonia's, extorted also from the Romans in the fall of that great and mighty Empire, as we shall shew more fully when we come to our description of Hungary.

But these Boiarians being conquered by Clovis the Great, and the Avares driven out of Pannonia by Charlemagne, both Provinces became Members of the French Empire, till the subduing of Pannonia by the Hungarians, to oppose whom, and keep in peace and safety these remoter parts, some Guardians, or Lords-Marchers, were appointed by the Kings and Emperors of Germany, with the Title of Marquesses of Ostricch; at first officary only, but at last hereditary; made so by the Emperor Henry the first, who gave this Province to one Leopold, surnam'd the Illustrious, the Son of Henry Earl of Bamberg, of the House of Schwaben, and therewithal the Title of Marquis, Anno 980. This Marquissate was by Frederick Barbarossa raised to a Dukedom 1158; Henry being the first Duke, whose Nephew Leopold took Richard the first of England Prisoner, in his return from Palestine; for whose Ransom he had so much Money, that with it he bought Stiermark, together with the Counties of Neoburg and Lintz, and walled Vienna. His Son Fredericus, surnamed the Warlike, was made King of Austria by the Emperor Frederick the second, Anno 1225. Eleven Years he continu'd in his Dignity; at the end of which he was spoiled of his Royal Ornaments by the same hand, for denying his appearance at the Emperor's Summons; unto whom for some Outrages he had been complained of. Finally, he died in the year 1246, discomfited and slain in Battel by the King of Hungary. Leaving no Issue of his Body, this Estate of right should have descended on Frederick, Son of Hermannus, Marquis of Baden, and of Gertrude his Wife, the Niece of this Frederick the Warlike by his Brother Henry, who was afterwards beheaded at Naples by Charles of Valois, Anno 1268. But Ottacar, Son of Primislans King of Bohemia, pretending to it in the right of Margaret his Wife, one of the Sisters of the said Frederick the Warlike, by a strong hand possessed himself of the Dukedom of Austria, which he increased by the addition of Carinthia and Trevigiana; all which he held, together with the Kingdom of Bohemia till the year 1278, in which he was vanquish'd and slain by Rodolphus of Habsburg, not long before advanced to the German Empire. Rodolphus thus possessed of these great Estates, conferred them on Albertus his eldest Son, who had then married Elizabeth, Daughter of Mainard Earl of Tyrol, by Elizabeth (or Agnes) his Wife, the Daughter of Gertrude, and Sister and sole Heir at last of Frederick, so cruelly murdered at Naples, as before was said; By means of which Marriage and Investiture Albert was quickly possessed of the Dukedoms of Austria, Stiermark, Carinthia, Carniola, together with Marca Trevigiana; to which the Earldom of Tyrol, and many other fair Estates in Schwaben and Alsatia were after added. By whom it was first raised to the Title of Archduke is not yet agreed. Some attribute it to Rodolphus of Habsburg, at the Investiture of his Son Albert into these Estates, Anno 1298. Others to Charles the fourth, advancing to that Honour Rodolph the Ingenuous, Anno 1360. Some make it to be first given to Albert, Duke hereof, in the Year 1430: and others post it lower to the Marriage of Philip, Son of Maximilian of Austria and of the Lady Mary of Burgundy, with Joan Princess of Spain. But by whomsoever given at first, it is now the constant and hereditary Title of all this Family: the successive Princes whereof from the first Investiture follow in the ensuing Catalogue of

of AUSTRIA.

- one of the younger Sons of Albert the Short; chosen also Emperor.
- 1493 21. Maximilian, Son of Frederick, enriched his House with the Marriage of the Heir of Burgundy.
- 1519 22. Ferdinand, Granchild to Maximilian by his Son Philip King of Spain, and Archduke of Austria, succeeded his Grandfather in this Dukedom, King of Hungary, Bohemia, and Emperor of Germany.
- 1565 23. Maximilian II. Son of Ferdinand.
- 1577 24. Rodolphus III. Son of Maximilian the 2.
- 1612 25. Matthias, Brother of Rodolphus.
- 1619 26. Ferdinand II. surnamed of Gratz, Son of Charles Duke of Austria, of the House of Gratz, the youngest Son of Ferdinand the 1. (the numerous Off-spring of Maximilian the second being all dead without Issue) succeeded in the Estates of Austria, chosen Emperor also, King of Hungary and Bohemia, &c.
- 1637 27. Ferdinand III. Son of Ferdinand the second, now living Anno 1648, Archduke of Austria, King of Hungary and Bohemia, and Emperor of the Germans.
- 1657 28. Leopold, second Son of Ferdinand III. his Elder Brother dying in the year 1653.

The Arms of these Earls when distinct from the House of Austria were Argent, an Eagle Sable membered Or.

Thus have we seen by what means and under what Princes all these Provinces, belonging unto several Lords became united and incorporated into one Estate. Besides which, there was added to it by Rodolph of Habsburg all the upper Elfas, the Castle and Territory of Habsburg it self, with many fair Estates amongst the Switzers; by Albert the short, the Country of Singom; and by his sons, the Advocateship of Friburg, or the County of Brifgom. So that these Princes are undoubtedly the greatest for Power and Patrimony of any in Germany, and would be of a great Revenue, if the ill neighbourhood of the Turks did not put them to continual Charges, and make the borders of the Country to be thinly planted, and not very thoroughly manured. However it is thought that they may yield yearly two millions of Crowns and upwards to the Arch-Duke's Coffers.

The Arms of these Princes are Gules, a Fels Argent: assumed by Marquis Leopold at the Siege of Acon or Prodomais in the Holy Land, because his whole Armour being covered with blood, his belt only remained white. The Arms thereof in former times having been six Larks Or, in a Field Azure; supposed to have been taken by the first Marquisses, because they possessed thole six Provinces, for defence of which the Tenth Legion, called Alauda, had been fixed at Vionna.

And now we are to take our leave of the Roman Empire, which we shall meet withal no more till we come to Hungary; the Countries on the north-side of Danubius and the East-side of the Rhene being almost as soon abandoned as conquered by them. So that in our survey of these Northern Countries we are not like to find such matter of Antiquity as we have before: but must content our selves both with Towns and Villages of a later date, and a lesser continuance. In which we shall begin with those Countries which lie on the other side of the Rhene bordering on the Estates of Cleveland and the Bishops-Electors; and so proceed on Eastward till we come to the farthest parts of Germany, and the Confines of Hungary; afterwards turning to the North, till we meet with Denmark; which is next of all to be considered.

East with Frankenland, on the North with Hassia and Westphalen, and on the South with the lower Salatin. It containeth a Combination of many small Estates, which being joined in a common League for defence of each other in the preservation of their Laws, Liberties and Religion; are called the Confederation of the Veterans. The principal of the States which are thus confederated are the Earls of 1. Nassau, 2. Hanau, and 3. Solms, 4. the Lord of Lichteberg, and the Imperial Cities of 5. Friburg, and 6. Wetzelaer.

The County of NASSAU (for fruitfulness of Soil and delightfulness of situation not inferiour to most parts of France) lieth at the foot of the Mountains which divide Hassia from Engern and Westphalen, anciently called Melibocus; a branch of the long ridge of Mountains which were called Abnobi. Chief Towns hereof are, 1. Nassau, situate on the South side of the River Lon, not far from the fall of it into the Rhene; the first Seat and honorary Title of this famous Family, and still in the possession of the Princes of Orange, the first branch hereof. 2. Dillenburg, the usual Seat of the Earls of Nassau before their settling in the Low Countries; whence they are named the Earls of Nassau of the House of Dillenburg, to difference them from others of the same Family. 2. Catzenelbogen, ditto Catenfis, which gives the Title of an Earl to the owners of it, in Latine Catti Meliboti, which shews the name to be compounded of the Catti, anciently possessed of these parts of Germany, and the mountainous parts of Melibocus, then inhabited by them. The possession of this Town is much controverted between the Earls of Nassau and the Lantgraves of Hassia. Concerning which we are to know, that Henry the second son of Lewis Lantgrave of Hassia surnamed the mild, married with Anne, Daughter and Heir of Philip the last Lord hereof, and by her had a Son called William, who died without Issue, and a Daughter named Elizabeth, married to John the third of Nassau, to whom she brought Henry and William Earls of Nassau. Elizabeth on the death of her Brother William laid claim to the Estate, as the next Heir to him; followed in the pursuit thereof by William Count of Nassau her surviving Son. Against which William the 2. of Hassia did alledg a grant or donation of it from his Cousin William, the Brother of Elizabeth, as before is said, and having Possession of the Town, and the members of it, was made thereby the better able to defend his Title. But at the last it was surrendered by Count William of Nassau (Father of William Prince of Orange) unto Philip the Lantgrave, in the time of Charles the fifth, for the sum of 600000 Crowns: the House of Nassau notwithstanding retaining it amongst their Titles. 3. Herborn, a small University, or Schola illustris, founded of late by the Earls of Nassau; in which Piscator was Divinity-Reader, and Alstedius (both famous in their times) Professor for the Arts and Sciences. 4. Idstein, lying South to Catzenelbogen; and 5. Wisdad, directly South of Idstein, betwixt that and the Maine: these being the Title and possession of the second branch of this Family. 6. Weilburg, on the Lon, not far from Wetzelaer; which gives Title to the Third branch of this House, called the Earls of Nassau in Sarbruck and Weilbrung.

As for the Princes of the House of Nassau, they are very ancient; Orho of Nassau being made Earl of Gielderland in the year 1079. Another Orho of this House, but proceeding from a different Branch of it, died An. 1190. the Founder of the present Family of the Princes of Orange, and of the House Wisdad and Idstein; out of which descended Adolphus Earl of Nassau, chosen Emperor in the year 1292. by the Marriage of Engelbert, the seventh Earl of this House of Dillenburg, with Mary Daughter of Philip, Lord of Breda in Brabant, they came first to be possessed of Estates in the Netherlands: and by the Marriage of Henry great Grand-child of this Engelbert, with Claude of Chalons, they got the Principality of Orange in France. A Family as much honoured for the personal Merits of the Princes of it as any other in Europe, of some of which although we have already given a Catalogue, (in the description and story of Providence) as Princes of Orange, yet take here the whole Succession of them as

The Counts of NASSAU.

1. Otho, the Son of Henry, and Nephew of Waleran, the first Earl of Nassau of this Line.
- 1190 2. Henry, the Son of Otho, who added Dillenburg, Wisbad, and Idstein, unto his Estate; Grandfather, by Waldradus his second Son, to Adolphus the Emperor.
3. Otho II. Son of Henry.
4. Henry II. Son of Otho the second.
5. Otho III. Son of Henry the second.
6. John, Son of Otho the third.
- 1362 7. Engelbert, the Son of John by Mary his Wife, Daughter and Heir of Philip, Lord of Breda in Brabant, added that Town, with many other fair Estates in the Netherlands, to his former Patrimony.
8. John II. Son of Engelbert, Earl of Nassau, and Lord of Breda, &c.
- 1475 9. John III. Son of John the second.
- 1516 10. Henry III. Son of John the third, Knight of the Golden Fleece, married Claude of Chalons, Sister of Philibert Prince of Orange.
- 1536 11. Rene, Son of Henry the third, and of Claude of Chalons, Successor to his Uncle Philibert in the Principality of Orange, anno 1530. and to his Father in the Earldom of Nassau, anno 1536.
- 1544 12. William, the Son of John the third, by Elizabeth his Wife, Daughter of Henry Lantgrave of Hassia, and of Anne Daughter and Heir of Philip Earl of Catzenelbogen, reform'd the Religion in this Country according to the Lutheran Doctrines.
- 1559 13. William II. Son of William the first, succeeded Prince of Orange by the Will of Rene his Cousin-german, anno 1544 and Earl of Nassau by the death of his Father, anno 1559. What else concerns this Prince we have had before. I only add, that William the first, besides this William, had three other Sons: that is to say, Count John, the Father of William of Nassau, Governor of West-Friesland; Count Ludowick, of great Renown in the first Wars of the Netherlands, in the course whereof he lost his Life, anno 1574; and Count Adolphus, slain in the same Wars also, anno 1568.
- 1584 14. Philip, eldest Son of William the second, and of Anne his Wife, Daughter and Heir of Maximilian of Egmond, Earl of Buren, succeeded Earl of Buren on the death of his Mother, anno 1551. Prince of Orange and Count of Nassau by the death of his Father.
- 1618 15. Maurice, Son of William the second, and of Anne his Wife, Daughter of Maurice Duke Elector of Saxony, Prince of Orange and Count of Nassau: at the age of Ten Years made General of all the Forces of the United Netherlands, which place he managed for the space of 37 years both with great Courage and Success.
- 1625 16. Henry IV. Brother of Maurice (but by another Venter, the Daughter of Gasper Coligny, Admiral of France) Count of Nassau, Prince of Orange, and General of the Forces of the States United.
- 1648 17. William III. Son of Henry the 4th. Successor to his Father in all his Honours and Commands. A Prince of great hopes and expectations. He died November 6. 1650.

1650 18. William-Henry, Son of William the third and Mary Daughter of Charles the first, King of Great Britain, born the 14th day of November, 1650. nine days after the Death of his Father. In his Infancy by a Decree of the States of Holland, he was deprived of all those Honours and Privileges which belonged to his Family, which yet were restored to him in the Year 1672: And in the Year 1677, the 14th of November, he married Mary the eldest Daughter of James the 2d, King of Great Britain, by whom he has had no Children. The 12th of February, 1689, he with the Lady Mary his Consort, was recognized King and Queen of England, &c. by the three Estates assembled in a Convention, James the 2d, late King of England, having deserted the Throne and Nation the 11th of December before, and withdrawn himself into France.

The Arms of the Earls of Nassau are quarterly, 1. Azure, a Lion Or, Armed Gules; 2. Or, a Lion-Leopard Gules, Armed and Crowned Azure; 3. Gules, a Fess Argent; and 4. Gules two Leopards Or, Armed and Membred of the first.

Besides this Dutch Branch of the Family of Nassau, distinguish'd from the rest by the Title of Orange, there be several other Branches of great Honour and Estate. William the first, in the former Catalogue, had a Son called John, to whom was assigned the Castle of Dillingberg, and he became the Father of 25 Children; four of which Founded distinct Families.

SIEGEN NASSAU.

1. John, surnamed Midius, Son of the aforesaid John, and Founder of the Line of Siegen, had 23 Children.
2. By his first Wife he had two Sons, John and William; this latter died in the Year 1642 without any Issue, John the elder turned Roman Catholick, and died in 1638.
3. John Francis Desideratus succeeded his Father, and served the King of Spain, who in the Year 1680 made him Governor of Gelderland, but he has no Children but Daughters.
4. John the first of this House, had by his second Wife John Mauritius, who died without Issue in the year 1679. 2. George Frederick, Captain of the Guards to the Prince of Orange, who also died Childless in 1674. 3. Henry, Governor of Huast in Flanders, his surviving Son is William Maurice, a Colonel in the Holland Army: and he has one Son whose name was not known to my Author Shovarnik.

The Line of NASSAU Dillenburg.

1. George, one of the Sons of the aforesaid John, was also the Founder of this House. By his first Wife he had Lewis Henry.
2. Lewis Henry was the Father of
3. George Lewis, and Adolph: the former of these had
4. Henry, born in 1641; George Lewis, born in 1667; Albert, born in 1668; William, in 1670; Adolph, in 1673.
5. Adolph, the Brother of George, lives at Schaumberg, and has only three Daughters.

The Line of Dixze NASSAU.

1. The Founder of this Line was Ernest Cassimir, one of the Sons of the said John, who succeeded his Brother William Lewis in the Government of Friesland and Groenland: He was slain at Roermond the 5th of June, 1632.
2. Henry Cassimir, his eldest Son, was Governor or Stateholder of Friesland and Groenland, and died at Fort Nassau in Flanders in 1640 without Issue.
3. William Frederick, his Brother, succeeded him, and died the 13th of October, 1664.

4. Henry

4. Henry Cassimir, Son of the last mentioned William, born in the year 1657, succeeded his Father in his Dignities, and Married in the year 1684, Herica Amalia Daughter to John George II. Prince of Anhalt.

The Line of Hudmar Nassau.

1. John Lewis, a Son of the same Father with the rest, was the Founder of this Line, he turned Roman Catholick, and was in great Esteem with Ferdinand the II. and III. Emperors of Germany, and he died the 6th of March, 1653.
2. Maurice Henry, his Son, born in 1626, continued the Line, and Died the 24th of January, 1679.
3. Francis Alexander, his Son, born the 27th of January, 1679, succeeds him.

Bordered on Franconia or Frankenland lieth the County of HANAW, so called from the chief Town of it: in which the places of most note are, 1. Hanaw it self, in Latine called Hanovia, honoured with a Schola illustris also, and much enriched by the Trade of Printing, with which they use to furnish annually the Marts of Francford, distant from hence about ten Dutch miles. 2. Phaffenhofen, of no note formerly but like to be remembered in the stories of succeeding times for the great Defeat there given to the Duke of Lorrain, July 31. 1633, who lost his whole Forces, all his Ordnance, Ammunition and Baggage, and, which was worst of all, his Country; taken in part from by him by the conquering Swedes, who followed him close unto his home; but wholly by the French King upon that advantage. 3. Lichteberg, which gives Title to a second Branch of the House of Hanaw, called the Lord of Lichteberg. A Family of good esteem, since the time that Otho of Hanaw was ennobled with the Title of Earl thereof which was about the year 1392. Before that, Princes of the Empire; and after that advanced unto great Fortunes, by the addition of the Barony of Mintzeberg in the person of Philip the first Earl; of the County of Rhoenick, in the person of another Philip, the third of that name, great Grandchild of the former Philip; and finally, of the Lordships and Estates of Lichteberg, accruing to this House by the Marriage of a third Philip, the youngest Son of Reinard the third Earl hereof, with Anne the Daughter and Heir of Ludovick Lord of Lichteberg; the Title and possession of the second Branch of the House of Hanaw, called Lords of Lichteberg and Hofchenstein, and Earls of Bischof: this last being an Estate in Lorrain accruing to them by the Marriage of a fourth Philip, (the fifth in name and order of the House of Lichteberg) with Margaret the sole Daughter and Heir of Ludovick the last Earl thereof.

Betwixt the Counties of Nassau and Hanaw on both sides of the River Lon, lies the Earldom of SOLMS; the first Earl whereof (of whom there is any good Constancy) was Henry honoured with this Title, anno 1220. But being I find them in the Catalogue of the Counts Imperial made before that time, I must conclude them to be ancients than the date aforesaid; though that be sufficient to ennoble a far greater Family. By the Marriage of Conrade the 9th from Henry first, with Elizabeth, one of the Daughters of William of Nassau, Prince of Orange, and after with the Widow of the Earl of Egmond, they came to be of such authority amongst the Netherlands, as to be privileged with a place and Suffrage in the Council of the States General: there settled at the present in their greatest honour, especially since the Marriage of Henry of Nassau, Prince of Orange, with a Daughter of Earl Conrade by his second Wife, the Mother of William the III. of Nassau, Prince of Orange, and Husband to the Princess Mary, the eldest Daughter of Great Britain. But besides their Estate there, they are possessed in this Tract of 1. Braunsfels, which gives Title to the first Branch of the House of Solms; 2. Cro- neberg, the possession of the second Branch of this Family; and 3. Solms on the North-side of the Lon, the Root of both.

Of the Imperial Cities in this Confederation, the first is Friburg called for distinction sake Friburg in Heteran, to difference it from another Town of that name in Belgior; situate in the middle of delicious and most fruitful fields, and memorable for the stout resistance which it made to Adolphus of Nassau, at that time Emperor; who, when he could not get it by Force or Famine, obtained it by Fraud, and put to death no less than 40 of the chief Nobility, whom he found in the Castle. So hated he was for that bloody fact, that he was shortly after deprived of the Empire, and slain in fight by Albert of Austria his Competitor. The second of the two is Wetzelaer, seated on the Lon, where it meets with the Dille, which rising near Dillenberg, a Town of the Earl of Nassau's doth here lose its name into the greater. A Town Imperial, confederate with Friburg and the Princes before mentioned, for maintaining their common Liberties, and the Religion publicly professed amongst them, being that of the Reformed Churches of Calvin's Platform.

10. FR A N C O N I A.

FR A N C O N I A, or FRANKENLAND, is bounded on the East with the Upper Palatinate, and part of Voitland, on the West with the Confederates of Weteran and part of the Rhene, on the North side with Hassia and Thuringia, on the South with the Palatinate of the Rhene and some part of Schwaben: So called from the French, Franci, or Francones, in whose possession it was when they were first known unto the Romans; the Residence of their Dukes or Princes in this noble Province appropriating the name unto it. Called also Franconia Orientalis, to difference it from the Realm of France which lay more towards the West. At that time of a larger extent than it is at the present, comprehending so much of the Lower Palatinate as lieth on the same side of the Rhene; since subdued from it and made a Province of it self in these latter Ages.

The Country, on the out-parts overgrown wholly in a manner with Woods and Forests, and environed almost with Mountains; parts of the old Hercynian Woods, is within pleasant, plain and fruitful, sufficiently plentiful both of Corn and Wines, but abundantly well stored with Rape and Licoras, and yielding good pasture for Cattle. So that we compare it to a fine piece of Cloth, wrought about with a coarse Lint; or an excellent fine piece of Lawn, with a Canvas Selvage.

Chief Rivers of it are, 1. The Main or Alanus, which running through the midst of it, is received into the Rhene below Francfort. 2. The Sala, whence the adjoining French had the name of Salii, and Conrade, Emperor of the Germans, the surname of Salicus. 3. Raddientia. 4. Sinna. 5. Tubero. 6. Ellus, &c.

The people of it are ingenious, patient of labour, strong of body, and very industrious, not suffering any to be idle that can earn his living, of what sort soever. The offspring of the ancient French, who, having overmastered Gaul and the parts adjoining, left here the seminary of their strength, and a stock of their ancient Princes; Marcomir, Brother of Pharamond the first King of the French, governing in these parts as Duke, and leaving the Estate and Title unto his Posterity. The Catalogue of which Princes take in order thus.

326

1. Genebalinus; the Son of Dagobert, descended from the old Regal stock of the Sicambri, united with other Dutch Nations about 60 or 70 years before, in the name of Franks, having subdued those parts which lay towards the River Mœnus, became the first Prince of the Eastern Franks, or Lord of Francia Orientalis.

- 356 2. Dagobert, the Son of Genebaldus, who added the District of Triers unto his Estates.
- 377 3. Glodovæus, or Ludovicus, the Son of Dagobert.
- 398 4. Marcomir, the Son of Glodovæus, who extended his Dominion Eastwards towards Bavaria and Bohemia.
- 402 5. Pharamond, or Weramond, the Son of Marcomir, the first of this Line which took upon himself the Title of King of the French: on the assuming whereof (aiming at matters of more importance) he left Franconia, or East-France, with the Title of Duke, to his Brother Marcomir.
- 419 6. Marcomir the Brother of Pharamond.
- 423 7. Prunmesser, by some called Priamus the Son of Marcomir.
- 435 8. Genebaldus II. the Son of Prunmesser.
- 455 9. Sunno, the Son of Genebald the second.
- 478 10. Clodomirus, or Luitemarus, the Son of Sunno.
- 515 11. Hygobaldus, the Son of Clodomir, who became a Christian and added Wormes and Mentz unto his Estates.
- 541 12. Helenus, by some called Hermericus a Christian also, who passing over the Rhene, subdued that Tract bordering betwixt Triers and Lorraine, which the Dutch called West-reich.
- 571 13. Gotofridus, the Son of Helenus, a Christian also, but not able to persuade his people to the same belief.
- 595 14. Genebaldus III. the Son of Gotofride.
- 615 15. Clodomir II. the Son of Genebald the third.
- 638 16. Heribert, the Nephew of Clodomir the second.
- 668 17. Clodovæus, or Clovis II. the Cousin-german of Heribert.
- 680 18. Gosbertus the Son of Clovis the second.
- 706 19. Gosbertus II. Son of Gosbert the first.
- 720 20. Hetavus, the Son of Gosbert the second, the last Duke of Franconia of this Line. He dying without Issue-male, Anno 740. bequeathed it at his death to Pepin, who afterwards was King of France, Father of Charles the Great according to a former Contract made between those Princes. And Charles no sooner had it in his possession, but he bestowed the greatest part of it on Burchard, the first Bishop of Wurtzburg, Anno 752. made Bishop of that City by Boniface, Archbishop of Mentz, (the first Apostle of this People) but a year before. The Bishops of Wurtzburg by this Grant were possessed hereof as long as any of the House of Charles the Great did possess the Empire. But his posterity failing in the person of Conrade, Anno 910. Orto the first (who next but one succeeded Conrade) invested Conrade, Husband to Luitgardis his daughter, with this Country, giving him withal the Title of Duke of Franconia. Four Princes of this House possessed it; that is to say, this Conrade, surnamed Salicus; and after him three Henries, Father, Son, and Nephew, successively enjoying the Imperial dignity, by the names of Henry the third, fourth, and fifth. This Henry, the last Prince of the male Line of Conrade, dying without Issue, Franconia fell to Frederick Barbarossa, Duke of Schwaben, as next Heir to Henry by the Lady Agnes his Sister, married to Frederick the Antient, Duke of Schwaben, the Grand-father of Barbarossa. But that House being also extinct in the person of Conradine, Anno 1268. and no one Heir pretending to the Rights thereof, the Bishop of Wurtzburg challenged it on the former Grant; content to let some great ones have a part of the spoil, that he and his Successors might enjoy the rest. By means whereof it came to be divided betwixt the Bishops of Wurtsburg, Bamberg, Mentz, the Elector Palatine of the Rhene, (for antiently so much of the Palatinate and the Bishoprick of Mentz as lay on the Dutch side of the Rhene were but parts of Frankenland) the Marquits of Onaldsbach, the Earls of Swartzenburg, Henneburg, and Hohenloe, and as many of the Free or Imperial Cities as are seated in it. Thus every one did gather sticks when the great Oak fell: the Title of the Duke of Franconia remaining notwithstanding to the Bishops of Wurtzburg.

1. WURTZBURG, the Metropolis of Franconia, the Seat and Residence of the Bishop, who is Titular Duke hereof, is situate on the Maine or Mannus, in a pleasant Plain environed with Meadows, Gardens, and fruitful Mountains; and very well fenced with Walls, Trenches, Bulwarks, and other Arts of modern Fortification; well peopled, and for the most part handsomely and nearly built. Passing over the Bridge built of Freestone on many large and spacious Arches, you come unto a fair and pompous (though ancient) Castle, the ordinary dwelling of the Bishop; and yet so strong, that the many vain attempts of the Boors and Citizens, apt to pick quarrels with their Prince, made it thought impregnable, to which the situation of it on the top of an Hill added some advantage: but it proved otherwise when besieged by the King of Sweden, Anno 1631. who after a short, but stout resistance took it by assault. Other Towns of most note which belong to the Bishops of Wurtzburg are, 2. Forcheim, where it is said that Pontus Pilate was born. 3. Gemund, at the meeting of the Maine and the Saltza, or Sala. 4. Bretta upon the Saltza or Sala; not far from Gemund; remarkable enough, if for nothing else, for being the Birth-place of Melancthon that renowned Scholar, the Phoenix of Germany, as some call him, and that not unfitly. 5. Chronach. 6. Staffelstein. 7. Hockstadt; of which little memorable.

But to return unto the Bishop or chief Lord of all. He is called in the refined Latine of these times Herbipolitanus; but commonly Wurtzburgensis; differing in sound, but not in sense: for Wurtzburg is no other than a Town of Wortz, situate among plants and Gardens, as before is said; and Herbipolis, made up out of several languages, doth signifie no more than a City of Herbs. By whom the Episcopal See was here first erected, and how the Bishops hereof came to be entituled unto their Estates hath been shewn already. The manner how the new Bishop is admitted, and the old interred, may be worth our knowledge. On the decease of the former Bishop, the Lord Elect, attended with a great train of horse, is to make his entrance. As soon as he comes within the Gates, he alights off his horse, and putteth off his Robes, and being attired in a poor and despicable Habit, begirt about with a Rope, bare-headed also and bare-footed, he is conducted by the Earls of Henneberg, Castel Werthaim, and Rheineck, to S. Saviour's Church, being his Cathedral. The Dean and Canons there meeting him, ask him what he would have: to which he modestly replied, that, though unworthily, he is come to discharge the Office unto which he is called. Then the Dean thus, I admit thee in the name of this Chapter, committing to thy care this Church of S. Saviour's, and the Dukedom thereunto belonging, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. Which done he putteth on his Episcopal Habit, sayeth Mass, and from thence passeth to the Castle, where he gives entertainment to all the Company. The living Bishop thus invested, proceed we next to the Burial of the dead: whose Body imbowelled, is kept in the Chappel of his Castle, his Heart preserved in a vessel of Glass. The next day he is carried to the Monastery of Saint James, holding a Crosier-staff in his right hand, and a Sword in his left; buried with them the next day after in the Church of S. Saviour. As for the Revenue of the Bishop, they must needs be great; the Bishop hereof in the time of Charles the fifth, compounding for his peace with Albert, Marquits Marquils of Brandenburg, at the price of 220000 Crowns in ready Money, and entering into a Bond to pay all his Debts, which amounted to 350000 Crowns more. By which we may partly guess at the richness of his Exchequer, and partly at the greatness of his Intredo.

2. The second great Lord of Franconia is the Bishop of Bamberg, a City seated on the Maine, not far from Wurtzburg, the little River Rednitz falling there into it: supposed by Mercator to be the Brannanrium of Ptolomy, and to have took this new name from the Hill Baba (so called from Baba Daughter of Otho Duke of Saxony, and Wife of Albert once Earl hereof (upon which it is situate, the right name being Rabenberg) remember that Berg in Dutch signifieth a Hill) and contractedly Bamberg. A City delectably seated amongst Mountains and pleasant Gardens, and in a Soil exceeding fruitful of all necessaries, and yielding Lycoras in great plenty: the Birth-place of Joachimus Camerarius, one of the great Lights of Germany; and a See Episcopal, the Bishop of which is exempt from the power of the Metropolitan, subject immediately to the Pope, and Lord of many fair Towns and Territories in this Country: But much diminished since the time of Charles the fifth: the Bishoprick thereof then being given to Marquils Albert, above mentioned, for a Cessation from Arms, an. 1530. no less than 60 of his Lordships, (most of which fall unto the share of the Marquils of Onaldsbach) besides the Tutelage or Guardianship of his Wards and Clients. Of those which are remaining in the hands of the Bishops the principal are, 1. Bravingliac, 2. Schleislat.

3. The third great Lord to be considered is the Marquils of ONALDSBACH, or Onsbach, who is Master of no small part of this Country; but his Estate (as those of the other German Princes) confused and intermixed with his Neighbours, His chief Towns, 1. Onaldsbach, or Onsbach; the usual Residence of these Marquisses, and the Birth-place of most of their Children. Hailbrun, on the edge of Wirttemberg, walled in about the year 1085. and honoured with some publick Schools there founded by Marquils George-Frederick, Anno 1482. 3. Pleinsct, not far from Nurenberg. Such places as they held in Voirlant, we shall meet with there.

These Marquisses are of the puissant Family of Brandenburg, by whom this fair Estate was wrestled from the female Heirs of Wolframin, the last Lord hereof. The first who did enjoy this Estate and Title was Marquils George-Frederick, the Son of Albert Marquils and Elector of Brandenburg, called the Achilles of Germany, the Father of Albert the first Duke of Prussia, and of George the first Marquils of Jagerndorff, and the Grandfather of that Marquils Albert who in the days of Charles the fifth so harrassed this Country. But his Male-Issue by Casimir his eldest Son failing in that Albert anno 1557, it returned to the Electoral House; and by Sigismund, a late Elector was given to Joachim Ernestus, one of his younger Brethren, who by the Princes of the Union for defence of the Palatine was made chief Commander of their Forces, anno 1620. A charge in which it was supposed that he carried himself neither so faithfully nor so valiantly as he should have done, being much condemned for suffering Spinola with his Army to pass by unsought with, when he had all advantages that could be wished for to impede his march: the greatest part of the Palatinate being lost immediately upon that Neglect, and by degrees the rest of the united Princes either taken off from their engagement, or ruined for adhering to it with too great a constancy. To him succeeded his Son Christian, now possessed hereof.

As for the other secular Princes which have any considerable Estates in this Country, they are the Earls of Henneberg, Hohenloe, Rheineck, Castel, Werthaim, Horpach, and Swartzenburg, together with the Lords of Limburg and Rheichisberg; all of them named so from the chief Town of their Estates, and all those Towns enriched with some suitable Territory. Of these the Earls of Henneberg, Rheineck, Castel, and Werthaim, are Homagers to the Bishop of Wurtzburg, and are to do him service at his Inthronization, the Earldom of Rheineck being now united to that of Ilunam, as was shewn before, and that of Henneberg most famous, in that one of the Earls hereof was Father of that incredible increase of Children (as many as there be days in the year) produced at one birth by the Lady Margaret his Wife, Sister of William Earl of Holland, and King of the Romans. A Family of as great Antiquity as most in Germany, fetching their Pedigree as high as to Charles the Great, without help of the Heralds. But they of greatest power and Parentage amongst them are the Earls of Swartzenburg, deriving themselves from one Wittikindus of the House of Saxony; who fighting for his Country against the French, an. 779, was taken prisoner, carried into France, and there baptized, at the persuasion of Lewis the Godly, Son of Charles the Great. Wittikindus, his Son and Successor, being baptized at the same time also by the name of Charles, was the first Earl of Swartzenburg, a Castle of his own Building on the edge of Thuringia, anno 796; whose posterity do still hold the same, but much improved in their Estates by Marriages and other accruments. A Race of Princes which have yielded many of great influence in the affairs of Germany; amongst them Gunther Earl of Swartzenburg, elected Emperor of the Romans against Charles the fourth, by Rodolph Elector Palatine, Ericus Duke of Saxony, Ludovick Marquils of Brandenburg, and Henry Archbishop of Mentz. By which last he was solemnly inaugurated at Aken (or Aquilgrane) anno 1394. But being unworthily poisoned by his Competitor, though he died not of it, yet he was made so weak and unfit for action, that he was forced to surrender his pretensions to his mortal enemy; receiving in compensation for his charges 22000 marks in Silver, and some Towns in Thuringia.

Of the Imperial Cities, which share amongst them the remainders of Frankenland, the principal are, 1. Francford on the Maine, so called from its situation on the River Maine, to difference it from Francford in the Country of Brandenburg. It is divided by the River into two parts, joined together by a Bridge of Stone: the lesser part, situate on the right-hand shore of the River, being called Saxen-hausen; the greater part, properly called Francford, seated on the other. Both are under one Magistrate, and both together make up a fair, rich, populous, and well traded Town; both of great riches and repute by reason of the famous Marts here held in the midst of Lent and September yearly, and the Election of the Emperor or King of the Romans, as occasion is. The City is of a round form, compassed with a double Wall, beautified with some Walls without the Town on the banks of the River, amongst Vineyards, Meadows and sweet Groves: called thus as some say, from Francus the Son of Marcomir, supposed to be the Founder of it; or a Francorum vado, as the Foord of the Franks, before the building of the Bridge. The greatest part of the Inhabitants are Lutherans, but both the Roman Catholics and Calvinists are tolerated in it. 2. Schweinsfurt, on the Maine also, in a fruitful Soil. 3. Rottenburg, on the River Tauber. 4. Wunsheim. Here is also the Town of 5. Coburg, which belongeth to the House of Saxony, and gives Title to some of the younger Princes of it, called from hence Dukes of Saxon Coburg. And hereto may be added 6. the fair City of Nurenberg, conceived by most to be within the Upper Palatinate; but by the Emperor Maximilian made a member of the Circle of Franconia, in regard most of the Estates and Possessions of it lie within this Country. Of which indeed they have so plentiful a share, that when Maurice Elector of Saxony and his Confederates had driven Charles the fifth out of Germany, Marquils Albert, before mentioned, (whose Sword was his best Revenue) picking a quarrel with this City, burnt no less than an hundred Villages belonging to it, seventy Mannors and Farm-houses appertaining to the wealthier Citizens, 3000 Acres of their Wood; and after all this havock made of their Estate, Estate, compelled them to compound with him for 200000 Crowns in Money, and six pieces of Ordnance. But being the City it self seems rather to belong to the other Palatinate, we shall there meet with it.

Amongst these Prelates, Princes, and Imperial Cities is the great Dukedom of Franconia at this time divided; that Title still remaining in the Bishop of Wurtzburg, and some part of the Country: but both the Country and the Title of Duke of Franconia not long since otherwise disposed of. For the Swedes having taken Wurtzburg anno 1631, as before is said, together with the City of Bamberg, and all the Towns and Territories appertaining to them, conferred them upon Bernard Duke of Saxon Weymer, with the style and Title of Duke of Franconia. He was inaugurated therein in the Cathedral Church of Wurtzburg. July 19, 1633. the Nobility and Gentry of the Country doing Homage to him, and all the Magistrates and Officers of the several Cities taking the Oaths of Allegiance; the new Duke also making Oath, that he would carefully maintain them in their Rights and Privileges. In the solemnities of which day, the first great Gun discharged in the way of Triumph broke in the going off, without any hurt done, but the wounding of one Soldier only. An Omen that all this Solemn Act would prove but a Pageant, and break in pieces at the first giving fire unto it. And so accordingly it did: the Victory at Norlingen, which followed not long after this, putting the Bishops once more into their possessions, and leaving nothing to the new Duke but an hungry Title. And therefore leaving both the old and new titular Dukes, we will here add the Catalogue of those who were Dukes indeed, and had; together with the Title, the full possession of the Country.

Dukes of FRANCONIA, of the Dutch or German Race.

- 974 1. Conradus, surnamed Salicus, created Duke of Franconia by Otho the first, whose Daughter Luitgardis he had married: after the death of Henry the second elected Emperor, by the name of Conrade the second, anno 1025.
- 1040 2. Henry, the Son of Conrade, Duke of Franconia and Emperor, by the name of Henry the third.
- 1056 3. Henry II. of Franconia and IV. of the Empire.
- 1106 4. Henry III. of Franconia. and V. of the Empire.
- 1125 5. Frederick II. (surnamed Barbarossa) Duke of Schwaben, Nephew of Frederick the Ancient, Duke of Suevia, and of Agnes his Wife, the Sister and next Heir of Henry, succeeded in the Empire, after the death of Conrade the 3. his Uncle, anno 1153.
- 1190 6. Frederick the II. the second Son of Barbarossa, Duke of Franconia and Schwaben.
7. Conrade II. Brother of Frederick the second succeeded in both Estates.
8. Philip, the younger Brother of Conrade, succeeded in both Dukedoms after his decease; and on the death of Henry the sixth, his eldest Brother was Elected Emperor anno 1198.
- 1207 9. Frederick III. of Franconia, and the 5th. of Suevia, Son of the Emperor Henry the sixth, whom he succeeded in the Kingdom of Naples and Sicily, anno 1202. and on the death of Otho the fourth, anno 1212, was elected Emperor, of that name the second.
- 1250 10. Conrade III. of Franconia, the II. of Schwaben, and the IV. of the Empire, the Son of Frederick the third, whom he succeeded in all his Titles and Estates.
- 1254 11. Conradine, Son of Conrade the third, Duke of Franconia and Schwaben, dispossessed of his Kingdoms of Naples and Sicily by Manfred the base Brother of his Father, and finally beheaded by Charles of Anjou, who succeeded Manfred in those Kingdoms, anno 1268. After whose death this Royal House being quite extinguished, the Bishop of Wurtzburg did again resume the Title of Duke of Franconia; content to let some of the greater Lords and Prelates, which lived near unto him, to share in the possession of it, as before was noted.

The Arms of the ancient Dukes of Franconia, before they were incorporated with the House of Schwaben, were Azure, a Lion Barry of eight pieces Argent and Gules, crowned Or: which, why it is now born by the Landgraves of Hessia, we shall tell you there.

11. WIRTFNBURG; and 12. BADEN.

These I have joined together, though distinct Estates, because both of them were taken out of the great Dukedom of Schwaben, erected both about one time, and lie very close, in a round together: bounded upon the East and South with Schwaben properly so called, on the North with the Lower Palatinate, on the West with the Rhene, and that part of Schwaben which is called Brisingom, parted asunder by the mountainous ridge of Hills called Swartzenwald; Wirttemberg lying on the East-side thereof, and Baden betwixt it and the Rhene, to the West.

And first for WIRTENBERG. The Air thereof is very healthy, neither too hot in Summer, nor too cold in Winter: the Soil near Swartzenwald lying on the West, and the Alps of Suevia on the South, of it self barren and unprofitable; but in some places, by the industry of the Plough-man, made to yield good Corn. But in the middle parts thereof, which lie towards the Neccar, little inferiour for fruitfulness both of Corn and Wine unto any in Germany; besides some Silver-mines near Wiltberg, and about Puellach, a small Town, such abundance of Brals, that the Foundations of the Houses seem to be laid upon it.

It took this name from the Castle of Wirttemberg, the first Seat of the Princes of it; as that did from the Inturgi, inhabiting the Dutch side of the Rhene; or from the Virthingi, as Beatus Rhenanus thinketh, mentioned by Trebellius Gallio in the life of Aurelianus; to which the word Berg, being added for a termination, made it first Tuerginberg, or Virthinberg, and after Wirttemberg.

Places of most importance in it are, 1. Stutgard, the Duke's Seat, a fair, rich and populous Town, and the chief of the Dukedom; seated in a pleasant and fruitful Plain, not far from the Neccar, yielding a quantity of Wine almost incredible. 2. Tubingen, on both sides of the Neccar, united into one with a fair Stone-bridge. A Town well built, situate in a very rich Soil. and finally adorned with an University here founded by Eberhard the first Duke of Wirttemberg, anno 1477, in which Leonardus Fuchsius that great Herbalist and Restaurator of Physick, was once a Professor of that Faculty, 3. Canstatt, upon the Neccar also, not far from which, on the Top of an Hill, stands the old Castle of Wirttemberg before mentioned. 4. Wiltberg, of great esteem for its Mines of Silver. 5. Archingen, inhabited chiefly by Jews. 6. Schorndorf, upon the Reems, much resorted to by reason of the hot Baths there; as is also 7. Nemburg, on the Entz. 8. Haidenheim, 9. Greiningen, 10. Marbach; of which little memorable. There are also within the limits of this Dukedom many Towns Imperial. As 1. Vimpfen, and 2. Hailbrun, on the Neccar. 3. Gepping, upon the River Vils. 4. Veil. 5. Reuling, on the Neccar also, made Imperial, by Frederick the 2. anno 1240, otherwise of no great note but for the Paper-mills, 6. Efsling.

The first Inhabitants hereof were the Charini of Protony, and part of the Inturgi spoken of before. It was made made subject with the rest of these parts to the Almans, after to the French, and finally a Member of the great Dukedom of Schwaben. From which dismembred in the time of Henry IV. after a dangerous War raised against him by Duke Rodolphus, advanced by the practice of Pope Hildebrand to the Throne Imperial, it came to have Princes of its own: the first Earl being Conrade, in the year 1100, by the Grace and Favour of the said Emperor Henry. Increased by the addition of the Earldom of Montbelgard and many other Arguments, it was made a Dukedom in the person of Eberhard the sixth, by Maximilian the first, anno 1495. The Earls and Dukes follow thus in order.

The Earls and Dukes of WIRTEMBERG.

- 1100 1. Conrade, the first Earl.
2. Ulrick, Son of Conrade.
3. John, Son of Ulrick.
4. Lewis, Son of John.
5. Henry, Son of Lewis.
6. Eberhard, Son of Henry.
- 1253 7. Ulrick II. Son of Eberhard.
8. Eberhard II. Son of Ulrick.
- 1325 9. Ulrick III. Son of Eberhard.
- 1344 10. Eberhard III. Son of Ulrick.
- 1394 11. Ulrick IV. Son of Eberhard.
12. Eberhard IV. Son of Ulrick.
- 1417 13. Eberhard V. Son of Eberhard the 4th, by his Marriage with Henrica, or Henrietta, Daughter of Henry Earl of Montbelgard, added that Earldom to his House.
- 1419 14. Lewis or Lodovick II. Son of Eberhard the 5th.
- 1456 15. Eberhard VI. Son of Lewis, Founder of the University of Tubingen, created by Maximilian the First, the first Duke of Wirtemberg, anno 1495. He deceased without Issue, anno 1496.
- 1496 16. Eberhard VII. Son of Ulrick the younger Brother of Lewis the 2d, succeeded on the death of Eberhard his Cousin-german.
- 1504 17. Henry II. the Brother of Eberhard the 7th.
- 1519 18. Ulrick V. Son of Henry II. expelled out of his Dukedom by Charles the 5th. for the sack of Reutling, an Imperial City, and his Estate conferred on Ferdinand of Austria, the Brother of Charles, in 1520: but after 15 years Exile restored to his Dukedom by Philip Landgrave of Hassia, in 1534. He Reformed Religion, and liberally endowed the University of Tubingen. In the Year 1547, he was again expelled by the Emperor upon the Smalcaldick War.
- 1550 19. Christopher, the Son of Ulrick the 5th, a follower of his Father's steps in Reformation of the Church, and advancement of Learning.
- 1568 20. Lodovick or Lewis III. Son of Christopher. This Prince having no Children to succeed him, Founded in the 1589 an illustrious College at Tubingen to preserve his Memory.
- 1593 21. Frederick, Son of George Earl of Montbelgard, the Brother of Ulrick the 5th. In the year 1599, the 24th of January, he obtained from Rodolphus the Emperor a new Investiture of both his Dukedoms, according to the first and immediate Form, for which he paid a considerable Sum of Money, and by it he cut off the Pretences of the House of Austria. Made Knight of the Garter by Queen Elizabeth, anno 1597.
- 1608 22. John-Frederick, Son of Frederick the first.
- 1628 23. John-Eberhard, eldest Son of the former Duke.
- 1674 24. William-Lewis.
- 1677 25. Eberhard Lewis, Son of the former, born in the year 1676, who is still living.

The Revenues of this Duke are supposed to be equal unto those of the Electors Palatine, spoken of before; and were it not for the Silver-mines in Saxony, little inferior to those of that Duke. But for Provisions of War, (excepting Powder only) he is meanly furnished. A main defect, considering the ill terms he stands in with the Imperial Cities, betwixt whom and the House of Wirtemberg there have been always open Wars; or secret Jealousies.

His Arms are Or, three Attiers of a Stag born Paliebarrie, Sable.

The Family of Wirtemberg, in the year 1072. under Conrade, obtained the Earldom of Butelsbach. In the year 1214, John II. Earl by Marriage, had Stutgard, which before belonged to the Marquissate of Baden. In 1240 the Earldom of Aurach was bought: In 1336 the Earldom of Gruningen: In 1346, Calbe: In 1397 Eberhard the 5th, by Marriage, had the Earldom of Montbelgard: In 1439 the Dukedom of Teccen came by Marriage: In 1495 Eberhard VI. raised the Title of his Family from an Earldom to a Dukedom: In 1620 Ulricus bought Hohentweil: In 1646 Silvius Nimbrod obtained the Investiture of Olentz in Silesia, and in Moravia he had Sternberg and Metzibor; but the French in the Year 1684 deprived this Family of Montbelgard.

As for the Marquissate of BADEN BADA, lying on the West side of Schwartzenwald, betwixt it and the Rhene, it is for the most part, except towards those Wolds, a very pleasant and fruitful Country, and much of the same nature with the rest of Wirtemberg; so called from Baden, a neat Town, where the Marquis keeps his Seat in Winter; and that so named from the hot Baths there, as is also Baden (called for distinction sake, the Upper Baden) amongst the Switzers; in which respect the City of Bath in Somersetshire had anciently the name of Caer-Baden also. Of these Baths it is supposed that there are in this City at least 300, profitable for many Diseases and exulcerate Sores, drawing a great resort of People from the neighbouring Countries. This is the chief Town of this Marquissate, from whence the Princes have the Title of Marquesses of Baden. The next to this is, 2. Durlach, or Turlach, which gives Title to a second Branch of this House; call'd also sometimes Marquesses of Durlach only, but commonly the Marquesses of Baden Durlach. 3. Liebenzel, amongst the Hills of Schwartzenwald, famous for hot medicinal Springs. 4. Liechtenaw, remarkable for a Monastery, the burial-place of the first Marquesses. 5. Gerspach, in the very heart of that mountainous Tract. 6. Pfortzheim, adjoining to the Wood Hagenscheis, a branch of Schwartzenwald. 7. Rotelen. 8. Badenwile. And 9. Susenburg, all seated in the Upper Baden, being that part hereof which lies next to Brissgow. 10. Milberg, beautified with a fair Castle, the usual retiring-place of these Princes in the heats of Summer.

This Marquissate, being also taken out of the great Dukedom of Schwaben, was Founded in the Person of Herman of Verona in Italy, who deserving well of the Emperor Henry V. was by him settled in some Lands about these parts, anno 1120. and after marrying with the Daughter of an Earl of Baden, was by the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa created the first Marquis of Baden, anno 1155. The Estate was after much encreased by the addition of the Earldom of Hochberg and the Appendixes thereof in Schwaben; into which Christopher the 13th Marquis hereof, succeeded on the death of his Cousin Philip, the last Earl of Hochberg; both Princes descending originally from two Brothers; of which the eldest, in right of the Lady Judith his Wife, was Earl of Hochberg; the second by the Favour of the said Frederick Barbarossa, was made Marquis of Baden. They were Masters also of many fair Estates in the Lower Palatinate; which the Palatines of the Rhene (as was there said) are since possessed of. Other particulars shall be shown (if occasion be) in the ensuing Catalogue.

Histories seem to put it beyond a dispute that the Family of Baden is a branch of that which produced the House of Austria. From the Ancient Princes of Alsatia spring the Family of the Dukes of Zeeringen, who had large Territories in Brisgow. Hermannus of this House obtained the Earldom of Hochberg, and died in the year 1074: His Son Herman married Judith the Heiress of Baden. This Family stands at this day divided into two Branches, viz. Baden Baden, and Baden Durlach.

The Marquesses of B A D E N.

- 1074 1. Herman, the first Marquis.
- 1130 2. Herman II.
- 1160 3. Herman III. made by Frederick Barbarossa a Lord of Verona in Italy, for his Service against the Milanese.
- 4. Herman IV.
- 5. Herman V.
- 1281 6. Rodolph, Son of Herman the 4th, died in 1288.
- 1295 7. Herman VI. Son of Rodolph.
- 1333 8. Rodolph II. Son of Herman the 5th.
- 1356 9. Frederick, Son of Rodolph the 2d.
- 10. Rodolph III. Son of Frederick.
- 1372 11. Bernard, Son of Rodolph the 3d.
- 1431 12. James, Son of Bernard.
- 1453 13. Charles, Son of James, the first of these Marquesses which was possessed of the County of Spanheim in the Lower Palatinate, descending on this House by Matild Wife of Rodolph the second.
- 1475 14. Christopher, Son of Charles, who after the death of Philip, the last Marquis of Hochberg, succeeded also in that Estate.
- 1527 15. Bernard, Son of Christopher, his Brother Ernest succeeding in that of Hochberg.
- 1535 16. Christopher II. Son of Bernard, his elder Brother Philibert, and Philip Son of Philibert, dying in the Life of Bernard.
- 1537 17. Philip, Son of Christopher, who being left very young by his Father, fell under the Tutelage of the Duke of Bavaria, and was brought up a Roman Catholick. He died in the year 1588, unmarried.
- 1588 18. Edward, Son of Christopher, intending the Sale of his Estate to pay his Debts, was forcibly deprived of all. He broke his Neck in 1600 at Brussels.
- 1594 19. Ernest, Marquis of Hochberg, Nephew of Ernest above mentioned; who by that means not only preserved the Marquisate of Baden, but united that of Hochberg again unto it, and removed his ordinary seat to Durlach.
- 1604 20. George, Brother of Ernest, Marquis of Baden and Hochberg, who in the year 1622 resigned his Dominions to his Son, who the same year was deprived of it by the Decree of the Chamber of Spire, but recover'd it by the Treaty of Munster in 1648.
- 1622 21. Frederick, the Son of George, born in the year 1594, succeeded his Father in both Estates; and (if living) hath a Son called also Frederick, to enjoy them after his decease.
- 1659 22. Frederick, who was General for the Emperor against the French from whom he took Philipsburg in the year 1676.
- 1677 23. Frederick the Great, Son of the former, succeeded his Father, he was born in the Year 1647, the 24th of September: He has a Son call'd Frederick to succeed him, who was born in the year 1672.

The Reader may be pleased to know that besides this Line here set down there is another derived from Edward, who was dispossessed by Ernest in the Year 1594. He left three Sons, William, Albert and Herman, the Marquisate was adjudged to William in 1622 by the Chamber of Spire, but that Sentence was repealed by the Treaty of Munster; in 1640 he was made President of the Chamber of Spire, and died the 22th of May, 1677, leaving several Sons behind him; so that this Branch is still extant, and being Roman Catholicks and Military Men, are particularly favoured by the Emperor, and have been advanced to great Employments by him. The Notitia Imperii Germanici gives a very different Account of this Family and its Rise from this set down by Heylin, but it is scarce possible to make his understood without a Genealogy: And they both agree in the Succession from Ernest, who dispossessed Edward the Apostate (as they call him.) Of this Line are Prince Lewis of Baden, often mentioned in the Wars of Hungary, and Herman of Baden, The Emperor's Commissioner in the Dyet at this time.

There is great Differences as to the latter part of this Catalogue, which Showartus thus sets down.

B A D E N B A D E N.

- 1527 1. Bernard, Son of Christopher the 4th of that name, was the Founder of the Line of Baden Baden. He embraced the Reformation, and settled it in his Estate, and then died in 1566.
- 1566 2. Philip II. Son of Bernard, succeeded, but he died without Issue.
- 1588 3. Edward the Fortunate, Son of Christopher the third, Son of Bernard, succeeded his Uncle Philip. He returned to the Popish Religion, and falling into Debts would have sold his Estate to pay them, but was driven out of all, and forced to turn Soldier in Flanders, where he was slain the 18th of June, 1600.
- 1594 4. Ernest-Frederick, of the House of Durlach, assumed the Government, and kept it many Years.
- 1622 5. William the Eldest, Son of Edward the Fortunate, or Unfortunate rather: In 1640 he was the Emperor's Commissioner in the Dyet of Ratisbonne, and after President of the Chamber of Spire; and he died the 22th of May, 1677. Etat. 84.
- 1677 6. Lewis-William, born in 1655, the Son of Ferdinand Maximilian, the Son of William, succeeded his Grandfather, but being spoiled of his Dominions by the French, he went to the Emperor and served against the Turks, and is now Marshal de Camp to that Prince. And in the year 1680 he Married a Daughter of the late Duke of Saxe-Lawemburg, by whom he had a fair Estate in Bohemia. There is another Son of William, called Herman, who was born in 1628, and is now the Emperor's Commissioner at the Dyet at Ratisbonne.

B A D E N D U R L A C H.

- 1527 1. Ernest, Son of Christopher, and Brother of Bernard, by the Appointment of his Father became Marquis of Baden Durlach and Rotelen. He was a zealous Protestant, and died the 6th of February, 1553.
- 1553 2. Charles II. Son of Ernest.
- 1577 3. Ernest-Frederick, Son of Charles, succeeded his Father in 1577, and had various Contests with William of the House of Baden Baden.
- 1604 4. George-Frederick, Brother of Ernest, (who died without Issue) was born the 10th of January, 1573. He was a sure Friend to the Electors, Palatines, who was then King of Bohemia, upon this account the Emperor favoured William of Baden Baden against him, and put him in possession of that Marquisate in 1622, and drove George out of all his Lands, so that he died at Geneva.

- 1638 5. Frederick, Son of George, born in 1594: by the Treaty of Osnabruck he recover'd his Territories in the Year 1648.
- 1659 6. Frederick II. Son of the former Frederick, was born in 1617, and was a Prince of great Merit both as to Peace and War. He took Philipsburg from the French, in 1676; and died the next Year.
- 1677 7. Frederick III. now Marquis of Baden Durlach, was born the 27th of September, 1647. In 1670 he married Maria Augusta, Daughter of Frederick, Duke of Sleswick, by whom he has Charles-William, born the 17th of January, 1679, and Christopher, born the 28th of September, 1684.

The Family of Baden has made Additions to their Fortunes in several Ages. Herman the Fourth had with his Wife, who was the Daughter of Henry, Palatine, Guelf, Durlach, Heidelberg and Etlingen. In the Year 1246, Herman the 5th gained by a Marriage the Right of the Duchy of Austria and Stiria. In 1415, the Earldom of Hochberg was added. In 1437, great part of that of Sponheim was gained, together with Muhlberg and Lohra, in Ortenow. In 1444, Christopher added Baden, Weiler, and Welschenberg, and afterwards Rodemachren, Herspringen, and Vjeldigen. In 1503, upon the death of Philip, came in Landgram, Sausenberg, and Rotelen. And after this the Earls of Erberstein being extinct, the greatest part of that Earldom was added to this Family.

On the other hand it has suffer'd many Losses. In the middle of the 13th Century Ottocar, King of Bohemia, took from Frederick the right Heir Austria and Stiria. And in the two last French Wars both the Lines have been driven out of their Countries by the prevailing Power of France, and great part of their Towns burnt and ruined. They have also a pretence upon the Dominion of Geroltzack.

13. NORTHGOIA, or the UPPER PALATINATE.

THE County of NORTHGOIA, so called from the Northern situation of it in regard of Bavaria, is sometimes also called the Palatinate of Bavaria, because anciently belonging to that Estate; but generally Ober Pfaltz or the Lower Palatinate, to difference it from the Lower. It is bounded on the East with Bohemia, on the West with Franconia and part of Schwaben, on the North with Voitland, and on the South with Bavaria. The Country is for the most part somewhat rough and mountainous, rich principally in Mines of Iron, which it yieldeth in most places, and some of Silver about Amberg; extended from Haimburg to the edge of Bohemia, 80 miles; and from the Hill Fichtelberg in the edge of Voitland, to Weissenburg near the Banks of the Danow, 68 miles.

Observable things touching this Province are chiefly two. First, that out of the Mountain Fichtelberg, before mentioned arise 4 Rivers running to the four Quarters of the World; that is to say, the Egra towards the East, the Maine or Mannus towards the West, the Sala or Saliza to the North, and the Nabor Nabus to the South; so that it may be probably thought to be the highest Hill in all Germany. 2. That in the South-west corner of it are two little Rivers; the one called Altmul, which falleth into the Danow, and the other Rednitz, which runs into the Maine, and finally into the Rhene; between the Heads whereof, being not much distant, Charles the Great once began to dig a Channel, for making a passage out of the Rhene into the Danow. In which work he employed many thousand Men. But partly by excess of Rain, and partly by some strange Affrightments, (all which they did in the day being undone in the night) he was fain to desist. Some parts of the intended Water-course are to be seen near Weissenburg, spoken of before, which standeth in the middle-way betwixt both Rivers.

Chief Places of this Country which belong to the Electoral Family are, 1. Amberg, on the River Vils, enriched chiefly by the commodity of Iron, digged out of the neighbouring Hills, here fashioned into all sorts of Utensils, and hence conveyed in great abundance to the parts adjoining: but prouder of its Mines of Silver than those veins of Iron, affording to the Prince's Coffers 60000 Crowns yearly. 2. Namheim, in the midst of a fruitful Valley, near a Wood of Juniper. 3. Newburgh, upon the River Smartzach, which gives Title to the second Branch of the Palatine House, call'd the Counts Palatines of Newburgh, Competitors with the Marquis of Brandenburg for the whole Dukedom of Cleveland, and finally possessed of Grlick and the Members of it. 4. Kelheim, at the meeting of the Danow with the River Altmul. 5. Cham, on the edge of Bohemia, near the River Regen; which passing thence falleth into the Danow near the City of Regensburg. 6. Castel, where the Electors for the most part hold their Residence, when they are in this Country. 7. Amerbach, 8. Saltzbach, 9. Weiden, 10. Newmarckt.

There are in this Country some Towns belonging to the Lantgraves of Luchtenberg, one of the four old Lantgraves of the Empire; the other three being Duringen, Huffia and Alsatia: so called from Luchtenberg, an old Castle, situate on a lofty Hill not far from Pfreimt, the chief Town and ordinary Seat of these Lantgraves, seated on the River Nab, 2. Gransfelden, 3. Schönhoffen, an ordinary pass and baiting-place in the way from Prague to Nuremberg.

But the chief City of this Country, and perhaps of Germany, is Nuremberg it self, Norimberga in the modern, but Norica in the ancient Latin. So called from an ancient Castle called Castrum Noricum, the Ruins of which are still remaining, encompassed with a deep, but dry Ditch, now of no use nor ornament to the City at all, but revered for its antiquity as the Mother of Nuremberg. The Castle is said by some to be built in the time of Claudius Cesar. More probably by some of the Norici, who terrified with the Invasion of Attila, in the Decline and Wane of the Roman Empire, relinquished Bavaria; where before they dwelt and passed over the Danow, there to provide themselves of a safer dwelling. Conquered by the Bavarians, it became, together with their Conquerors, subject to the French. In the time of Lewis the Third, it became Imperial, and was Walled and Fortified during the Reign of Charles the 4th. From that time it increased so fast both in Wealth and Beauty, that it is counted the greatest and wealthiest City in all this Continent, there being reckoned in it 11 Stone-Bridges for passage over the Leugnitz, which runneth through it, 12 Conduits of fresh Water, 13 common Baths, 116 publick Wells, and 128 Streets. Of figure it is square, environed with a tripple Wall of 8 miles in circuit, and plentifully stored with all sorts of Ammunition. The Marquesses of Brandenburg in former times were the Burgraves of it; an Office of great Power and Jurisdiction, but sold for a good sum of Money by Frederick III. Anno 1414. Albert his Son, attempting to recover the old Office again, besieged the Town, having no less than 17 Princes on his side, and yet could not force it: that for an Argument of its strength. A proof and evidence of the Wealth of it we have seen before, in that great havock made of their Towns and Villages, and the great Ransom they were put to by another Albert spoken of in Franconia, in the year 1552, which is excellently described by John Sleiden in 24 Lib. of his History. And it adds much unto the commendation of the People that this great Wealth is gotten by their indefatigable Industry; the Town being situate on a barren and sandy Soil, and destitute of those Helps which commonly navigable Rivers brings unto a City; those great Possessions which belongs unto the State hereof being gotten out of the Fire, as the saying is, by their continual working of Iron and other Manufactures, occasioning a resort hither of Merchants from all parts of Germany. In the year 1649, here was a general Peace Concluded between the Princes of Germany, pursuant to that of Munster made the year before.

There is a Branch of the Family of Brandenburg, which is called the Franconian Branch, which lays claim to the Burgrate of Norimberg.

1. Frederick, Son of Albert I. Achilles, Duke of Brandenburg, and Elector, born the 2. of May 1460, and by his Father made Burgrave of Norimberg.
- 1536 2. Casimir, Son of Frederick, born the 27th of September 1481, succeeded 4. April 1536, and died the 21th of September 1637.
- 1537 3. Albert III. the Alcibiades of Germany, born 28th of March 1522, a Prince of great Worth, but lived and dyed a single man.
- 1557 4. George, Brother of Casimir, born the 4th of March 1484.
- 1577 5. George Frederick, born the 5th of April 1539, made Governour of Prussia, in 1582, he Founded the University of Heilbrun, he died the 25th of April 1603, without any Male Issue. In him the Line ended.
- 1603 6. Christian I. Son of John George, Elector of Brandenburg, born the 30th of June 1581, Founder of the Line of Culembach.
- 1645 7. Erdman Augustus, born the 29th of October 1615.
- 1651 8. Christian Ernest, born the 27th of July 1644, assumed the Government in 1661, and is still living, his Sons are George William, born the 16th of November 1678, Charles Lewis, born the 11th of November 1679.

A U S B A C H.

- 1603 1. Joachim Ernest, born in 1583.
- 1625 2. Frederick his Son, born the 20th of April 1616.
- 1634 3. Albert, Brother of Frederick, born in 1620.
- 1667 4. John Frederick Son of Albert, born the 28th of October 1654.

He is now living and has three Sons, Christian Albert, born the 8th of September 1675, and George Frederick, born the 25th of April 1678, William Frederick born the 29th of September 1685.

Other Towns of chief note within this Palatinate are,
 1. Altorff, where the Nurenbergers founded an University for the study of all Arts and Sciences, anno 1575.
 2. Herspruck, a great Town and well seated, belonging to the State of Nurenburg also. 3. Eystet, (Aichstaidium in the Latine) an Episcopal See, situate on the River Altmul. 4. Weissenburg, an Imperial City on the Borders of Schwaben. Here was also in this Province (if not still remaining) the Town Winsberg, memorable for the Piety and gallantry of the Women of it. For the Town being besieged and distressed by the Emperor Conrade the 3. for siding against him with the Guelps then Dukes of Bavaria, no other conditions could be gotten at the surrendry of it, but that the Women might have leave to depart in safety, and carry all their Jewels with them. Which being obtained, they took their Husbands on their backs and so left the Town: and by that noble act so moved the affections and compassions of the angry Prince, that he spared the Town, and gave them all a general Pardon. It is said by some, that the odious names of Guelps and Gibelines (with which the peace of Christendom was so long distracted) took their beginning at this Siege, the first so called from Guelpho Brother of Henry the Proud, Duke of Bavaria, in whose cause they fought; the other from Veibling (the French and Italians speak it Gueibling) a Town of Frankenland, in which that Emperor was born. Another original hereof we had in our description of the State of Florence:

but I take this to be the more probable of the two; tho' neither certain.

The ancient Inhabitants hereof were the Nurici of Tacitus. Afterwards some of the Nurici fearful or grown impatient of the Roman Yoak, came over the Danubius, to them, and built that famous Castle called Castrum Noricum, where now stands Nurenberg. Overpowered by the Boii, and uniting with them in the name of Boiarians, they followed the fortunes of Bavaria, till the year 1339, when Ludovick the Emperor and Duke of Bavaria, on the partition of the Estate betwixt him and Rodolphus his elder Brother relinquished it for ever to the House of the Palatines. Returned for the present to the Dukes of Bavaria, on whom it was conferred, together with the Electoral dignity, by the Emperor Ferdinand the 2. in recompence of the great service done him by Maximilian the now Duke thereof in the War of Bohemia, and the great charge he had been at in the reduction of that Kingdom to the House of Austria. How long it will continue thus is known only to God, the disposer of all things. Yet neither the Bavarians formerly, nor the Palatines since, have been so fully Masters of it, but that the Lantgrave of Luchtenberg and the City of Nurenberg have put in for a share.

The Arms of which great and puissant City are Azure, an Harpye displayed, crowned, crined and armed, Or.

14. The Kingdom of B O H E M I A.

THE Kingdom of BOHEMIA, containing Bohemia it self with the incorporate Provinces, is bounded on the East with Poland and Hungary, on the West with the Upper Palatinate, Voitland and Misnia, on the North with the Marquisate of Brandenburg and some part of Misnia, and on the South with Austria and Bavaria. It comprehends in it, besides Bohemia it self, the Marquisate of Moravia, with the Dukedoms of Silesia and Lusatia.

1. BOHEMIA, encompassed about with woody Mountains, part of the Hercynian, is bounded on the East with Moravia, on the West with the Upper Palatinate and Voitland, the North with Misnia, Lusatia and some part of Silesia, on the South with parts of Bavaria and Austria.

It took this name from the Bemi, or Boiemi, the old Inhabitants hereof; by Pomponius Mela called Bemi, with the addition of Gens magna, by Tacitus, Boiemi, who make them the descendants of the Boii, a Gallick Nation, who to avoid the Servitude which they feared from Rome, put themselves into these Hercynian desarts, which from them was named Boiohemum, by which name it occurreth in Velleius Paterculus. And though the Marcomanni first, and the Slaves and Croatians afterwards, became Masters of it, these last continuing their possession to this very day: yet it retaineth still the name of Bohemia amongst the Latines, as that Behemerland amongst the Dutch.

It contains in compass about 550 English miles. The Soil is indifferently fruitful, and enriched with Mines of all sorts, except of Gold. Tin they have here in good plenty, the Mines whereof were first found out by a Cornish man, banished out of England, anno 1240. which discovery of Tin in these parts was, as saith my Author, in magnam jacluram Richardi Comitiss Cornubiæ, (he meaneth that Richard which was afterwards King of the Romans;) and no marvel, for in those times there was no Tin in all Europe but in England. Wood they have here good store; and in some of their Forests a Beast called Lomie, which hath hanging under its neck a Bladder full of scalding water, with which, when she is hunted, she so tortureth the Dogs, that she easily escapeth them. Of Corn they have sufficient for their own use, and sometimes also an increase above their spending, wherewith they do supply their neighbours of the Upper Palatinate: but they want Wine, the Air being too too sharp and piercing to produce a good Vintage. And it yields also store of Saffron, no where to be bettered; with plenty of medicinal Drugs.

The principal Rivers hereof are, 1. the Elbe, or Albis, having here its spring, of whose course we have spoken elsewhere. 2. Egra, 3. the Muldam or Multavins, and 4. the Wartz, all three exonerating themselves into the Elbe, which runneth through the midst of the Country.

The Kingdom is not (as others) divided into Counties and Provinces, but into the Territories and possessions of several Lords, who have great authority and command over their Vassals. The figure of the whole is in a manner Circular, the Diameter whereof reacheth every way some 200 miles, containing in that compass 700 Cities, walled Towns and Castles, and (as some say) 30000 Villages. It is inhabited by a people given to Drink and Gluttony, and yet valiant and with sense of Honour: this last belonging to the Nobility and Gentry, the former to the common people; but more moderately than most others of the German Nations. All of them Princes or Plebeians, rich, poor, noble and base, use the Sclavonian Language, as their Mother-tongue.

The chief Bohemian Captain that ever I read of was Zisca, who, in eleven Battles fought in the defence of the Hussites, against the Pope and his Confederates, prevailed and went away victorious, insomuch that at his death he willed the Bohemians to flee him, and make a Drum of his skin; perswading himself, if they so did, they could never be overcome. A fancy like to that of Scipio African, and Vortimer K. of Britain spoken of before. Scholars of most note, John Hus and Hierom of Prague, two eminent Divines, of whom more anon.

The Christian Faith was first here preached by S. Methodius the first Bishop and Apostle of the Moravians; an. 900 or thereabouts. Borziwois, (whom some call Borsinows) the 8. Duke from Crocon, being the first Christian Prince, and next to him Wenceslaus the 2. This last was most cruelly murdered by Boleslaus his Brother at the instigation of Drabomira, an obstinate Heathen, Mother to them both: who having caused the Ministers of the Lord to be butchered, and their bodies to lie unburied for two years together, was swallowed up Coach and all, in that very place where their bodies lay. Confirmed by this Prodigy, they continued constant in the Faith to this very day; though not without the intermixture of some notable Vanity. For one Picardus, coming out of the Low-countries, drew a great sort of men and women unto him, pretending to bring them to the same state of Perfection that Adam was in before the Fall; from whence they were called Picards and Adamites. They had no respect unto Marriage; yet could they not accompany any Woman, until the Man coming to Adam, said unto him, Ether Adam, I am inflamed towards this Woman, and Adam made answer, Increase and Multiply. They lived in an Island which they called Paradise, and went stark naked: but they continued not long; for Zisca hearing of them, entred their Fools Paradise, and put them all to the sword, Anno 1416. But to make amends for this Folly, they were exceedingly zealous of the Reformation. For much about the same time the Works of Wickliff were brought into Bohemia by a certain Scholar who had been Student in the University of Oxford, which hapning into the hands of John Huss and Hierome of Prague, (two men whereof this Country doth much boast) wrought in their hearts a desire to reform the Church. A business which they prosecuted so earnestly, that being summoned to the Council of Constance, they were there condemned for Hereticks and burnt, Anno 1414; yet had their Doctrine such deeproot in the hearts of the people, that it could never be destroyed by the Tyrannies of War or Persecution (though both were used) to this very day; multitudes of the Professors of it living in this Kingdom under the names of Califf and Sabbatargae, (as before is said) but much both strengthened and increased by the Writings of Luther, Melancthon, Calvin, and such other of the Protestant Doctors as travelled in the Work of Reformation. But this increase of strength and number proved their greatest weakening. For growing insolent upon the fence of their strength and power, they formed themselves into a party, got many of the Romish Catholics to adhere unto them, under colour of asserting their Civil Rights, and, in the heat of some disputes, caused certain of the Emperor's Council to be thrown out of the Windows of the Council-chamber; and finally about the latter end of the Reign and Empire of Matthias, they broke out in open Arms. In the course whereof the Calvinians being of most power, and having got a King of their own Opinions, so disobliged the Lutherans and more moderate Papists, who had concurred with them at the first, that being invaded on the one side with a Lutheran Army, under the command of the Duke of Saxony, and a Papish Army on the other by the Duke of Bavaria, they were in fine utterly suppressed and made inconsiderable: the conquering and successful Emperor (Ferdinand the 2.) taking this occasion to extirpate this Protestant Religion out of his Dominions.

Places of most importance in it are, 1. Budweis, (conceived to be the Marobudum of Ptolomy) a Town towards Austria. 2. Aust, near the head of the Eld. 3. Tabor, a strong Town built by Zisca, to be a Retreat for the Hussites. 4. Jaromir, and 5. Melnick, both upon the Elb. 6. Littomissel, an Episcopal See, bordering on Moravia. 7. Pilsen, the last Town of this Kingdom which yielded to the prevailing Imperialists in the late long War about that Crown: and then also was it betrayed to Count Tilly for a sum of money, by some of the Soldiers of Count Mansfield, who was then absent, and had so long defended it against the Enemy. 8. Elnbogen, much esteemed for the hot medicinal Baths; situate on the River Egra. 9. Egra, so called of the same River, on which (near to the borders of the Upper Palatinate) it is strongly situate: a large, fair City, containing three miles in compass. Imperial once, but sold by the Emperor Ludovicus Bavarus to John King of Bohemia, for 400000 marks of Silver: in compass less; for Sweetness of the place, Elegancy of the building, Pleasantness of site, and Richness of Soil, superiour far to Prague it self. This City was made an Imperial City in the year 1179, and sold in the year 1315. In the Swedish War it was often taken, and retaken, and in its Castle Count Wallstein, Duke of Fridland was Assassinated. 10. Prague; the Metropolis of the Kingdom, situate in the midst thereof, on the River Muldam; consisting of four several Towns, each of which hath its several Customs, Laws, and Magistrates. The principal is called the Old Town, adorned with many goodly Buildings, a spacious Market-place, and a stately Council-house. The second, called the New-Town, is separated from the Old by a Ditch of great depth and wideness. The third, called the Little-Town, is divided from the Old by the River Muldam, joyned to it by a beautiful Bridge, consisting of 24 Arches. And in this part thereof is the Hill Rachine, on the sides of which are many fair and stately Houses belonging to the Nobility, overlooked by the strong Castle of Wenceslaus, (situate on the top thereof) a magnificent Palace, wherein the Bohemian Kings and the later Emperors have kept their Residence. The 4th. Town is that of the Jews, who have here five Synagogues, and live according to their own Law. The whole City is rather large than fair, the Streets being in Winter very dirty, of ill smell in the Summer; the Buildings for the most part of Clay and Timber clapt up together without Art, and of little beauty. And though encompassed with Walls and Ditches, it is conceived to be but an open Town, (to poor and weak are the Defenses ; infomuch that whofoever is master of the Field, will be master of the City also. And yet besides the honour of being the Royal Seat, it hath also of long time been an Archbishop's See, and was by Charles the fourth, Emperor and King of Bohemia, made an University. Near unto this Town was fought that memorable Battel between the Duke of Bavaria and Count Bucquoy, Lieutenant for the Emperor Ferdinand the second, with 50000 men, on the one side ; and Frederick, newly elected King of Bohemia, with the Prince of Anhalt, the Count of Thurn, and 30000 men on the other side. It was fought on the eight of November stylo novo, 1620, wherein (such was the unsearchable Will of God) the Victory fell unto the Imperialists : the young Prince of Anhalt, Thurn, and Sax-Weimer, with divers others, being taken Prisoners ; the Bohemian Ordnance all surpris'd, Prague forced to yield unto the Victor, and King Frederick with the Queen compelled to fly unto Silesia. A most lamentable and unfortunate Loss, not to this people only, but to the whole cause of the reformed Religion. Yet it is not unworthy of our observation, that this great Battle was fought upon a Sunday, the 8. of November, about the time of Morning-prayer ; in the Gospel appointed for which day (being then the 23. after Trinity-Sunday) is that famous passage, Reddite CÆSARI, quæ sunt CÆSARIS, i. e. Render unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsars ; which seemed to Judge the Quarrel on the Emperor's side. Dr. Brown, in his Travels, has given a large Account of this City. The Swedes soon after revenged the Quarrel of the Protestants upon the Imperialists, and during that War, took and retook this City several times. In the year 1689, a great part of this City, was burnt by French Treachery, as is vehemently suspected.

But whether of the two Pretendents had the juster Cause, may best be seen by canvassing the Records of that State and Nation, (for the success of War is no standing Rule for measuring the Equity and Justness of the Causes of it : by which it will be clearly seen, that since the erecting of that Kingdom by the Slaves or Croats, it hath been evermore disposed at the Will of the Emperor, or by Election of the States and People. But I intend not at present to dispute that Point, but only lay down the Story of the Kings and People, as in other places, since the first coming of the Slavi. A Nation not known by that name till the time of Justinian, at what time they inhabited on the banks of the Ister, but on the farther side thereof, opposite to Illyricum and Thrace, Imperial Provinces. Grown famous by their good Successes against that Empire, their name was taken up by the rest of the Sarmatians of Europe ; who either wanting room, or not liking their colder Countries, passed on more Westward, and by degrees possessed themselves of those parts of Germany which formerly had been inhabited by the Almans, Burgundians and Boiarians ; but were then either quite forsaken, or but ill inhabited, by the drawing down of those people to the Roman Provinces, which they better liked. They were divided at, or after their coming thus far West, into four main Bodies : that is to say, the Winithi, possessed of the (now) Marquisates of Brandenburg, Misnia, and Lusatia, as also of the Dukedoms of Mecklenburg and Pomerania ; the Moravians, inhabiting in Moravia, the Lower Austria, and the Upper Hungary ; the Poles possessed of Poland, and the Dukedom of Silesia : and finally the Bohemian Slaves confined within the limits of that Kingdom only. Under what form of Government they lived at their first coming hither, is not certainly known. But being settled in these Countries of Poland and Bohemia, it was not long before they were erected into several Kingdoms ; occasioned by the coming of a new body of Slaves, Croats, and others of those scattered Nations, under the conduct of Zechius, a great Prince amongst them, who about the year 640, together with his Brother Leches was banished Croatia for a Murther. He being very acceptable to the Slaves of Bohemia, who looked upon him as a Prince of their own original Extraction, one of the same Language, Laws or Customs that themselves were of, they admitted him to be their Chief or supreme Governour, by whatsoever name he was called at first : in honour and memory of whom, the Bohemians in their own Language do call themselves Zechians. After his death, the State relapsed again into a confused Anarchy, till the year 670 ; at what time, not respecting the Progeny of Zechus, the Founder of their Commonwealth and first Estate, they fastned upon Crocus, a man of good esteem amongst them, and elected him to be their Duke. Crocus vir justus, & magna apud Bohemos opinionis, Princeps electus est, as Bertholdus telleth us. Crocus being dead, the Bohemians elected Libussa, his youngest Daughter ; and of her Government soon wearied, they made choice of Primislaus for their Prince, and made him Husband to Libussa. A man taken from the Plough (as the Stories tells us) to espouse the Princess : it being ordered and agreed on by her many Suitors, that he (whosoever he was) before whom an Horse, purposely let loose, did first make a stand, should be the Husband of the Lady, and have the Government of the State. The Horse first makes a stand before Primislaus, being then at Plough (having perhaps some Mare in his Team ;) and he accordingly is received and admitted their Prince. These, with the other Dukes from the time of Crocus, the first Legislator of the Bohemians, take in order thus,

The Dukes of BOHEMIA.

- 640 1. Zechius or Zeches.
2. Crocus, the Law-giver, or Lycurgus of Bohemia.
3. Libussa, youngest Daughter to Crocus, with Primislaus her Husband, (a second Quinctius) Founder of Prague.
4. Nerimislaus, Son of Primislaus and Libussa.
5. Mnatha, one of the Sons of Nerimislaus, contemporary with Charles the Great.
6. Voricus, Son of Mnatha.
7. Wenceslaus.
8. Bela.
9. Nastricus, Son of Bela.
- 900 10. Borzivoius, The first Christian Prince of the Bohemians, co-temporary with the Emperor Arnulph.
11. Sbitigneus, Son to Borzivoius.
12. Vladislaus, Brother to Sbitigneus.
13. Wenceslaus II. surnamed the Saint, slain by his Brother Boleslaus.
14. Boleslaus, a wicked and ungodly Prince.
15. Boleslaus II. Son of the former, a great advancer of Christianity amongst his people.
16. Boleslaus III. one of the Sons of Boleslaus the second.
17. Jaromir, Son to Boleslaus the third.
18. Udalricus, Brother of Boleslaus the third, and Uncle of Jaromir.
19. Predislaus, Son to Udalricus.
20. Sbitigneus II. Son to Predislaus.
1061. 21. Vratislav, Brother of Sbitigneus, whom, for his manifold deserts, the Emperor Henry the Fourth, created the first King of Bohemia, Anno 1086. Whose Successors take thus out of Bertholdus and Dubravins.

The Kings and Dukes of BOHEMIA.

- A. C. 1086 1. Vratislav, the Brother of Sbitigneus, Duke of Bohemia, was by Henry the 4th at Alentz created King.
2. Conrade,

2. Conrade, Brother to Vratislav, notwithstanding that his Brother had three Sons, was elected Duke of Bohemia.
3. Brecislav, Son to Vratislav, the two Sons of Conrade being rejected, is by the Bohemians chosen Duke.
- 1100 4. Borivorus, the 4th Son of Brecislav, is chosen by the Bohemians, his eldest Brothers then all living.
- 1109 5. Sutopulcus, Cousin-german to Borivorus, by the consent and favour of the People, depos'd Borivorus, and caused himself to be elected in his place.
6. Vladislav II. Brother to Borivorus, preferred by the People to the Throne before Otho the Brother, and Henry the Son of Sutopulcus, the last Prince.
- 1159 7. Sobeslav, Brother to Vladislav, promoted to the State before the Son of Vladislav.
8. Vladislav III. Son to Vladislav the 2d. (the four Sons of Sobeslav omitted) is chosen and crowned the second King of Bohemia by Frederick the Emperor; but deposed by the States, because he was not by them formerly elected, according to their Privileges and Customs.
9. Uldericus, the third Son of Sobeslav, his elder Brethren yet living, was by the People elected in the room of Vladislav and his Son Frederick, whom the Emperor Frederick had by force established in the Throne.
10. Sobeslav II. second Son of Sobeslav, was by Frederick above-named expelled; and he also by the Bohemians.
11. Conrade, Grandchild to Otho, the Brother of Sutopulcus, elected by the Bohemians in place of Frederick; between which two Princes there was continual War.
12. Wenceslav, Uncle unto Conrade, and Son of Otho afore said, was preferred before many nearer the Succession. Him Primislav expelled, but fearing his return, quitted Prague.
13. Henry, Bishop of Prague, a stranger to the Blood, was by a general consent elected Duke.
14. Vladislav IV. Brother to Primislav, the Son of Wenceslav being put by, succeeded Henry, and soon after resigned.
- 1199 15. Primislav, elected by the Bohemians, and by the Emperor Philip crowned the third King of Bohemia at Asentz, was Brother to Vladislav the 4th.
- 1248 16. Ottacarus, notwithstanding that Wenceslav his elder Brother had been crowned in his Father's life-time, was acknowledged King. He was slain in Battel by Rodolphus the Emperor near the Marb, a River of Moravia.
- 1278 17. Wenceslav II. Son of Ottacarus.
- 1284 18. Wenceslav III. Son to Wenceslav the second, the last of the Bohemian Princes of the masculine Race.
- 1304 19. Rodolphus, Son to the Emperor Albertus, is by the Potency of his Father, and the election of the States, seated on the Throne, being otherwise a stranger to the Blood-royal of Bohemia.
- 1305 20. Henry, Duke of Carinthia, the Son of Meinard, Earl of Tyrol, and Husband to Anne, the second Daughter of Wenceslav the 2d. is chosen by the Bohemians: but being weary of his Government, they elect John Earl of Luxemburg. Finally, Henry was murdered by one of his Nephews.
- 1311 21. John, Earl of Luxemburg, Son to Henry the seventh Emperor, and Husband to Elizabeth, youngest Daughter to Wenceslav the second, is elected, the Lady Anne yet living.
- 1346 22. Charles, Son to John, and Emperor, of that name the fourth, the Author of the Golden Bull.
- 1362 23. Wenceslav IV. Emperor also, in whose time the Troubles of the Hussites and the Valour of Zisca was famous.
- 1418 24. Sigismund, Brother to Wenceslav, maketh himself King by force; and at his death commendeth Albertus, Duke of Austria, the Husband of his Daughter Elizabeth, unto the States of the Kingdom.
- 1437 25. Albertus, Duke of Austria, elected upon the commendation of Sigismund by the Bohemian Lords.
- 1440 26. Ladislav, Son to Albert, who being the Brother of two Sisters, commended yet one George Pogibrachius unto the States, as fittest to succeed him.
- 1458 27. George Pogibrachius, neither by Affinity or Consanguinity of the Blood, succeeded. And he, though he had three Sons, yet, for the benefit of his Country, advised the Nobles, after his Death to elect their King from Poland.
- 1471 28. Ladislav II. Son to Casimir King of Poland, and to Elizabeth the younger Daughter of Albertus Duke of Austria, the Issue of Anne the eldest Sister still living, elected King of Bohemia.
- 1516 29. Ludovicus, Son to Ladislav, Elected and Crowned by the means of his Father, then living, King of Hungary also.
- 1526 30. Ferdinand, Archduke of Austria, Brother to Charles the 5th, and Husband to Anne, Sister to Ludovicus, by his Letters reverſal acknowledged that he was chosen King of Bohemia not of any Right, but of meer free Will according to the Liberties of that Kingdom.
- 1565 31. Maximilian, eldest Son of Ferdinand, was in his Father's life-time, and at his suit, Elected King, anno 1540. into which he actually succeeded on his Father's death.
- 1575 32. Rodolphus, Emperor of Germany, and the eldest Son to Maximilian, elected King.
- 1610 33. Matthias, Brother of Rodolphus, was at the joint suit of them both nominated and appointed King of Bohemia, by the general consent of the States, during his Brother's life-time, viz. anno 1610. which nomination they both protest in their Letters reverſal should not be to the prejudice of the Liberties and ancient Customs of that Kingdom.
- 1618 34. Ferdinand II. Archduke of Austria and of the House of Gretz, was by Matthias adopted for his Son, and declared Successor to the Crown of Bohemia, but never formally and legally elected: for which cause, amongst others, he was by the States rejected, in like case as Vladislav the Third had formerly been.
- 1619 35. Frederick, Elector Palatine, the strongest German Prince of the Calvinists, and most potent by his great Alliances, was elected King of Bohemia, and Crowned at Prague, together with his Wife, on the fifth day of November. This Prince derived his descent from the Lady Sophia, Sister to Ladislav the second, King of Poland and Bohemia; and married Elizabeth, Daughter to James King of Great Britain and Anne of Denmark, which Anne descended from the Lady Anne, Daughter of Albertus of Austria, and elder Sister to Elizabeth, Mother to Ladislav the 2d. above-named, from whom the Claim of Austria is derived.

1621 36. Ferdinand III. Son of Ferdinand the second, elected King of Bohemia during the Life both of his Father and of Frederick the Prince Elector also; after whose death he succeeded in this Kingdom both in Right and Fact; King of Hungary, also Archduke of Austria, and Emperor of Germany, now living, anno 1648. more moderate in his Counsels than his Father Ferdinand, and more inclinable to Peace, (though honoured with a more signal Victory against the Sweeds in the Battel of Norlingen, than his Father was in all his Life) which the Conclusions made at Munster are sufficient proof of.

1658 37. Leopold, elected King of Bohemia after the Death of Ferdinand the third his Father, and at this day living, and the Victorious Emperor of Germany.

Of the Revenues, Arms, and other things which concern this Kingdom, we shall speak hereafter, when we have took a view of the rest of the Provinces which are incorporated into it.

2. MORAVIA is bounded on the East with Hungary, on the West with Bohemia, on the North with Silesia, and on the South with the Lower Austria and the River Teya: fenced on the West with the Woods and Mountains of Bohemia; part of the Hercynian Forest; on the North by some Spurs or Branches of it, called Arciburgius by Ptolomy; on the two other sides open like an Half-Moon or Semicircle. It is the most fruitful place of Corn in all Germany, and hath no small store of Frankincense; which contrary to the nature of it, groweth not on a Tree, but out of the Earth; and that too (which adds much to the Miracle, if Dubravius do report it rightly) in the shape and figure of those Parts which Men and Women do most endeavour to conceal.

The former Inhabitants of the Province were the Marcomanni and part of the Quadi, against whom when M. Antoninus the Emperor made War, he had unawares run himself into such a Streight, that his Army was environed with Mountains one way, and Enemies the other. To this (as Calamities seldom go alone) was added the extraordinary Heat and Drought then being. The Emperor thus put to his plunges, came the Captain of his Guard, telling him, that he had in his Army a Legion of Christians (Melicens he calleth them) which by Prayer to their own God could obtain any thing. The Emperor sendeth for them, desiring them to make Supplication for the Army: which they did, and God Almighty that never turneth a deaf Ear to the Prayer of his Servants, when they are either for his Glory, the Churches or their own good, scattered and vanquish'd the Quadi with Thunder-shot and Artillery from Heaven, and refresh'd the faint and dying Romans with many a gentle and pleasant Shower. This Miracle purchased to that Legion the surname of καταβολαί, i. e. the Thunderer, and induced the Emperor to honour Men of that holy Profession, and to make an end of the fourth Persecution, Anno Ch. 174. Thus Xiphilinus hath it in his Dion: which coming from the Pen of an Heathen, as this Author was, is of more credit in a matter of such concernment unto Christianity, than if it had proceeded from Socrates, Sozomen, or any other Ecclesiastical Writer.

Places of most note herein are, 1. Olmuntz, on the River Marb (or Morava) the chief Town of the Country, and a small University; near which, out of the Hill Odenburg bordering on Silesia, springeth the great River of Odera, whose course we have before described. This City was taken by the Sweeds in 1642, and kept by them till the Peace of Munster in 1648. 2. Brin, on the River Swarta, the Seat of the ancient Marquesses. 3. Hardisch, and 4. Cremser, both upon the Marb or Morava. 5. Znaim, on the Teya. 6. Niclasberg, (Mons Nicolai in the Latine) bordering on the Lower Austria. In this City, this very Year 1688, 250000 Crowns was stop'd by the Emperor, which at length was own'd to be a present from the King of France, to the King and Queen of Poland, and the Count de Bethune his Envoy there. 7. Iglaw. 8. Newburg. 9. Weiskirchen. 10. Boswilcz, of which little memorable. 11. Cradisco, near to which (and in this place only) the Frankincense is found to grow in the shape and form before mentioned.

The old Inhabitants hereof (as before is said) were the Marcomanni and the Quadi: after them that Tribe or Nation of the Slaves, who, from their habitation on the River Morava, called themselves Moravians, and the Country which they dwelt in by the name of Moravia, (the Dutch call it Merherer) They were extended at that time over all the Lower Austria, to the banks of the Danow on the South, and as far as to the River Tibiscus (overspreading a great part of the Upper Hungary) towards the East. Governed at the first by their own Kings, the first whose name occurs being Rastai, in the time of the Emperor Lewis the Godly; by him taken Prisoner, and his Realm made tributary to the Empire. After him succeeded Harmodurus, and then Suentopulcus; in whose time the Moravians and other Nation of the Slaves received the Gospel by the preaching of Cybil and Methodius, two Gracian Doctors; officiating all Divine Services in the Slavonian or vulgar Language. For which when they made suit to the Pope then being, to whose Authority (as Patriarch of the Western Empire) they were made obnoxious, and that the Pope and Cardinals delay'd the business; a voice was heard, as if it had come from Heaven, saying these words, Omnis Spiritus laudet Dominum, & omnis Lingua confiteatur ei. Upon which Miracle their Suit was granted at the last, and a Letter Decretal sent unto that effect from Pope John the 8th, to Suentopulcus (or Sfentopulcher, as some call him) above mentioned. A Privilege by them enjoyed full 200 Years, and then reversed by Gregory VII. commonly called Pope Hildebrand, in his Letters to Vratislav the first King of Bohemia, anno 1086.

But to return unto the Story, Suantobegius, Son to Suentopulchus, succeeded next, deposed, or rather beaten out of his Country, by the Emperor Arnulph, for denying the accustomed Tribute. A Prince of great Spirit, and of as great Command; having at one time under him not Moravia only, according to the largest Limits, but Silesia, Bohemia, and Polonia also. Arnulph not able otherwise to effect his purpose, called in the Hungarians about the year 892, (though at that time Pagans) by whose help the Moravian was subdued, and his Kingdom shattered into pieces; seized on by the Hungarians, Poles, and other Nations, and finally reduced to the present Limits. Afterwards it was made a Marquissate, (but by whom we find not;) one of the Marquesses hereof being Jodocus Barbatius, elected Emperor Anno 1410. After whose death, Sigismund, his next Heir, Emperor and King of Bohemia, gave it to his Son-in-law Albert Duke of Austria, anno 1417, who in the end succeeded him in all his Estates; since which time it hath always gone along with the Crown of Bohemia.

The Arms of the old Dukes or Princes of it were Azure, an Eagle chequer'd Or and Gules, membered and langued of the same.

3. SILESIA, (or SCHLESIE, as the Dutch call it) is bounded on the East with Poland, on the West with Lusatia, on the North with Brandenburg, and on the South with Moravia. Wholly encompassed with Mountains, except towards the North, which lets in a sharp Air upon them: the mid-land part being full of Woods, but withal of Minerals.

Chief Cities are, 1. Jagendorff, or Jagerndoff, of late the Patrimony of John Georgius, of the Family of Brandenburg, commonly called the Marquis of Jagendorff. The Lands and Estates in his possession were first given by Ladislav, King of Bohemia, to George surnamed Pius, one of the Sons of Frederick of Brandenburg, the first Marquis Marquis of Onspach of this House, for the many good services he had done him. But his Posterity being extinct, they fell to the said John Georgius, Brother to Sigismund the Elector; proscribed by Ferdinand the 2d, for adhering to the party of Frederick Prince Elector Palatine: A Prince of great note and activeness in the beginning of the late German and Bohemian Wars. He died in the year 1624, and was succeeded by Ernest his Son, who died in the year 1642 unmarried; so that this Marquisate ought to have returned to the Electoral Family again, but Ferdinand II. granted it (as Forfeit) to the Prince of Lichtenstein, who still enjoys it, notwithstanding the Pretences of the Elector of Brandenburg.

2. Munsterberg, which gives the Title of Duke to the Posterity of George Pogbrachius, once King of Bohemia, advanced by him unto this Honour and a fair Estate, but now extinct. 3. Glatz, or Gletz, the last Town of Bohemia which held out for Frederick the Elector against that Emperor. 4. Glogau, a strong Town on the River Oder. 5. Neisse, on a River so named, an Episcopal See. 6. Breslaw, in Latin, Cracovia, so called from Cracivus the Founder of it, once one of the Dukes of this Province, by whose procurement it was made an Episcopal See, Anno 970, or thereabouts. It is situate on the River Oder, all the Water wherein could not save it from being burnt down to the Ground, Anno 1341, but it was presently re-edified with a fair Free-stone, and is now one of the prettiest Cities (for the bigness of it) in all Germany; fair, populous, and well contrived with open and even Streets, the chief of the Country. 7. Oppelen, on the Oder also, well Fortified both by Art and Nature, barricadoed by the River on the West, and on the East with good Out-works, strong Walls, and a fair Castle. Bethleem Gabor, Vaivod of Transylvania, had this City and Ratibor, with the Title of a Dukedom and Prince of the Empire, given him by Ferdinand the second, in the Year 1623, in exchange for his Title to the Kingdom of Hungary, to which he was chosen and Crown'd, in the Year 1619, in opposition to the said Ferdinand; which Bethleem Gabor died in the year 1629, or as others say 1628, without Children. 8. Straten, 9. Reichenbach, both made Towns of War since the beginning of the Bohemian Troubles.

There are also within this Province the two Seignories of Prignitz and Crossen, so called from the chief Towns thereof, belonging to the Elector of Brandenburg; the two Dukedoms of Oswitz and Zator, appertaining to the Crown of Poland; as also the Dukedoms of Lignitz and Sweinitz, all of them bearing the names of their principal Towns: of which two last, Sweinitz is in the immediate possession of the Kings of Bohemia; and Lignitz hath a Duke of its own, but an Homager and Tributary of that King.

The first Inhabitants hereof were the Marsigni, Burii, Gothini, and some part of the Quadi. In the partition of the Eastern parts of Germany amongst the Slaves, it was laid unto the Dukedom or Kingdom of Poland, continuing a part thereof till the time of Vladislaus the 2d, who, being driven out of his Kingdom by his Brethren, was by the mediation of Frederick Barbarossa estated in this Country, to be held under the Sovereignty of the King of Poland. Divided betwixt his 3 Sons, and afterwards subdivided amongst their Posterities, according to the ill Custom of Germany, it became broke at last into 14 Dukedoms, of 1. Breslaw, 2. Oppelen, 3. Ratibor, 4. Cessin, 5. Bethom, 6. Glogau, 7. Sagan, 8. Olentz, 9. Steinaw, 10. Falkenburg, 11. Sweinitz, 12. Lignitz, 13. Oswitz, and 14. Zator. Of all which, only the two last do remain to Poland; the five first being made subject to the Kings of Bohemia by Wenceslaus the second, the five next by King John of Luxemburg; Lignitz remaining in the possession of a Proprietary Duke: (as before was said) and Sweinitz given to Charles the fourth, Emperor and King of Bohemia, by the Will and Testament of Boleslaus the last Duke: all Silesia by this means (except the Dukedoms of Oswitz, and Zator) being added to the Crown of Bohemia, of which it is rather an incorporate than subject Province.

Olentz, mentioned in the eighth place above, was by the Marriage of Silvius Nimrod, Son of Julius Frederick, Duke of Wirtemberg, with Mary Daughter and Heir of Charles Frederick the last Duke of Olentz and Munsterberg, was conveyed to this Family in 1646.

1664 2. Christian Ulrick his Son, born in 1652, the 9th of April, succeeded his Father Christian Ulrick; his eldest Son was born the 11th of February, 1674. and Leopold Victor, the second Son, May the 12th, 1675.

4. LOUSATIA, by the Dutch called Lausnitz, is bounded on the East with Silesia, on the West with Misnia, on the North with Brandenburg, and on the South with Bohemia. The Country is rough and full of Woods, yet plentiful enough of Corn, and of such Fruits as naturally arise out of the Earth: so populous and thick set with People, that though it be but a little Province, it is able to arm 20000 Foot as good as any in Germany. Most commonly it is divided into the Higher, and the Lower; the first confining on Bohemia, the last on Brandenburg.

Places of most note in the Higher Lausnitz are, 1. Bautzen, (Badissinum the Latins call it) the first Town attempted and taken in by the Duke of Saxony; when he took upon him the Execution of the Emperor's Bann against Frederick Elector Palatine, then newly chosen King of Bohemia. The poor Prince in the mean time was in an ill condition, the Saxon being the head of the Lutheran, and the Bavarian chief of the Popish Party, arming both against him. So jealous are both sides of the active and restless Calvinian Spirit, as to leave no means unassayed for the suppressing of it. Seated it is upon the Spire, and for the most part is the Seat of the Governor for the King of Bohemia. 2. Gorlitz, upon the River Neisse, which gave the Title of Duke to John, Brother of Sigismund, Emperor and King of Bohemia, and Father of Elizabeth, the last Dutchess of Luxemburg, before it fell into the hands of the Dukes of Burgundy. A fine neat Town, well frequented, and strongly Fortified; Founded about the year 1231, and not long after so consumed by a merciless Fire, Anno 1301. ut ne unica domus remanserit, as my Author hath it, that there was not one House left of the old Foundation. But it was presently re-built in a more beautiful form, and of more strong materials, than before it was, both publick and private Buildings very neat and elegant. 3. Zittau, on the same River, bordering on Bohemia. 4. Lawben, 5. Lubben, 6. Canitz, of which little memorable, but that together with the former they may make up those six Towns which are confederate together in a stricter League for the mutual Defence and Preservation, but under the Protection, and with the Approbation, of the Kings of Bohemia. Then in the Lower Lausatia there is, 7. Spremburg, so named from its situation on the River Spre, which runneth through the whole Country, and in ancient times was called Suevus; supposed by some (and not improbably) either to give name to the Suevians, or to take it from them; that potent Nation inhabiting originally betwixt this and the Elbe. 8. Tribel, upon the Neisse. 9. Cottbuse, upon the Spre, or Suevus, which, together with some parts of the Lower Lausatia, belongs unto the Marqueses of Brandenburg.

The first Inhabitants hereof are by some supposed (and but supposed) to be the Benones of Tacitus; in the partition of these Parts of Germany amongst the Slaves, made subject to the Winithi, or Venedi, the greatest and most spreading Nation of all these People. When and by whom first made a Marquisate, I am not able to say for certain; but sure I am, it hath been very much given to the change of Masters. It had first a Marquis of its own; Conrad the Marquis hereof, who died in the year 1156, being by the Emperor Henry the fifth made Marquis of Misnia, added it unto that Estate: and it remain'd for or some time united to it. After, being seized on by the Poles, it was sold to Frederick the 2. Marquis and Elector of Brandenburg; who, keeping Cottbus and some other Towns bordering next upon him in his own possession, surrendered the rest on Composition to George King of Bohemia, claiming it from a Grant made by Henry the 4. to Vratislav the first Bohemian King, An. 1087. A Grant on which no Possession followed, unless it were the Homage and acknowledgment of the Princes of it, holding it afterwards of that Crown as the Lord in chief.

Thus have we brought these four Provinces into the power and possession of the Kings of Bohemia, remaining still distinct in their Laws and Governments, (as several limbs of the great Body of the Slaves made up into one Estate) though joyned together in the person of one supreme Governour, who is severally admitted and acknowledged by each Province distinctly for it self, and not by any one of them in the name of the rest. Out of all which so laid together there may be raised the sum of three millions of Crowns yearly for the Kings Revenues, towards the defrayment of all Charges.

In the year 1623, Ferdinand the second, Granted this Marquisate to John George 1. Duke of Saxony, for his Service performed against the Elector Palatine. And this Grant being confirmed by the Peace of Munster, in the year 1652, the Duke of Saxony Granted the Lower Lusatia, to Christian his Son, Administrator of Merseburg in Misnia, who has several Sons to succeed him, he was living in the year 1684, and his eldest Son was of his own name, and born in the year 1653.

The Arms of this Kingdom are Mars, a Lion with a forked Tail Luna, crowned Sol. Which Arms was first given by Frederick Barbarossa to Vladislav the third, made by him King of Bohemia, in regard of the good Service he had done him at the Siege of Millain. And though Vladislav was deposed by the States of that Kingdom; because never formally and legally elected by them; yet his Successors keep those Arms to this very day.

15. BRANDENBURG.

THE Marquisate of BRANDENBURG is bounded on the East with the Kingdom of Poland, on the West with the Dukedom of Saxony, on the North with Pomerania and part of Mecklenburg, and on the South with Misnia, Lusatia and Silesia. So called from Brandenburg, the chief Town of it, and because once the Marches of the Empire against the Slaves: divided afterwards into the Old, the New, and the Middle Marches, according as they were extended farther towards Poland by little and little, as the Emperors were able to get ground of those potent people.

The Country containeth in length from East to West 60 Dutch or 240 Italian miles, and is of correspondent breadth; the whole compass making up 540 miles of the last account. Within which Tract are comprehended 55 Cities and walled Towns, 80 Towns of Trade, (Mark-Streten, or Market-Towns, as they commonly call them) 38 Castles or Mansion-houses of Noblemen, 17 Monasteries, and 10 Parks well stored with Beasts of game; the Country otherwise (considering the extent thereof) being but thinly inhabited, nor well provided of necessaries, excepting Corn, of which these North-East Countries afford very great plenty.

The Religion of this Country is for the most part according to the form and Doctrine of Luther; first introduced and authorized by Marquis Joachim the first. In which Estate it continued till the Breach betwixt George-William, the Father of the present Elector, and the Palatine of Nemburg. At which time the Palatine, having married a Daughter of Bavaria, the most potent Prince of the Popish Party, reconciled himself to the Church of Rome, the better to assure himself to the Aid of Spain: and this Elector, having married a Sister of Frederick the fifth, Prince Elector Palatine, the most Potent Prince of the Calvinians, declared himself to be of that party and Opinion, the better to assure himself to the Aid of Holland, Anno 1614. But when on the persuasion of his Wife he set out an Edict for suppressing the Lutheran Forms, and authorising the Calvinian only throughout his Dominions, (which was in the year 1615.) the people of this Marquisate rose in Arms against him: the difference being thus composed, that the Lutheran Forms only should be used in all the Churches of the Marquisate of Brandenburg, for the contentation of the people; and that the Marquis should have the exercise of his new Religion for himself, his Lady, and those of their opinion, in his private Chappels.

1. ALTE-MARK, or the OLD-MARK, so called because the ancient Marches of the Empire against the Slaves, lieth betwixt Lunenbergh and the Elb, with which it is bounded on the East. The chief Towns thereof are, 1. Tangermund, on the Elb, where it receives the River Tanagra or Angra; honoured sometimes with the Residence of Charles the fourth. 2. Steindall, the chief of these Old Marches. 3. Soltwedel divided into the Towns, the old and the new. 4. Gardeleben, fortified with the strong Castle of Eishimp. 5. Osterburg, 6. Senhusen, said by some, but falsely, to be called from the Senones, whom they would make the old inhabitants of this Country, (by all good Writers made to be originally a Gallick Nation) 7. Werb, of which little memorable.

In the MIDDLE MARCHES or UPPER-MARK, lying betwixt the Elb and the River Oder, the Towns of most note are, 1. Butzam, a Commendatory of the Temples in former times. 2. Spandam upon the Spre, a well-fortified piece. 3. Oderburg, called so from that River, on which it is situate; remarkable for a strong Castle built by Marquis Albert the second, at which all Passengers by Water are to pay their Toll. 4. Brandenburg, on the River Havel, a Bishop's See, the Seat of the Lords Marchers in former times, taking name from hence: by some said to be built by Bremus, Captain of the Gauls; more truly by one Brando, a Prince of the Franconians, Anno Ch. 140. 5. Francford (for distinction sake) named ad Oderam, on which River it is situate; the Soil about it being so plentifully stored with Corn and Wines, that it is not easie to affirm whether Bacchus or Ceres be most enamoured of it. It was made an University by Marquis Joachim, Anno 1506, and it is also a flourishing and famous Empory, though not comparable to that of the other Francford seated on the Maine. 6. Berlin the ordinary Residence, of the Marquis, situate on the River Spre, (or Suevus) which rising in Lusatia, falleth into the Albis. This City was built by Albertus Prusus, Prince of Anhalt, and first Hereditary Marquis of Brandenburg, in the year 1142. 7. Havelburg, on the River Havil, a Bishop's See, who acknowledgeth the Arch-Bishop of Magdeburg for his Metropolitan.

3. In the NEW-MARK, extended from the Oder to the Borders of Poland, and called so because last conquered, and added to the account of the German Empire. There is Custrin, a very strong and defensible Town, seated on the two Rivers Warta and Odera, fortified with great charge by John, Son of Marquis Joachim, and by him intended for his Seat. 2. Sonneberg, and 3. Landsparg, both upon the Warta. 4. Soldin in former times the chief of this Mark. 5. Berlinch, or New Berlin: and 6. Falkenburg, a strong Town, and fortified with as strong a Castle, towards Pomerania.

The first Inhabitants of this Country were the Varini and Naithones, part of the great Nations of the Suevi; and after them the Helvoldi, Wilini, Berani, and other Tribes of the Winithi, the greatest Nation of the Slaves, who possessed themselves of it. But Brandenburg being won from them by the Emperor Henry the first, An. 620. (at what time the Gospel was first preached amongst amongst them) the Country hereabouts was given by him to Sigefride Earl of Rengelheim, (eldest Son of Theodorick, the second Earl of Oldenburg) a valiant Gentleman with the Title of Marquiss or Lord Marcher, Anno 927, upon condition that he should defend those Marches (the Old Mark, as they now call it) against the Slaves. These Marquisses were at the first Officiary, at the appointment of the Emperor, and to him accountable. Sigard, the fourth from Sigefride, governing here for Otho the third, was the first Elector of these Marquisses, and Udo the second of that name, and third from Sigard, the last that held this Honour at the Emperor's pleasure; that Dignity after his decease being made hereditary in the person of Albert of Anhalt, surnamed Ursus, by the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa. Which Albert having very much enlarged his Border by the Conquest and extermination of the Slaves, caused the unpeopled Country to be planted with the new Dutch Colonies out of Holland, Zeland, Flanders, and those parts of the Netherlands. The House of this Albert being extinct in John the fourth, in was given by the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria to Lewis his Son; by Otho the Brother of that Lewis, sold for 200000 Ducats unto Charles the fourth; by Sigismund, the Son of Charles, to Jodocus Marquiss of Moravia: but afterwards being redeemed again, it was by the said Sigismund conferred on Frederick Burgrave of Nuremberg, in recompence of his faithful service in the Wars of Hungary and Bohemia. In his posterity it remaineth, but much increased in Power and Patrimony by the additions of the Dukedoms of Prussia, Cleve, Gulick and Berg, the Marquissates of Onspach and Jagerndorff, the Earldom of Marck in Westphalen, now a part of Cleveland, the Lordships of Prignitz and Crossen in Silesia, the Towns of Hoff and Culmbach in Voitland, with the County of Raphin, and the Town and Territory of Cotthuse in the Lower Lusatia, inso-much that this is now the most powerful Family in all Germany. The Marquisses hereof from Sigefride to Albert, the Son of Urse, &c. follow in this order.

The Marquisses of BRANDENBURG.

A. C.

- 627 1. Sigefride, Earl of Rengelheim, made the first Marquiss of this Border by the Emperour Henry the first.
2. Gero, by the appointment of Otho the first.
3. Bruno, Earl of Within, created Marquiss hereof by the same Emperor.
4. Hugh the Son of Bruno, by the favour of Otho the third.
5. Sigard, the Brother of Hugh, made by the the same Emperor the first Marquiss-Elector.
6. Theodorick, the Son of Sigard, outed of his Command by Mistivoin one of the Princes of the Slaves, named Obotriti.
7. Udo, Earl of Soltwedel, (the Slaves being beaten and expelled) created Marquiss and Elector by Conrade the 2.
8. Udo II. Son of Udo the first, proscribed by Henry the 4. for joynng with Rodolph Duke of Schwaben in the War against him.
9. Primislaus, King of the Obotriti, (the Ancestor of the Dukes of Mecklenburg) was advanced unto these Honours by the said Henry the 4. and held them unto his death. After which it was made hereditary by the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa, in the Person of Albert of Anhalt, the Son of Ursus.
- 1152 10. Albert of Anhalt, the first hereditary Marquiss, Father of Bernard, who was created Elector and Duke of Saxony, in the place of Henry surnamed the Lion, by the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa.
11. Otho Son of Albert.
12. Otho II. Son of Otho the 1.

13. Albert II. Brother of Otho 2.
14. John, Son of Albert the 2.
15. John II. Son of John the 1.
16. Conrade, Brother of John the 2.
17. John III. Son of Conrade.
18. Waldemar, Brother of John the 3.
19. Waldemar II. Nephew of Waldemar the 1. by his Brother Henry.
20. John IV. Brother of Waldemar the second, the last Marquiss of the House of Anhalt; the Marquissate escheating to the Empire for want of Heirs.
21. Lewis of Bavaria, created Marquiss and Elector of Brandenburg by his Father, the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria, on the said escheat.
22. Lewis II. surnamed the Roman, on the Resignation of his Brother, succeeded in the Marquissate and Electoral Dignity.
23. Otho, Brother to Lewis the first and second, who sold the Marquissate and Electoral Dignity to Charles the fourth.
24. Wenceslaus, Son of Charles the fourth, afterwards King of Bohemia, and Emperor of the Romans.
25. Sigismund, Brother of Wenceslaus, Emperor of the Romans, King of Hungary and Bohemia, Earl of Luxenburg; who sold this Marquissate to Jodocus Marquiss of Moravia, and having afterwards redeemed it, conferred the same on.
- 1417 26. Frederick, Burgrave of Nuremberg, solemnly invested herein at the Council of Constance Anno 1417, for which Investiture he paid unto the Emperor the sum of 400000 Crowns. This Prince was born in the year 1372, he was of a martial disposition, and served the Emperor in his Wars, and after this he made Wars with the Earls of Pomerania, and the Hussites.
- 1415 } 27. Frederick II. Son of Frederick the first, to whom the Emperor Frederick the 3. gave the Dukedom of Pomeran. He was born in 1413, and was the second Son, John his Elder Brother, chosing a private Life before the Cares of Government. In 1446, he refused the Kingdom of Poland, when it was offered to him, and in 1468 that of Bohemia. In 1461, he made War with the Hussites for Lusatia. In 1470, he went into Palestine and died there the next year.
- 1470 28. Albert, Brother of Frederick the 2. called the Achilles of Germany, born in the year 1455, the 2d. of August, surnamed Cicero, relinquished to Rugenslaus the 10. the possession of Pomeran; but his Successors ever since have retained the Title and kept on foot their Pretensions to it. From Frederick his second Son descended Albert the first Duke of Prussia, Frederick the first Marquiss of Onspach, George the first Marquiss Jagerndorff, and Albert called the Alcibiades of Germany, who so harassed Franconia in the days of Charles the fifth. He was born the 24th of November 1414, and was of great Authority, that the Emperor would do nothing without his advice. He confirmed the League of Succession between Hess and Saxony: He died in the year 1486, leaving John his Son, his Successor, who had now already Administred the Electorate by his appointment Ten Years, whilst he lived privately in Franconia, and considered the actions of his former Life. Frederick, another of his Sons, Founded the Family of Franconia.
- 1476 29. John, Son of Albert.

* E c c

- 1499 30. Joachim, Son of John, who founded the University of Francford, Anno 1506, and authorized the Reformation of Religion in his time begun. Born the 21th of February 1484, a Learned Prince. In the year 1509, the Hamburgers begged his Protection.
- 1535 31. Joachim II. Son of Joachim the first, was born the 9th. of January 1505. In 1539, he embraced the Reformation, which he Regulated by a Decree in the year 1545. In 1542, he was the Emperors General against the Turks, a Nation which he hated.
- 1571 32. John George, Son of Joachim the second, born the 11th of September 1525, he was a Peaceable Prince, and so afforded nothing of any great remark.
- 1598 33. Joachim Frederick, Son of John George, born the 27th of January 1546, he succeeded his Father in the Electorate in the year 1606, as Shewartus faith.
- 1608 34. John Sigismund, Son of Joachim Frederick, who had to Wife the Lady Anne, Daughter of Albert Frederick the second Duke of Prussia, and of Mary Eleanor his Wife, eldest Daughter of William the first, Duke of Cleve. He was born the 8th of November, 1552. In his time the Dukedoms of Juliers, Cleve and Monts fell vacant, for which he had various Wars. In 1614, he obtained part of Prussia from the Poles, but upon hard Terms. He died the 13th of December 1619.
- 1620 35. George-William, Son of John Sigismund and the Lady Anne, claiming in her right the Dukedoms of Cleve, Gulick and Berg, the Earldoms of Mark and Ravensburg, and the Seignior of Ravensstein; which he possessed a while, divided with his Cousin Wolfgangus Palatine of Newburg, Son of Magdalen the younger Sister of Mary-Eleanor. But falling out about their Partage, the Palatine of Newburg called in the Spaniard, and the Father of this Marquis, in behalf of his Son, called in the Confederate States of the Netherlands, to assert their Titles. After the death of Bugslaus the last Duke of Pomerania, he was to have succeeded also in that Estate, then possessed by the Swede. Of the Agreement made between them, and the great Accrument thereby following to the House of Brandenburg, we shall speak more there. This Prince was born the 3d. of November 1595, he at the first joyned with Gustavus Adolphus King of Sweden against the Emperor, but in 1639, he broke with the Swedes on the account of Pomerania. He died in Prussia in the year 1640.
- 1640 36. Frederick-William, Son of George-William, Elector of Brandenburg. Born the 6th of February 1620, was a Prince of great Prudence, Piety and Courage, and had a great share in the affairs of Germany; he succeeded his Father the 21th of November 1640, and Died the 9th of May 1688, in the 68th year of his Age, and the 49th of his Government being succeeded by
- 1688 37. Frederick William II. his eldest Son then living, who was born the 1st. of July 1657, succeeded his Father the 29th of April, 1688. His eldest Son now living, is Frederick William, who was born the 4th of August 1688.

The Territories of this Family are the greatest, as before is said, of any in Germany, but a great part thereof is very barren, and his Subjects in those parts as poor as the Country; much of his new accessions yielding little but the Titles only. So that neither in Revenue or Power he is able to keep rank with the Duke of Saxony: his ordinary Revenue hardly amounting at the utmost to 200000*l.* per annum, which is but half of the Receipts of the Duke of Saxony.

The Growth of the Family of BRANDENBURG.

Conrade Earl of Zollern, in the middle of the 12th Century, Married Anne Vohburg Heiress of the Burgund of Norimberg, and obtained the Investiture of that Honour from Frederick Barbarossa Emperor of Germany. To him succeeded Frederick I. his Son who died in 1218. Conrad 2. Frederick 2. Brother of Conrad 2. Conrad 3. Frederick 3. his Brother, John, Frederick 4. Brother of John. John 2. Frederick 5. which last was the Father of Frederick the 6th, who in the year 1415, or 1417, was made the first Elector of Brandenburg. Of these Princes Frederick the 3d. added to his Inheritance Baruth, and the Castle of Cadolzburg in the Dukedom of Meran. In 1251, he obtained of Conrad the 4th Emperor, the City of Cressen. In 1258, he purchased Uffenheim, Birnsberg, and Etinghausen. In 1261, he obtained the Prefecture of Aurach, in 1265 Munch Steinach, in 1273, Eckelsdorf, Wendelstem, Schnepfenreuth, Schniklingen. In 1280, he gained into his hands, the Prefecture of Burkburnheim and Dachsbach. 1282, Neustad am Rauhen Culm, Zenckerheim, Eilbach and Bruck. In 1285, Neustad an der Aisch. In 1290, Swernitz was bought, which belonged to the Earls of Orlamund, and about the same time this Family became Advocates of the Monastery of Heilbrun. In 1292, Conrade and Frederick Burgraves, bought Roth, Rothstall and Winsbach. About the year 1317, John Burgrave bought Pegnitz, &c. which belonged before to the King of Bohemia, and he obtained of the Marquis of Misnia, Thirsheim, and six other Mannors. In 1321, Frederick 4th. added Wohn Siedel, and in 1326, he bought Grunlach, Bruck, Hochstedt, In 1328, Stauf and Ensfeld, in 1331 Ansbach. This Prince standing by Lewis of Bavaria, against Frederick the 3d, and he took many of the Nobility of Austria Prisoners. And he dismiss'd them without Ransom, upon Condition they should hold their Estates of him and his Heirs as Fees which is still observed. In 1336, John 1. added Culembach, Plasenburg, and Himmelsron, in 1347 Weissenstadt, and the City of Craillsheim. In 1364, Frederick the 5th, added Swabach and five other places. In 1417, The Electorate of Brandenburg, which then contained the Old March, High, Middle March, and Prignitz, and by a War with Pomerania he got Uckermarch. In 1455, Frederick 2. Elector, won from George King of Bohemia, in a War, Corbus, and some other places in Lusatia. In 1472, the Dukedom of Crosnen was Mortgaged, and after sold to this Family. In 1525, Albert Master of the Teutonic Order in Prussia, had it turned into a Dukedom, dependant on the Crown of Poland, and was made the first Duke of Prussia, and the same year Zadislans King of Bohemia, gave George Gagerndorff or Karnow, a Territory in Silesia. And in 1532, he gained the Fraternal League of the Dukedoms of Opplen and Ratibor in Silesia. In 1524 Joachim 1. got into his hands the New March, which the Teutonic Knights had enjoyed many years as a Mortgage, and he annexed Rupin an Earldom to the Electorate, upon the Death of Wibman the last Earl. In 1609, John Sigismund, Elector by Marriage, got the Right of the Dukedoms of Cleves, Juliers, and Monts, and the Earldoms of Mark, and Ravensburg, which in 1666, were yielded to the Duke of Newburg, except Cleves and Mark. In 1637, Pomerania fell to this House by the Death of Bogilans, but the Swedes deprived him of a great part of it; in lieu of which, in 1648, were given to Frederick William Elector of Brandenburg, the Dukedoms of Magdeburg, the principality of Halberstad, Minden and Camin. In 1657, he obtained the full Right of Prussia from the Poles. In 1679, by the Treaty of Nimmegen, he gained from the Swedes that part of Pomerania, which lieth beyond the Oder, 1672 the Earldom Regenstein, Camin, 1684, Ernest Bogislans, Prince of Crojen Dying, all his Estates were added to the Electorate, and in 1686, Snibulj was added by a Treaty with the Emperor. This

This Family on the other hand, has suffered these diminutions. In 1427. Frederick the 6th sold the City of Norimberg. In 1535, George delivered up to Ferdinand the 1st. the Dukedoms of Oppelen and Ratibor, for 13000 Hungarian Ducats, and in 1625, John George being proscribed, lost Jagerndorff.

The Pretences of this Family to Juliers and Monts, were extinguished by a Treaty in 1666, as also that of Jagerndorf, in lieu of which they had Suibusy. There is a League of mutual Succession between this Family, and the Elector of Saxony, and the Landgrave of Hess, and Frederick the 3d. has granted to it the expectation of the Succession of the Dukedoms of Holstein, Meckeburg and the principality of Anhalt, when ever they become vacant.

The Arms hereof are Argent, an Eagle Gules, membered and beaked Or.

16. P O M E R A N I A.

PO M E R A N I A is bounded on the East with Prussia, from which it is parted by the River Weyssel, or Vistula; on the West with Mecklenburg, divided from it by the River Bartze; on the North with the Baltick Sea, extended on the Coast hereof for the space of 200 English miles; and on the South with the Marquisate of Brandenburgh. So named from the Pomortzi, or Pomerania, a Nation of the Slaves, to whose share it fell; or from the situation of it on the Sea-shore, as the word in the Slavonian doth seem to import.

The Country is for the most part plain, abundantly fruitful in Corn, carried hence to Dantzick, and transported thence to all parts of Christendom in their times of Scarcity: yielding also good store of Pasturage, and great Herds of Cattle; with plenty of Butter, Cheese, Honey, and some reasonable quantities of Flax. Populous it is, and those people of a strong Constitution, as living under a sharp and piercing Air. The whole is divided into the Continent, and the Islands: the Continent into 1. the Upper Pomeran, bordering upon Mecklenburg, extended from the Bartze to the River Oder; 2. the Lomer, reaching from the Oder to that part hereof which is now called 3. Pomerellia, betwixt it and Prussia, subject of long time to the Crown of Poland, and there we shall hear farther of it.

Chief places in the U P P E R are, 1. Bardt, at the mouth of the River Bartze, taking name from thence; a well-traded Town, and many times the Seat of the Dukes of this hithermost Pomeran. 2. Wolgast, upon the Baltick Sea, over against the Isle of Usedom, the chief of this part of Pomeran, from whence the Dukes hereof are called the Dukes of Pomeran Wolgast; the first Town taken in by Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, in his famous War for relief of Germany, Anno 1630. 3. Stralsund, a Town of great Trading and much resort, seated upon the same Sea also, opposite to the Isle of Rugen; a Town of great name in the course of the German Wars. The Emperor besieging this Town in the year 1629, Gustavus Adolphus was called in, who preserved it from the Emperor, but became Master of it himself, and by the Treaty of Munster, it was assigned to the Swedes, but in the year 1678, the Duke of Brandenburgh took and burnt it; and in 1679, it was restored by Treaty to the Swedes. 4. Gripswald, on the same Sea, betwixt Wolgast and Stralsund, made an University, anno 1456. 5. Anclam, upon the River Pone. 6. Tribbessee, situate on a Lake out of which the said River hath its course.

Then in the LOWER Pomeran there is 7. Camin, an Episcopal See, situate on the Baltick shore, over against the Isle of Wollin. 8. Colberg, a strong Town on the same shore also, at the fall of the Perfant into the Sea. 9. Coslin, the last Sea-Town of this Tract lying towards Prussia. 10. Stargard, on the Ina, more within the Land; as is also 11. Griffenberg upon the Kega, and 12. Stetin on the Oder, once a poor fisher-Town, now the Metropolis of this part of the Country; rising to this greatness (after the embracing of Christianity) by the fall of Vineta, formerly the chief Mart-Town of all these parts; the ordinary Seat of the Dukes of the Lower Po- merania, the Dukes of Pomeran-Stetin, as for distinction sake they are used to call them. Gustavus Adolphus, in the year 1630, was put in possession of this Town, by the last Duke of Pomerania, Bogislaus who dying soon after, the Swedes kept it till the year 1677, when after a sharp Siege, it was taken by the Duke of Brandenburgh, and restored by the Treaty of St. Germaine, in the year 1679 to the Swedes. The Brandenburger had before in the year 1659, attempted the recovery of this important City in Conjunction with the Imperialists, but without any success. And he got nothing now by taking it, but the Glory of the Victory, the French taking care that no body shall be the better for a War (tho' their Allies) but themselves.

The Islands hereunto pertaining are those of Rugen, Wollin, Usedom, touched upon before, but now more punctually to be handled. That of most note is Rugen, over-against Stralsund, from which it is divided only by a narrow Streight, in length seven Dutch miles, and as much in breadth; so that the Compass of it, if it were exactly round, would amount to 20 German, or 100 Italian miles; and yet it was once bigger than it is. But in the year 1309, by the force of an outrageous Tempest, a great part of it lying towards the South-east, as far as to the Isle of Ruden, (then conjunct hereto) was torn away, and sunk so deep into the bottom of the Sea, that now the greatest Ships that be sail over it. The Island is plentiful of Corn, the Granary of Stralsund, as they call it commonly; and reasonably well stored with Cattle; full of Bays, Creeks, and winding Shores, with many and vast Promontories thrusting into the Sea, which gives them great increase of Fishing. Anciently it belonged to the Crown of Denmark, till given by Waldemar the third to Bogislaus and Barnimus Dukes of Pomeran: continuing ever since part of that Estate. The chief Town of it is called Bergen, situate in the midst of the Island, but not containing above 400 Families. Others of less note and estimation being, 2. Sogart, 3. Wick, 4. Bingst, &c. small Towns compared with Villages upon the Continent, but the best they have. And yet so populous is the Island, that they are able to arm 7000 good fighting men if there be occasion. This Island was seized by Gustavus Adolphus in the year 1630, together with Stralsund, in 1678, it was conquered by the Danes, but in 1679, restored to the Swedes, tho' the Danes pretend a very ancient Right to it, it having been conquered by Christopher II. King of Denmark, in the year 1322, and after that in 1438.

The second of the three, in repute and bigness, is that of WOLLIN or VOLLINUM, situate over against Camin: so called from Wollin the chief Town, (Julicum it is called in Latine) made an Episcopal See by Wartislaus, the first Christian Prince of this Nation, which on the Sackage of this City was removed to Camin. A Town which once so flourished in Traffick, that it gave place to none but Constantinople: the Russians, Danes, Saxons, Vandals, &c. having here their particular Streets. But being miserably sacked by Waldemar King of Denmark, anno 1170. most of the Trade hereof was removed to Lubeck, since which time it never could come near its former glories.

The last in reputation is that of USEDOM, seated betwixt both, not far from Wolgast; so called from Usedom the chief Town in it, of which little observable. All three were the Habitation of the ancient Rugii, who under Odacer King of the Heruli subverted the Western Empire, conquered Italy, and made themselves Masters of it, till subdued by the Goths. Those which remained in these Islands became after subject to the Slaves, and had once Kings of their own: the first whose name occurs in Story being Criso, the Son of Ratze, a puissant Prince, extending his Dominion into Holstein, Ditmarsh, and the City of Lubeck, which he built about the year 1100, afterwards beautified and enlarged by Adolph the 2. Earl of Holstein, by some esteemed the Founder of it. But his Issue-male failing in the year 1326, it fell by Compact made between them to the Dukes of Pomeran, to whom these Islands ever since have continued subject. The two Islands of Wollin and Usedom, were subjected at the same time with Rugen to the Crown of Sweden, and are still under it, tho' Usedom was taken in the year 1676, by the Duke of Brandenburg, but it was restored by the Treaty of St. Germaine.

And as for Pomeren it self, the old Inhabitants thereof were part of the Rugii before mentioned, the Reudigni, Longi-Nani, and Longi-Diduni, with part of the Peruli and Burgundians; into whose void rooms the Pomortzi and other Tribes of the Winithi (the most potent Nation of the Slaves) did in fine succeed, extending their Dominions to the Banks of the Vistula, the parts adjoining unto which, to difference them from Pomeran, were called Pomerellia. But that part of it being given by Mestovinus, the last Prince thereof, dying without Issue, anno 1295, to Primislaus Duke of Poland; the name and power of the Princes or Dukes of Pomerania became confined within narrower Bounds than at first they had. The first Prince of it whom we meet with on good record was one Barnimus, of the noble Gryphonian Family, anno 933, whose Grandson Suantiborus commanded over all this Tract. But his Dominions being parted betwixt his Sons, Bugislaus, who had Pomerellia, retained the Language and old Customs of the Slavonians; Wartislaus, who possessed the Residue, conformed himself to the Laws and Language of the Saxons: the Country being by that means accounted for a part of Germany, and added unto the Empire an account thereof in the time of Frederick Barbarossa, by whom Bugislaus and Casimir, Sons of Wartislaus were made Princes of the Empire and Dukes of Pomeren. The Estate being afterwards divided betwixt Bugislaus and Otho, Sons of Barnimus the first, and the House of Otho failing in the person of Otho the third, that part hereof was given by the Emperor Frederick the third to Frederick the 2. Marquis and Elector of Brandenburg, the cause of much Contention amongst these Marquisses and the other House of the Dukes of Pomeren, which was thus agreed at last, That both Princes should continue the Arms and Title, the Possession of it to be yielded to the Duke of Pomeren, on the failing of whose Issue-male it should descend upon the Heirs of the House of Brandenburg. The Succession of these Princes follow in this order.

The Dukes of P O M E R A N I A.

1. Wartislaus, the first Christian Prince of the Pomeranians, baptiz'd by Otho Bishop of Ramberg, Anno 1124.
- 1128 2. Bugislaus, Son of Wartislaus, created by Frederick Barbarossa the first Duke of Pomeren.
- 1188 3. Bugislaus II. Son of Bugislaus, planted the void parts of Pomeren with Saxon Colonies.
- 1222 4. Barnimus, Son of Bugislaus the second: after whose death Pomeren was divided into two Principalities.

Dukes of W O L G A S T.

- 1277 5. Bugislaus III. Son of Barnimus
- 1319 6. Wartislaus, Son to Bugislaus.

- 1523 13. George, Son of Bugislaus the tenth.
- 1531 14. Philip, Son of George, in whose time the Reformation made by Luther was admitted into Pomerania.
- 1583 15. Bugislaus IV. but the 13th in the Dutch account, Son of Philip; his younger Brother Ernestus-Ludovicus, having that of Stetin for his share.
- 1606 16. Bugislaus V. and 14. Son of Bugislaus the 4th. born in the year 1580, succeeded in Pomeren of Wolgast; as Philip-Julius, Son of Ernestus-Ludovicus, did in that of Stetin. After whose Death Bugislaus became Lord of all Pomerania; in a fair way to have lost all to the prevailing Imperialists; had not the timely coming in of the King of Sweden stopped their violent Progress. But Bugislaus dying without Issue in the time of the War (in 1637) and in him the Male-issue of the House of Bugislaus the tenth being quite extinguished, George-William, Marquis and Elector of Brandenburg, put in his Claim for the Estate, according to the Compact and Agreement spoken of before. Betwixt whom and the Swedes (who under colour of aiding the last Duke, had possessed themselves of all the strongest places in the Country) it was accorded and concluded at the Treaty of Munster, that all the Higher Pomerania, with the Isles of Rugin and Wollin, and the Town of Stetin, should from thenceforth belong to the Crown of Sweden: Lower Pomeren to be enjoyed by the House of Brandenburg, so long as the Male-issue lasteth; on default whereof, that also to be added unto that Crown: the Arms and Titles to be used by both promiscuously. And in regard the Marquis of Brandenburg was to part with the Upper Pomeren for the Contentation of the Swedes, (without which no firm Peace could be made in Germany;) it was also there agreed upon, that the Temporal Estates of the Bishoprick of Halberstad, Minden, and Camin, together with that of Magdeberg, (after the decease of the present Bishop) should be forever added to the Possessions of that House; the Marquesses and Electors of it to be thenceforth intituled Dukes of Magdeberg, Princes of Halberstad and Minden. But what will be the issue of these Conclusions future Times must shew.

The Arms of Pomeren are a Gryphon.

17. M E C K L E N B U R G.

THE Dukedom of MECKLENBURG is bounded on the East with Pomerania, on the West with Holstein, a Province of the Kingdom of Denmark; on the North with the Baltick Sea; and on the South with Brandenburg and Saxon Lauenburg. So called from Mecklenburg, or Megalopolis; (both names in the several Languages of the Dutch and Greeks, signifying a great City, a great Town of that name here being in the time of the Heruli and the Vandals, the old Inhabitants of these Parts) whose chief City it was; but on their leaving of this Country decayed to nothing. The Country is of the same nature as Pomerania, and as rich in Corn.

Places of most importance in it are, 1. Wismar, a noted Port, on a Creek or Bay of the Baltick Sea, raised out of the Ruines of old Mecklenburg before-mentioned, about the year 1240. The Haven hereof is capable of the greatest Vessels, to which it gives a safe and assured Station, whence the name of Wismar; the word signifying, in the Slavonian Language, idem ac certum mare, (as my Author hath it) as much as a quiet or safe Sea. Now one of the Hanse-Towns, and being it lies conveniently for the use of the Swedes, allotted to that Crown by the Treaty of Munster; the Duke of Mecklenburg being in recompence thereof to have the Temporalities of the the Bishopricks of Swerin and Ratzenburg. This City in the year 1675 was taken by the Danes, and though by the Treaty in 1679 it was to have been restored to the Swedes, yet the Crown of Denmark still keeps it, as Bau-Brand faith. It became endued with the Privileges of a City in the year 1266 by Henry Duke of Mecklenburg, (it having been four Years before burnt down) to encourage the rebuilding of it. The English Fugitives under the Reign of Queen Mary were ill used here in 1554, faith Hofman. 2. Swerin, seated upon the South side of the Lake so named; an Episcopal See, and honoured with giving the Title of a Barony to the Dukes of Mecklenburg. It was taken by the Swedes in 1630, and restored to the Duke of Mecklenburg by the Treaty of Munster, in 1648. 3. Malchow, first walled by Niclot Prince of the Vandals, Anno 1270. 4. Ratzenburg, an Episcopal See, spoken of before. 5. Rostock, the next in reputation of all the Hanse-Towns to Lubeck and Danzick; large, rich, and much frequented by all sorts of Merchants; in compass almost six English Miles, situate on the River Warn, near the fall thereof into the Baltick; honour'd with a University, here Founded by John Duke of Mecklenburg, Anno 1419, the first Professors in it being brought from Exfort in Saxony. Rostock was built by one of the Dukes of Mecklenburg, in the year of Christ 329, and walled by Primislaus another of them in 1160. It was taken by Erick IV. King of Denmark, in 1286, and restored by Christopher III. in 1322, and confirm'd to Albert in 1360, by Waldemar IV. In 1573, a Sedition brought this City into the hands of its Duke, who, to keep it in order, built a Cittadel in it. In the year 1629, the Imperialists took it, and in 1631 the Swedes recovered it out of their hands; and by the Treaty of Munster it was put into its ancient State. 6. Stargard, which once gave the Title of Duke to the younger Princes of this House. 7. Sarantine, memorable for a Nunnery there Founded by Duke Magnus II. 8. Lau, built and fortified by Duke Henry II. as an Outwork to Rostock, which he had lately bought of Christopher then King of Denmark. 9. Sternberg, of which little memorable. 10. Fridland, on the edge of Pomeran, not far from Stargard, which gave the Title of Duke to Albert of Wallenstein, after that called Duke of Fridland, that eminent and prosperous Commander of the Imperial Forces in the late Wars of Germany, who was miserably murdered after all his Services by command of the Emperor. 11. Fichtel, both pleasantly and strongly seated on the edge of a Lake. 12. Damm, a strong Town on the Marches of Brandenburg.

The ancient Inhabitants of this Country were the Vandals, with the rest of the Heruli and Burgundians. But the Burgundians being reckon'd as a part of the Vandals, were not much took notice of, till their Irruptions on the Borders of the Roman Empire made them more considerable: the Princes of these Nations using no other Title than Kings of the Heruli and Vandals. Of these the first is said to be one Anthyrus, Son of an Amazonian Lady, who learn'd his first Rudiment of Warfare under Alexander the Great. Out of his Loins descended a long Race of Kings, amongst whom Rhadagnise, who together with Alarick the Goth invaded Italy, (I know not by what warrant) is accounted one. Gunderick, the 17th of these Kings, weary of so cold a Dwelling, passed towards the South; and, having harassed Gaul and Spain, shipped himself over the Streights of Gibraltar, and erected the Kingdom of the Vandals in Africk; whose Successors we shall meet with there. By Vitalaus, the youngest Son of Genfericus, the Son of Gunderick, the Line of these Princes is continued; who after mingling with the Obotriti and other of the Slaves, succeeded into the void places of the Vandals, left off the Title of Kings of the Vandals, and called themselves Kings of the Heruli and Obotriti, continuing it to Pribislaus or Primislaus the second, who wrote himself, Pribislaus, Dei gratia, Herulorum, Wagriorum, Circipianorum, Palumborum, Obotritorum, Kissinorum, Vandalarumque Rex, making herein a general Muster of those Tribes of the Slaves and Heruli which remained under his command. But he being vanquish'd by Henry surnamed the Lion, Duke of Saxony and Bavaria, the Title of King was laid aside; his Successors contenting themselves with that of Princes. The Estate was divided betwixt Henry and Niclot, the Nephews of Pribislaus by his Son Henry, into two Estates, Henry assuming to himself the Title of Prince of the Obotriti, and Niclot that of Prince of the Vandals. But the Posterity of Niclot failing in William the last of that Line, Anno 1430, his Title with the Lands thereunto belonging fell to Henry the Fat, the fourth Duke of Mecklenburg, to which Honour Albert and John, the Sons of Henry the fourth, descended from the elder House, had been advanced by the Emperor Charles the Fourth at Prague, anno 1348. The Succession of which Family from Pribislaus take in order thus:

The Princes of the HERULI, and Dukes of MECKLENBURG.

| 1158 | 1. Pribislaus , the last King and first Prince of the Heruli , after their Subjection to the Saxons , restored to this Title and his former Estate by the bountiful Conquerors, to be held under the Right and Homage of the House of Saxony . |
| 1179 | 2. Henry , Son of Pribislaus , baptised with all his People in his Father's life-time, by the persuasion of Henry Duke of Saxony and Bavaria , by whom they were restored to their Estates. |
| 1215 | 3. Henry II. Son of the former Henry , dividing the Estate with his Brother Niclot . |
| 1228 | 4. John , surnamed the Divine, so called because created Doctor of Divinity in the University of Paris , whither he was sent by his Father to learn good Arts. |
| 1260 | 5. Henry III. surnamed of Hierusalem , because of his Expedition thither against the Saracens . |
| 1302 | 6. Henry IV. surnamed the Lion, for his Valour and undaunted Constancy. |
| 1319
1329 | 7. Albert and John , the Sons of Henry , going to Prague with a Princely Train to attend on the Emperor Charles the Fourth, were by him created Princes of the Empire, and Dukes of Mecklenburg , Anno 1348. This Prince had a Son called Albert , who was chosen King of Sweden , in opposition to Margaret Queen of Denmark , by whom he was taken Prisoner in the year 1388, and kept Prisoner 7 years; he died in the year 1396. So his younger Son Magnus succeeded his Father in the Duchy. |
| 1380 | 8. Magnus , Son of Albert . |
| 1384 | 9. John , Son of Magnus , the Founder of the University of Rostock , Anno 1419. |
| 1423 | 10. Henry V. surnamed the Fat, who, on the death of William the last Prince of the Vandals , succeeded into his Estate. |
| 1477
1447 | 11. Magnus II. Son of Henry , Founder of the Cathedral Church of Rostock . |
| 1491 | 12. Albert II. Son of Magnus the second. |
| 1503 | 13. Henry the Pacifick, Son of Albert the second, succeeded his Father, and settled the Reformation in this Dukedom: He had two Sons, Magnus and Philip , but they died before him. So the Estate fell to his Brother's Son. |
| 1547 | 14. John Albert , Son of Albert the second, endowed the University of Rostock with the Lands of some dissolved Monasteries, and authorized in his Estates the Reformation of Religion begun by Luther . He died in 1576. |
| 1576 | 15. John III. Son of John Albert . |
| 1592 | 16. Adolph Frederick and John Albert , Sons of John the third, dispossessed hereof by the Emperor |

peror Ferdinand the second, anno 1628. their Estates, with the Title of Duke of Mecklenburg, being conferred on Albert of Wallenstein, Duke of Fridland, who had not long enjoyed the Title, when Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, the Assertor of the Liberties of Germany, restored it to the proper Owners, in 1631. The Heir to whose Estates is Gustavus Adolphus, the only Son and Heir of John Albert. Adolph Frederick was the Founder of the Line of Swerin, (the Family being divided into two Houses) he died in the year 1658, leaving 1658 17. Christian-Lewis, born in the year 1623, who turn-Roman Catholic in 1663, to qualifie himself for Isabel Montmorency, a French Lady of that Religion, though he had a Wife then living; but he has had no Child by either of them.

Frederick, the 10th Son of Adolph-Frederick, who was born in the year 1638, and died in the year 1688, has two Sons, Frederick-William, born March 13th, 1675. and Charles, born in 1679. Adolph-Augustus, the youngest Son of Adolph-Frederick, has also one Son called Gustavus Adolphus.

November the 8th, 1695. the Duke of Mecklenburg Gustraw died without Issue-male; thereupon the Duke of Swerin endeavoured to get the possession of this Country, but was opposed by the Duke of Strelitz, who Married the last Duke's eldest Daughter, and the Dukedom is now in the Emperor's Hands till this Controversie be determined.

As to the increase or decreasing of the Estate of the Family of Mecklingberg; In the year 1290 they possessed the Dominion of Stargard, and in 1301 the same Duke Henry the third by force of Arms subdued the City of Wismar. In 1317 they obtained of the King of Denmark the Province of Roslock. In 1355, Albert, by Marriage, gained the Dukedom of Swerin, with the City of Dornitz. In 1431, by the Failure of a Family, they had the Possession of the Principality of the Vandals of Winchlandt. In the Year 1648, in recompence of the loss of Wismar, yielded to the Swedes, they had the Bishopricks of Swerin and Ratzburg, and a Cannons place in Magdeburg and Halberstad, and two Commendatories in the Order of the Knights of St. John at Miran and Nimeran. Antonius Whielmus Schowartus Observationes Historico, Gendo Logica, pag. 325.

18. The Dukedom and Estates of S A X O N Y.

THE Dukedom and Estates of SAXONY (not reckoning those which now pass under other Names, and shall hereafter be described in their several places) are bounded on the East with Bohemia, Lusatia, and part of Brandenburg, on the West with Hassia, Brunswick, and parts of Lunenbourg and Holstein; on the North with other parts of Brandenburg, and part of Mecklenburg; and on the South with Franconia, and some parts of the Upper Palatinate.

It is (we see) an aggregate Body, consisting of two general Limbs; 1. the Dukedom of Saxony, 2. the Estates of Saxony, or Saxony properly so called: the first containing the whole Provinces of, 1. Ober-Sax, or the Upper Saxony, the proper Seat of the Duke Elector. 2. Misnia, 3. Voitland, and 4. Thuringia; the other those of, 1. Anhalt, 2. Mansfield, 3. Meydeburg, and 4. Lawenburg. And as it is an aggregate Body, so it is comprehensive of all those honorary Titles by which the Princes of Germany are distinguished from one another; that is to say, the Electorship of Saxony, the Dukedom of Lawenburg, the Bishoprick of Meydeburg, the Principality of Anhalt, the Marquisate of Misnia, the Landgravedom of Thuringia, the Earldom of Mansfield, and the Seignioury or Lordship of Voitland. Of these eight Provinces, the four first mentioned are wholly situate without the Limits and Precincts of the ancient Saxony; and yet now are, and have been called long before, the Dukedom of Saxony, because they make up the whole Patrimony and Estate of the Dukes Electors, who since the Proscription and Deprivation of Duke Henry, surnamed the Lion, Anno 1180, in some or other of these Countries have had their fixed Seat and Habitation. The four last, being parts of the ancient Saxony, and heretofore in the possession of the Dukes hereof, do still pass under the account and name of Saxony, though in the hands of several Owners; all which do acknowledge a Superiority in the Duke Elector, if not some great Relation to him and Dependance on him: so that we have an heterogeneous Body to discourse upon, and therefore must consider severally of the parts thereof, but so, that either first or last we shall find them all in the Succession and Affairs of the Dukes of Saxony. 1. then,

The Dukedom of Saxony is bounded on the East with Bohemia, Lusatia, and part of Brandenburg, on the West with Hassia, and part of the proper Saxony; on the North with the proper Saxony only; and on the South with Franconia, and the Upper Palatinate. So called, because the proper Seat and Patrimony of the Duke Elector: of very different nature both for Air and Soil, but the last especially; as we shall see by looking over the particular Provinces of, 1. Ober-Sax, 2. Misnia, or Meissen, 3. Voitland, 4. Thuringia, by the Dutch called Duringen.

1. OBER-SAX, or the Upper Saxony, is bounded on the East with the Marches of Brandenburg, on the West with Mansfield, from which it is parted by the River Sala, on the North with Meydeburg, on the South with Misnia. The reason of the name we shall see anon. The Air hereof is somewhat sharp, and piercing, the Soil sufficiently fruitful, but therein not to be compar'd with Misnia, and much less with Duringen, being both of them of a richer and more liberal nature.

Places of most importance in it are, 1. Torgaw, by some placed in Misnia, but by Mercator in this Province; built on the West side of the Elve, in form orbicular, and falling every way from the sides of a Mountain; beautified with a stately and pleasant Castle belonging to the Elector of Saxony, who is Lord hereof, built by John Frederick the Elector, Anno 1535. Near to the City is a Lake of a mile in compass, for which the Citizens pay yearly to the Duke 500 Guldens. 2. Worlitz; upon the Elve, once a Commandery of the Templars. 3. Weissenburg, lying towards Brunswick. 4. Kemburg, on the Elve. 5. Bitterfeldt, betwixt the Elve and the Mulda. And, 6. Wittenberg, on the Elve, in an open Plain, but strongly fenced with Walls, Ramparts, and deep Ditches. The chief beauty of it lieth in one fair Street, extending the whole length of the City: in the midst thereof is the Cathedral Church, a large Market-place, and the Common-Council-House. In former times it was the Seat of the Dukes Electors, till the Electoral Dignity was conferred on the House of Meissen, who, liking better their own Country, kept their Courts at Dresden, but so, that Wittenberg is still acknowledged for the head City of the Electorate; and was made an University for Divines by Duke Frederick, Anno 1508. It was called Wittenberg, as as some conjecture, from Wittikindus, once Lord of Saxony, when the extent thereof was greatest: famous for the Sepulchres of Luther and Melancthon, but chiefly for that here were the Walls of Popery first broken down, and the Reformation of Religion begun by Luther, of the wonderful Success whereof we have spoke already.

Of the Affairs of this little Country we can say but little, more than the means by which it came into the hands of the Dukes of Saxony, and consequently to the name which it still retains. Concerning which we are to know, that on the Deprivation of Duke Henry, surnam'd the Lion, whose Greatness was grown formidable even to the Emperors themselves, the Dukedom of Saxony was dismembred into many parcels; Brunswick and Lunen-burg being given unto the Children of the Duke depriv'd, the lower parts of Westphalen seized on by Philip Archbishop of Colen, the parts thereof about the Weser by the Bishop of Paderborn, Herman the Lantgrave of Thuringia laying hold of that part of this Estate which was nearest to him, Lubeck and many other of the principal Cities made Imperial, or governing themselves as Free Estates, and the Ancestors of the Princes of Anhalt and the Earls of Munsfield endowed with large Possessions also out of this great Patrimony; the Emperor not only conniving at it, but willingly consenting to that Dissipation, the better to reward and content those Princes who had assisted him in his Wars against the Duke. By which means there was nothing left of the ancient Saxony to be estated upon Bernard of Anhalt, whom Frederick Barbarossa had created Duke Elector in the room of Henry so deprived. And though Duke Bernard for his many good Services to the Empire had been before gratified with the City of Wittenberg by Conrade the third, and had conquered from Duke Henry the whole Country of Lauenburg; yet all being found too little to maintain the Port of a Duke Elector, it pleased the Emperor Frederick to bestow upon him all those Lands and Territories which lay between the Sala and the Elve, on the North of Misnia, to make Wittenberg the Electoral City, and give unto the Country thus united to it the name of Ober-Sax or Upper-Saxony, which it continueth to this day.

2. MISNIA, or Meissen, is bounded on the East with Insatun, on the West with Duringen, on the North with Saxony specially so called, and some part of Brandenburg, on the South with Voitland and some part of Bohemia. The Country was once overspread with Woods, and full of Bogs, rendring the Air unwholesom, and the Soil unprofitable; both rectified by the care and industry of the People; now yielding some Mines of Silver, and great plenty both of Corn and Pasturage; well watered with the Rivers Sala, Plesse, Elster, and Mulda.

Places of most observation in it are, 1. Dresden, seated on the Albis, having continually on her Walls and Bulwarks 150 Pieces of Ordnance; in it a Stable of the Duke's, in which are 128 Horses of service, and a Magazine, out of which 30000 Horse and Foot may be armed at a day's warning. The Town it self is situate on both sides of the River, by which it is divided into the Old Town and the New, joined into one by a Bridge of 800 paces in length. The Country round about it is very rich and pleasant, able to sustain great multitudes. For that cause it was made the ordinary Seat of the Dukes of Saxony, who have here a strong and stately Castle. 2. Naumburg, 3. Mersburg, both seated on the River Sala, two Episcopal Sees. 4. Leipzig, as famous an University for Philosophers as Jene in Lorraine is for Physicians. It was Founded by Frederick the first before he was Duke of Saxony or Elector, in the year 1409. It seemeth the Scholars and Citizens will not suffer their Beer to Perish, of which here is so much drunk and exported, that the very Custom of it due unto the Duke amounteth to 20000 pounds yearly; yet is this Town of no more than two Churches; but wealthy, populous, and built for the most part of fair Free-stone, and honoured with the Courts of Justice for all the Country. Though seated on the meeting of Fleffe, Purde, and Elster, three Rivers which lie almost on all sides of it; yet it is not strong, having been thrice taken by the Imperialists in less than two years during the late German Wars. Sufficiently famous (if for nothing else) for the great Battel fought near it between the late K. of Sweden and the Count of Tilly: the Honour whereof falling to the Swedes and Saxons (with the death of 15000 on both sides, and the loss of all the Baggage, Arms and Ammunition of the Imperialists) freed all these parts of Germany from that civil and spiritual Bondage which was intended by the Emperor to be put upon them. In the year 1642, this City was taken by the Swedes, after a second Victory gain'd over the Imperialists under its Walls. 5. Mulberg, on the Elve, where John-Frederick the Elector was discomfited and taken Prisoner by Charles the fifth, and by him deprived not long after of his Estate and Dignity. 6. Meissen, on the West side of the same River, in a hilly and uneven Ground, built by the Emperor Henry the first, for defence of the Empire against the Slaves: a Bishop's See, and the first Seat of the Marquesses of this Country, both which, together with the Burgrave of the Town, had their Palaces or Mansion-Houses standing close together on the top of a Hill overlooking both the Town and Country. From this Town the whole Province had the name of Meissen. 7. Friberg, near the Mountains of Bohemia, rich in Mines of Silver. 8. Roslitz, not far from which are rich Mines of Tin, discovered first in these parts by a Cornish-Man spoken of before.

The first Inhabitants hereof were the Hermundur and Suardones, subdued or outed by the Sorabi, a great Tribe of the Slaves surnamed Winithi: first conquered by the Emperor Henry the first, who built the strong Town of Meissen to keep them under, and to impede the neighbouring Slaves from any Incroachments on the Empire. Being thus added to the Empire and account of Germany, it was a while governed by such Officers as by the Emperors were appointed to guard these Marches: the first proprietary Marquis being one Echard, Son of the Earl of Oostland (descended from a younger Son of Wittikind, the last King of the Saxons) by the munificence of Otho the third: not made Hereditary till the time of Henry the 5th, who gave it in Fee to Conrade, Marquis of Landsperg and Insatia, whose Nephew Theodorick by his Son Otho, surnamed the Rich, married Judith, Daughter of Herman Lantgrave of Duringen; by which match Duringen accrued to the House of Meissen, Henry their Son succeeding in both Estates. To this Henry succeeded Albert his Son, and after him successively four Fredericks; the last whereof, on the failure of the House of Anhalt, was by the Emperor Sigismund created Elector and Duke of Saxony, either because descended from the House of Wittikindus, or, as most able to pay for the Investiture, or else best able to sustain the Estate and Dignity of a Duke Elector, which had but weakly been supported by the former Family. In his Posterity these Honours and Estates do as yet continue; but neither all nor always in the possession of the Dukes Electors. For in the Partage made between Ernestus and Albert, the Sons of Frederick, (according to the ill Custom of Germany) this Country, or the greatest part of it, was assigned to Albert, succeeded in the same by George and Henry his two Sons: which Henry was Father of that Maurice, who, being settled and confirmed herein by the Duke John-Frederick, did after most unworthily take up Arms against him, supplanted him, and finally possessed himself of this whole Electorate; of which more anon.

3. VOITLAND is bound on the East with Bohemia, on the West with Frankenland, on the North with Misnia or Meissen, on the South with the Upper-Palatinate. So called, as some say, from the Wites or Vites (some of that People, who, together with the Saxons and Angles, conquer'd Britain) of whom it had the nam-of Viteland, that is to say, the Land or Country of the Vites. But being I find not that the Saxons did spread so far Eastward, I rather think that this name was given it by the Slaves, who finding it deserted, or but thinly peopled, at their coming thither, might call it by the name of Voidland; from which the alteration unto Voitland is both plain and obvious. It is the smallest Province of all Germany, and never of such repute as to have any particular Prince, as most others had; but always reckoned as an accessory to some greater Estate. Nor hath it any Town or Cities of great estimation: the chief of those which are, being 1. Olsnitz, 2. Worda, 3. Cornah, 4. Schneberg, near the Mountains called Sudeti by Ptolomy, famous for Silver-Mines. 5. Gotzberg, 6. Culmbach, and 7. Hoffe, not much remarkable, but only for the Princes of it of the House of Brandenburg, called formerly Curia Pegniama.

The ancient Inhabitants hereof were parts of the Neriterates and Danduti, succeeded to by the French and Slaves, as they severally descended Southwards into warmer Countries. Possessed and planted by the Slaves it obtained this name. But being a small Nation and a small Estate, it never had the honour of a particular Prince; but did most probably belong to the Lords of Meissen, upon which it bordereth, and now, in their right, to the Duke of Saxony. But so that the Duke of Saxony is not the sole Lord hereof: the Marquisses of Onspach of the House of Brandenburg possessing the Towns of Hoffe and Culmbach, and some other parts of it; the Patrimony of Joachim Ernest the late Marquiss of Onspach and Culmbach, (who died in 1625, having been made General of the Protestant League in 1610, but failing in 1620, in that affair he was suspected of a Correspondence under-hand with the Imperialists against his own party. He was succeeded by Albert his Son, who prudently managed his affairs till his Death, which happened the 22th of October 1665, John Frederick his Eldest Son succeeded him in his Honours, whose eldest Son was born the 8th of September 1675, and bears the Name of Christian Albert.

4. THURINGIA is bounded on the East with Misnia and the River Sala, on the West with Hassia, on the North with the Wood Hartz and the proper Saxony, on the South with the Mountainous Forest of Duringerwald, by it parted from Frankenland: the Forest and the Country both so called from the Thuringians, the ancient Inhabitants hereof, communicating their name to the place they dwelt in.

The Country is environed round about with woody Mountains, but within those Mountains plain and pleasant, fruitful in Corn, and very plentiful of Woods, which yield great profit to the people; not without some Mines of Gold and Silver, and rich pits of Salt; able to furnish out a Feast, but for wine only, which is the greatest want hereof. The whole length of it is not above 120 miles, and the breadth no more, yet is it so populous and well planted, that there are said to be in it 12 Earldoms, and as many Abbies, 144 Cities, and as many Market-Towns, 150 Castles, and 2000 Villages.

The principal of these are 1. Jene, on the River Sala, bordering upon Misnia, an University chiefly of Physicians, founded in the year 1555, by the Sons of John-Frederick the Elector, taken Prisoner and deprived by Charles the fifth. 2. Erfurt, on the River Gera, out of which are cut so many Channels, that every street almost hath the benefit of it. A rich populous and well-built City, accounted amongst the best of Germany, and made an University in the time of the Emperor Wenceslaus, Anno 1382. Many times burnt; but still reviving, as the Phoenix out of the Ashes, into greater glory. It was at first immediately subject to the Archbishops and Electors of Mentz, the first Founders of it, as being built by William, Son of the Emperor Orto the first, and then Archbishop of that City, of whom more anon; but having freed themselves from him, they have since governed themselves as a Free Estate, and are one of the Hanse-Towns, not subject to the Duke of Saxony as their Lord, but their Patron and good Neighbour only. In the year 1664, the French put this place into the hands of the Elector of Mentz: The Elector of Saxony having 17 of the 90 Villages. Assigned him by the Treaty of Leipsick, in 1665, to procure his consent, to this subjection of the City to that Prince. 3. Mulhusen, and 4. Northusen, two Imperial Cities, but else not observable. 5. Smalcald, famous for the League here made Anno 1530. between all the Princes and Cities which maintained the Doctrine of Luther, for defence thereof, and of one another in the pursuance of that work: by which famous Confederacy Luther not only kept his head on his shoulders, but the Religion by him reformed grew to that strength, that no force of policy could ever root it up. 6. Kula, or Hale, on the River Falza; of great resort for the exceeding quantity of Salt there made, and vended into other places, at which Town Philip, the Landgrave was treacherously taken Prisoner, as you shall hear anon. 7. Weymar, a Town which, together with the Castle of Gotha, were assigned for the Estate and maintenance of that Religious, though unfortunate Prince, John Frederick Duke of Saxony, after his Discomfiture and Imprisonment by Charles the 5. the ordinary seat of the Dukes of Saxon-Weymer, who live here in a stately and magnificent Castle made of polished stone, most artificially contrived; and beautified with Orchards, Gardens, and other pleasures, but made more pleasant by the watering of the River Ilma, upon which it standeth. 8. Gotha, upon the River Lon, said by Rathaimerus to be built by the Goths, and by them thus named. A place not long since of great importance, and fortified with a very strong Castle, called Grummernstein, that being made the Retiring-place of one Grumbachius and other seditious persons under the Protection of John Frederick, one of the Sons of the deprived Elector. It was taken after a long Siege by Augustus the Elector of Saxony, (to whom the strength of this piece being in the hands of the injured Family was a great Eye-sore) and by the command of the Estates of the Empire at the Diet at Regensburg, Anno 1567, demolished, and levelled with the ground, but is since rebuilt and call'd Freidestein.

The old Inhabitants hereof were the Chasuarii of Tacitus, and after them the Thuringi, who, with the Heruli, under the Conduct of Odoacer, conquered Italy; called by some Turcilingi, by others supposed to be the Tirangeta of Ptolomy. Not heard of in this Country till the Reign of Childerick the fourth King of the French; then taking up the whole Provinces of Hassia and Thuringia, under one Bissinius their King. Their Arms were at that time, and long after, Azure, a Lion Barrie Argent and Gules, armed and crowned Or. Being overcome at the great Battle of Zulph near Colen, where they joyned with the Almans, they were afterwards totally subdued by Theodorick the French King of Metz, their King Hermanfridus taken, and most perfidiously slain; part of their Country taken from them, and given to the Saxons (who assisted in that War against them) becoming subject for the rest to the Kings of France; but so, that for some time after they had Kings of their own, Baderick and Hermanfroy, two brothers, Kings hereof successively, being Uncles to Radegond, a Princess of great Piety, the Wife of Clotaire King of France, Anno 559. In following times it was united to the Empire by Henry the first; conferred not long after by Orto the first (the Son of Henry) on William, one of his younger Sons, then Archbishop of Mentz, which he left to his Successors in that See; governed by their Vidames and Provincial Officers, till the time of Conradus Salicus, when Ludovicus Barbatius, one of these Vidames (or Vicedomini) made himself the Proprietary of it, and left the same unto his Children after his decease. But in the time of Conrade the 2. the issue of this Ludovicus either failing or dispossessed, it was by the Emperor conferred on Lewis of Orleans, Son to a Sister of his Empress, the Title of Lantgrave being given to them of this Family for their greater Honour. Under eight Princes of this Line, whereof five successively had the name of Lewis, this Estate continued: next falling to Herman, a brother of the fifth Lewis, who by contributing to the Ruine of Henry Duke of Saxony, surnamed the Lion, in favour of Frederick Barbarossa, had for his share (in the dividing of the Spoil) those parts of his Estates which lay nearest to him, called then the Palatinate of Saxony; recovered for the most part afterward by the Dukes of Brunswick, the right Heirs of Henry. He being dead, this Country fell to a sixth Lewis, and last of all to Henry the brother of that Lewis, in whom the Male-issue failed, having continued for the space of 252 years. To please all parties interested in the Succession, the Estate, before entire, was divided into two Parts or Provinces: of which this now called Duringen, or Thuringia, was allotted to Henry Marquis of Misnia, Son of Judith, the Daughter of Herman: the Western part thereof, with the Title of the Lantgravedom of Hessen, adjudged to Henry Duke of Brabant, in right of Sophia his Wife, Daughter of Lewis the 6th: in the description of which Countries we shall hear more of them. United thus to the House of Meissen in the person of Henry the then Marquis, Anno 1263, it flourished in long Peace and Happiness under the Princes of that House. Finally, it much increased both in Power and Dignity by the addition of Ober-Sax and the Electorship of Saxony, conferred on Frederick the Fourth, Marquis and Lantgrave of these Countries, anno 1423; in which Estate it still continueth, the fourth and fairest of all these Provinces which now make up the Dukedom of Saxony, (as for the reasons above mentioned it hath long been called) though none of them, nor any part or parcel of them, within the Bounds and Limits of the ancient Saxony, as before was said.

2. SAXONY properly so called, or the proper SAXONY, is bounded on the South with Duringen and the great Wood Hartz, part of the old Hercynian Forest, and from thence so named; on the East with part of Misnia, Ober-Sax, and the Marches of Brandenburg; upon the North with the Dukedom of Mecklenberg; and on the West with those of Brunswick, Lunenburg, and part of Holstein. So called from the Saxons, once the Lords hereof, (of whom more anon) and the sole part of all their great and many Conquests which retains their name.

The Air hereof is somewhat sharp, but healthy; the Soil in the South-west parts hilly and uneven, chiefly rich in Minerals, elsewhere sufficiently fruitful. It is divided into Four Estates; that is to say, 1. the Principality of Anhalt, 2. the Earldom of Mansfield, 3. the Bishoprick of Meydeburg, 4. the Dukedom of Lauenberg.

1. The Principate of ANHALT is bounded on the South with Duringen and the Wood called Hartz, on the West and North with the County of Mansfield, on the East with Misnia; much shaded, if not too much overgrown with Woods, part of the Hartz, or old Hercynian Forest, whence it had the name; Holt in the Dutch signifying a Wood or Forest; and the Princes of this House being created to this Dignity by the Style of Principes Hercynie in Anhalt. Chief Towns of it are, 1. Bernburg, the Dynastie and usual Title of this house before they were created Princes of Anhalt. 2. Ballenstedt, part of the ancient Patrimony of the first Princes hereof. 3. Deßau, the birth-place of some, and the burial-place of others, of this Family; beautified with a strong Castle, built by Prince Albert the 2. Anno 1341. 4. Storvest, the usual place of the Prince's Residence. 5. Coeten, a well fortified place, in vain besieged by the joint-Forces of the Archbishop of Meydeburg, and the Earl of Swartzenland. 6. Candt. Here sometimes also stood the old Castle of Ascant, the first seat of these Princes, but long since destroyed, now only to be visited in Records and Histories.

We shall be sent no higher than the first besieging of the Roman Capitol by the ancient Gauls, to find out the Pedigree and Descent of the Earls of Lippe; but we must go as high as the Ark for the Princes of Anhalt; some fetching them from Azkenaz, the Son of Gomer, and Nephew of Japhet, from whom, and no other, this Ascanian Family (for by that name it is called) are to fetch their Pedigree. But to content our selves with more sober thoughts, we are to know, that when Theodorick King of Metz undertook the Conquest of the Thuringians, he was therein aided by the Saxons with 9000 men; under the conduct of one Bernwald, or Bernthobald, a man of great power and rank amongst them. The Saxons were recompenced for that service with such parts of the conquered Country as lay nearest to them, and Bernthobald himself rewarded with the Towns of Ascant, Ballenstedt, and the Lands adjoining, Anno 524, to be holden by them under the Sovereignty of the French. From which Town and the Castle of Ascant, afterwards razed to the ground by Peppin King of the French, (for denying the accustomed Tributes) Anno 747, most probable it is that the name of the Ascanian Family was assumed by them. So that we may behold it as a Family of as great antiquity as the most in Europe, little inferior to any of the greatest Monarchs. His Successors were for the most part busied in Wars against their neighbours of Misnia; but rather upon hope of Spoil and plunder, than in way of Conquest; their Power and Patrimony being very little improved till the time of Albert surnamed Ortus, descended by a long succession of Princes from Bernwald or Bernthobald, before remembred. This Albert having done many signal services unto Conrade the 3. and his Son Frederick Barbarossa, (especially in taking the Cities of Breme and Lunenburg) was by the last created Marquis and Elector of Brandenburg, Anno 1153, the Father of that Bernard who by the munificence and bounty of the same Emperor, was created Duke-Elector of Saxony in the room of Duke Henry surnamed the Lion, Anno 1180, becoming so the Stem of the two greatest Princes of all the Empire. Henry the 2. Son of this Bernard, was by the same Emperor not long after enriched with much of the Lands and Territories lying nearest to him, which had before belonged to Duke Henry the Lion, and created the first Prince of Anhalt, the first of all this ancient and illustrious Family which had been honoured with that Title, both Lands and Title continuing in his Race to this very day; the two Electorates of Saxony and Brandenburg being in the mean while translated unto other Families. The most considerable of which Princes, tho' all men of Eminence, were 1. Rodolph, General of the Forces of the Emperor Maximilian the first against the Venetians, whom he twice overcame in Battle. 2. George the Divine, a great Reformer of the Church by his diligent Preaching; whose Sermons and other Tractates (learned for the times he lived in) are still extant. 3. Christian, born in the year 1568, Commander of the Forces of Frederick, Prince Elector Palatine, in the Wars of Bohemia. This Family is still extant, but divided into very many branches.

The History of the Family of Anhalt, is thus set down by Showartus.

Though the Family of Anhalt, is of so great antiquity, that no Records will reach its Origen, yet was it known by the Title of the Counts of Ascania and Ballenstedt about the year of Christ 524. After which time, Albert the 6th. was made Marquis of Soltmell, by Henry the 2d, and died in the year 1005, and after this, upon the failure of the Marquisses of Brandenburg of the Family of the Earls of Staden and Ringelsheim: Albertus Ursus Marquis of Soltmell, Count of Ascania, Ballenstedt and Wolpe in the year 1142, was made Marquis of Brandenburg, who died in the year 1169, the 18th of November. By his first Wife Sophia, Daughter of the Count of Renech, he had

1. Otto, Marquis and Elector of Brandenburg, who died in the year 1198, and his Posterity failed in Waldemar II. in the year 1327.
2. Albert II. Duke and Elector of Saxony, whose Posterity was extinguished in Albert the 6th, in 1422.
3. John I. the Author of the Line of Sax-Lawemburg, whose descendent Julius Franciscus, died in the year 1688, leaving only two Daughters.
- 1189 4. Henry II. the second Son of Albertus Vrsus, was by the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa, made Prince of Anhalt, in the year 1189.
- 1257 5. Sigefred, and Bernard Sons of Henry, divided his Estates amongst themselves in the year 1288.
- 1315 6. Bernard II. Son of Bernard I.
- 1318 7. Bernard III. who in the year 1323, was invested in the Earldom of Ascania, and gained thereby the full Possession of the Principality of Anhalt, but in the year 1326, he was again deprived of this Earldom by the Bishop of Halberstad by Force. This Line failed in the year 1468, in Bernard the 6th, but there was another derived from Sigefred the Elder Brother, that has continued to our time.
- 1 1. Joachim Ernest, Son of John the 4th, was born in the year 1536, he died the 6th of December 1586.
- 1568 2. John George Dessau, born the 9th of March 1567, he embraced the Reformation.
- 1618 3. John Cassimir, born the 7th of December 1596.
- 1660 4. John George II. born in 1627, the 7th of November, he Married Henrica Catherina, and has one Son called Leopald, born the 3d. of July 1676.

The Line of Bernburg.

- 1568 1. Christian, 2d. Son of Joachim Ernest, was the Founder of this Line, he had for his share Benberg, Ballensted, Hatzgerodan and the Monastery Gernrodan, he died the 20th of April 1630.
- 1630 2. Christian II. succeeded his Father in Bernburg.
- 1656 3. Viktor Amideus, born the 6th of October, 1634, he has two Sons, Charles Frederick, born the 13th of July 1668. John George, the 14th of February 1674, and Frederick the younger Son of Christian II. had Hatzgerodan assigned him, William his Son succeeded him, but has yet no Children.

The Line of Platzrow.

- 1568 1. Augustus the 3d. Son of Joachim Ernest, had his Seat at Platzkom, and was a Prince of great worth and virtue, he died the 22th of August 1653, at the Age of 78 years.
- 1653 2. Lebrecht, born the 5th of April 1622, he died the 7th of September 1669, without any Issue.
- 1669 3. Immanuel Brother of Lebrecht, born in 1631, the 26th of October. He was a Soldier in the Isle of Candy, and returning home succeeded his Brother, and Married Ann Eleonora Countess of Stolberg, the 23d. of March 1670, and dying the same year, left her with Child.
- 1671 4. Immanuel Lebrecht born the 20th of May, after the Death of his Father, and is now the only off-spring of this House.

The Line of Servestan.

- 1568 1. Rodolph, the 5th Son of Joachim Ernest, had Servestan, Lindaw, Coswial, and Roslan.
- 1622 2. John, the Son of Rodolph.
- 1667 3. Charles William, born the 26th of October 1653, he is now living, and has these Sons, 1. John August, born the 20th of July 1677. Charles Frederick, born the 8th of July, 1678.

Albert the first of this House, was made Marquis of Brandenburg in the year 1152. In 1180, Bernard added to it the Dukedom of Saxony, and the Electorate, in 1630, Julius Henry, had by Marriage the Principality of Slackewerde in Bohemia, which by him was added to Sax-Lawemburg. In 1650, John 2d. of the Line of Servestan, had given him by the Testament of Anthony Gunther Earl of Oldenburg the Territory of Jevern.

In the year 1315, they lost the Earldom of Ascania, and the City of Ascherlaben, to the Bishop of Halberstad which in 1648, was with that Bishoprick given to the Elector of Brandenburg. In 1322, This House lost the Electorate of Brandenburg. In 1418, it lost the Upper-Saxony and that Electorate. In 1640, William Duke of Brunswick and Lunenbug, took from them the Earldom of Wolpe, they assigned Jevern to the King of Denmark, but in 1689, it was again restored to them. They have a strong pretence to the Succession of Sax-Lawemburg, upon the Death of Julius Franciscus, in the year 1689, without any Male-Issue.

2. The Earldom of MANSFELD is bounded on the East with the River Sala, parting it from Ober-Sax; on the West with the River Wieper, which divides it from Brunswick: on the North with the Bishoprick of Meydeburg, and on the South with Anhalt and part of Duringen. So called from Mansfield, once the chief Town of it, situate on the River Wieper, but now much decayed: the other Towns of note herein being 2. Isleben, more in the middle of the Country; for that cause more convenient for the seats of Justice, first settled here by Earl Voldradus, anno 1448, and by that means made the Metropolis of this Earldom: By some affirmed to have took this name from the Goddess Isis, who, after the death of her Husband, (as is said by Tacitus) visited these parts. Famous more certainly for the Birth of Luther, transplanted hence for the study of good Arts to Meydeburg, and chosen thence to be Divinity-Reader in Wirttemberg, where he hammered out that great Work of the Reformation, as before was said; born here in the year 1483, and here deceasing in the house of the Earl of Mansfield, anno 1546. 3. Wieper, (or Wipra) so called of the River on which it standeth. 4. Quernfort, the honorary Title of the Ancestors of the Earls of Mansfield. 5. Rottenberg, 6. Absted, 7. Heldernung, bought of the Earls of Holstein.

Some, who delineate the Pedigree of these Earls of Mansfield, fetching it out as high as from one Heger, one of King Arthur's Knights of the Round-Table, born at Mansfield in Nottinghamshire, who, settling himself in Germany, gave that name to his House; a military original, and very suitable to such an active and warlike Family. But those that do not soar so high, derive them from the Earls of Quernfort, men of authority in these parts; made more considerable by Lotharius Emperor and Duke of Saxony; but most of all by Frederick Barbarossa, who conferred many goodly Lordships lying hereabout (once part of the Estate of Duke Henry the Lion) on Burchard the fifth Earl thereof, a constant Follower of his, not only in his Wars against Duke Henry before named, but in those also which he managed in the Holy-Land, in the course whereof he died at Anrioch, anno 1189. His Nephew Burchard, by a Son of the same name, was the first of this Family that had the Title of Earl of Mansfield, about the year 1250; continued ever since since unto his posterity, (but under some Acknowledgment to the Electors of Saxony.) Of these the most eminent were 1. Waleradus, one of the Council of Estate to the Emperor Sigismund, Anno 1411, a great improver of the Patrimony of the Earls hereof. 2. John George, Lord Deputy or Lieutenant of Saxony under Duke Augustus. 3. Peter-Ernest, Governour of Luxemburg under Charles the 5th. and Philip the 2. by them much exercised and employed in their Wars with France and their Belgick Rebels. 4. Albert, a constant Friend of Luther, and a faithful Follower of John Frederick, the deprived Elector; in whose Quarrel being outed of his Estate, he retired to Meydeburg, which he most gallantly defended against the Emperor. And 5. Ernestus, Nephew of that Albert by his Son John, so famous for the War which he maintained in most parts of Germany against Ferdinand the 2. in behalf of Frederick Prince Elector Palatine and the States of Bohemia, with so great constancy and courage.

3. On the North of Mansfield and Ober-Sax lieth the Bishoprick of M E Y D E B U R G, having on the West parts Brunswick and Lunenbourg, and on the North and the East, the Marches of Brandenburg: so called from the Episcopal See founded in Magdeburg the Chief City, by some called Meydeburg and Meydenburg, whence by a Greek name Parthenopolis, and Virginopolis by a mungrel word made of Greek and Latine. A City seated on the Elve, divided into three parts, but all strongly fortified, begirt with high Walls, deep Ditches, and almost unconquerable Bulwarks; yet very beautiful withal, (before the last Desolation of it in 1631,) of elegant Buildings, fair Streets, and magnificent Temples. It was built in the form of a Crescent by the Emperor Otho the first, the Founder of it, who having translated hither the Archiepiscopal See, for the greater honour of the place built the Cathedral of St. Maurice, where his Wife lies buried, anno 948, testified by the Inscription to be the Daughter of Edmund King of England; a Town which hath long flourished in a great deal of Glory, and tasted of as much Affliction as any other in Germany. For refusing to receive the Interim, it was out-lawed by the Emperor Charles the fifth, and given to him that could first take it. It was first hereupon attempted by the Duke of Mecklenburg, but he was in a Camisado taken Prisoner, his Army routed, his Nobles made Captives, and 260 Horse brought into the City. Next, it was besieged by Duke Maurice of Saxony, who on honourable Terms was after a long Siege received into it, Anno 1550, when it had stood on its own Guard the space of three years. Which long Opposition of one Town taught the German Princes what Constancy could do; it held up the Coals of Rebellion in Germany; and indeed proved to be the Fire which burned the Emperor's Trophies. For here Duke Maurice coming acquainted with Baron Hedeck, hatched that Confederacy, by which not long after, this great Emperor was driven out of Germany. At last it yielded to Duke Maurice, under the protection of whose Successors it hath since enjoyed a long course of Felicity, till the year 1631, in which it was most miserably burnt and sacked by the Earl of Tilly; of whom it is observed, that after that Fact he never prospered, being shortly after totally routed at the Battle of Leipzig, and wounded to the death not long after that near the River Leck. In the year 1666, it was again forced by the Arms of the Duke of Brandenburg, to accept Augustus Dukes of Saxony for its Admission. Other places of note in this Bishoprick are, 2. Wormsted, beautified with a fair Castle, not far from Magdeburg, the ordinary Seat or Retiring-place of the Bishop. 3. Grabaw, upon the River Struma. 4. Mockren on the same River. 5. Barleben, beneath Meydeburg, on the Elve. 6. Louburg, betwixt the Elve and the Struma, not much observable.

The Archiepiscopal See being translated hither from Oalerstovo and Vrese (places too obscure for so great a dignity) by Otho the first, and by him endowed with great Revenues and a goodly Territory round about it, the Archbishop hereof was also by his procurement made the Primate of Germany, acknowledged so by all but the Bishop of Salzburg and the three spiritual Electors. For the Administration of Justice in matters Criminal and Civil, the said Otho did ordain an Officer, whom they called the Burgrave, conferring that Office first on Gero Marquis of Lusatia. Through many hands it came at last to Burchard Lord of Quernfort, and the Earls of Mansfield, many of which enjoyed this Honour, settled at last by the Emperor Rodolphus of Habsburg on the Dukes of Saxony, who by this means came to have great command and influence on the whole Estate. The Archbishops notwithstanding continued Lords of it, and the whole Territory or District adjoining to it, till the Reformation of Religion; when the Revenues, separated from the Jurisdiction, were given to Lay-Princes, (for the most part of the House of Brandenburg) with the Title of Administrator. Finally, by the Pacification made at Munster, this fair Estate is to be settled forever on the Electors of that House, to be possessed by them, and their Heirs and Successors by the Title of the Dukes of Magdeburg, the better to content them for the Concession which they made to the Crown of Sweden of a great part of their Right and Title to the Dukedom of Pomeran. This may be supposed to have occasion'd the War in 1666, mentioned above.

4. On the North-west of Magdeburg, and on both sides also of the Elve, lieth the Dukedom of LAWENBURG, bounded on the North with Mecklenburg, on the West with part of Holstein, and on the South with the River Elve and part of Lunenbourg; so called of Lawenburg the chief Town thereof, and the seat of the Dukes. The Town was first built, as some conceive, by Henry Duke of Saxony, surnamed the Lion, the better to assure his Conquests on that side of the River, by whom it was called Leopolis or Leoburgum, and Lawenburg for the same reasons by the Dutch or Germans: on the Proscription of which Prince, the Country being wasted and the Towns destroyed, Bernhard of Anhalt, designed his Successor in the Dukedom of Saxony, liking the situation of it, caused it to be re-edified in stronger manner than before, a great part of the Materials of the Town of Erdenburg, being carried cross the water to enlarge this place. Afterwards being razed by the said Duke Henry in the course of that War it was re-built again by D. Bernard, the new Elector, who is therefore by some Writers made the Founder of it. Other places of note herein are, 2. Erdenburg, a well fortified piece, opposite to Lawenburg, on the hither-side of the Elve; not so large now as heretofore, the Town of Lawenburg being made greater by the lessening of this. 3. Raceburg, an Episcopal See, founded here by Duke Henry surnamed the Lion, upon his gaining of the Slaves to the Christian Faith, and of late times the Sepulture of this Ducal Family. 4. Molne, on the farther side of the Elb, not far from Lawenburg, the cause of much Contention betwixt the Dukes hereof, and the Town of Hamburg, who pretend a Title thereunto.

The Dukedom of LAWENBURG, gave Title to a Noble Branch of the House of Saxony, derived from Albert I. the 18th Duke of Saxony, of the House of Anhalt, the first of which Family was

1. John second Son of Albert the first.
2. Ericus V. who died in the year 1435, without any Issue.
- 1435 3. Bernhard, Brother of the said Eric.
4. John Son of Bernhard.
5. Magnus, Son of John, disinherited.
- 1574 6. Francis I. a younger Son of John, against whom Magnus made War in 1574, but being deserted by his Soldiers, was forced to end it dishonorably. And being taken Prisoner by his Brother Francis, he died in Restraint in the year 1603.
7. Francis II. entered upon the Government in the Life of his Father, as his Father had in the Life of his Grandfather.

- 1619 8. Augustus, succeeded Francis the second, his Father, and died in the year 1656, without any surviving Issue.
- 1656 9. Julius Henricus, one of the Sons of Francis the 2d, and Brother of Augustus succeeded him; but he forsook the Protestant Religion, and turned Roman Catholick.
11. Francis Erdman, Son of Julius, was Educated in the Protestant Religion, and survived his Father, but not long.
- 1666 12. Julius Francis, Son of Julius Henricus, succeeded his Brother Francis. He died in the year 1689, without any Male-Issue, having in the year 1681, consented that the Elector of Saxony should succeed him, if he had no Sons of his own: And accordingly that Prince has entered upon his Territories, but it is said is opposed by the Dukes of Brandenburg, Anhalt and Lunenbourg, which may have an ill effect, considering the present War. However here is the end of this branch of this Noble Family.

This Country, being for the most part under the Command of the Slaves, was from them conquered (together with the whole Country of Mecklenburg) by Duke Henry the Lion, and by his care converted to the Christian Faith: but he being proscribed, and this Seignoury extorted from him by Duke Bernard of Anhalt, his Successor in the Electoral Dignity, it was by Albert, Son of this Bernard, conferred on John his second Son, from whom the Dukes of Saxony, commonly called Dukes of Saxon-Lawenburg, do derive themselves; who being pretermitted by the Emperor Sigismund at the death of Albert the 3. the last of the direct Line of Bernard, or else not caring for a Title which carried with it too great a Sail for so small a Vessel as the Estate of the Elector at the present was, have since contented themselves with their ancient Patrimony.

It is now time we should proceed to the Story of Saxony, the ancient Inhabitants of which Tract were the Longobardi or Lombards of Magdeburg, and part of the Cherusci about Mansfield and Wittenburg. Overcome by the prevailing Saxons, they became part of their name and Country, which in the full extent thereof was once far greater than now it is, containing all the Countries betwixt the Rhene and the River Eyder in the Cimbrick Chersonese, and from the River Sala, to the German and Baltick Oceans. These are said by some to be a People of Asia, and there called the Saca, who finding that small Territory (now a part of Tartaria) too narrow for them, forsook their Country, and at last fixed themselves in the Cimbrick Chersonese; where they first took the names of Sacsons (or Sac-sons) that is to say, the Sons of the Saca. The improbability of this we have there disputed. Omitting therefore that and the like Originations of them, I conceive them (for my part) to be natural Germans, some Tribe of that most populous and potent People of the Suevi: but for the reason of the name, let every man enjoy the pleasure of his own opinion. Certain I am that in Ptolomy's time they were possessed of those parts beyond the Elb, and thence extended to the Eyder, part of which Tract is now known by the name of Holstein: and were accounted in that time to be no New-comers. Afterwards, as they grew in number, they enlarged their quarters, and passing over the Elb, in the time of the later Roman Emperors, possessed themselves of the void places which were left by the French, then busied in the Conquest of more fruitful Countries; communicating their name to all the Nations which they overcame, as the French had formerly done before them. So that in fine they stretch themselves from the River Sala on the East, to the German Ocean on the West, and took up the now Dukedoms of Holstein, Lunenbourg, and Brunswick, the Bishopricks of Bremen, Vorden, Hildesheim, Halberstadt, and Magdeburg, the Marches of Brandenburg, the Earldom of Mansfield, Westphalen, both Friebrands, Over-Yffel, with as much of Gelderland and Holland as lay on that side of the Rhene. By which account the present Electoral Family hath not one foot of the old Saxony in their possession; the Seat and Patrimony of the Electors being removed into other Countries, upon the Alterations and Changes which have happened in that Estate; the name and Title of Saxony being given to the Country about Wittenburg, for no other reason but because it was the chief Seat of the Duke-Electors. But to proceed, a stout and valiant Nation questionless they were, the Conquerors of the Isle of Britain; and the last People of the Germans which yielded up their Country unto Charles the Great, by his means gained unto the Gospel, anno 785. Their last King was called Wittikindus, from whom descend the Kings of France, since the time of Hugh Capet, the present Kings of Denmark, of the house of Oldenburg, the Dukes of Burgundy and Savoy, the Marquisses of Montferrat, besides many other noble and illustrious Families though of lesser note. The right or direct Line of the Male-issue of Wittikind (whom Charles the Great created, of a King, the first Duke of Saxony) determining the person of Otho the third, Emperor of the Germans, it was by him conferred on Bernard Lord of Lunenbourg, (but the precise time I find not:) Henry first named the Saint, who succeeded this Otho in the Empire, the next in the collateral Line, being pretermitted, either because at that time settled in the great Dukedom of Bavaria, or because there was no hope of Posterity by him, or for some other private grudge, which I read not of. And it continued in this Line till, on the Forfeiture incurred by his posterity, in the person of Duke Henry the Lion, it was bestowed by Frederick Barbarossa upon Bernard of Anhalt, Anno 1180; whose Issue in the right Line failing, it was finally estated by the Emperor Sigismund on Frederick Lantgrave of Thuringia and Marquis of Misnia, Anno 1423. In his Family it hath since continued, but not without a manifest breach in the course of his Succession: which happened when John-Frederick being deprived of the Electoral Dignity and Estate, his Cousin Duke Maurice was invested in them by Charles the fifth. For that religious, but unfortunate, Prince (if he may justly have the Title of unfortunate, who suffered in so good a cause, for so good a Conscience) being discomfited and taken Prisoner at the Battle of Mulberg before mentioned, was the next day condemned to die, but pardoned at the last, upon the intercession of some powerful Friends, upon condition that he should resign the Electoral Dignity, and all the rest of his Estates, into the power of the Emperor: Which done, the Emperor gave him back again of his own accord the Castle of Gotha and the Town of Weymar, with all the Lands and Territories thereunto adjoining; from which last place his Posterity are now called Dukes of Saxon-Weymar. It was also much insisted on, that he should relinquish his Religion, and reconcile himself to the Church of Rome; but thereto he opposed with such Christian stoutness, that in the end it was omitted. These matters being thus transacted, the Emperor (with the general consent of the Electors) invested Maurice Cousin-german to the Duke deprived, in the Electoral dignity, and all the Lands, Honours and Estates (the Seignouries of Gotha and Weymar excepted only) which formerly had belong'd to him: which though it were a great wrong both to the Person and Posterity of the Duke John-Frederick, yet it is observed by some grave Writers to have fallen out not unhappily for the advancement of the Reformation then contended for. 1. In regard of John-Frederick, whose Christian Patience and Magnanimity during the whole time of his Imprisonment added great reputation to the Cause for which he suffered. 2. In respect of Duke Maurice, who was a man of far greater parts to advance the work, and every way as zealous in pursuing of it as the other was. And 3. in relation to the Children of the deprived Duke, men not to be relied on in a matter of such weight and moment ; infomuch as it was said of him after his decease, Quod Filios reliquerit sui diffimillimos. It is now time we should proceed to the Investiture of the new Elector. And, because these Transactions of State be not ordinary, I will briefly relate the Ceremonies thereat used as I have collected them out of Sleidan. There were at Wittenberg Scaffolds erected, on which sat the Emperor and the Princes Electors in their Robes. On the back-side of the State were placed the Trumpeters ; right against it standeth Duke Maurice with two bands of Horsemen : The first in a full Career run their Horses up to the Pavillion : out of the second issued Henry Duke of Brunswick, Volfange Prince of Bipont, and Albert Duke of Bavier. These when they had in like manner coursed their Horses about, alighted, ascended to the Throne, and humbly requested the Emperor, that for the common good he would advance Duke Maurice to the Electorship. He consulted with the Electors, made answer by the Bishop of Mentz, that he was content, so Duke Maurice would in person come and desire it. Then came forth Duke Maurice with the whole Troop : before him were born ten Ensigns bearing the Arms of as many Regions wherein he desired to be Invested. When he came before the Throne, he kneeled down on his Knees, and humbly desired the Emperor to bestow on him the Electorship of Saxony, and all the Lands of John-Frederick, late Elector. His Petition was granted. Then the Bishop of Mentz read unto him the Oath by which the Electors are bound unto the Empire : which Oath when Duke Maurice had taken, the Emperor delivered unto him a Sword, which was a sign of his perfect Investiture. Duke Maurice, now the Elector of Saxony, arose, gave the Emperor thanks, promised his Fidelity, made Obedience, and took his place amongst the Electors. This Solemnity was on the 24th day of February, Anno 1548. Which said, we now proceed unto the Catalogue of

The Dukes of SAXONY.

- 785 1. Wittikind, the last King of the Saxons, vanquish'd, and created the first Duke by Charles the Great.
- 825 2. Bruno, the Brother of Wittikind.
- 843 3. Luitulphus, Son of Bruno.
- 855 4. Bruno II. Son of Luitulphus.
- 876 5. Otho, Brother of Bruno the 2d.
- 916 6. Henry, surnamed the Fowler, Son of Otho, Emperor of the Romans, and King of Germany.
- 938 7. Otho II. Duke of Saxony, and Emperor, called Otho I.
- 974 8. Otho III. Duke of Saxony and Emperor, called Otho II.
- 984 9. Otho IV. Duke of Saxony and Emperor, called Otho III.
- 998 10. Bernard, Lord of Lunenbourg, created Duke of Saxony, and the first Elector, by Otho the third, who was the last Duke of the Race of Wittikind.
- 1021 11. Bernard II. Son of Bernard the first.
- 1063 12. Ordulphus, Son of Bernard the 2d.
- 1073 13. Magnus, Son of Ordulphus, who taking part with Rodolphus of Schwaben against Henry the Fourth, was taken Prisoner, and deprived.
- 1123 14. Lotharius, Earl of Quernfort, created Duke of Saxony by Henry the Fourth, he was also Emperor of the Romans.
- 1139 15. Henry Guelph, surnamed the Proud, Duke of Bavaria, the Husband of Gertrude, Daughter of Lotharius, by whom he was created Duke-Elector.
- 1142 16. Henry II. surnamed the Lion, Duke of Saxony and Bavaria, Son of Henry the Proud by his first Wife Walsfeldis, the Daughter of Magnus, added to this Estate the Countries of Mecklenburg and Lauenburg, which he had conquered from the Slaves, becoming by that means so great, that neglecting his Duty to the Emperor Frederick, surnamed Barbarossa, and siding with the Pope against him, he was by him publicly Proscribed, his neighbour Princes arm'd against him, and by their joint Forces outed of all his Estates, every one laying hold on that which lay nearest to him, by means whereof this great Estate being parcelled and divided into many parts, the Title of the Duke Elector of Saxony was given by the said Emperor to

- 1180 17. Bernard of Anhalt, Son of Albert Marquis of Brandenburg, and Grand-child of Eliza, another Daughter of Duke Magnus : to whom for his Seat and Habitation, the Emperor gave the City of Wittenberg, the Head since that time of this Electorate.
- 1212 18. Albert, Son of Bernard, from whom the Dukes of Lauenburg do derive their Pedigree.
- 1273 19. Albert II. Son of Albert the first.
- 1337 20. Rodolph, Son of Albert the 2d.
- 1356 21. Rodolph II. Son of Rodolph the first.
- 1373 22. Wenceslaus, Son of Rodolph the 2d.
- 1389 23. Rodolph III. Son of Wenceslaus.
- 1419 24. Albert III. Son of Rodolph the third, the last Elector of Saxony of the House of Anhalt.
- 1423 25. Frederick, Lantgrave of Duringen, and Marquis of Misnia, (on the failing of the House of Anhalt, Anno 1422.) created Duke of Saxony by the Emperor Sigismund, the House of Lauenburg pretermitted for want of putting in their Claim : by the advancement of which Prince, the Title of the Duke of Saxony returned again to the House of Wittikind, (the first King and last Duke hereof) after it had been alienated into other Families for the space of 200 years.
- 1428 26. Frederick II. Son of Frederick the first ; born in 1412, Aug. 24. and surnamed the Flacid : He died the 7th of September, 1464, leaving two Sons, Ernest and Albert, the Founders of two potent Families in this House.
- 1464 27. Ernest, Son of Frederick the second, born the 25th of March, 1641. A prudent Prince.
- 1486 28. Frederick III. Son of Ernest, born in 1463, and surnamed the Wise, the Founder of the University of Wirtemberg in 1501, the Preserver of Luther, and thereby the promoter of the Reformation. He died the 5th of May, 1525, after he had the honour to refuse the Empire. This Prince was never Married.
- 1525 29. John, Brother to Frederick the third, born the 29th of June, 1464. He was a great promoter of the Reformation, and joined in the Protestation against Popery in the year 1630, and procured the Smalcaldick League to defend it. He died the 13th of August, 1532.
- 1532 30. John Frederick, Son of John the first ; a great advancer of the Reformation of Religion, imprison'd and depriv'd of his Electorship by Charles the 5th. He was born the 30th of June, 1503. He vanquished Henry Duke of Brunswick in 1545, but was taken Prisoner by Charles the 5th at Mulberg the 24th of April, 1546, in 1552 he was set at liberty, and died in 1554.
- 1547 31. Maurice, Cousin-german to the Duke John-Frederick (as being the Grandson or Nephew of Albert, the younger Brother of Ernestus the Duke Elector) created Duke Elector by Charles the 5th, whom afterwards he drove out of Germany ; and was slain in the Battel of Siffridhuse, against Marquis Albert of Brandenburg. Albert, the Founder of this Line, was born the 17th of July, 1443, and died in the Year 1500. George Barbatus his Son and Successor was born the 27th of August, 1471, and died the 17th of April, 1535. Henry the Pious, Brother of George, was born the 25th of October, 1474, and died the 20th of December, 1510. He was the Father of Maurice, who was born the 11th of May, 1521, and he obtained the Electorate in 1548 in prejudice of John Frederick and his Children. In 1551 he drove Charles the 5th out of Germany by Torch-light: The next year he procur'd the Peace of Passaw. In 1553 he was slain in Battel, having no Male Issue.

- 1553 32. Augustus, Brother of Maurice, born the 31th of July, 1526. He was a Prince of the greatest Authority of any in his time, and thought very Rich. He died the 11th of February, 1586.
- 1586 33. Christian, Son of Augustus, born the 3d of November, 1560; he died in 1591.
- 1591 34. Christian II. Son of Christian the first; born the 23th of September, 1583. In the year 1610 he obtained the Investiture of the Dukedoms of Juliers, Cleves and Mentz; and died the next year after without any Issue.
- 1611 35. John George, Brother of Christian the second, who first sided with the Emperor Ferdinand the second against the Elector Palatine, and after with the King of Sweden against the Emperor: Born the 5th of March, 1585. This Prince by his Zeal for the Reformation preserved it from Ruin.
- 1656 36. John George II. eldest son of the last Elector; born the 31th of May, 1613; succeeded his Father: He was a very Just Prince, and died the 22th of August, 1680.
- 1680 37. John-George III. succeeded his Father the 22d of August; he was born the 20th of June, 1647. This Prince has several Children: 1. John-George, born the 17th of October, 1688. 2. Frederick-Augustus, born the 12th of May, 1670.

The Revenues of this Duke are thought to be the greatest of any one Prince of Germany (the Imperial Family excepted) amounting in the least to 400000*l.* per Annum; though in multitude of Vassals and greatness of Territory he come short of some them. And to make up this (some or perhaps a greater) it is conceived that the profit which ariseth to him out of Silver Mines is no less than 130000*l.* yearly; the Impost laid on Beer in Leipsick only, a City but of two Parish-Churches, (by which conjecture at the rest) being Farmed at 20000*l.* per Annum. Then hath he the Tenth of all sort of Increase, as of Corn, Wine, &c. The Salt-houses at Hall and some other places, very fair Lands belonging unto his Domain; and besides this, a standing and perpetual Tax laid upon the Subject towards the maintenance of the War against the Turks; granted at first in times of Danger and Hostility, but gathered ever since in the times of Peace (as to that Enemy) under colour of being ready and prepared against him. According to the quantity of his Intrado so he keeps his State, well serv'd, and better attended than any other of the Electors; there being at one time in the Court of Christian, the Father of the present Duke, three Dukes, three Earls, and five Barons of other Nations (besides the Nobility of his own) all Pensioners and Servants to him; one of the Princes of Anhalt and one of the Earls of Mansfield, both Homagers unto the Saxons, being two of the number.

The Continuance of the Ernest Line stands thus, and is called Saxony Wimar.

1. John-Frederick, who was so unjustly dispossessed, had
2. John-William, born in 1530; he died in 1573.
- 1573 3. Frederick-William, born April 25. 1562.
- 1602 4. John-Philip, born in 1597.
- 1636 5. Frederick-William, born in 1603, Febr. 12.
- 1669 6. William III. born in 1657.
- 1673 7. John II. Uncle of William the second, Son of John-William; was born in 1570, Founded the Line of Wimar, he died in 1605. John-Ernest his Son, born the 21th of February, 1594, died in 1526 without Issue: The Line was continued by William his 5th Son, born in 1598, whose Son John-Ernest was born in 1627. He succeeded William III. and continued the Line of Ernest.
- 1683 8. William-Ernest, Son of John-Ernest the present Duke of Saxony Wimar, was born the 19th of October, 1661; his Brother, John-Ernest.

The Dukes of SAXONY GOTHAM.

- 1660 1. This Family was Founded by Ernest III. born in 1601. The Principality of Gotham was given him in 1660; in 1672 he got the greatest part of the Earldom of Henneberg, and by his Mother he had Altenburg and Coburg. He was the 9th Son of John II. Duke of Wimar, and Brother of William II. continuer of the Wimar Line. This Prince died the 26th of March, 1675.
- 1675 2. Leaving Frederick, now Duke of Sax-Gotham, born the 15th of July, 1656; whose eldest Son Frederick was born the 28 of July, 1676. His 2d Son John-William the 4th of October, 1677. He died in 1690, his Children young.

The Fortune of this Family is thus represented. Frederick the Warlike, Marquis of Misnia and Lantgrave of Thuringia, obtained of the Emperor Sigismund the Electoral Dignity with the Palatinate of Saxony, and the Burgravate of Magdeburg in 1425, and some think he purchased the Burgravate of Misnia too in 1440. William, Brother of Frederick II. and Son of Frederick I. became Lantgrave of Thuringe, and he had the Dukedom of Luxenburg with his Wife; which in the year 1462, he having no Issue, he sold to Philip Duke of Burgundy. Ernest I. added to this Dukedom Paven, Voigtsberg, Olsnitz and Adorf, and he purchased Sagan in Silesia. Albert the Magnanimous of this House obtained Westfrisia of the House of Austria. Augustus the Elector added to his Family Naumburg and Mersburg. In the year 1583 this House got the Earldom of Henneberg, they had before Coburg, a part of it by Marriage. In the year 1635 John-George obtained the Upper and Lower Lusatia, which before belonged to the Marquesses of Misnia. In 1648, Augustus gained the Administration of the Archbishoprick of Magdeburg. In 1659, John-George I. obtained the Earldom of Barby upon the Elbe, the Earls that possessed it being extinct; it lies between Anhalt to the South, and Magdeburg to the North. In the time of the Seventy second German War, they gained the Earldom of Mansfield by right of Sequestration.

On the other side, in the year 1549, Mauritius the Elector parted with the Principality of Sagan to Ferdinand the First. In 1680, the Bishoprick of Magdeburg was made a Dukedom, and assigned for ever to the Duke of Brandenburg. This Family has also Pretences upon the Dukedoms of Juliers, Cleves, Monts, and Sax-Lawenburg: The Possession of the latter they seized in the the Year 1689, upon the Death of the Duke without Issue-Male.

The Arms of Saxony are Bar-wife of six pieces Sable and Or, a Bend flower'd Vert. Which Bend was added to the Coat by the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa, when he confirmed Bernard of Anhalt in this Dukedom. For Bernard desiring of the Emperor to have some difference added to the Ducal Coat, (being before only Barry, Sable and Or) to distinguish him and his Successors from thole of the former House; the Emperor took a Chaplet of Rue, which he had then upon his Head, and threw it cross his Buckler or Escutcheon of Arms, which was presently painted on the same.

19. BRUNSWICK, and 20. LUNENBURG.

THE Dukedoms of BRUNSWICK and LUNENBURG, being both originally taken out of this great Dukedom of Saxony, extracted both from the same Root, and many times united in the Person of the same one Prince, shall be join'd together in the Story, though severed in the Chorography or Description of them; bounded on the East with Magdeburg and Mansfeld in the Upper Saxony, on the West with Westphalia, on the North with Denmark, on the South with Hassia. The Air in all parts hereof is very cold and comfortless but sound and healthful: the Soil towards the old Marches of Brandenburg but meanly fertile, towards Duringen and Hassia Mountainous and Woody, in other parts very plentiful of Corn, and well provided also of such other Commodities as usually do grow in thole colder Climates.

But to take the Chorography of them severally, BRUNSWICK is bounded on the East with the Earldom of Mansfeld, on the West with Westphalen, on the North with Lunenbourg, on the South with Hassia. So called from Brunswick, the chief City and the Head of this Dukedom.

Places of most importance in it are, 1. Goslar, upon the River Gose, whence it had the name; of a poor Village made a City by Henry the first, much beautified and enlarged by Henry the third, who found here two Churches and a stately Palace; now one of the Imperial Cities. 2. Helmstat, in the middle way between Brunswick and Magdeburg; first fortified by Charles Son of Charles the Great, for a Bridle to the neighbouring Slaves; and being after given to the Abbots of Werden, was by them sold to William the Duke of Brunswick. 3. Quedlenburg, built also by Henry the first, much increased since by the Neighbourhood of a very rich Nunnery, the Abbess whereof had formerly the Privileges of a Prince of the Empire. 4. Hildesheim, an ancient City, honoured with an Episcopal See by Charles the Great at the first Conversion of the Saxons. The Bishop of this City is the only Roman Catholick Bishop in all Saxony. 5. Grubenhagen, which gave Title to a younger branch of the House of Brunswick; a Principality, and a Member of the Empire. 6. Hannover, on the River Lein, well built, very strongly Fortified, and not meanly traded. 7. Brunswick, upon the River Onagra, which passeth through it, passed over by many handsom Bridges; the Metropolis of the ancient Saxony, and at this time the chief of this Dukedom, though of it self Imperial, and one of the Hanse. The City is of a quadrangular Form, seated in the midst of a Plain, very fruitful of Corn, in compass about two Dutch, or eight English Miles, somewhat larger than Nuremberg, and less than Erfort; containing in that compass not above twelve Churches, whereof two have Steeples cover'd with Lead, a third with Brass, all the rest with Tile. It is rich, populous and strongly Fortified on some sides with a double, on others with a treble Wall; within which Walls are five Cities, distinguish'd by Privileges, but united by Laws. The whole first built by Bruno, Son to Indolphus Duke of Saxony, and Uncle to the Emperor Henry the first, about the year 861; from whence it had the name of Brunswick, or Brunonis Flacus; by the more elegant Latinists, Brunopolis. This City in the year 1671 was surprized by the Duke of Transylvania, who built a stately and a strong Citadel to assure his Possession, but the City is observed since that time to wait and decay. S. Hamelen, on the East side of the Weser or Vesungis, encompassed with a deep Moat, (occasioned by a stream cut out of the River) round about which are divers Fortifications, and planted with Ordnance. Nigh unto this Town is the Mountain called also Hamelen, unto which the Py'd Piper (as they call him) led the Children of Hulberstadt, where they all sunk, and were never more seen. But of this Story more hereafter, when we come to Transylvania. 9. Wolfshaiten, or Wolfsbuttel, where the Duke doth keep his Court. For tho' Brunswick giveth him his Title, yet will it not yield him any Obedience, but reputeth it self amongst the Hanse-Towns; for which cause there have been great Wars between the Dukes and the Citizens. 10. Hulberstadt, a Bishop's See, the late Bishop (or Administrator of the Bishoprick) being Christian Duke of Brunswick, that noble young Soldier, who had vowed his Life and Fortune to the Service of Elizabeth Queen of Bohemia, his Cousin-german; created by King James one of the Knights of the Garter. A Bishoprick of great Revenue, and a very large Territory; since the alteration of Religion, given with the Title of Administrator to the Sons of Brunswick; but now, by the Conclusions at Amster, assigned over to the Elector of Brandenburg, with the Title of Prince of Hulberstadt, the Family of Brunswick being to be recompensed with an alternate Succession in the Bishoprick of Osnabrug, and some other additional. 11. Harfeld, the Seat sometimes of the old Palatines of Saxony, but not else observable. 12. Amelungsbome, another Town of the said Palatines, by one of which, called Sigefridus, it was beautified with a very fair Abbey: the principal Towns (in thole days) of this Palatinate, which, bordering on that part of the Thuringians which is now call'd Hassia, was taken in by Herman, one of the Lautgraves of that Country, on the Proscription of Duke Henry, surnamed the Lion; but on the failure of his Line, recovered for the most part by the Dukes of Brunswick, the right Heirs of Henry.

The Dukedom of LUNENBURG hath on the East the Diocess of Magdeburg, on the West the Diocess of Bremen, and part of Westphalia, on the North the Elbe, and on the South the Dukedom of Brunswick. So called from Lunenbourg the chief City, once the Seat of the Dukes.

Places of most Observation in it are, 1. Lunenbourg it self, situate on the River Elmenaw, an Imperial City, and one of the principal of the Hanse; so called from the Moon here worshipped in the times of Idolatry. Of a round form it is, and seated in a pleasant Valley, but with Mountains near it: on one of which, called Calberg, is a very strong Castle, of right belonging to the Duke, but in the power of the Citizens, who without this Fort could not be masters of their Liberties. The Walls about it are of Earth, high and broad, and the Ditches deep: the Buildings generally fair (for the most part of Brick) the chief whereof is the Common-Council-House; the Streets broad and long, with two spacious Market-places, but of no very pleasing smell: the whole about a mile and an half in length, and half a mile breadth, containing six Parish-Churches. But the thing most considerable in it is the Fountain of Salt (the greatest Riches of this City) and the House in which the Salt is boiled, containing 52 Rooms, and in each Room 8 Leaden Pans, in which are boiled daily 8 Tuns of Salt, every Tun being sold for 8 Flemish Shillings, bought by the Hamburgers, Lubeckers, and other Merchants; some part of the Profits of it belonging to the Duke, some to the City, the rest to the Adventurers who employ their Stocks on it. 2. Cell, the Seat of the Duke of Lunenbourg. 3. Geiborn, of no great bigness or estimation, but for a strong Castle of the Dukes. 4. Oldendorp, situate betwixt the Vena and and the River Iffsa, memorable for the great Battle fought near unto it, Anno 1633, betwixt the Imperialists and the Swedes, the honour and benefit whereof fell unto the Swedes, who killed upon the place 5000 of the Enemy, besides such as were found dead in the Fields and High-ways, all covered over with dead Bodies, took 1500 of them Prisoners, and got into their hands 13 pieces of Ordnance, good store of Ammunition, and three Mules laden with Silver for the pay of the Army: the reputation of this Victory drawing in Hamelen and other places of importance which stood out before. 5. Verden, an Episcopal See, but made a Lay-see, as most other Bishopricks amongst the Lutherans; the Profits thereof being received commonly by a Son of Denmark with the Title of Administrator, and lastly, by the Treaty of Munster appropriated for ever to the Crown of Sweden, the King's whereof to be entituled Dukes of Verden. 6. Rodenburg, the chief Seat of the Bishops of Verden.

The ancient Inhabitants of these Dukedoms were the Dugublini of Tacitus, with some parts of the Chauci and Cherusci: these last of most fame for the Blow they gave to Quintilius Varus, Lieutenant in Germany after Drusus for Augustus Caesar, who, behaving himself with great Insolency towards the Natives, was set upon by these Cherusci and their Confederates, under the Conduct of Arminius, a great Prince amongst them, himself slain, and his whole Army, consisting of three Legions, miserably cut off and despoightfully used: which loss, and the shame thereof, so distracted the Emperor, (not formerly accustomed to the like Misfortunes) that he was many times observ'd to tear his Beard, knock his Head against the Posts and cry out in the bitterness of his Passion, Redde mihi Legiones, Quintili Vare. Having long time after this maintained their Liberty (for the Romans kept themselves from that time forwards on the French side of the Rhene) they were at last subdued by the Saxons; continuing part of that great Dukedom till the time of the three Otho's, Emperors of the Romans and Dukes of Saxony; who, looking on the Empire as a state of Inheritance, diminished both the Grandure and Revenue of the ancient Patrimony, partly by the Donation or Endowment of many Bishopricks, and partly by the erection of many petty Seigniories to be holden under them as chief Lords of all. Amongst which, that of Lunenburg was none of the least, continuing as a State distinct, till such time as Bernard, Lord of Lunenburg, was by the Emperor Otho the third made Duke of Saxony, and created the first Duke-Elector, whereby again it was united to the rest of that Dukedom, the greatest part whereof he held in his actual Possession, together with a Superiority or Jurisdiction over all the residue, (the great Bishopricks excepted only) which had been parcelled out, as before is said: and it continued thus united till the Proscription of Henry, surnamed the Lion, spoken of before; whose Reconciliation being made by means of Henry the second of England, whose Daughter Maud he had formerly Married, the Emperor Barbarossa restored to him again the Cities of Brunswick and Lunenburg, with their several Territories, of which his two Sons, Henry and William, were first created Earls, then Dukes, the one of Brunswick, and the other of Lunenburg, by the Emperor Frederick the second. Which Honours and Estates do still remain unto their Posterities. Before I come to the Successions of these Princes, I shall crave leave to speak of the Original of the Guelphian Family, Dukes at the same time of Bavaria and Saxony, of which they are at this time the sole remainder. A Family derived from one Guelphus, (whence it had the name) the Son of Ifenberdus, Earl of Altorf in Schwaben; whose Wife, called Fermintrudis, having accused a poor Woman of Adultery, and caused her to be grievously punished for having 12 Children at a Birth, was afterwards delivered of the like number, and all of them Sons. Her Husband being absent at the time of her Delivery, she commanded the Nurse to kill 11 of them; fearing, it seems, the like shame and punishment as by her instigation was inflicted on the other Woman. The Nurse going to perform this ungodly command was met by the old Earl then returning homewards; who ask'd her what she had in her Apron. She made answer, Whelps. He desired to see them: she denied him. Angry at this refusal, he opened her Apron, and there found eleven of his own Sons, pretty sweet Babes, and of most promising Countenances. Examining the matter, he found out the truth, and enjoining the old Trot to be secret in it, he put the Children out to Nurse. Six years expired, the Earl invited to a Feast most of his own and his Ladies Kindred, and attiring the young Boys all alike, presented them unto their Mother; who suspecting, by the number of them, what the matter was, confessed her Offence, is pardoned by the good old Earl, and carefully educates her Children: whom the Father commanded to be called by the name of Guelphs, alluding to the Whelps or Puppies which the Nurse told him she had in her Apron. From the eldest of these Guelphs or Guelps succeeded that Henry-Guelph, Son of Robert Earl of Altorf, whom Conrade the second made Duke of Bavaria; many of whose Posterity enjoy'd that Dukedom: encreased at last by the addition of the Dukedom of Saxony, in the Person of Duke Henry surnamed the Proud, Father of Henry called the Lion, the Grandfather of Henry and William the first Dukes of Brunswick and Lunenburg, whose Succession followeth in this Order.

The Dukes of BRUNSWICK and

Wolfembuttel.

- Wolfembüttel.*
 1416 11. William Son of Henry. This William was called the victorious upon the account of 7 victories he obtained, William his eldest Son succeeded him in Wolfembüttel. Frederick the 2d. Son, had Callenburg for his share, he died in the year 1499, in Custody.
- 1482 12. William II. Son of William. William the 2d. was a peaceable Prince, and in the year 1503, he divided his Estate amongst his Children, and died. Henry succeeded in Wolfembüttel, and Ernst his 2. Son in Callenburg, but he died without Issue in 1584.
- 1503 13. Henry the 2. Son of William the 2. He was an unquiet Prince, and very vexatious to his Subjects, and was at last slain in East-Friesland in the year 1514.
- 1514 14. Henry 3. Son of Henry the 2. He was a great Enemy to the Reformation, in the year 1543, was by the Leaguers of Smalcald, deprived of all his Estates, and taken Prisoner by the Elector of Saxony, and kept Prisoner till 1547.
- 1568 15. Julius, Son of Henry the 3. who reformed the Religion: he was born in 1528. He founded the University of Helmstadt in 1576.
- 1589 16. Henry 4. Son of Julius, who married the Lady Elizabeth, Sister to Anne Queen of England. He was born the 15th of October, 1564.
- 1613 17. Frederick-Ulrick, Son of Elizabeth of Denmark and of Henry-Julius, born the 5th of April, 1591. In 1616, he Forced
- Lunenburg.*
 1416 11. Bernard, Brother of Magnus the second.
- 1434 12. Otho, the Son of Bernard.
- 1445 13. Frederick, brother of Otho.
- 1478 14. Otho, Grandson of Frederick, by Otho his second Son.
- 1514 15. Henry 3. Son of Otho the 3. This Prince succeeded in the Life of his Father, and was under the Tutelage of his Grandfather and Mother after many Wars, he died at Paris in the year 1532. He had a Son, whose name was Otho, who succeeded him.
- 1532 16. Otho 4th Son of Henry the 3.
17. Ernest, the Brother of Otho, succeeded in his Brother's Lifetime, surrendering his Estate for an Annual Pension.
18. Ernest Son of Henry, was the 1st that admitted the Reformation in this Family.
- 1546 19. Henry 4. Son of Ernest, Resigned Lunenburg to William his younger Brother, who died in the year 1592.
- 1592 20. Ernest 2. Son of Henry the 4. He lived single, and died in the year 1611.
- 1611 21. Augustus, brother of Ernest, born the 19th of November 1568, succeeded him because he had no Inheritable Issue.
- 1636 22. George Son of William, born in 1582. He got the Bishoprick of Hildesheim in 1633.
- 1641 23. Christian Lewis, Son of George, born 1622, the 25th of February.
- 1665 24. George William, brother of Christian, born in 1624, the 16th of February, he has Married Sophia Dorothea his only Daughter in 1682
- the City of Brunswick, to do him Homage, he died without any Issue.
- 1636 } 18. Augustus, Son of 1634 } Henry Duke of Lunenburg, succeeded, on the death of Frederick Ulrick, and the failure of the House of Brunswick in him, in this Dukedom. He was born in the year 1579.
- 1666 19. Rodolphus Augustus, born the 16th of May, 1627, in the year 1671, he subdued the Inhabitants of Brunswick. He has only 3 Daughters, to Antho Ulrick, his brother, is to succeed, whose Son is Augustus William, born the 8th of March, 1662.
- The Arms of these Dukedoms were first the same, that is to say, Gules, two Lions Or, armed Azure; which Arms they took by reason of their extraction from the Kings of England, then Dukes of Normandy; retained to this day by the Dukes of Brunswick, without any addition. But those of Lunenburg have added three Coats more to it: the whole bearing being quarterly, 1. Gules, two Lions Or, Armed Azure; 2. Azure, Seme of Hearts Gules, a Lion of the first, Armed and Crowned Or; 3. Azure, a Lion Argent, Crowned Gules; and 4. Gules, within a Border Componie Or and Azure, a Lion of the second, Armed of the third.
- In the year 1235, when Otho the Grandson of Henry the Lion, after the Death of his Ancestors, obtained these Dukedoms of Frederick the Emperor, this Family had then besides the said Dukedoms, the Earldoms of Nordheim, Lawenrod, and Lutterberg almost all Hercinia or the Harz, and Göttingen. In 1246, they got the City of Münden. In 1255, Albert M. obtained Assenburg and Wolfembüttel. In 1259, the City of Hamell, which before belonged to the Abby of Fuld, gave up itself to him. In 1305 Gravenhage, in 1311 Gittel were added. In 1376, Danneberg was Conquered. In 1320, the Earldom of Luchou, in 1337 the Town of Vallerleben, in 1347 the Bailiwick of Bodenteich, in 1350 the Town of Wittingen were purchased. In 1380 Hardysen, in 1388 Klotze and Snackenburg on the Elbe, in 1433 the Bishop of Hildesheim yielded them Burgdorf. In 1435 William the Elder, united to his Estate the Earldom of Hallermond. In 1445, Otho by Marriage, had the Earldom of Eberstein, and the Territory of Hamburg. In 1446, William the Victorious, purchased Wunstorp, in 1468, Otho obtained Hitzgar, and Hitzacker, in 1490 William bought Helmstadt, in 1519 they conquered Dassel, in 1571 they had by a vacancy Radolfschausen, and in 1582 the Earldom Hoyen, and in 1585 that of Diepholt, in 1592 Gumbse, in 1593 Hoenstein, an Earldom. In 1599 the Earldom of Blankenburg, in 1636, George took possession of the Bishoprick and City of Hildesheim, in 1648, they got the Monastery of Walkenreid, and an Alternate Succession in the Bishoprick of Osnabrugg. And in 1671, they regained the Dominion of the City of Brunswick. In 1678, by the Treaty of Nimwegen, they obtained from the Swedes, Tedinghausen and Doveren, 2. Bailiwicks.
- The Losses of this House are these. In 1331, Otho the 7th Mortgaged to Adolph Bishop of Mentz, Eisfeld and Duderstadt, in 1648, they were forced to part with the Bishoprick of Hildesheim and the Territories of Clettenberg and Lohr, which belonged to Hohnstein, were yielded to the House of Brandenburg. And in the year 1689, upon the Death of the former Duke, they seized upon the Duchy of Sax-Lawenburg, under the pretence of a most just pretention, but this is all claimed by the Duke of Saxony, and the determining of the Right is respited to the end of the present War.

HASSIA is bounded on the North with Brunswick, on the South with Vetavia or the state of Weteram, on the East with Thuringia, and on the West with Westphalia. Baudrand bounds it on the North with Westphalia, on the West with Westermaldi and Weteram, on the South with Franconia, and on the East with Thuringe and Brunswick. So called from the Hessi, who, having vanquished the Chatti, the old Inhabitants of this Country, possessed themselves of it.

The Christian Faith was first preached here by Boniface, or Winefride, an English-Saxon, (afterwards Archbishop of Mentz) Anno 730, or thereabouts. Of whom I find this memorable Apophthegm, That in old times there were golden Prelates and wooden Chalicees, but in his time wooden Prelates and golden Chalicees. Not much unlike to which I have read another, but of later date, viz. That once the Christians had blind Churches, and lightsome hearts; but now they have lightsome Churches, and blind hearts.

The Country is very fruitful of Corn, and affordeth good Pasturage for the feeding of Cattel, of which they have great Drovers and Herds in many places; with great abundance of Stags and other Deer for the pleasures of Hunting, harboured in the Woods hereof, with which, in many parts of it, it is very much shaded. It breedeth also on the Downs good store of sheep, enriched with the finest Fleece of any in Germany; the Staple-Commodity of this Country: and in the mountainous parts hereof there want not rich Mines of Brass, Lead, and other Metals, which yield great profit to the people.

Chief Towns herein are, 1. Alend-riff, on the Wefer (or Visurgis) of much esteem for the Springs or Fountains of Salt, which are thereabouts. 2. Fritzlar, upon the Eder, well walled, and situate in a fruitful and pleasant Soil, belonging to the Archbishop and Elector of Mentz, but, in regard of the convenient situation of it, much aimed at, many times attempted, and sometimes forcibly possessed, both by the Lantgraves of Hassia and Dukes of Saxony. 3. Fulda, on a River of that name, remarkable for the Monastery there founded by Boniface, Archbishop of Mentz, by the name of Saint Savours, the Abbot of which is a Prince of the Empire, Chancellor of the Emperors, and Lord of a goodly Territory in this Country, called from hence Stift Fuld. 4. Frankenberg, on the Eder also, so called from the French, who encamped there in their Wars against the Saxons; first founded by Theodorick the French King, Anno 520, but much enlarged by Charles the Great about the year 804. 5. Eschwege, on the brow of an Hill, near the River Wert; of great trading for Wood, of which the Fields adjoining yield a rich increase. Being destroyed by the Hungarians, it was re-edified and enlarged by the Emperor Henry the 2. and having suffered much misery in the long War between Adolph Archbishop of Mentz and the Lantgraves of Hassia, it fell at last into the possession of the Lantgrave, Anno 1387. 6. Melsingen, on the River Fuld. 7. Darmstadt, lately, if not at the present, the Seat and inheritance of Count Ludowick, of the younger House of the Lantgraves, taken prisoner by Count Mansfield, Anno 1622, and his whole Country exposed unto spoil and rapine, because (besides many other ill offices) he was the chief perswader of the Princes of the Union to disband their Forces, provided for defence of themselves and the Palatinate, and to reconcile themselves to the Emperor. By the Treaty of Munster, they were freed from all subjection of the Lantgrave, and declared independent Lords by a subsequent Agreement made in the year 1668, the Bishop of Paderborne, upon the failure of the Male Line of Waldeck, is to succeed in the County and Castle of Pymont, paying 20000 Imperials to the Daughters of the last possessed Prince, who are to enjoy it till this Money is pay'd. 8. Narpurg; the seat of the second House of the Lantgraves, descending from that Philip who was Lantgrave in the time of Charles the Fifth, whom he so valiantly withstood; pleasantly seated on the Lon, amongst Viny Downs and shady Mountains; honoured with an University founded here by Lewis Bishop of Munster, Anno 1426, and beautified with a magnificent Castle (the ordinary dwelling of those Princes) situate on an high Hill somewhat out of the Town, which gives it a very gallant Prospect over the Town and Country. The present Count of Waldeck and Pymont, is Christian Lewis, born in the year 1635, and his eldest Son Frederrick, born in 1653, he had a second Son call'd Fredrick Lewis, born in 1672. 9. Geisen, a Town belonging to the Lantgraves of Cassels, and a small University also. 10. Dietz, upon the River Lon, belonging also to the House of Cassels. 11. Cassels, the chief Town and ordinary Residence of the Lantgraves of the elder House, who are hence sometimes called the Lantgraves of Cassels: commodiously seated in a pleasant and fruitful Soil, and well fortified with strong earthen Walls and deep Ditches; but the houses in it of no great beauty, being composed for the most part of Wood, Thatch and Clay. 12. Weslax or Wetzlar, an Imperial and Free City, upon the Lohne also, 7 miles from Francfort to the North, to this City the Imperial Chamber was removed from Spire, in the year 1689, by the Diet of Germany, the French having demolished and destroyed all the building in Spire before this Decree passed.

Within the Limits of this Province is the County of WALDECK, not subject to the Lantgraves of Hassia, though included within the Bounds of it before laid down, taking up the Western parts thereof, where it meets with Westphalia: in figure very near a square, each side of which is of the length of six ordinary Dutch, or twenty four English miles. The Soil is much of the same nature with the rest of Hassia, save that it hath some veins of Quick-silver and inexhaustible Mines of Coal, which the other wanteth; these last in great plenty about Wildung, and the strong Castle of Eisenberg, two of the best Towns and places of it. Others of chief note are, 3. Waldeck it self, on the River Eder, the first Seat of the Earls hereof, who have here an ancient Castle, from whence the whole Country takes its name. 4. Mungerickbuse, in a fair Castle whereof live the present Earls. 5. Witterberg, in a pleasant and fruitful Soil, betwixt the Rivers Twische and Abra. 6. Corbach, famous in the times of Albertus Magnus for its Golden Mines, yielding great profit to these Earls. The Pedigree of which Earls is fetched from one Wittikind Earl of Snalenberg, whom Charles the Great made advocate or Patron of the Church of Paderborn in Westphalia, being an Office in those times of great Jurisdiction. By Wittikind the second, one of his Successors: this Office was surrendered into the Hands of the Chapter, for the sum of 300 marks in Silver; and to cut off all farther Claims, Henry, the Nephew of this Wittikind by his Son Otho, was by the Chapter gratified with the Town of Waldeck, of which he was the first Earl, whose Nephew Henry, surnamed Ferreus, subdued Corbach, Anno 1366, and added it to his Estate. By a third Henry Grandchild of this Ferreus, or Man of Iron; this Earldom, formerly held in Fee of the Church of Paderborn, was first under the Patronage and Protection of the Lantgraves of Hassia, Anno 1428, as it continueth to this day. Since restored, the Earls hereof content with their own Estates, and more addicted to the Book than unto the Sword, have acted little in the Wars to improve their Fortunes. This City was taken by the Imperialists, in the year 1647, but the Castle holding out, it was Plundered and deserted again.

The ancient Inhabitants of the whole, both Waldeck and the rest of Hassia, and also of the Country of Nassau in in Veteravia near adjoining, were the Catti or Chatti, mentioned by the Ancients. It was first conquered (after the withdrawing of the Roman Forces) by the Hessi, and both subdued not long after by the Thuringians: subject unto the Lantgraves of Duringen, till the death of Henry the last of the Male-issue of Lewis of Orleans. In the division of whose Estate, the Western moiety of Duringen fell to the share of Henry Duke of Brabant, one of the Competitors who leaving the Title of Lantgrave of Duringen to the Marquiss of Misnia, took to himself the Title of the Lantgrave of Hessen, in memory of the Hessi spoken of before. Of his Successors the most puissant was that Philip who in the time of Charles the fifth much swayed the Affairs of Germany, Anno 1520. he discomfited King Ferdinand, and restored Ulric to the Dukedom of Wittenberg, Anno 1530, he united all the Protestant Princes and Cities of Germany in common League at Smalcald, for the defence of the Protestant Religion, Anno 1545, he undertook the Cause of Goslaria against the Duke of Brunswick, whom in a set Battle he took prisoner, together with his Son, and possessed his Country. Anno 1548, he united all the Princes and Cities of Germany in an offensive and defensive League against Charles the fifth. But that War succeeded not prosperously; for the Duke of Saxony, his perpetual Confederate, being taken prisoner, he submitted himself to the Emperor at Kala, or Hale in Duringen; his Sons-in-law, Duke Maurice, the Marquiss of Brandenburg, and Wolfgang Prince of Deuxponts, having given their Bonds for his return. The Condition of his Pardon were first, that he should dismantle all his Towns, except Cassels. 2. That he should yield up unto the Emperor all his Munition. 3. That he should pay unto the Emperor 150000 Crowns the same night he was by the Duke of Alva invited to Supper, his Sons-in-law of Saxony and Brandenburg accompanying him. After Supper he was contrary to the Laws of Hospitality and the Emperors exact Promise, detained Prisoner. The fallacy stood thus: In the Emperors Compact with the three Princes the words were, that the Lantgrave should be kept, Nicht in einig gefengknes, that is, not in any Prison; which the Emperors Secretary, by a small dash of his Pen, turned into Nicht in ewig gefengknes, that is, not in everlasting prison. Well in prison he staid five years, which being expired, he was again set at large by Duke Maurice the overthrower and restorer of the German Liberty. The Residue of these Lantgraves in their several times occur in the ensuing Catalogue of

The Lantgraves of HASSIA.

- 1263 1. Henry of Brabant, Son of Henry Duke of Brabant, and of Sophia his Wife, Daughter of Lewis the sixth, Lantgrave of Thuringia, after a nine years War betwixt him and the Marquiss of Misnia, divided the Estate, and took unto himself the Title of Lantgrave of Hessen.
- 1308 2. Otho and John, Sons of Henry.
- 1323 3. Henry II. and Lewis, Sons of Otho.
- 1376 4. Herman, the Son of Lewis.
- 1414 5. Lewis II. Son of Herman, surnamed the Mild.
- 1458 6. Lewis III. Son of Lewis the Mild.
- 1471 7. William, the eldest Son of Lewis the third, dispossessed of his Estate by
- 1509 8. William the II. his youngest Brother.
9. Philip, the famous Lantgrave spoken of before Son of William the second, was born in the year 1504, at five years of Age, he became Lantgrave, in 1518 he was declared of full Age, in 1527 he embraced the Reformation, in 1531 he founded the University of Marpurg, in 1547 he was taken Prisoner by Charles the 5th.

Hesse Cassel.

- 1657 10. William III. eldest Son of Philip, born the 24th of June 1533, succeeded in one moiety of the Estate, and resided at Cassels, the other moiety being divided betwixt his Brethren, Ludowick of Marpurg, and George of Darmstadt, Father of Ludowick of Darmstadt before mentioned. William III. was a Learned Prince, and a great lover of Astronomy, he sought all the ways that were possible to gain his Fathers Liberty, and died the 25th of August 1592.
- 1590 11. Maurice, eldest Son of William the third, born the 25th of May 1572. A Learned and a Zealous Prince for the Protestant Religion, for the Preservation of which he began a League in 1603, which after grew up into an Union; but being overpowered by Count Tilly in the year 1626, he was forced to surrender his Estates to his Son William, after which he lived privately till the year 1632.
- 1626 12. William IV. Son of Maurice, born the 14th of February 1602, surnamed the Constant, pursued his Fathers Methods, and was as Zealous a defender of the Reformation, to which purpose he Leagued with Gustavus Adolphus, and fought under his Banners in the Battle of Leypsic. He died in Friesland in the year 1637, the 21th of September.
- 1637 13. William V. born the 29th of May 1629, a Child when his Father died; lived under the Tutelage of Elizabeth his Mother (a brave and Magnanimous Lady) till the year 1650, in the year 1649, he Married Sophia the daughter of George William, Elector of Brandenburg, and died of an Apoplexy July the 16th 1663.
- 1663 14. William VI. Son of the former, born the 21th of June 1651, died of the Small-pox the 21th of November 1670.
- 1670 15. Charles, Brother of William VI. and Son of William the 5th, was born the 3d of August 1654, he is now living and has several Sons viz, Frederick, Born the 28th of April 1676. Charles, born the 12th of June 1680. Leopold, born the 30th of December 1684.

The Arms of these Lantgraves are Azure, a Lion Barry of Eight pieces, Argent and Gules crowned Or, Which being properly and originally the Arms of the ancient Dukes of Franconia, were given by Conradus Salicus, Duke of Franconia, and Emperor, to Lewis of Orleans, at such times as he invested him in the Lantgravedom of Thuringia: on the expiration of whose Line they were challenged and born by the Lantgraves of Hassia, as the direct Heirs of Lewis the 6th, and his Brother Henry, the last male Princes of that House.

Hesse Darmstadt.

- 1567 1. George the youngest Son of Philip the Magnanimous, was the Author of this Line. He was born the 10th of September 1547.
- 1596 2. Lewis Son of George, born the 24th of September 1577.
- 1626 3. George II, born the 17th of March 1605.
- 1671 4. Lewis II. born the 25th of January 1678.
- 1678 5. Ernest Lewis, born the 15th of December 1667, is now living. His Sons are George, born the 25th of April 1669. Philip the 21th of July 1671, &c.

The Line of Hesse Homburg.

- 1596 1. Frederick Son of George, the Founder of the Line of Hesse Darmstadt. He was born the Fifth of May 1585, and died the 9th of May 1638.

- 1638 2. William Christopher, born the 13th of November 1625, he died in the year 1665.
 1665 3. George Christian, born the 10th of December 1626, he turned Roman Catholick, and died without any Issue in the year 1677.
 1677 4. Frederick, Brother of George, born the 30th of May 1630. He has three Sons, Frederick born 1673, Charles Christian in 1674, and Philip born in 1676.

Of the Increase, and Decrease of this Family.

Henry of Brabant the first of this House, in the year 1280 got into his hands the City of Immenhausen, and in 1281. In 1290 Eschwegen, in 1293 Stauffenberg. In 1329 Treffurt upon the Werr, in 1350 Henry purchased the Castle of Kenigsberg, in 1353 the Bailywick of Ibern, and in 1360, he bought the City of Smalcald. In 1386 the Count of Dietz dying without Issue, the greatest part of that Earldom was annexed to this Family. In 1453 upon the like Death of the Count of Zeighenheim, that Earldom and Nidda was also united to this Family. In 1464, Henry obtained from the Arch-bishop of Mentz, the Earldom of Battenberg. In 1478, by a Marriage it gained Butzbach. In 1480 Henry bought Fridenwald. In 1492 William added Epstein. In 1557, after a long contest this Family gained from that of Nassau, Catzen-Ellenbogen. In 1504 Bickenbach. In 1571 Plesse, and part of Hoyen, In 1583 Frankenstein. In 1600, Lewis of Darmstadt, purchased Kelsterbach upon the Maine. In 1648, the Abby of Hirschfeld under the Title of a Principality, and a great part of the Earldom of Schaunberg, was gained.

This Family has not wasted any part of its Patrimony, nor has it any pretences, but to that of a Mutual League of Succession, with the Families of Saxony and Brandenburg.

21. WESTPHALIA.

WESTPHALIA is bounded on the East with Hassia, Brunswick, and part of Lunenbourg; on the West with the Bishoprick of Colen, Cleve, Over-Yffel, West and East-Friesland, and the German Ocean; on the North with the Elb, and the Dukedom of Holstein; and on the South with Weteravia, and some part of Hassia.

It was thus called of the Westphalia, a Tribe or Division of the Saxons, distinguished heretofore into the Transalbinos, inhabiting beyond the Elb or Albis, in the County of Holstein, now a part of Denmark, the Oostphali, betwixt the Elb, the Ocean, with the River of Sala and the Weser, taking up the Bishopricks of Breme, Virden, Hildesheim, Halberstadt and Meydeburg, with the Dukedom of Lunenbourg and Brunswick; the Angrivarians, taking up the North-West part of the modern Westphalen, betwixt the Bishoprick of Breme and the Earldom of Oldenburg; and finally, the Westphali or Western Saxons, inhabiting the rest of the modern Westphalen with the Earldoms of Marck, Berg, Zutphen, the Seignoury of Over-Yffel, and some parts of Gelderland and Holland. But the Saxons being subjugated by the power of the French, and several new Estates erected out of that old Stock; the remnant of the Westphali and Angrivarians (the Bishoprick of Breme being added unto the account) were comprehended and united in the name of Westphalen.

The Soil according to the several parts of it, is of different natures: the parts adjoining to the Weser being desert and barren; those toward the Earldoms of Marck and Bergen mountainous and full of Woods; the Bishoprick of Bremen, except towards the Elb, full of dry Sands, Heaths and unfruitful Thickets, like the wilde parts of Windsor Forest betwixt Stanes and Fernham. In other parts it is exceeding plentiful of Corn, and of excellent Pasturage; stored with great plenty of wilde Fruits, and (by reason of the many Woods) abundance of Acorns; with infinite Herds of Swine (which they breed up with those natural helps) of so good a relish, that a Gamon of Westphalie Bacon is reckoned for a principal Dish at a great man's Table.

The old Inhabitants hereof were the Chanci majores about Bremen; the Chamavi, Angrivarii and Brucleri, inhabiting about Munster, Osnabruck, and so towards the Land of Colen; and part of the Cherusci (before spoken of) taking up those parts which lie nearest unto Brunswick and Lunenbourg. All of them were vanquished by Drusus the Son-in-Law of Augustus, but soon restored to their former liberty by the great overthrow given by the Cherusci and their Associates to Quintilius Varus. Afterwards uniting into one name with the French, they expelled the Romans out of Gaul, leaving their forsaken and ill inhabited Seats to be taken by the Saxons, with whom the remainders of them did incorporate themselves both in Name and Nation. Of that great Body it continued a considerable Member, (both when a Kingdom and a Dukedom) till the Proscription and Deprivation of Duke Henry the Lion: at what time the parts beyond the Weser were usurped by Bernard Bishop of Paderborn; those betwixt the Weser and the Rhene, by Philip Archbishop of Colen, whose Successors still hold the Title of Dukes of Westphalen: the Bishopricks of Breme, Munster, Paderborn and Minden, having been formerly endowed with goodly Territories, had some accruments also out of this Estate, every one catching hold of that which lay nearest to him. But not to make too many Subdivisions of it, we will divide it only into these two parts, viz. 1. Westphalen specially so called, and 2. the Bishoprick of Bremen.

1. In WESTPHALIEN specially so called, which is that part hereof which lieth next to Cleve, the places of most observation are, 1. Geseke a Town of good repute; 2. Brala a Village of great beauty; 3. Arnsberg and 4. Fredeborch, honoured with the Title of Prefectures. 5. Wadenborch: 6. Homburg, Lording it over fair and spacious Territories. All which with two Lordships and eight Prefectures, more dispersed in the Dukedom of Engern and County of Surland, belonging unto the Bishop of Colen, the titular Duke of Westphalen, and really of Angrivaria, (Engern) as he styles himself: the Title and Possession of Henry Duke of Engern being acquired unto this See by Bruno Archbishop hereof, Son of Henry the first, Emperor and King of Germany, surnamed the Fowler, with the consent of Otho the first, his elder Brother. 7. Mountabour, (perhaps Mont-Tabor) seated in that part hereof which is called Westerwald; a Town of consequence, belonging to the Elector of Triers. 8. Rhenen, 9. Schamlut, and 10. Beckem; reasonable good Towns; all of the Bishoprick of Munster. 11. Munster it self famous for the Treaty, and Conclusions made upon that Treaty for the Peace of Germany in 1648, seated upon the River Ems, and so called from a Monastery here founded by Charles the great which gave beginning to the Town; supposed to be that Mediolanum which Ptolomy placeth in this Tract. A beautiful and well fortified City, and the See of a Bishop, who is also the Temporal Lord of it, famous for the woful Tragedies here acted by a lawless crue of Anabaptists in 1583, who chose themselves a King (that famous Tailor John of Leyden) whom they called King of Sion, as they named the City New Jerusalem, proclaimed a Community both of Goods and Women, cut off the heads of all that opposed their doings; and, after many fanatick and desperate Actions, were by the care and industry of the Bishop and his Confederates brought to condign punishment. The Story is to be seen at large in Sleiden, Mr. Hooker's Preface, and some modern Pamphlets, wherein, as in a Mirrour, we may plainly see the face of the present Times. This City suffered very much in the year 1661, being then taken by Bernard its Bishop, a Warlike and restless Prelate. 12. Osnabruck, first built as, some say, by Julius Caesar, as others, by the Earls of Engern; but neither so ancient as the one, nor nor of so late a standing as the others make it. Here is an Episcopal See founded by Charles the Great, who gave it all the Privileges of an University; liberally endowed at the first erection of the same, and since so well improved both in Power and Patrimony, that an alternate Succession in it by the Dukes of Brunswick hath been concluded on in the Treaty of Munster, as a fit Compensation for the Bishoprick of Halberstadt, (otherwise disposed of by that Treaty) of late enjoy'd wholly by that Family. This City is famous for a Peace here concluded between the Emperor and the Crown of Sweden, in the year 1648. 13. Quakenburg, on the River Hase. 14. Warndorp, and 15. Wildshusen; Towns of that Bishoprick. 16. Paderborn, an Episcopal See also, Founded by Charles the Great at the first Conversion of the Saxons; more ancient than strong, and yet more strong than beautiful. 17. Ringelstein, and 18. Offendorf; belonging to the Bishop of Paderborn. 19. Minden, upon the Wefer, another of the Episcopal Sees Founded by Charles the Great, and by him liberally endowed with a goodly Patrimony; converted to Lay-uses since the Reformation, under colour of Administration of the Goods of the Bishoprick, and now, by the Conclusions at Munster, settled for ever on the Electors of Brandenburg, with the Title of Prince of Minden. 20. Rintelen, a strong Town, conveniently seated on the Wefer, not far from Minden, to the Bishop whereof it doth belong.

Hitherto one would think that Westphalen had formerly been a part of S. Peter's Patrimony, belonging wholly to the Clergy: But there are some Free Cities and Secular Princes which have shares therein. As, 1. Warburg, a neat Town, but seated on an uneven piece of Ground near the River Dimula: a Town which tradeth much in good Ale, brewed here, and sold in all parts of the Country: heretofore a County of it self under the Earls hereof, now govern'd in the nature of a Free Estate, and reckoned an Imperial City. 2. Brakel, accounted of as Imperial also. 3. Hervorden, a Town of good strength and note, govern'd by its own Laws and Magistrates, under the Protection of Colen. 4. Lemgow, belonging heretofore to the Earls of Lippe; but by them so well Privileged and Enfranchised, that now it governeth it self as a free Estate. Here is also, 5. the Town and County of Ravensperg, belonging anciently to the Dukes of Cleve, and now in the Right of that House to the Elector of Brandenburg: as also, 6. the Town and County of Lippe, lying on the West side of the Wefer; the Pedigree of the Earls whereof some fetch from that Sp. Manlius who defended the Roman Capitol against the Gauls (they might as well derive it from the Geese which preserved that Capitol;) others with greater Modesty look no higher for it than to the time of Charles the Great; one of the Noble Families of the ancient Saxons. 7. Here also stands the Town and Castle of Aremberg, commanding over a large and goodly Patrimony thereunto adjoining; which being much encreased by the accession of Sedan in the neighbouring Belgium, was by the Heir-general of this House conveyed in Marriage to Engelbert, the ninth Earl of Marck, whose second Son, called Eberhard (but the only one he had by this Venter) succeeded in his Mother's Estates and Honours; which were kept undivided, till Eberhard the 6th, Lord thereof, of the House of Marck, contenting himself with the Titles and Estates of Aremberg, left Sedan and the pieces which belonged unto it to his younger Brother Robert. The great Grandchild of this Eberhard, called also Robert, created the first Earl of Aremberg, left his Estates and Titles to his Sister Margaret, married to John Lord of Brabant, a person of great Note and Power in the Belgick Provinces, and faithful to the last in the Cause and Quarrel of King Philip II. in which finally he lost his life, Anno 1568, leaving both his Estates and Title unto Charles his Son, frequently mentioned by the name of Charles Earl of Aremberg in the Stories of the Belgick Wars, in which he was no less considerable for his eminent Valour, than his singular Fidelity to his Lord and Master. Some other Lords and Earls here are, but these most considerable: all of them Homagers of the Empire, but their Acknowledgments hereof little more than titular; though since in danger of performing more real Services; the Emperor Ferdinand the 2d, after the Surprize of Holstein and some part of Denmark, Anno 1626, gaining so far upon this Country, that had not the King of Sweden come in so seasonably, he had made himself absolute Master of it, and, by the opportunity of the situation of it on the back of the Netherlands, forced the United States to some great Extremities. As for the Title of Duke of Westphalen and Engen, it hath been long used (as before was said) by the Bishops of Colen; as also (but with better Right as to that of Westphalen) by the House of Lauenburg, descended from the ancient Electoral Family, writing themselves in that regard Dukes of Saxony, Westphalen, and Angriaria or Engern.

2. The Bishoprick of BREME lieth on the other side of the Wefer, extending as far as to the Elb and the German Ocean. So called of, 1. Breme, the principal City, seated on the Wefer, there broad and navigable; the City by that means well traded, populous and rich, beautified with fair and even Streets, and very strongly Fortified against all Invasions both by Art and Nature, the Town being so seated amongst Fens, occasioned by the Overflowings of the River, that it may be easily drowned on all sides, to keep off an Enemy; adorned also with a spacious Market-place, a fair Council-house, and a large Cathedral, the See of the Archbishop, who is the Temporal Lord of the Town and Territory. Other Towns of special note are, 2. Oferbridge, not far from Breme, from whence great quantity of Linnen is brought yearly to England and other places. 3. Wruften, on the Wefer also. 4. Otterendorp, on the River Bolla, not far from the fall thereof into the Ocean. 5. Boxtehude, on the Elbe, not far from Hamburg, but on the either side of the Water. 6. Stode, Stade, or Stadium, seated on the River Zwinghe, near the fall thereof into the Elb; accounted the ancientest Town of all Saxony, and one of the first which was enrolled amongst the Hanse, and by special Privilege had the pre-emption of all the Rhenish Wine that passed by them, and the Right also of Coining Money. But being over-topped by the Power and Trade of Hamburg, (5 Dutch Miles from it) it grew at length so poor, and in such decay, that their yearly Revenues came but to 90 l. per Annum, so that they were fain to sell their Privileges to the Town of Hamburg, and put themselves under the Protection of the Bishop of Breme. It revived again upon the coming thither of the English Merchants, who, finding some hard measure from the Hamburgers, fixed their Staple here: by means whereof the Citizens in short time grew exceeding Wealthy, the Buildings fair and beautiful, the Town strongly fortified. It is situate in a place so easily overwhelmed with Water, that the People; in ostentation of their strength and security, used to have Ordnance of Stone planted over their Gates. But the late German Wars have made them sensible of their Folly; when, notwithstanding their new Works, and an English Garrison under Sir Charles Morgan, they were compelled to submit themselves to the Earl of Tilly, Anno 1627, recovered after by the Svedes, in the course of their Victories; to whom it was afterwards granted by the Treaty of Munster: in the year 1676, it was taken by the Duke of Brunswick, but in 1680 it was again restored to the Svedes.

As for the Bishoprick of Bremen, it was first Founded by Charles the Great, in the Person of V. Willibred an English Saxon, one of the first Preachers of the Gospel in these parts of this Country. The Town, before that time a poor Village only, being made an Archiepiscopal See, and the Metropolitan of all the Churches of the North, quickly grew up into esteem, as the Bishop did in Power and Patrimony, till they became Lords of this Tract. It was governed since the Reformation of Religion gion by Lay-Bishops or Administrators of the Rents of the Bishoprick, which under that Title they inverted to their proper use. And now of late, by the Conclusions made at Munster, is settled as an Inheritance on the Crown of Sweden, to be enjoy'd, together with the Bishoprick of Verden, by the Kings thereof, with the Title of Dukes of Bremen and Verden: the ancient Liberties of those Cities, formerly granted by their Bishops, being still preserved.

22. EAST-FRIESLAND.

EAST-FRIESLAND is bounded on the East with the River Wefer, by it parted from Westphalia; on the West with the River Ems, which parteth it from Groeningen and the rest of West-Friesland; on the North with the German Ocean; and on the South with the Earldom of Marck, and part of Cleveland. So called from the Frisii, who, casting out the old Inhabitants, possessed themselves of it, and called it by their own name, Friesland: divided by the Ems or Amisus, into the Western, spoken of amongst the Netherlands, and the Eastern or East-Friesland, in which now we are.

The nature of the Soil we shall see anon, when we come to the Subdivisions of it. The chief Rivers (besides those of, 1. Ems, and 2. Wefer, spoken of elsewhere) are, 3. Jada, which falleth into a great Bay or Arm of the Ocean, called from hence De Jade. 4. Dollaert, on which standeth the City of Emden. 5. Delm, and 6. Horn, neighboured by Delmenhorst and Oldenburg, Towns of this Country. The whole is divided into, 1. The County of Emden, or East-Friesland, properly so called; and, 2. The Earldom of Oldenburg.

1. EAST-FRIESLAND specially so called hath on the West the River Ems, on the North the Ocean, on the East and South the Earldom of Oldenburg: called also the County of EMBDEN, from the fair Town of Emden, the chief City of it. The Soil hereof is very fruitful both in Corn and Pasturage, sending great store of Oxen, Horses, Wooll, Swine, Butter, Cheese, and all sorts of Grain, into other Countries; all of them excellent in their kind, not easily to be bettered (if equalled) in any place whatsoever. Chief Towns herein are, 1. Emden, so called from the Ems, on which it is situate; Dollaert, a small River falling here into it, a noted and well-traded Town, beautified with a Haven so deep and large, that the greatest Ships which sail are admitted into it. The People are rich, affirm'd to have 60 Ships of 100 Tons apiece, and 600 lesser Barks, of their own; besides 700 Busses and Fisher-boats, maintained for the most part by their Herring-fishing on the Coasts of England. The Buildings are generally fair, both private and publick, especially the Church, the Town-Hall, and Earl's Palace. This last is a strong and stately Castle, situate at the mouth of the Haven, and on all sides encompassed by the Sea, and yet not strong enough to preserve the Townsmen in their due Obedience: who in the year 1595, taking advantage of the Absence of the Earl, kept him out of their Town, because he seemed not to prove of the Calvinian Humour; and have since govern'd in the nature of a Commonwealth, confederate with the States of the United Provinces, for their better Establishment and Support. So easily is Religion made a Mask to disguise Rebellion. This City fell first into the hands of the Earls of Emden about the Year 1454, it was small and not much frequented at the time of the Reformation, but Ann of Oldenburg, the Mother and Guardian of Ezard the first, her Son treating all that fled thither with great kindness, it grew to an excessive Wealth and Greatness: But Ezard the second, Son of the former, being a Lutheran, began to curb and suspect the Calvinists, who to protect them called in the Hollanders in the year 1595, who took possession of it with 1000 Men, as Mediators between the City and the Earl, in pretence, but in reality as Masters; since which time their Trade and Wealth are wasted to nothing.

2. Aurick, by some called Anseling, seated in the Inlands, rich and well walled, of great resort by reason of the Pleasure of Hunting, afforded very liberally in the Forests and Woods adjoining, drawing hither the Nobility and Gentry in great abundance. 3. Esen, on the Sea-shore, which gives the Title of an Earl to the Lord thereof; as doth also, 4. Fever, situate on the West of the River Jada; but both Earls subject to the Earl of East-Friesland. 5. Vredburg, (that is to say, the Free Village) so called from some Immunities granted by the Earls; possessed a while by those of Brunswick, who fenced and garrisoned it for themselves, but in the end recovered by Ezard the second Earl. 6. Broeck, the Seat and proper Government of the Ancestors of these Earls; from whence the parts adjoining are called Broeckmerland. 7. Norden, another Prefecture or Captainship of the said Ancestors. 8. Dunort, a strong Castle and Retiring-place of the Earls. 9. Lingen, upon the Ems, a strong Town well Fortified, and as well Garrison'd; belonging to the King of Spain, as Vicar to the Empire over all Friesland, even to Ditmarsh and the Confines of Denmark. A Dignity procur'd by Maximilian, Grandfather to Charles the 5th of the Emperor Frederick the 3d in right whereof the King of Spain, as Heir of the House of Burgundy, hath some pre-eminence over Emden, of little use to him since the falling off of the Belgick Provinces. This Town and County belonged to the Counts of Tecklenburg till the year 1546, when Charles the 5th seized it as forfeited by the Earls Rebellion against him. In the year 1597 the Hollanders by force of Arms extorted it from Philip II. his Son, and gave it to Maurice, Prince of Orange, to Recompence his Losses in their Service. In the Spanish Treaty with the States in 1648, the Spaniards renounced their Right to the Prince in as ample manner as it was granted to them by Charles the 5th in 1546, this Renuntiation was renewed and confirm'd in 1678, and continues still under that Prince. More Towns of note I find not in it, but of Castles, stately dwelling Houses, and well-built Villages, an incredible number; standing so thick, that in many places they join together: some of them being withal so large, so well peopled, and of Streets so spacious, that they may compare with many Cities in Germany. Of all which the most City-like is named Leere.

The ancient Inhabitants hereof were the Chauci minores, described by Pliny, to be so barbarous a People, and so destitute of all necessary Provision for the Life of Man, that they had no drink but Rain-water, preserved in great Troughs before the Doors of their Cottages. These were outed or subdued by the Frisons, a neighbouring People possessing North-Holland the District of Utretch, with the Countries of Groening and West-Friesland, who having once passed over the Ems, extending their Dominions as far as Denmark; governed by Kings, but intermingled with and overpowered by the Saxons, till the time of Charles the Great, by whom the last King Roboald overcome in fight was perswaded to receive the Sacrament of Holy Baptism: but being told that his Friends and Kinsfolks were in Hell, because no Christians, Neither will I (saith he) be of that Profession, for I love to be amongst my Kindred. After this, Friesland was a Member of the French Kingdom, till the erecting of the Earldom of Holland by Charles the Bald, An. 893. at which time all Friesland on the West side of the Ems was conferred upon him; possessed, but not without much War and Bloodshed by his Successors; the Frisons ever and anon rebelling against them, and killing divers of them in the open Field. Those parts of it on the other side of the Ems remained unto the German Empire: governed by Deputies, Lieutenants, and Provincial Earls, accountable to the Emperors for the Administration till the year 1453, in which Ulrich, Governor hereof for the Emperor Frederick, having got the Town of Emden out of the hands of the Hamburgers, was made Earl of East-Friesland, transmitting the Estate and Title unto his Posterity.

Earls

Earls of EAST-FRIESLAND.

- 1453 1. Ulricus, Son of Enno, the Son of Ezardus, Captains or Governours for the Empire in Broeck and Norden, made the first Earl of East-Friesland by the Emperor Frederick.
- 1466 2. Enno, Eldest Son of Ulrick, succeed and was drown'd in passing over the Ire after one Engelman, Governour of Freburg, who had Rebelled against him, he being unmarried was succeed by his Brother.
- 1491 3. Ezard the Son of Ulrick, who got Vredenburg, from the Citizens of Brunswick.
- 1528 4. Enno the Son of Ezard, who regained Greetzyl, formerly usurped by the Dukes of Geldres.
- 1540 5. Ezard II. Son of Enno who married Katharine, Daughter to Gustavus the first of Sweden.
- 1586 6. Enno II. Son of Ezard the 2. and the Lady Katharine.
- 1625 7. Rodolphus Christianus, Son of Enno the 2. who was a Prince of great hope, but was unfortunately slain in a Tumult, and succeeded by
- 1628 8. Ulrick his brother, an excellent Prince, and fit for the times of Trouble, in which he lived.
- 1648 9. Enno Lewis his Son, was in the year 1654, made a Prince by Ferdinand 3. he died without any Male-Issue, the 4th of April, 1660.
- 1660 10. George Christian, brother of the former, to whom the present Emperor in 1662, confirmed the honour granted to this Family by his Father, he died the 10th of June 1665, leaving his Wife big with Child, who the 11th of October, that year, brought fourth
- 1665 11. Christian Eberard, the present Prince of East-Friesland, of whom I can give no further account.

The Arms of the Earls of East-Friesland are Argent, four Bendlets Azure, charged with ten Hearts Or, 4, 3, 2, 1.

2. The Earldom of OLDENBURG containeth that part of this Country which lieth on the West-side of the Weser, betwixt the Bishoprick of Munster and East-Friesland specially so called, and so extending Northwards to the German Ocean. So called from Oldenburg, the chief City of it, and the head of this Earldom.

The Soil hereof is exceeding rich, but in Pastures specially, which breed them infinite Herds of Cattle, and furnish not this Country only, but some of their German Neighbours, and many of the more Northern Nations, with Horses, Beeves, Sheep, Swine, Butter, Cheese. Here is also good store of Pulse, Barley and Oats; plenty of Fruits and Trees of all sorts. Large Woods, and those well stored with Venison, which yield unto the Gentry the delights of Hunting. But the Air is cold and foggy in some extremity; especially in Winter, and nigh the Sea.

Chief Towns hereof are, 1. Oldenburg, on the River Honta, repaired, if not built, by Orho the Great, who founded the Church of S. John-Baptist. A Town of no great state or beauty; the Houses being generally of Clay, but the Cattle (the Dwelling-place of the Earls) of well hewn stones; of an orbicular form, with deep Ditches of Water, the Town and Cattle both being strongly fortified. This City was totally burnt down in the year 1676, that very day the Citizens were to have taken the Oath of Allegiance to the King of Denmark. In the year 1688, the King of Denmark offer'd this Town and Country in Exchange for Sleswick, to the Duke of Holstein, but it was refused. 2. Delmenhorst, on the River Delm, a strong place and of great importance, built in the year 1247 by Orho, Brother of Earl Christian the 2. and having been 65 years in possession of the Bishops of Munster, was suddenly surprized on Palm-Sunday morning by Anthony Earl of Oldenburg, Anno 1547, continuing ever since part of this Estate. 3. Beckhusen, on a River which falleth not far off into the great Bay or Arm of the Sea which is called De Jade. 4. Eggenorden. 5. Ovelgord; both seated on a long Languet or Demy-Iland betwixt the said De Jade and the River Weser, called Butiada: both taken and the last well fortified by John Earl of Oldenburg, Anno 1520, belonging formerly to the Prefecture of East-Friesland, but never brought under the command of the Earls thereof. 6. Wijsterberg, the chief Town, of a spacious Territory. 7. Vriejade, a strong piece on the River Jade, built by Earl Christiern, one of the younger branches of the House of Oldenburg, about the year 1400. 8. Mellum, 9. Jadelle, places of principal importance; the one on the River Jade, the other near the Ocean. Here is also within this Earldom the province of Amerlander, supposed by some to have been the Seat of the Ambrones, who accompanied the Cimbri and Teutones in their Expedition towards the Roman Provinces, and were slain by Marinus.

As for the Earls of Oldenburg, they derive themselves from Walpert, one of the Nephews of Wittikindus, the last King and first Duke of the Saxons; who having about the year 850, built a strong Castle on the borders of Bremen, in the honour of his Wife Alteberg, (whom he dearly loved) called it Alteburgum, so called by the Teutons to this day, by the Germans Oldenborch. But his Male-issue failing in Frederick the 7. Earl, it came to one Elimar, the Son of Haio, a Nobleman of the Frisian blood, who had married Richsa, the Daughter of John, the 5th Earl of this Family. From him in a direct Line descended Christian or Christiern, eldest Son of Theodorick; who being fortunately advanced to the Crown of Denmark, An. 1448, left his Estate in this Earldom (but reserving the Title, according to the fashion of Germany) to his Brother Gerrard, the better to take him off from his pretensions to the Dukedom of Sleswick, and the Earldom of Holstein, in which he did pretend a share. The Patrimony of it was much improved by the additions of the Countries of Rustringen, Ostringen, and Wangerland, all lying on the German Sea, bequeathed by the last Will and Testament of the Lady Mary, Countess of Jever in East-Friesland, to John Earl of Oldenburg, the third from Gerrard. The Succession of these Earls, in regard the Royal Line of Denmark, and by consequence of Great Britain, is descended from them, I have here subjoined in this ensuing Catalogue of

The Earls of OLDENBURG.

- 850 1. Walpert, of the Race of Wittikind, the first Earl of Oldenburg.
- 856 2. Theodorick, the Son of Walpert.
3. Theodorick II. the Son of Theodorick the 1.
4. Orho, Son of Theodorick the 2.
5. John, the Son of Orho, accompanied the Emperor Henry the 2. in his Wars against the Greeks and Saracens, Anno 1007.
6. Huno, surnamed the Glorious, Son of John.
7. Frederick, Son of Huno, fortunate in his Wars against the Frisians; the last of the Male-line of this House.
8. Elimarus, the Son of Haio, a Nobleman of the Frisian blood and of Richsa his Wife, the Daughter of John the fifth Earl.
- 1120 9. Elimarus II. Son to Elimar the first.
10. Christianus, Son of Elimar the 2. surnamed the Courageous, or the Warlike; a professed Enemy of Henry the Lion, Duke of Saxony, from whom he took the City of Breme.

11. Maurice, the Son of Christian, an Associate of Arnulph Earl of Holstein in his Wars with Denmark.
12. Christian II. Son of Maurice.
13. John II. Son of Christian the 2.
14. John III. Son of John the 2.
15. Conrade, the Son of John the third.
16. Christian III. Son of Conrade, a Student in Co-len, where he was initiated into holy Orders, which he relinquished, much against the will of his brother Maurice on the death of his Father.
- 1435 17. Theodorick, Son of Christian the 3d. the first Earl of Delmenhorst of this Line; which fell to him at the death of Nicolas Archbishop of Breme, descended from a younger Son of John the second.
- 1440 18. Christian IV. Son of Theodorick and Hedwigis, Sister and Heir of Gerrard and Adolphus, Dukes of Sleswick, and Earls of Holstein, elected on the commendation of his Uncle Adolphus to the Crown of Denmark, Anno 1448.
- 1448 19. Gerrard, the Brother of Christian the 4th. a Prince of an unquiet spirit, always in Wars, and always worsted. He lost the Town of Delmenhorst to the Bishop of Munster.
- 1500 20. John IV. Son of Gerrard, repaired the Ruines of his Estate, and settled the Distractions of it in the time of his Father, being then in Exile; and after very much enlarged it by the reduction of Frisland.
- 1526 21. Anthony, the Son of John the 4. by a sudden surprise recovered Delmenhorst from the Bishop of Munster, Anno 1547, which he strongly fortified. The Suit for this place was continued between the Earls of Oldenburg, and the Bishops of Munster, till the year 1670, and then was determin'd in favour of the Earls descendents.
- 1573 22. John V. Son of Anthony, enlarged this Earldom with the Provinces of Rustringen, Ostringen, and Wangerland, bequeathed to him by the last Will of the Countess of Jever, in East-Friesland.
- 1647 23. Anthony II. Brother of John the 5. in whose life time he was Earl of Delmenhorst, and after his death of Oldenburg also: still living, Anno 1648, for ought I can learn unto the contrary. This Prince died without any lawful Issue the 19th of June 1667, whereupon arose a Controversie, between Fredrick 3. King of Denmark, and the Dukes of Holstein-Gothorp and Holstein-Ploen for this Earldom, the King of Denmark, and the Duke of Holstein-Gothorp, seized and divided the Earldom between them, but a suit being commenced for it in the Chamber of Spire against them by the Duke of Holstein-Ploen, the King of Denmark in the year 1671, resigned one half of his share to the Duke of Holstein-Ploen, and in 1676, he recovered the other Moiety from the Duke of Holstein-Gothorp, by the sentence of the Chamber of Spire. And afterwards resigned the whole to Christian 5. King of Denmark, in Exchange for some other Lands in Holstein and Sleswick, by which the Earldom of Oldenburg became (in the year 1676) intirely united to the Crown of Denmark.

And thus we see the present Estate of Germany, distracted and divided amongst many Princes, Prelates, and Incorporate Towns, the chief of which are herein mentioned and described. But besides these there are many others of less note and smaller Territories, which yet are absolute and free: insomuch that in one days riding a Traveller may twice or thrice meet with divers Laws and divers Coins; every Free Prince and Free City (whole Laws the Emperors are sworn to keep inviolable) having power to make what Laws and coin what Money they will. And hence, in the Censure of Kingdoms, the King of Spain is said to be Rex hominum; because of his Subjects reasonable Obedience; the King of France, Rex Asinorum, because of their infinite Taxes and Impositions; the King of England, Rex Diabolorum, because of his Subjects often Insurrection against and Deposition of their Princes: but the Emperor of Germany is called Rex Regum, because there is such a number of Reguli or free Princes which live under his Command; or rather at their own Command, (for they do even what they list) as the Emperor Maximilian the first well noted.

And to say truth, the publick Government thereof is nothing less than Monarchical; the Emperor being accounted amongst the Princes but as the Chief Officer of the Empire; not reckoned of, by Bodin, and others of our great Statists and Civilians, as an absolute Monarch, such as the Kings of England, France and Spain, are confessed to be. For the Priviledges of the Free Cities being made perpetual, the great Estates Hereditary, and the Empire Eligible; the Emperors were brought at last to such low Condition, as to be made accountable to the States of the Empire; who if they be perswaded in their Consciences, or but think they be so, that he is likely by his Male-administration to destroy the Empire, or that he will not hearken unto good advice, ab Electorum Collegio Casarea majestate privare potest, (as my Author hath it) he may be deprived by the Electors, and a more fit and able man chosen into the place, and that too, as the Emperor Jodocus Barbatus hath declared in one of his Constitutions, An. 1410, sine Infidelitatis vel Rebellionis crimine, without incurring the crimes of Treason or Disloyalty. So that the supreme Power and Majesty of the Empire seems to reside especially and contractedly in the Electoral Colledge; diffusedly, in the Imperial Diet; by way of Execution, in the Chamber of Spire, and other the supreme Courts of the several Circles. But that which makes that Body which they call the Empire, is the Assembly of the Prelates, Princes and Commissioners of the Free Cities in their Diets or Parliaments, the Emperor presiding in them: whom he that saw adorned in his Royal Robes, with the Imperial Crown and Scepter, with the Titles of Cesar and Augustus given at every word, would think that the whole Action did take life from him; whereas, indeed, he hath not so much Priviledge as a Negative voice, but is to put in execution such Decrees and Sanctions as these Estates assembled have thought fit to make; not able to do any act by his own Authority, which may speak him Emperor. But, on the other side, the Princes take power unto themselves of making Laws for, and imposing Taxes on, their Subjects; of raising War upon one another, or against a third; and doing many other acts of supreme Authority, which in the Emperor would be counted matter of Male-administration. Such Points as these, together with the appointing of Judges and the like chief Magistrates, (as they relate unto the Empire) are not to be concluded of but in general Diets; which may be summoned by or without the Emperor, as occasion serveth. And to this weakening of the Majesty and Power Imperial, the neighbouring princes have afforded their best assistance; jealous of their own Interests and decrease of Power, if that vast Body so well limbed should be strongly joyned, and all the several Members of it united under the command of one supreme Head. Clear proof whereof we have in those solemn Leagues and Confederations made in their several times against Charles the fifth, and the late Emperor Ferdinand the second, as soon as they began to be in some possibility of settling the Imperial Majesty in its proper splendour, and bringing down the Princes of it to a lower pitch.

As for the means by which the Empire is attained, it is, and hath of long time been, by the way of Election, as before was noted. The business was first projected in the Court of Rome by Gregory the first, then Pope, who being a Native of this Country, thought it the most expe-expedient course to continue the Imperial Title among those of his Nation. But whatsoever was pretended, the Design of it chiefly was to make the Emperors less powerful and distract the Germans (whom they feared) into Parts and Factions, that so the Popes might have the better opportunity to grow great in Italy. And that the Emperor might be such as the Pope should like of, the matter was so ordered, that the one half of the Electors should be always of the Ecclesiasticks, who being obnoxious to the Popes, and for the most part driving on their Interest, were very like to serve him on all occasions. The Electors only six in number: that is to say, 1. The Archbishop of Mentz, Chancellor of the Empire, 2. The Archbishop of Colen, Chancellor of Italy. 3. The Archbishop of Triers, Chancellor of France. 4. The Count-Palatine of the Rhene, Arch-Sewer. 5. The Duke of Saxony, Lord Marshal, and 6. the Marquis of Brandenburg, Lord Chamberlain. By the Treaty of Munster, in the year 1648, the Palatine of the Rhene, and the Duke of Bavaria, were both declared Electors, so that the Voices were made even again, and to prevent the mischief this might cause, in December 1692, the present Duke of Hannover, was by the consent of the Diet, declared the 9th Elector by the Emperor. Upon equality of Voices the Duke of Bohemia (now King) was to come in for a seventh; who by Office is to be chief Cup-bearer in all great Solemnities. For upon days of great Solemnities, as Elections, Inaugurations, the first days of the Imperial Diets, and the like to these, these Offices are performed only; and then performed in this manner following, either in Person or by Proxy. Before the Palace-Gate stands an heap of Oats, so high that it reacheth to the breast of the Horse on which the Duke of Saxony rideth, having in his hand a silver Wand and a silver Measure, both which together are to weigh 200 Marks. The Duke, still sitting on his Horse, filleth up the Measure with Oats, then sticks his Wand in the remainder of the heap, delivereth the measure of Oats unto some of his Servants who stand nearest unto him, and so attends the Emperor into the Court. The Emperor being entred and late down at the Table, the three Spiritual Electors, standing orderly together, say the Grace before him. Then cometh the Marquis of Brandenburg on Horse-back also, with a Basin of Water in his hand, (the Basin being of the weight of 12 Marks of Silver) and a fine clean Towel on his Arm; which, alighting from his Horse, he holds to the Emperor till he wash. Next comes the Palatine of the Rhene mounted on his Horse, with four Silver Platters full of Meat, every one of the weight of three Marks of Silver; which, descending from his Horse, after due reverence made, he carrieth and placeth on the Table. And finally the Duke (or King) of Bohemia, entring the great Hall on Horse-back as the others did, with a Napkin on his Arm, and a covered Cup in his Hand of the weight of 12 Marks in Silver, alighteth from his Horse, and presenteth the Cup unto the Emperor. But we must know, that of late times these Offices are seldom or never performed by the Electors in their own Persons. It is enough if they send their Ambassadors, or substitute some one or other of the Emperors Court to do it for them.

The Election is usually celebrated at Francford on the Maine, to which place the Electors or their Deputies are to make repair on the day appointed by the Archbishop of Mentz, whose Office it is (as being Chancellor of the Empire) to issue out the Summons for this Assembly. In their passage unto Francford they are to be sufficiently guarded by every Prince through whose Territories or Dominions they are to travel; their Attendants not to exceed the number of 200 Horse, of which 50 only to be armed. When they are met, they go into S. Bartholomew's Church, (the most Capacious of that City) where, after the High-Mass is said, the three Spiritual Electors laying their hands upon their Breasts, and the Temporal Princes on the Book, make Oath to chuse a fit Temporal Head for the People of Christendom. Upon equality of Voices, as it sometimes happeneth, the Bohemian hath the casting Voice, and concludes the business. If in the space of 30 days they have not agreed upon a man, then must they have no other allowance but of Bread and Water, nor be suffered to go out of the City, till that necessity compelleth them unto some Agreement. Which being at the last resolved on, and declared accordingly, the Prince so elected is presently saluted by the Title of King of the Romans; the Title of Emperor being not properly to be given unto him, until he have received the Imperial Crown at the hands of the Pope: though since the time of Charles the fifth, without any such trouble to themselves or the Popes of Rome, the Title of both Emperor and Imperial Majesty is usually conferred upon them from their first Election. The Election being finished, and signified to the party chosen, the Inauguration was held anciently at three several places: viz. 1. at Aquisgrane, or Aken, in the Land of Gulick, where he received the Silver Crown, for the Kingdom of Germany; 2. at Millain, by the Archbishop whereof he was crowned with the Iron Crown, for Lombardy, or the Realm of Italy; 3. at Rome, where at the hands of the Pope himself, he was crowned with a Golden Crown, for the Roman Empire. But since those Journeys unto Rome and Millain have been long laid by; the Emperors holding their Elections to be strong enough to make good their Title to that Dignity, being merely titular, and their Inauguration at Aken to be as effectual as if they had also visited the two other Cities. The form of which Elections, the Privileges of the Electors, and other fundamental Constitutions of the German Empire, we find summed up together in the Golden Bull of Charles the Fourth, by him promulgated, Anno. 1359. But we must know, that since the publishing of that Bull, the business of Election hath received some change as to the number and the persons of the parties interested. For, it pleased the Emperour Ferdinand the 2. on the Proscription of Frederick the first Elector Palatine, to transfer the Electoral Dignity, with the Office of Archidapifer, or Arch-Sewer, from that House to the Duke of Bavaria, the Title of Elector of Bavaria, with all the Powers and Privileges which belonged unto it, to be infeoffed upon him and his Heirs for ever. Which action of the Emperor being protested against by some of the Electors, in favour of the Palatine Family, and in due care unto themselves, in not admitting such a dangerous precedent for the time to come, it was at last concluded and agreed on by the Pacification made at Munster, Anno 1648. That the Duke of Bavaria and his Heir enjoying the said Electoral Dignity, with the Upper Palatinate, according to the Translation of it from the Palatine Family spoken of before; an eighth Electorate should be added to the former number, to be enjoyed together with the Lower Palatinate by Charles Ludowick, the now Prince Elector Palatine, and his Heirs, who also, on the failure of the Line of Bavaria are to be repossessed of their ancient Rights, the Title of Arch-Treasurer being given unto them at the present instead of that of Archidapifer, or Arch-Sewer, which they had before.

Now as a step unto the Empire, and for the better assurance of the Imperial Dignity to the Austrian Family, it was cunningly projected by Charles the fifth, (having received the Imperial Crown from Pope Clement the 7.) that his Brother Ferdinand should be chosen King of the Romans whilst himself was living, and by that means be the more certain of the Empire after his decease. Which Policy being followed by all his Successors, the Title of Rex Romanorum, or King of the Romans, is grown to be the Title of the Heir apparent, or designed Successor, in the present Empire of the Germans; as that of Cæsar was from the time of Adrian, in the Empire of the ancient Romans. Inasmuch that Rex Romanorum is now defined to be one who is already so far estated in the Empire, that on the Death, Deprivation, or Resignation of the present Emperor, he is immediately to succeed. And so according-dingly it hath happened since this Act of Charles; who though he laboured under-hand to leave the Empire unto Philip his Son and Heir, whom he found capable enough of so high an Honour; yet he could not do it: it being thought by many understanding men, that on notice of this under-hand practice, his Brother Ferdinand, who had the like mind to transmit the Empire to his own Posterity, did secretly lend Duke Maurice his helping hand to drive him out of Germany, as in brief he did. As for the reasons, or, to say better, the pretences, upon which Charles did institute this Rex Romanorum, (for questionless the true reason of it was to perpetuate the Empire in the Austrian Family) they were these that follow. 1. Because that, having the command of many Nations, he could not always personally attend the affairs of Germany. 2. The troubled Estate of Christendom, of the Empire especially, occasioned by the Preachings and Works of Luther. 3. The late rural War raised by the Boors of that Country, on the coming out of these new Doctrines, and not yet thoroughly extinct. 4. The violent power of the Turk, who by his Conquest of a great part of Hungary, was grown too near a neighbour to them. And 5. the imminent Disobedience in all parts of the Empire. All which conjunctly seemed to require some Prince both of Power and Title to assist him in the bearing of so great a Burthen. And by these and the like suggestions he effected his design herein, though thereby he changed in a manner the Imperial Style. For whereas the first Emperors of the House of Charles the Great were Emperors of the Romans, and Kings of Germany; the latter Emperors of the House of Charles the fifth, may not improperly be called Emperors of Germany, and Kings of the Romans. It is true indeed, that the wise and understanding Duke of Saxony saw farther through these Pretences than the rest of the Electors either did or would, and that the main Plot was no other, than to make Germany (as Galba said, in his Oration unto Piso, of the Empire of Rome) unus quasi Familia Hereditatem, hereditary in times following to the House of Austria; and thereupon did openly deny his suffrage to the said Election. But finding that the major part of the Electors were resolved upon it, he moved for an Act to pass, prohibiting the continuance of the Imperial Title in any one Family more than three Successions. In which not able to prevail, (as the Game was plaid) he left the Electors to themselves, by whom Ferdinand was chosen King of the Romans, and not long after crowned at Aken with the usual Rites, Jan. 16. An. 1531. The same course was followed by this Ferdinand, when possessed of the Empire, in causing his Son Maximilian to be elected Rex Romanorum, whilst himself was living; and so by all the rest since then, as before is said.

As for the Forces of the Empire, for by that name we are to measure the Abilities and Power of Germany; we may discern them by those Levies which have been raised upon particular occasions, or by the joint consent of the Free Estates assembled in the Imperial Diets. First, for particular Levies made by private persons, we find 12000 Foot and 8000 Horse raised by the Prince Palatine of Zweibruck; for Aid of the French Hugonots against their King; and on the other side, no fewer than 7000 Horse, under the Conduct of the Duke of Aumal and the Earl of Mansfield, for the service of that King against the Hugonots. And as for Levies made by consent of the States, we find that Charles the fifth, had under his Ensigns at Vienna, 90000 Foot, and 35000 Horse; Maximilian 2. at Javarin in Hungary, 34000 Horse, and full 100000 Foot; and finally, that in the War betwixt Charles the 5. and the Protestant Princes, there were no less than 150000 men on both sides: which numbers no one Country in Europe is able to equal. In a word, it is generally conceived that the Empire is able to raise 200000

Horse and Foot, with Arms, Canon, and Ammunition of all sorts proportionable; which the instance before brought do most plainly evidence.

Touching the Revenues of the Empire, I find them estimated by Boterus, and some others since, at seven millions of Crowns yearly. Which may be true enough, taking the Kingdoms of Hungary and Bohemia with the hereditary Estates of Austria into the Account. But since they are not so united unto the Empire but they may at some time or other be disjoyned again, no reason they should come into the reckoning, unless it be as the Revenue of the Emperour, though not of the Empire. But as for the Revenue of the Empire it self, taken abstractedly from the Personal and Patrimonial Estate of the Emperour, whosoever he be, it can amount to no such sum: the Tribute paid by the Free or Imperial Cities (at least 60 in number) amounting to no more per ann. than 15000 Florens, or 1500 l. English: and what is that, but like a Pepper-corn for a Quarter, in that mighty Continent? By this we may conjecture what the rest may come to. And though, in the way of saving Charges, (which may be reckoned as a part of his Income also) the Princes and Free Cities be bound to aid him in the time of War against the Turk with 3842 Horse, and 16200 Foot, which he may challenge without troubling the Diets for it: yet War is such a great devourer, that if the Diets do not grant him greater helps, he is like to be but a sorry Gainer by the undertaking; besides the smallness of those Forces considered with the numbers they are able to raise, and the puissance of the enemy whom they are to encounter.

Finally, for the Arms of the Empire, they are Sol, an Eagle displayed with two Heads Saturn, armed and crowned Mars: the two Heads signifying (as some think) the Eastern and the Western Empires. Cuspinian, a learned German, conceives rather that these Arms are two Eagles conjoyned, and not one Eagle with two Heads: and that they were taken up by the German Nation, in memory of the three Legions of Quintilius Varus discomfited by them; at what time they seized on two of the Roman Eagles (the Military Ensign of that People) the third being cast into the Fens by the Standard-bearer. But whether it be one or two, certain it is that the one Head is quite pulled off, and the whole Body quite stripped of all its Feathers; the Imperial Dignity being little more than titular, despoiled and stript of all authority appertaining to it.

There are in Germany.

It is impossible for me to make a more needful or a more useful Addition to Germany, than an exact Representation of the forms of their Diets, as they now stand, since the Treaty of Munster, which I have therefore carefully transcribed from the Sieur Heiss, his Present State of the Empire of Germany. Printed at the Hague in 1685.

And so much for Germany.

O F D E N M A R K.

THE Kingdom of DENMARK, or DANEMARK, reckoning in the Additions of the Dukedom of Holstein, and the great Continent of Norway, with the Isles thereof, now all united and incorporated into one Estate, is bounded on the East with the Baltick Sea, and some part of Sweden, on the West with the main Western Ocean, on the North-East with a part of Sweden, full North with the main Frozen Seas, and on the South with Germany, from which it is divided on the South-West by the River Albis, and on the South-East by the Trave; a little Isthmus or Neck of Land uniting it to that Continent.

It took this name from the Danes, of long time the Inhabitants and Possessors of it; so called quasi Danorum Tractus, sive Regio (as Mercator hath it) because the Country of that People: but rather quasi Danorum limes, the Bounds or Marches of the Danes, bordering close upon the Dutch, from whom it hath the name of Danemarch.

As for the Situation of it in regard of the Heavens, it lieth partly in the Northern temperate Zone, and partly within the Artick Circle; extending from the middle Parallel of the tenth Clime, or 55 Degree of Latitude, where it joineth with Germany; as far as the 71 Degree, where it hath no other bound but the Frozen Ocean. By which accompt, the longest Day in the most Southern parts hereof is 17 hours and a quarter: but in the parts extremely North, they have no Night for two whole Months, three Weeks, one Day, and some seven Hours over; as on the other side, no Day for the like quantity of time, when the Sun is most remote from them, in the other Tropick. The Air hereof by consequence must be sharp and bitter, even in the very warmest places. Of which, and of the nature of the Soil, we shall speak more punctually in the Description and Survey of the several Parts.

The Inhabitants generally are of good Stature, clear of Complexion, well colour'd, for the most part healthful and long-lived; for though they eat and drink beyond measure, they have good Digestions. In Manners they are very severe, crafty and provident in the managing of their Affairs, but proud withal, and (as the Historian said of another Person) Omnium quæ dixerant fecerant ut ostentatores, great Vaunters of whatsoever they do or say, highly opinionated of their own Actions, and peremptory in maintaining their own Opinions: religious observers of their Words and Contracts, and strict in executing Justice; especially in punishing of Thieves and Pirates. Such of them as do follow the Wars prove reasonable good Soldiers, both by Sea and Land; but fitter for the Sea, than Field-service. The Magistrate is wise rather by Experience than Study, tho' they love Learning, and easily attain all Languages which they give their minds to. The old Men are covetous, the young Men thrifty, and the Merchant ambitious. The Nobility and Gentry are generally of as ancient Families as most in Christendom; here being some of those Houses still remaining which were present at the Pacification made betwixt Charles the Great and Hemmingus King of the Danes: and, which adds much unto their Honour, they keep their Blood unmixed from Marriages with the Vulgar sort; and reckon it for an high disgrace to change their Arms, or make any addition thereunto. The Women are fair, discreet and courteous, and know well how to govern their Households; exceeding fruitful in bearing of Children, but delivered of them with great difficulty. Both Sexes speak the Dutch, or German, common (but with some difference in the pronounciation) to all the Northern Nations in Norway and Swethland.

Of no great Note for Men of Learning in the former time; it hath been fortunate in these last for, 1. Tycho Brahe, that renowned Astronomer; 2. Hemmingus, a well-known Divine; 3. Bartholinus, a Physician and Philosopher of good esteem; 4. John Cluverius, the Historian; and of late Pufendorf, &c. More famous for great Captains and Men of War; especially for 1. Godfrey, or Gotricus, who settled the Government of this Kingdom, and endanger'd the great Realm of France. 2. Sueno, and 3. Canutus, the fortunate Conquerors of England. 4. Waldemar the third, a right-valiant Prince; but not successful in his Wars against the Hanse-Towns, then newly entred into League. 5. Christiern the 2d. a great Commander in the Wars, but of greater Cruelty. 6. Christiern the IV. little inferiour unto many of his Predecessors. To whom we may subjoyn (though of different Sex) Queen Margaret, the Semiramis of these Northern Countries; a Lady of a masculine Spirit, and not more fortunate than daring in all Enterprises, as she declared in the Conquest of Swethland, and Subjection of Norway, by her united to this Crown.

The Christian Faith was first preached to those of Holstein, (the next-neighbouring Country unto Germany) by S. Angarius, Bishop of Bremen, the general Apostle of those Northern parts, in the year 826, Lewis the Pious then being Emperor of the West. In whose time Harald, King of Denmark, being expelled his Kingdoms by the Sons of Godfrey, or Getricus, was baptised at Mentz, with a great number of that People which attended on him, by the hands of Ebbo Archbishop of Rhemes, employ'd by the Emperor in that service; the Conversion of the whole Nation following not long after, by the power and diligence of the Emperor Otho the first, assigned by the Ministry of one Poppo the first Bishop of Arhusen; Sueno, or Swain, then reigning amongst the Danes. The Norwegians came not in till after, converted in the Reign of Olaus the third, Anno 1055, or thereabout: the English assisting in the work, and the good King so zealous in it, that he was canonized a Saint after his decease. Relapsing for the most part to their ancient Gentilism, they were finally regained unto Christianity by the means of Pope Adrian the 4th, an English-man, about the year 1156, before his assuming of the Popedom called Nicolaus Breakpear. But by whomsoever first converted, the Popes of Rome would needs pretend some Power and Jurisdiction over them. Which when they began to exercise with too much Authority, Waldemar the third is said to have returned this Answer, Naturam habemus a Deo, Regnum a Subditis, Divitias a Parentibus, Religionem a Romana Ecclesia; quam, si nobis invides, renunciamus per presentes, that is to say, We hold our Life from God, our Crown from our Subjects, our Riches from our Ancestors, our Religion from the Church of Rome; which if you envy us, we do here remit it by these Presents. But this Renunciation, though then threatned, was not made till afterwards; when the whole malis of Popery was abolish'd by King Frederick the first, using therein the Ministry of Bugenhage, a Divine of Pomeran, by whom they were reform'd according to the Doctrine of the Lutheran Churches, between 1537 and 1545.

As for the Government of the Church since that Reformation, it continueth as before it was, by Archbishops and Bishops in number as before ; but much abridged of their Revenues, and a great part of their Power. For Frederick, though he found it necessary to remove the old Bishops, (not one of which would be persuaded to the change of Religion) yet he substituted others in their places, allowing them a convenient Maintenance, with a power of Presidence in all Church-Assemblies, where they are to take the Advice of other Presbyters along with them ; and out of such Assemblies to receive Complaints, to provide remedy against Scandals, and to order all matters, as peculiar Inspectors, which concern the Church. So that in all the Kings Dominions there are two Archbishops and thirteen Bishops ; that is to say, the Archbishop of Lunden, the Bishops of Roschilt, Odenfee, Ripen, Wiborch, Arthusen, Sleswick, and Hadersleve, for the Kingdom of Denmark ; the Archbishop of Nidrosia, the Bishops of Bergen, Anslo, Staffauger, and Hammar, for the Realm of Norway ; and the Bishops of Halar and Schalholt, for the Isle of Iseland : the Churches of Holstein (formerly under the Bishops of Hamburg and Lubeck) being governed by Superintendents, as the rest of the Lutherans,

and

The whole Body of the Estate, (as appears by this) consisteth chiefly of three Members: viz. 1. the Dukedom of Holstein ; containing Wagerland, Ditmarsh, Stormaria, and Holstein, specially so called. 2. The Kingdom of Denmark ; comprehending both Jutlands, part of Scandia ; and the Hemodes, or Baltick Islands : And, 3. the Kingdom of Norway ; consisting of Norway it self, and the Islands of the Northern Ocean. Which parts we shall survey in order, as before laid down ; premising first a word or two of the Cimbrick Chersonese, in which the Dukedom of Holstein and the two Jutlands are contained.

The CIMBRICK CHERSONESE.

THE CIMBRICK CHERSONESE hath on the East the Baltick Sea, on the West the main German Ocean, on the North a part of the Ocean bending into the narrow Streight or Frctum which they call the Sundr, on the South-west the great River of Albis, the Elbe on the South-East the small River of Trave ; betwixt which is the Neck or Isthmus which unites it to Germany. I know that some contract it into narrower bounds, and limit it upon the South with the River Eyder : but I have drawn it down to the Elve and the Trave, which give it more resemblance to a Chersonese or Demy-Island than the other doth, dissenting in this point from the common Opinion. It had the name of Chersonesus, ἡ δὲ γὰρ ὁρὰ ἡ νῆσος a Terra & Insula, it being the same with a Peninsula in the Latin. Of which name there are five most famous : that is to say, 1. Peloponnesus in Greece ; which is now called Morea ; 2. Thracica Chersonesus, in Thracia, near the Sea Propontis ; 3. Taurica Chersonesus, in the Euxine Sea, now a part of Tartary ; 4. Aurea Chersonesus, in India, which we now call Maluca, (of all which we shall speak in their proper places) and 5. Cimbrica Chersonesus, where now we are. This last was so called from the Cimbri, the first Inhabitants hereof, originally descended from Gomer the Son of Japhet ; thence called Gomerii and Cimmerii, by contraction Cimbri. Leaving the Plains of Phrygia as too narrow for them, they sought out new Dwellings, and are said to have first dwelt on the Banks of Paulus Maoris ; where they gave name to the Bosphorus Cimmerius there being. Being overcome by the Schythians, they removed their Seats more Northward, into a Country bounded, according to Plutarch, by the great Ocean on the one side, and the Forest of Hircynia on the other : within which Bounds is the Peninsula or Country where we now are. They were a People of extraordinary big Stature, having blew and red Eyes, and lived most upon Theft : so that for their sakes, Κίμβροι ἐπιδουλοῦσι τῷ ἑρμῆτι τὴν λῆσιν, the Germans called all Thieves Cimbers. It happened that the Ocean overflowing a great part of their Country, compelled them to seek new Seats : whereupon in great multitudes abandoning their Dwellings, they petitioned the Romans, then lording over a great part of the World, for some place to settle in. This Request being denied, they proceeded in another manner, winning with their Swords what their Petitions could not obtain. Manlius, Sillanus, and Cepio, all Roman Consuls, perished by them, so that now (saith Florus) actum esset de Imperio Romano, nisi illi seculo Marius contigisset ; there had been an end of the Roman Empire, if Marius had not fallen into those Times ; for he, as we have elsewhere told you, utterly overthrew them. The next Inhabitants hereof were the Saxons, Jutes, and Angles, upon whose Removal into Britain, the greatest part of it was peopled by the Danes, who still possess it.

It containeth in length about 100 Italian Miles, and 80 of the same Miles in breadth ; and comprehendeth in that tract or extent of Ground 30 walled Towns, six Episcopal Sees (besides those of Hamburg and Lubeck, which are under the Archbishop of Bremen) and twenty Royal Castles and Palaces, as well for the reception of the Nobles and great Men of the Country, as the private Retirements of the King. The Soil is naturally more fit for Pasturage than Tillage, feeding such multitudes of Oxen, that from hence no fewer than 50000 are sent yearly to Germany. Divided at present into the Dukedom of Holstein, and the Province of Jutland.

1. The Dukedom of HOLSTEIN.

THE Dukedom of HOLSTEIN taketh up the Southern part of the Cimbrick Chersonese where it joins to Germany, extending as far North as the River Eyder, which divides it from Jutland. So called from the Dutch word Holt, which signifies a Wood or Forest, according to the nature of it ; the Country being low, marshy, and full of Woods, as it continueth to this day. It contains in it these four Province ; 1. Wagerland, 2. Stormaria, 3. Ditmarsh, and 4. Holst or Holstein specially so called.

1. WAGERLAND is that part of Holstein which lies on the South-east of this Chersonese, bounded on the East with Mecklenburg and the Baltick Sea, on the West with Holstein specially so called, on the North with the Baltick Sea also, on the South with some part of Mecklenburg. So called from the Wagrii, a Tribe or Nation of the Slaves, who possessed this Tract ; from whence the name of Wagria in our Latin Writers.

Chief Towns hereof are, 1. Lubeck, pleasantly seated on the Confluence of the Trave and the Billow, near the fall thereof into the Baltick, from which it is distant 5 Italian Miles. The River is capable of Ships of a 1000 Ton which commonly they unlade at Travemund, the Port-Town to the City, seated upon the very brink of the Sea, where the united Rivers have their fall into it. It was first built by Adolph II. Earl of Holstein, Anno 1143, as others say, with more probability, in 970 ; but so well privileged by him and his next Successors, that in short time it bid defiance to its Founders, (the cause of many Differences betwixt it and those Princes) and was made a Dukedom of it self. By Frederick the first it was united to the Empire, in 1209 ; after whose death they chose themselves another Duke ; who, having governed them 5 years, was subdued by the Danes, and the City made subject to that Kingdom, remaining so till delivered by the Emperor Frederick the second ; by whom again once enfranchised, in 1270, it became Imperial ; afterwards listed amongst the Hanse-Towns, and the first in estimation of all the Company, having about 600 Ships of all sorts (some of a thousand Ton and upwards) which belong unto it. But being their Trade is for the most part on the Baltick Seas, which are generally free from Pirates, they are most of them built for burthen, and are slow of sail, and little serviceable, if at all, for a fight at Sea. But to return unto the City : It is built upon all the sides of a rising Hill, on the top whereof standeth standeth the Church of Saint Mary, (once the Cathedral of the City, for it was Episcopal) whence is a Descent to all the Gates of the City, affording to the Eye a most pleasing Prospect. The Buildings are very beautiful, and all of Brick; the Streets straight and even; the Churches (ten in number) in good repair, adorn'd with excellent Imagery, and much admired even by skilful Workmen: and unto every private House a Pipe of Water is conveyed from the publick Conduit; according to the Pattern whereof, it hath been observed that the Conduits were first made in London and other places. In a word, there is not any City of Germany or the more Northern Countries which can equalize it, either for the Beauty and Uniformity of the Houses, the pleasant Gardens, fair Streets, delightful Walks without the Walls; or for the Citizens themselves, who are much commended for their Civility to Strangers, and strict execution of Justice without partiality. The whole in compass is about six Miles, fortified with a double Wall, deep Ditches, and an unfordable River. 2. Segeberg, on the River Trave, 4 Dutch Miles from Lubeck, and near the Head of that River. 3. Oldesto, on the same River, in the midst betwixt both. In the year 1688 ordered by the King of Denmark to be Fortified. 4. Gronneberg, and 5. Newkirk, on the Baltick Shore: and 6. Sterndorp, more within the Land, near the edge of a Lake, out of which runs the River Suentin.

2. South-west of Wagerland lieth STORMARIA, betwixt the Elbe and two less Rivers called the Bille and the Stoer: from which last, and the Marishness of the situation, or from that River and the Marf, once the Inhabitants hereof, comes the name of Stormarsh. Places of most importance are, 1. Crempe, on a little River so named, which falls not far off into the Stoer, and both together not much farther into the Elb. A Town well fortified by Christiern the fourth, and reckoned one of the Keys of the Kingdom; as well appears by the Resistance which it made to the Duke of Fridland, against whom it held out 13 months, and yielded at the last upon good Conditions, Anno 1628. 2. Tychenberg, (Tychapolis my Author calls) a Dutch mile from Crempe, but on the very Bank of the River Elb, where it receives the Rhine, a small River upon which it is seated: first built and afterwards well fortified by Christiern the fourth, of purpose to command the Elb, and put a stronger Bridle in the Mouths of the Hamburgers, Anno 1603, now held to be the strongest piece of all his Dominions: the only Town of all this Dukedom which yielded not to the prevailing Imperialists in their late Wars against the Danes, Anno 1628. 3. Bredeberch, a strong Town belonging to the Rantzows, one of the best pieces of the Kingdom; remarkable for the stout resistance which it made to Wallestein (Duke of Fridland) in the War aforesaid: who at last taking it by Assault, put all the Soldiers to the Sword. 4. Pinnenberg, another strong place, and of very great consequence. 5. Jetzebo, or Itzebo, on the River Stoer. 6. Gluckstadt, upon a Creek or Bay of the German Ocean, repaired and fortified by the said Christiern the fourth in 1620, who much delighted in the place, to command the passage up the Elb. 7. Stoer. 8. Hamburg, upon the Bille, where it falls into the Elb, an ancient City, built in the time of the Saxons, repaired by Charles the Great, and walled by the Emperor Henry the fourth. Accounted since that time an Imperial City, and made one of the Hanse, upon the first incorporating of those Towns. Which notwithstanding, on a Controversie arising about that time betwixt the Earl of Holstein and the People hereof, it was adjudged to belong to be Earls of Holstein; and that determination ratified by Charles the Fourth, Anno 1374. In pursuance whereof the Hamburgers took the Oath of Allegiance to Christiern Earl of Oldenburg, the first King of Denmark of that House, as Earl of Holstein, acknowledging him and his Successors for the Lawful Lords; though since they have endeavour'd to shake off that Yoke, presuming very much on their Power at Sea, and the assistance which they are assured of upon all occasions from the rest of the Hanse-Towns. As for the Town itself, it is seated in a large Plain, with fat and rich Pastures round about it, well fortified by Art and Nature, the Haven being shut up with a strong Iron Chain. The Buildings for the most part are of Brick, but more beautiful than well contrived; and the Streets somewhat of the narrowest. The publick Structures are very fair; especially the Council-house, adorn'd with the Statues of the Nine Worthies, carved with very great Art, the Exchange, or Meeting-place for Merchants, and nine large Churches. The Citizens are generally rich, Masters of many as great Ships as sail on the Ocean, some of them 1200 Ton in Burthen, which bring in great profit, besides the great resort of Merchants and their Factors from most places else: sometimes the Staple Town for the Cloth of England, removed on some Discontents to Stadt, and from thence to Holland. It is observed, that there were in this Town at one time 177 Brewers, and but 40 Bakers, nor more than one Lawyer and one Physician. The reason of which disproportion was, that a Cup of Nimis was their only Physick; their Difference sooner ended over a Can than by order of Law; Bread being counted but a binder, and so not to be used, but in case of necessity. This City imbrac'd the Confession of Ausburg at the first publication of it, yet Tolerates the Calvinists too, and was kind to the English in 1554. In the year 1686 the King of Denmark suddenly sat down before this City with an Army of 30000 Men, but Winter coming on, and the neighbouring Princes sending Forces into it against him, he was forced to rise without having done any thing that was considerable.

3. Betwixt the River Stoer and Eyder, coasting along the German Ocean, lies the Province of DITMARSCH, most properly called Twitchmarsh, from the Marishness of the Ground and the Dutch Inhabitants, or from a mixture of those People with the Marf, spoken of before. The People being naturally of the Saxon Race, retain much of the Stomach and Animosity of the ancient Saxons never brought under the command of the Earls of Holstein (as Wagerland and Stormaria were) till Holstein itself was joined to the Crown of Denmark. And though it was aliened from the Empire by Frederick the third, and given in Fee to Christiern Earl of Oldenburg, the first King of that House, Anno 1474; yet would they not submit unto his Authority, but held it out against him and some of his Successors, whom in the year 1500 they vanquished in the open Field; till they were broken and made subject by the Valour and good Fortune of King Frederick the second, Anno 1550. Chief places in it are, 1. Meldorp, upon the Ocean, the chief Town of the Province; the Inhabitants of which are so wealthy, that many of them cover their Houses with Copper. 2. Lunden, opposite to a Peninsula or Demi-Island called Eyderstede, on the West side whereof it standeth. 3. Heinikstede, and 4. Telinkstede; of which nothing memorable.

4. And as for HOLSTEIN itself, the fourth and last Member of this Estate, though the first in Power and Reputation, it taketh up the Inland parts, betwixt Stormaria and Jutland, save that it hath an Outlet into the Baltick on the North-West of Wagerland. Chief Places in it are, 1. Kiel (Chilonium in Latin) seated upon a Navigable Arm of the Baltick Sea, parting Wagerland from the Dukedom of Sleswick: a Town well Traded, and having a capacious Haven, seldom without good store of Shipping from Germany, Liesland, Sweden, and the rest of Denmark. In the year 1665 there was also an University opened here. 2. Rensborg, the best Fortified Piece in all this Province. 3. Nienmünster, on the North West of the Stoer, not far from the Head of it. 4. Wilster, on a small River so called. 5. Bramestede, 6. Bonsholm, not much observable, but for a Monastery in which Henry, one of the Earls hereof (of a younger House) turned Monk and died, Anno 1241.

The

The ancient Inhabitants of this and the other three were the Saxons, Sigalons, and Subalingii, placed here by Protony, whom I conceive to be no other than some Tribes of the Cimbri of whom this Chersoneuse took name: the two last of which passing into the name of the first, and in the Declination of the Roman Empire marching over the Elb, and spreading all along the Coasts of the German Ocean, molested with their Piracies and Depredations the Shores of Britain, known by that means unto the Britains, they were invited to assist them against the Scots and Picts. Which Action, with the aid of the Jutes and Angli (Inhabitants together with them of the Cimbrick Chersoneuse) they perform'd so honestly as to make themselves Masters of the best part of the Island. Such as remained behind, not being able to defend their own against the Slaves, were fain to quit the parts lying next to Mecklenburg; which, being peopled by the Vagrii, took the name of Wagerland. But the Saxons being vanquish'd by Charles the Great, these on the North-side of the Elb became a part of the great Dukedom of Saxony; and so continued till dismembred by Lotharius, both Duke and Emperor, who gave the proper Holst (or Holstein specially so called) with the Province of Stor-maria to Adolph Earl of Schaumburg, who had deserved well of him in his Wars, with the Title of Earl of Holstein, Anno 1114. By Adolph the second, his Successor, it was settled in this House; who having made a full Conquest of it, caused it to be planted with Colonies of Dutch or Germans from Holland, Westphalen, and Friesland; by which means the name of Slaves was at last worn out. By Gerrard the fifth the Dukedom of Sleswick was also added; conferred upon him by the bounty of Margaret Queen of Denmark, in whose Wars he serv'd. Adolph the last Earl of this House dying without Issue, the whole Estate fell on Christiern, Son of Theodorick Earl of Oldenburg, and of Hednigis his Wife, Sister and Heir to Adolph before mentioned; who, being called to the Crown of Denmark, compounded with his Brother Gerrard for the sum of 50000 Marks; and having gotten Ditmarsh also of the Emperor Frederick the third, prevailed so far as to have the whole Estate erected into a Dukedom, Anno 1414, to be held by him and his Successors of the Sacred Empire. Which said, we will next add the Catalogue of

The Earls and Dukes of HOLSTEIN.

- 1114 1. Adolph of Schaumburg, by Lotharius, Emperor and Duke of Saxony, made the first Earl of Holstein.
- 1137 2. Adolph II. Son of Adolph the first.
- 1164 3. Adolph III. Son of Adolph the 2d, vanquish'd by Canutus King of the Danes, lost himself and his Country.
- 1232 4. Adolphus IV. in his Father's life-time recovered his Estate from Waldemar the Successor of Canutus, overcome by him in a well fought Battel, Anno 1226, his Father then Prisoner to the Danes.
- 1261 5. Gerrard, the second Son of Adolph the fourth, his elder Brother John making choice of Wagerland, succeeded in Holstein.
- 1281 6. Henry, the Son of Gerrard, the first that set up a Custom-house at Hamburg, for receipt of his Tolls and Taxes.
- 1310 7. Gerrard II. Son of Henry, slain treacherously by the Danes.
- 1339 8. Henry II. Son of Gerrard the second.
- 1381 9. Gerrard III. Son of Henry the second, created the first Duke of Sleswick by Queen Margaret of Denmark.
- 1404 10. Henry III. Son of Gerrard the third.
- 1427 11. Adolphus V. commonly called the XII. (those of the younger Houses being reckoned in) the last Earl of this House.

1459 12. Christiern of Oldenburg, King of Denmark, Sweden, and Normay, Son of Theodorick Earl of Oldenburg, and of his Wife Hednigis, Sister of Henry and Adolphus the two last Earls succeeded in the Earldom of Holstein, enlarged with the addition of Ditmarsh, and erected into a Dukedom by the Emperor Frederick the third, Anno 1474. But seeing that Otho Earl of Schaumburg pretended a Right unto the whole, as the next Heir-male, according to the Constitutions of the Empire, of which it was holden; and Gerrard the Brother of Christiern put in for his share, according to the ill Custom of Germany, of which it was then counted part: he was fain to buy his peace of both, giving to Otho 43000 Florens in ready money, with the Towns of Pienenburg, Haltzburg, and Bramstede, the ancient possessions of the Earls of Schaumburg and 50000 Marks to his Brother Gerrard, besides his whole Interest in the Earldom of Oldenburg, as before was said. By this means Holstein, was united to the Crown of Denmark, the Kings thereof, as Dukes of Holstein, being counted Princes of the Empire; but neither send unto the Diets, nor contribute any thing at all to the publick Taxes, nor acknowledge any kind of subjection to it more than merely titular. Only it was ordained at the request of the Subjects when first they were incorporated into that Kingdom, that in case of any grievance or unjust sentence in the ordinary Courts of Justice, wherein they found no remedy in the supreme Council of the Province, it might be lawful for them to appeal to the Imperial Chamber, as they had done formerly. Which as it was granted to content them at the present time, on sufficient Caution; so hath it seldom or never been put in practice; the very Grant or Privilege (if such it were) being in a manner worn out of memory. But since this uniting of these two Estates, the Title of Duke of Holstein and a good part of the Country was given unto Adolphus Brother of Christiern the 3d. (created by Queen Elizabeth one of the Knights of the Garter, Anno 1560) who governed it interchangeably with the King in their several turns, after whose death, and the death of all his Children dying without Issue-male, the Title of it was conferred on Ulrick, Son of Frederick the second, and Brother of Christiern the fourth, created Knight of the Garter by King James, Anno 1605, in whole Posterity it remains till this present time.

The Dukes of HOLSTEIN-SLESWICK, of the Line of Denmark.

- 1481 13. Frederick, second Son of Christiern King of Denmark, was by his Father assigned his Successor in the Dukedoms of Sleswick and Holstein, but was put by by his elder Brother Christiern II. King of Denmark, but he succeeded his Brother in the year 1523, both in the Dukedoms and Kingdom.
- 1533 14. Christiern III. Son of Frederick.
- 1559 15. Adolph, Brother of Christiern III. had the Title of Duke of Holstein, he was by Queen Elizabeth made Knight of the Garter in 1560. This Prince Conquer'd the Inhabitants of Ditmarsh, and was a Person of great Valour and Worth: So that the Hamburgers did him Homage in 1603.
- 1586 16. Adolph, Son of the former, was slain the Battel of Leipsick in 1631.
- 1631 17. Frederick, who was born in 1597; and is famous for his Ambassy to the King of Persia, sent through Moscovy in the year 1633. He having no Male-issue was succeeded by
- 1659 18. Christian Albert, his Son born in 1641, but at this time Duke of Holstein and Sleswick, who was forced by the King of Denmark in 1675, to resign his Dukedoms of Holstein and Sleswick, who thereupon took and dismantled

tell'd the strong Towns of Tønningen and Wismar, which is now under debate, the Neighbouring Princes having espoused the Interests and cause of the Duke of Holstein, he has a Son named Frederick, born in the year 1671, who is his Heir.

These latter Dukes from Adolph, Brother of Christiern the third, to Christian-Albert, were Homagers to the Crown of Denmark, and their Dominions much less than that of the former Dukes. Frederick, Father of the present Duke of Holstein, joining with the Swedes against the Danes, forced Frederick III. by the Treaty of Roschild in 1658 to declare him an Independent Prince; but Christian the 5th, the present King of Denmark, by the Treaty of Reisburg, forced the present Duke to submit to him in 1675. The neighbour Princes in the Year 1687 and 1688 endeavoured an Accommodation of this Difference, which the 30th of June 1689, was obtained upon these following Articles.

The Treaty of Accommodation between Denmark and Holstein, Concluded and Signed on the 30th of June, 1689.

Be it known unto all, That the great Differences that have for a long time continued between the King of Denmark and Norway, &c. and the Duke of Holstein Sleswick, have, by the zealous Mediation of his Imperial Majesty, and the Electors of Saxony and Brandenburgh, been finally adjusted in the following manner.

I. That there be a General Amnesty, and perpetual Oblivion, of whatever has been transacted or done by the Ministers and Subjects on either side; none of which shall be hereafter questioned or called to Account for the same: Nor shall any of the Duke of Holstein's Subjects, who may have submitted themselves to the King of Denmark, be, on that account, ill look'd upon; But, on the contrary, an unalterable Friendship and Union is hereby renewed and established between the King of Denmark and the Duke of Holstein, and their Heirs and Successors.

II. That the King of Denmark shall restore to the Duke all his Lands and Goods, with the Sovereignty, Regalities, Right of raising Monies, making Alliances, building Fortifications, and Garrisoning the same; And all other his Rights, Pre-eminences, and Privileges, as he enjoyed the same, according to the Westphalian and Northern Treaties, till the year 1675; together with what appertains to him by Virtue of the Treaty concluded at Fountainbleau, which is hereby again confirmed; And shall likewise restore to all his Servants and Subjects their Goods and Principal Monies.

III. Whereas the Duke, among his other Demands, desires that the King will free the Island Femeren, and the Bayliwicks of Stoinhorst, Tremsbüttel, and Trittau, from the Engagements they are now under, and restore the same without any Incumbrance to his Highness: His Majesty, farther to shew his sincere Friendship and Brotherly Inclination, will discharge the Bayliwick of Trittau, from what it stands engaged to him for, altho' a considerable Sum is still due to him on that account, and will restore the same with the other Lands. But for what concerns the said Island and Bayliwicks of Femeren, Stoinhorst, and Tremsbüttel, seeing the same are not in the hands of his Majesty, but of his Brother his Royal Highness Prince George of Denmark; The Mediators, for the greater strengthening and maintaining the so necessary Peace of the North and the Lower Saxon Circle, in which the common Good is so highly concerned, have undertaken to find out a way, without any Charge or Prejudice to his Majesty, whereby his Royal Highness shall be satisfied for his Pretensions upon the said Island and Bayliwicks; so that the same may, without any incumbrance, be restored to the Duke of Holstein.

IV. On the other side, the Duke not only renounces all Pretensions he may have upon the King on account of his having seized, and for a time possessed, his Lands;

But will likewise quit the Process he has begun before the Imperial Court against the Duke of Ploen.

V. For what concerns the Union and Agreements between the Two Families: and the Treaties made till the year 1675, the same shall continue in their former Force; together with the Westphalian, Northern, and Fountainbleau Treaties. And the King shall on his side quit all Arrears and Contributions that remain uncollected.

VI. The Matters that remain undetermined, shall be amicably composed, or referred to the Law; but neither side shall attempt anything by way of Force.

VII. The Ratifications of this Agreement shall, within 14 days from the Date hereof, be exchanged at Altena; And the Contents hereof put in full Execution within eight days after. In Witness, &c.

2. The Kingdom of DENMARK.

IN which 1. JUTLAND containeth all the rest of the Cimbrick Chersonese, divided from the Dukedom of Holstein by the River Eyder, the ancient Boundary betwixt the Saxons and the Danes; but principally by a long Trench and Wall from one Sea to the other, of such breadth, that a Chariot or two Horse-men a-breast might ride upon it. First built in imitation of the Picts Wall in England, by Godfrey King of Denmark, in the time of Charles the Great; either to hinder the daily Incursions of the Saxons, as some, or to stop the current of the Victories of the said Charles, as others think. The Tract thereof, still very easie to be seen, is called Dennewerk (or the Danes Work) to this very day.

It was so called from the Jutes, who, together with the Angli and neighbouring Saxons, made a Conquest of the best part of Britain. The Country so aboundeth in Cattel, that it sendeth yearly into Germany 50000 Oxen, besides great store of Butter, Cheese, Tallow, Hides, and Horses, divided commonly into North Jutland, and South Jutland, or Jutland specially so called, and the Dukedom of Sleswick.

SOUTH-JUTLAND, or the Dukedom of SLESWICK, is that part of the Cimbrian Chersonese, which lies next to Holstein; called South-Jutland, from the Southern situation of it; and Sleswick, from the chief Towns of it, and the head of this Dukedom. The Country, for the most part, is plain, little swelled with Mountains; the Fields whereof do interchangeably yield both Fish and Corn. For during one three years they sow it constantly, and reap the Fruits of it, and for the next three, let the Pools overflow the Land, to the end the Fish may eat up the Grais, (whom they catch as often as they please) and the Mud which is left behind enrich the Soil. But besides their Pools, they have also on the Baltick shores many goodly Bays; not only commodious for Merchants, but well stored with Fish, and with Salmon especially.

Chief Towns herein are, 1. Flensborch, seated among very high Mountains on the Shore of the Baltick Sea, where there is a Port so deep, so safe, and so commodious, that all the Inhabitants thereof in a manner may lade and unlade their Ships close to their houses. Christian the 5th, the present King of Denmark, was born in this Town the 18th of April, 1646. 2. Husum, or Hussum, upon the German Ocean, not far from the Mouth of the River Eyder. 3. Hadersleve, a Bishop's See, if not rather some Town or Mannor of the Bishop's of Sleswick, situate on a Navigable In-let of the Baltick Sea, wherewith it is almost encompassed: beautified with the fair Castle of Hansburg, begun by John the eldest Son of King Christiern the first, then Duke of Holstein, but finished by Frederick the second, King of Denmark. 4. Londenburg, in the Peninsula called Eyderstede, over against De Strandt, an Island of the German Ocean. 5. Sternberg, the ordinary Residence of the Governour for the King of Denmark. 6. Gottorp, a strong Fort or Castle

Castle of the Duke of Sleswick's, at the end of a large Bay or In-let of the Baltick also: remarkable for the Toll-booth or Custom-house there erected, at which there is Toll paid one year with another for 5000 Oxen sent out of the North-Jutland into Germany. 7. Sleswick, originally by the Danes called Hydebui, built, as they say, by Hethe a Queen of the Nation; but by the Saxons called Sleswick, as the Town upon the River Sley, there running into the Baltick, and giving to the Town a fair and commodious Haven. This of long time hath been accounted the chief Town of this Province, honoured with an Episcopal See, and made the Head of the Dukedom, so giving name unto the whole. A Dukedom first erected by King Henry of Denmark, who gave it to Waldemar, great Grandchild of Abel, a former King, Anno 1280, to be held by him under the Right and Sovereignty of the Kings thereof. But the Male issue failing, it returned to the Crown, and was by Margaret Queen of Denmark conferred on Gerrard Earl of Holstein, as before was said, Anno 1386. Repenting afterwards of that Act, she extorted it out of the hands of the Widow of Gerrard; but it was again recovered by the valour and good fortune of his Son Adolphus. After whose death it fell together with Holstein, upon Christiern of Oldenburg King of Denmark, as before related, by whom it was incorporated with that Crown, never since aliened, but assigned sometimes in Portion for the younger Princes; the Patrimony at this time of the Sons of Alexander, surnamed of Sunderborg, (the place of his Nativity) Son of John, one of the younger Sons of King Christiern the third, who was succeeded by

1. Alexander, born in 1573, he died in 1627.
- 1627 2. John Christiern, born in 1607.
- 1653 3. Christiern Adolph, born in 1641.

NORTH-JUTLAND, the most Northern part of all the Chersonese, hath on the South the Dukedom of Sleswick, but on all other parts of the Sea. Divided commonly, according to the number of the Bishopricks, into four Dioceses or Districts; that is to say.

1. The Diocesis of RIP or RIPEN, bordering next to Sleswick, containing 30 Prefectures or Herets, (as they use to call them) seven Cities or walled Towns, and ten Castles. The chief of which are, 1. Ripen, the Episcopal See, situate near the German Ocean. 2. Kolding, on a Creek of the Baltick Sea; where Dorothy the Dowager of Christiern the third built a publick School, one of my Authors calls it an University.

2. The Diocesis of ARTHUSEN, lying on the North of Ripen, but more towards the Baltick, containeth 31 Herets or Prefectures, seven Cities or walled Towns, and five Castles. The Chief whereof are, 1. Arhusen, the Episcopal See, seated on the Baltick, enjoying a commodious Port and well frequented; the first Bishop hereof being that Poppo who converted this Nation; Christianity and Episcopacy going for the most part hand in hand together. 2. Schanderborg, on the South of Arhusen, 3. Kallo, a strong Castle of the Kings, seated in the inmost part of a large Bay, occasioned by the Promontory or Cape of Hillen, extending hence two Dutch miles to the high Hill of Ellemanberg. Opposite whereunto, and pertaining to this Jurisdiction, lie the Islands of 1. Sumsoe, 2. Hiolm, 3. Tuen, 4. Hiarnce, (perhaps Gerno) 5. Hilgenes, and others.

3. The Diocesis of WIBORCH, on the North of Arhusen, containeth sixteen Herets, the Islands of 1. Jegen, 2. Hansholm, 3. Ostholm, 4. Cisland, 5. Egholm, and 6. Bodum: three Cities or walled Towns, and as many Castles. The Principal of which is Wiborch, the Episcopal See, an Inland City, but situate on a water which runneth into the Bay of Limfort. The ordinary Seat of Judicature for both the Jutlands, for all Causes, as well Criminal as Civil: the Court continually sitting from one day to another, unless perhaps the Judges do sometimes adjourn it for their own refreshments.

4. The Diocesis of BURGLAVE, or Vandalia, lying farther North, is commonly subdivided into four parts or Members: that is to say, 1. Thyland, lying South of the Bay of Limfors, on the Baltick side, whose chief Town is Alborch, the ordinary Seat and Residence of the Bishop of Vandalia, from hence many times stiled Alburgenfis, situate on the Bay aforesaid, which, opening into the Baltick Sea, extendeth through the main Land Westward almost as far as the German Ocean. 2. Morssec, lying on the Ocean, and containing three Prefectures or Herets, the Town of Nicoping, the Castle of Lunsted, and the Isle of Ageroe. 3. Hanheret, on the North-West of the Bay of Limfort, containing 4 Herets, the Town of Thystad, where Christiern the third, founded a publick School, or such another University as that of Kolding, the Castle of Orum, and the Islands of Oland and Oxholm. There is in this part also, the high Rock called Skaringelint, a noted Sea-mark, fitly serving to give notice to the Sailour of the Quick sands which lye underneath it and about this Coast. 4. Wensyssel, Vensilia, or Wenslie, that is (as Mercator doth expound it) Vadalarum sedes, the Seat of the Vandals, taketh up all the rest of the North of Jutland, containing six Prefectures, the Islands of 1. Groysholm, 2. Hertzholm, and 3. Tidsholm; three Towns, and one Castle: the most remarkable of which is Schagen, within the most Northernly point of all this Chersonese. In this part is a very high Mountain called Mount Alberg, in which are found some marks and remainders of the ancient Giants, as the Inhabitants believe, and report accordingly.

The Inhabitants of both Jutlands in the time of Ptolomy and before, were the Cobandi, Chali, Phundusi, Charudes, and in the most Northern Tracts the Cimbri, of whom the four first were but Tribes or Nations. These moving toward the South in that great Expedition against Spain, made by the neighbouring Vandals on the Roman Empire, occasioned the Juits, and Angli to inlarge or shift their Dwellings, each taking up the parts which lay nearest to them. The Juits, or Gute, being a people of Scandia, and there placed by Ptolomy, took up the Northern parts thereof, from them named Jutland: the other being a people of the Suevi, dwelling on the South of the Elb. possessed themselves of those parts which lay next the Saxons, their old Friends and Confederates, (their chief Town being Sleswick) where Angelen, now an obscure Village, once of greater note, doth preserve their memory. But these uniting with the Saxons in the Conquest of Britain, and leaving none behind which were fit for action, or not enough to keep possession of the Country against the new Invaders, gave opportunity to the Danes to come in upon them; by whom the Country being conquered as far as to the River Eyder, were planted by Colonies of Danes, and made a part of that Kingdom: of whom we shall say more in the close of all, first taking a survey of the Baltick Islands, and such Provinces on the main Land of Scandia as properly make up the Kingdom of Denmark.

John, Brother of Frederick 2. King of Denmark, was the Founder of the several Branches of the Dukedoms of Holstein, which are these following.

1. S U N D E R B U R G.

1. Alexander, born in the year 1573, and in the Division with his Brothers, possessed of Sunderburg, part of the Island of Alsens, and part of Sunderwick, he had ten Sons, and died in the year 1627.
- 1627 2. John Christian, eldest Son of Alexander, born in the year 1607, he Married Ann of Oldenburg, by whom in the year 1641, he had Christian Adolph, and died in the year 1653.
- 1653 3. Christian Adolph, Son of John, now living, he has a Son named Leopald Christian, born in in the year 1678, who is now living with his Father at Franzhague, in the Dukedom of Sax-Lawenburg.

2. N O R D B U R G.

1. Frederick the 2d. Son of John Duke of Holstein, was the Founder of this Line, he died in the year 1658.
- 1658 2. John Bogislaus, the eldest Son of Frederick, was born in the year 1629, and died in the year 1680, having never been Married.
- 1680 2. Rodolphus Frederick, the Brother of John Bogislaus, and 3d Son of Frederick, succeeded his Brother, and left behind him one Son.
- 1688 3. Ernest Leopald, born in the year 1684, and succeeded his Father at the Age of 4 years, and is now Educated in the Court of Wolfenbuttel.

3. G L U C K S B U R G.

1. Philip, the 3d. Son of John, was the Founder of this third branch, he married Sophia Hedwige, of the House of Sax-Lawenburg, by whom he had eleven Children.
2. Christian, his eldest Son, was born in 1627, and is still living in the Castle of Glucksburg: Philip Ernest, his eldest Son, was born in 1673, 2. Joachim Adolph in 1679, and Christian August in 1681.

4. P L O E N.

There remains the branch of Ploen, the Founder of which was Joachim Ernest, the fourth Son of John, who died in the year 1671, 80 years of Age.

- 1671 2. John Adolph, Son of Joachim born in 1634, who is now living, he has three Sons, Adolph Augustus, born in 1680. 2. Joachim Ernest in 1681. 3. John Ulrick in 1684.

2. THE BALTICK ISLANDS are in number 35, and are so called, because they lie dispersed in the Baltick Ocean. At this day it is called by the Germans, de Oost Zee, anciently by some Mare Suevicum, by Pomponius, Mela Sinus Cædanius, by Strabo, Sinus Venedicus; but generally Mare Balticum, because the great Peninsula of Scandia, within which it is, was by some Writers of the middle and darker time called Balthia. It beginneth at the narrow passage called the Sound; and interlacing the Countries of Denmark, Sweden, Germany, and Poland, extendeth even to Livonia and Lithuania. The reasons why this Sea, being so large, doth not ebb and flow, are, 1. The Narrowness of the Streight by which the Ocean is let into it; and 2. the Northern situation of it, whereby the Celestial Influences have lesser power upon it. The principal of this great shole of Islands are, 1. Seland, 2. Funen, or Fionia, 3. Langland, 4. Lawland, 5. Falstre, 6. Aria, 7. Alsen, 8. Tusung, 9. Ween, 10. Femera, and 11. Bornholm. Some others of less note we shall only name, and so pass them over.

1. SELAND, the greatest Island of the Baltick Seas, is situate near the main Land of Scandia, parted from it by a narrow Streight or Fretum, not above a Dutch mile in breadth, commonly called by the name of the Sundt or Sound. A Streight through which all Ships which have any trading to or from the Baltick, must of necessity take their course; all other Passages being barred up with impassible Rocks, or otherwise prohibited by the Kings of Denmark, upon forfeiture of all their Goods. So that being the only safe Passage which these Seas afford, one may sometimes see two or three hundred Ships in a day pass through it: all which pay a Toll or Imposition to the King, according to their Bills of lading. And to secure this Passage, and command all Passengers, there are two strong Castles, the one in Scandia, called Helsingburg, whereof more anon; the other in this Island which is called Cronenburg.

But before we come to this Castle, we must view the other parts of the Island, being in length two days journey, and almost as much in breadth: the Soil so fertile, that, without any manuring or charge at all, it yieldeth plenty of all Necessaries for the life of man. It was anciently called Codanonia, and containeth in it fifteen Cities or walled Towns, and twelve Royal Castles. The principal whereof are, 1. Haffen, or Hafnia, the Metropolis of the Islands, by the Dutch called Copenhagen, or the Haven of Merchants; situate near the Sea, with an handson Port; the Isle of Amager, which lieth on the East-side of the Town, making a very safe Road for all kinds of Shipping. The Town is of an orbicular form, and reasonably well fortified; but the buildings mean, for the most part of Clay and Timber, only to be commended for a spacious Market-place: Yet herein, as the chief Town of all the Kingdom, and Situate in the heart of those Dominions, is the Palace-Royal, built of Free-stone in form of a Quadrangle, but of no great Beauty or Magnificence. Most memorable for the University here founded by Henry, or Erich the ninth; but perfected by King Christiern the first, by him and the succeeding Princes liberally endowed. In the year 1659, the Suedes with a potent Army, besieged this City, but were beaten off with great Loss, and the year following, the City was honour'd with the Title of an Archbishop's See. 2. Fredericksburg, amongst Woods of Beech, built for a place of Pleasure by Frederick the second, where the King hath a fine House, and a little Park, in which (amongst other foreign Beasts) are some Fallow Deer transported hither out of England in the 24th year of Queen Elizabeth. 3. Rosbilt, not walled but counted for a City, as a See Episcopal; the Bishops whereof have anciently had the honour of Crowning and Inaugurating the Kings of Denmark. In the Cathedral Church hereof are to be seen the Tombs of many of the Danish Kings; some of them very fair and sumptuous, the most mean and ordinary. It is famous for a Treaty of Peace, here made between the Kings of Denmark and Sweden in the year 1658. The Bishoprick was erected here in the year 1012, by Sveno King of Denmark. 4. Sora, of old times beautified with a goodly Monastery, the Revenues whereof, at the alteration of Religion, were converted to the maintenance of a Free-School built here by Frederick the first. But in the year 1623, Christiern the fourth, adding hereunto the Revenues of two other dissolved Monasteries, the one in the Isle of Lawland, and the other in Jutland, founded here a new University, for the better supply of learned Ministers for the Churches of Denmark and Norway, (which before could not be provided for out of Copenhagen) and furnished it with men of eminence in all Arts and Sciences for its first Professors. 5. Elfenore, or Helsingore, a Village only, but much frequented by Sea-faring men as their Ships pass by the sound, upon which it is. Near unto which is 6. the strong and magnificent Castle of Cronenburg, built with incredible charge and pains by King Frederick the second; the foundation of it being laid on huge Stones sunk into the Sea, and so fastned together, that no storm or Tempest, how violent soever, is able to shake it; well fortified as well as founded, and mixt of a Palace and a Fort, being since the first building of it the most constant Residence of the Kings of Denmark, who from hence may easily discern each Ship which sails through the Sundt, each of which addeth more or less unto his Revenues. A profitable and pleasing prospect. By the Commodity of this and the opposite Castle, the King doth not only secure his Customs, but very much strengthen his Estate: the Castles being so near, and the Streights so narrow, that, by the addition of some few Ships, he may keep the greatest Navy that is from passing by him.

Unto the Government and Jurisdiction of this Island belong many others; the principal whereof are, 1. A- magria, Amager, or Amach, which helps to make up the Port or Road of Copenhagen, spoken of before; planted with Hollanders brought hither by the procurement of Christiern the second. 2. Mund, or Moen-land, the chief Town whereof is called Stekoe. 3. (2) HUENE, or WEEN, a little South of Cronenburg Castle; a Dutch mile in length, but not quite so broad; remarkable only for the Studies of that famous Astronomer Tycho Brayhe, to whom Frederick the second gave this Island, that living in a private and solitary place, removed from all company but his own Family only, he might with more convenience attend his Books. At this day most observable for the Castle of Uranopolis, or Urenborg, where the greatest part of his Mathematical Instruments are preserved in safety.

3. FIONIA, or FUNEN, the second Island of account in all the Baltick, is situate betwixt Seland and Futland, from which last it is parted by a Streight called Middlefar Sundt, so narrow, and of so small a Sea, that the Island and the Chersonese seem joyned together. A Country of a pleasant and delightful Situation, and as fruitful withal; containing 12 Dutch miles in length, and four in breadth; and therein 24 Herets or Prefectures, 16 Towns, and 6 Royal Castles, besides many goodly Villages, and Gentlemens Houses. The chief whereof are, 1. Odenssee, or Othensche (called in Latin, Orthonia) an Episcopal See, founded here, at the first conversion of this People, by Orho the Great, whence it had the name. The Town is not large, but beautified with two fair Churches, the one dedicated to Saint Canute, the other to Saint Francis: (in which Christian the 2. King of Denmark, and John his Father, were both buried,) situate in the midst of the Island, from which the residue of the Towns are almost equally distant; and so commodiously seated for Trade and Merchandise, as they do not only traffick in the Baltick Sea, but in Sweden, Normay, Russia, Flaniders and Germany, 2. Nyborch, 3. Foborch, 4. Swynborch, 5. Middlefar, whence the Streight is so named. 6. Bowens, and 7. Kartemunde; all seated on some Haven, or convenient Creek. The principal of the Castles are, 1. Newborg, 2. Hagenschow, 3. Escheborg, 4. Hinsgagel, 5. the Court of Rogard. In this Island, not far from the Castle of Hagenschow, is the Mountain of Offenburg, where John Ranzovius, Anno 1430. discomfited the great Army of Christopher, the Brother of Anthony, Earl of Oldenburg, coming in those unsettled times to invade the Kingdom, under colour of restoring Christiern the second formerly deposed; in which Fight the Earl of Hoye and Teckleborg were both slain in the place, and the Kingdom after that in quiet from the like Pretenders. The Swedes harraisd this Island very much in the year 1659, but were at last beaten out with great loss in a Battle fought near Nyborg.

South of Fionia, and under the Government hereof, are about 90 lesser Islands, most of them inhabited: the chief of which are:

4. LANGELAND, seven Dutch miles in length, and five broad, in which besides many Villages and Gentlemens Houses, we have the Town of Rudkoping, and the Castle of Fraenkar. This and Lamland are by John Bunion taken for one Island, as in truth they are.

5. LAWLAND, disjoyned from Seland by a little narrow Streight called Crone-sundt; so plentiful of Corn and Chestnuts, that Ships full freighted with them are sent yearly hence. An Island which, besides many Castles, Villages and Mansion-houses of the Gentry, hath five good Towns, viz: 1. Nyfladt, 2. Nasco, 3. Togrop, 4. Richus, and 5. Mariboane; in which last anciently was a very rich Monastery, the Revenues whereof are now employed for the endowment of the new University of Sora, founded by Christiern the fourth, as before was noted. This Island is so called quasi Langeland, from its low situation, on the West-side, it has a strong Castle called Nascoa, which in the year 1659, stood a long Siege against the Victorious Swede.

6. FALSTRE, four German miles in length, and two broad, affording plenty of Corn yearly to some neighbouring Islands. Chief Towns herein are, 1. Nicopie, which for the Elegancy of the place and Pleasantness of the Situation is called the Naples of Denmark. Christopher King of Denmark, died here in the year 1333. Stubeopen, from whence there is the ordinary passage into Germany, seven Dutch miles hence.

7. TUSING, not far from Swynborch, or Swineby, a Town of Fionia; a Dutch mile in length situate in a dangerous and troublesome Sea, from whence is no safe passage either to Seland, Funen, or Futland, tho' much distant from neither. Chief places in it are, 1. Afloss, towards Futland; 2. Niburg, towards Seland, and 3. the Court of Keltorp, belonging to the noble Family of Rosencrantz.

8. FEMERA, or FEMEREN, a fruitful and well-peopled Island, having in it the Towns of 1. Derborch, 2. Stabul, and 3. Pittersdorp. A place of great importance to the Crown of Denmark, not so much in danger of being made subject to the Imperialists by the taking of Holstein and both Futlands, as by planting too strong a Garrison in this small Island: and therefore with all diligence recovered by the King again, and better fortified than before, against all Invasions, Anno 1628. Of the remaining Islands which pertain unto Fionia, we find the names of 1. Aroe, 2. Romso, 3. Endelo, 4. Ebelo, 5. Boko, 6. Brindo, 7. Zoroe, 8. Agernis, 9. Hellenis, 10. Jerdo, 11. Birkholm, of which nothing memorable. This Island was made more famous by a Sea fight between the Danes and the Swedes and Hollanders, in the year 1645.

Amongst these Islands, but not subordinate to Fionia, are,

9. ARIA, belonging to the Dukedom of Sleswick, consisting of 3 Parishes, some Gentlemens Houses, and the Town and Castle of Koping: supposed to be the habitation of the Arri, spoken of by Tacitus; but a Colony rather of them, as I suppose. And not far off,

10. AISEN, another little Island, but of more repute called in Latin, Elyfia, opposite to the Gulf or Bay of Flensborg in the Dukedom of Sleswick, to which it also appertaineth. Well stored it is with Beasts for profit, and Game for pleasure; so populous, that some thousands of men may be easily and suddenly raised in it; consisting of 13 Parishes and 4 Towns: that is to say, 1. Gammelgard, 2. Osterholm, 3. Norderborg, and 4. the good Town and Castle of Sunderborg, one of the ordinary Residences of the Dukes of Sleswick, and honoured with the Birth of many of their Princes of the Royal Family. Some think it was the Habitation anciently of the Elyfi, spoken of by Tacitus, and by him placed next unto the Angli: But being the Angli in those times dwelt about the Elb, I rather think, that when some Colonies of the Angli seated themselves in the Cimbrick Chersonese, as before was said, some of the Arri and Elyfi might go along for company, and plant themselves near them and these Islands.

11. BORNHOLM, the last of all the Baltick which belong to Denmark, is situate more Eastward, opposite to that part of Scandia which is called Bleking, betwixt it and Pomeran. And is 4 German miles long and 2 broad. An Isle of excellent Pasturage, breeding plenty of Cattle, wherewith, as also with Butter, Cheese, Wooll, Hides, and some store of Fruits, they supply the wants of some of their neighbours; besides good quantities of Powdered Beef and Mutton, which they barrel up and sell to Marriners. It containeth many good Towns and wealthy Villages; the chief whereof is Bornholm, which gives name to the Island. Both Town and Island were pawned by some former Kings unto those of Lubeck; from them redeemed by King Frederick the second for a great sum of money, after it had been in their possession about 50 years. This Island in the year 1658, was yielded to the Swedes, but the Inhabitants destroyed their Garrison, and return'd under the Crown of Denmark.

Gotland, an Island near the Coast of Sweden, 18 miles long, long, and 5 broad, in which is the Town of Wisbay, formerly of great Trade, but now ruin'd. This Island was taken by the Swedes in 1645, but recovered by the Dane in 1677.

These Islands in the time of Pomponius Mela were by one general name called the Hemodes, in number reckoned to be seven; the residue either not inhabited, or not taken notice of, are no where mentioned in the Ancients. Of these seven; the greatest and best peopled was called Codanonia, (supposed to be Seland;) in which the said Author placeth the Teutoni. By Ptolomy it is called Scandia Minor, with reference to the great Peninsula of Scandia supposed by him to be an Island. From this, or from the Sea adjoining, called Sinus Codanus, the people of these Islands and the next Eastern Continent took the name of Danes; spreading the name afterwards, as they did their Conquests: of which more anon. In the mean time we must cross over the Sound, and take notice of such other parts of this Kingdom as lie on the other side thereof, in the vast Continent or Demy-Island (which you will) of Scandia: of which somewhat must be first premised, in regard that not only some parts of Denmark, but the whole Country of Norway (the Northern Islands excepted) are contained in it,

3. SCANDIA, by Pliny and Solinus called Scandinavia, by Jornandes Scanzia, hath on the East that Bay or Branch of the Baltick which is called the Finnish and Bodner Seas, on the North and West the main Ocean, on the South, where it points towards Germany, the Baltick or Oost Zee, as the Dutch call it, joined to the main Continent of Sarmatia by an Isthmus, or Neck of Land, at the bottom of the Bodner Zee, not far from Wardhuys. In regard of so great Season all parts thereof, it was generally by the Ancients thought to be an Island, but incomperta magnitudinis, of an unknown greatness, as both Pytheas and Xenophon Lamplicenus do affirm in Pliny: by one of which it is called Basilis, by the other Baltia; from whence the name of Baltick to the Sea adjoining. But later Navigations and Experience have confuted that opinion, by which it is found to be no Island, but a part of the Continent and a great one too; containing the whole Kingdom of Norway, the greatest part of the Kingdom of Sweden, and some part of Denmark. That part hereof which belongs to Denmark is situate on the South of this great Peninsula, and divided into the three Provinces of Hallandia, Scania, and Bleking: and in them are 23 Herets or Prefectures, and 15 Cities.

1. HALLANDIA, or HALLAND, hath on the East the wild Woods which part it from Gothland, on the West the intervening Sea betwixt it and Jutland, on the North Sweden properly and specially so called, on the South Scandia or Schonen. A Country which for the healthfulness of the Air, plainness of the Soil, commodiousness of Havens, plenty of Fish, pleasure of Hunting, for inexhaustible Mines of Brass and Lead, (with some veins of Silver) frequency of well-peopled Towns and Villages, and Civility of the Inhabitants, is not inferior to any. Places of most importance in it are, 1. Labolm, 2. Halmstad, Fortified by Christiern the 4th King of Denmark against the Swedes, then possess'd of Warberg, 3. Falkenborch: all of them on the Sea, at the mouth of navigable Streams, whose names I find not. 4. Warsberg, upon the Sea-side also, but fortified with a very strong Castle on the top of an Hill; taken and garrisoned by the Swedes, Anno 1569, and not without great difficulty recovered by the Danes again, Anno 1569. This Province in the year 1645, with all its Apendages, was resigned up to the Swedes, and is still possessed by them; it is 16 German miles long, from Kol to Elseborg.

2. SCANIA, or SCHONIN, hath on the East Blesida or Bleking, on the West the Sound, running along the shore hereof for the space of twenty German miles, on the North Halland, on the South the Baltick or Oost Zee.

The Country is of the same nature with Halland, as before described, the Character of that pertaining to all the three; this having over and above as peculiar to it, that the Sea-shores are flored with such Sholes of Herrings, that sometimes Ships are scarce able with wind and oar to break through them, and row off the Harbour, it is in length 72 miles, 48 in breadth. Chief Towns in which are, 1. Lunden, an Archbishop's See, the Metropolitan of Denmark and Norway; advanced unto that honour by the means and Mediation of Erasmus the first, who purposely made a journey to Rome to effect that business; the Church of Denmark being before that time subject to the Archbishops of Brace. This was about the year 1100. It is situate somewhat within the Land, but the Cathedral easily discernable by Mariners as they sail along. The City is but mean, and were it not for the Cathedral, of no beauty at all. But that indeed is affirmed to be a work of much Magnificence and Art; especially for the Clock, the Dial, and some outward adjuncts. For in the Dial curiously set out with divers Colours are to be seen distinctly the Year, Month, Week, Day, and Hour of every day throughout the year; with the Feasts, both movable and fixed; together with the Motion of the Sun and Moon; and their passage through each Degree of the Zodiack. Then for the Clock, it is so framed by artificial Engines, that whensoever it is to strike, two horse-men encounter one another, giving as many blows a-piece as the Bell sounds hours: and on the opening of a door there appears a Theatre, the Virgin Mary on a Throne with Christ in her Arms, and the three Kings or Magi (with their several Trains) marching in order, doing humble reverence, and presenting severally their Gifts; two Trumpeters sounding all the while, to adorn the Pomp of that Procession. 2. Malmøge, or Elbogen, called by both names) at the very Southern point hereof, just opposite to Copenhagen in Seland, a well traded Port; the Birth-place of Gasper Bartholinus, otherwise called Malmøge Danus, that great Mathematician, supposed to be the Author of the Clock and Dial before described. 3. Tielberg, on the North of Elbogen, 4. Lund, on the Sea-side, of great strength and consequence. 5. Helsingborg, a mean Town, but fortified with an impregnable Castle, just opposite to Helsingore and Cronenburg in Seland; the other of the two Keys which openeth into the Sound. 6. Rottenby, a Frontier Town bordering on Verendia, a Province of Swethland. 7. Christiana, or Christiendorp, a strong piece built by Christiern the 4th, Anno 1604, compassed by the Sea, and fortified by Fens and Marthes, thought to be impregnable. This whole province in the year 1658, was resigned to the King of Sweden, who has opened an University at Lunden in 1668. And the Danes in 1676, attempting the recovery of it the Fourteenth of December, received a great defeat.

3. BLESCIDA, or BLEKING, is bounded on the East and South with the Baltick Sea, on the North with Verendia, a Province of Swethland, on the West with Schania or Schonen; more Mountainous and barren than either, but yet partaking somewhat of the former Character which he had of Halland. Chief Towns hereof are, 1. Usted, on the Mouth of a River falling into the Baltick. 2. Christiernsburg, in Latin Christianopolis, called by the Danes Christiansstad, on the borders of Swethland; raised out of the Ground by Christiern the fourth, to defend his Kingdom on that side, Anno 1604, but not long after by a warlike stratagem, surprised by the Swedes, in the late War betwixt those Kingdoms in the year 1611; destroyed and dispeopled by that Nation, who looked upon it as a dangerous and unpleasant Object, but since repaired and replenished. 3. Alnaby, upon the River which divides the Kingdom not far from Christiernsburg. This Province was also yielded to the Swedes in 1658, but Christian the Fifth King of Denmark, opened a way to the regaining of it by taking Cronstad and Christiansstad.

The ancient Inhabitants hereof were the Guta and Dauciones, taking up the South parts of this great Peninsula. Meridionalia tenent Guta & Dauciones, as we find in Ptolomy, Geogr. l. 2. c. 11. which in all probability must be meant of these Provinces. Of these the Gutes, passing over into the Cimbrick Chersoneuse, possessed themselves of the North parts of it, since from them called Jutland. The rest, uniting with the People of those many Islands which lie together in the Bay or Gulf call'd Sinus Codanus (now the Baltick Sea) took the name of Danes; and not from Dan, I know not what King there-of above 1000 years before the Birth of our Saviour. First taken notice of by that name in Jornandes de rebus Geticis, who lived about the time of Justinian the first; about which time, or not long after, it is conceived that they made themselves Masters of so much of the Cimbrick Chersoneuse, as had been formerly possessed by the Jutes and Angli, whose forsaken or ill-peopled Seats they possessed themselves of. After this we hear little of them till the time of Charles the Great, living in a confused Estate, sometimes made subject to the Norwegians, sometimes to the Swedes, but always without Law and Order; till by the King Godfrey or Gotricus they were regulated by Laws, and reduced to an orderly kind of Life, Anno 797. About this time they first began to infest the Coasts of England, invaded Friesland with a Fleet of 200 Sail; and had much weakned and endangered the great Empire of France, if the unseasonable death of Godfrey, and the Quarrels which arose about the Succession after his decease, had not kept them off. Their Affairs at home being again well settled, they applied their whole Forces against England, as the weaker Enemy: over which they tyrannized 250 Years, and reigned 26, under three Kings of that Nation. Outed of that, and the terrour of their name being over, they have been most busied with their Neighbours of Sweden and Germany; improving their Estate, but rather by Marriages and civil Contracts, than by force of Arms, with the addition of the Kingdom of Norway and the Dukedom of Holstein: their pretensions to, and for a time the possession of the Crown of Sweden getting them nothing in conclusion but Blows and Losses. So that we have no more to do than to sum up a Catalogue of the Kings hereof, till the uniting of the two Crowns of Denmark and Norway, leaving the rest that follow to another place.

The Catalogue of these Ancient Kings of Denmark are extremely confused. That given by Bussieres being very different from this here, and not possible to be reconciled with it, or with it self, so that I have left Heylin's as I found it, only adding from the other the Years of Olaus the first, and Heningus, Magnus and S. Canutus.

The Kings of D E N M A R K.

A. Ch.

- 797 1. Gotricus, the first Legislator of the Danes, and the Establiher of their Kingdom; a prudent and valiant Prince.
- 811 2. Olaus, Son of Gotricus, or Godfrey.
- 815 3. Heningus, Son of Olaus.
- 873 4. Siward, Son to a Daughter of Godfrey, by the King of Norway.
5. Regnier, Son of Siward.
6. Siward II.
7. Ericus, or Henricus, baptized at Mentz at the same time with his Brother Harald, recovered the Kingdom to his House (of which they had been outed by the Race of Godfrey.)
8. Canutus, the Son of Ericus, the Heathenish Son of a Christian and pious Father.
- 880 9. Froto, the Son of Canutus, a professed Christian.
- 886 10. Gormo, (our English Writers call him Gormund) Son of Froto.
- 889 11. Harald, the Son of Gormo, or Gormund.
- 900 12. Gormo II. Son of Harald, an enemy of the Christian Faith.

- 927 13. Harald II. Son of Gormo the second, a good Christian.
- 975 14. Sueno, or Swain, Son of Harald, at first a great Enemy of the Gospel, an Usurper of the Throne in his Father's life-time, and a great Scourge unto the English. Outed of his Estate by Ericus of Swethland, he received the Gospel, regained his Kingdom, and establish'd Christianity in this Country; his War on England still continuing.
- 1010 15. Olaus, the eldest Son of Swain, King of Denmark and Norway.
- 1020 16. Canutus II. Brother of Olaus, the first King of England of the Danes, succeeded his Brother in the Kingdoms of Denmark and Norway; to which he added also the Crown of Sweden.
- 1037 17. Canutus III. Son of Canutus the second, the last King of England of the Race of the Danes.
- 1046 18. Magnus, Son of Olaus, King of Norway.
- 1051 19. Sueno II. Sister's Son of Canutus the second, by Olfo an English Duke.
- 1074 20. Harald III. base Son of Sueno the second.
- 1088 21. Canutus IV. another of the base Sons of Sueno, murdered at the Altar in the Church of Odensee in the Isle of Fionia; afterwards canonized a Saint.
- 1088 22. Olaus II. another of the base Sons of Swain.
- 1099 23. Ericus II. another of the base Sons of Swain, the Founder of the Archiepiscopal See of Lunden.
- 1102 24. Harald IV. base Son of Henry or Ericus the second.
- 1133 25. Nicolas, another of the base Sons of Swain.
- 1135 26. Ericus III. another of the base Sons of Ericus the second.
- 1140 27. Ericus IV. commonly called the fifth (some one of the younger House being reckoned in) Nephew of Ericus the second.
- 1150 28. Sueno III. Son of Ericus the third, and Canutus the fifth, Grandchild of Nicolas, both Kings; the first reigning in Scuadia, the other in Jutland: both died without Issue; Canutus being slain by Sueno, and he by Waldemar.
- 1157 29. Waldemar, Son of Canutus, the lawful Son of Ericus the second, after the interposition of so many Bastards, succeeded at the last in the Throne of his Fathers. By this means the Rugians and Vandals imbraced the Gospel.
- 1185 30. Canutus V. Son of Waldemar.
- 1203 31. Waldemar II. Brother of Canutus, and Duke of Sleswick before his coming to the Crown.
- 1243 32. Ericus V. called the VII. Son of Waldemar, the second, slain by the Practices and Treason of his Brother Abel.
- 1251 33. Abel, Brother of Ericus, slain by the Peasants of Friesland.
- 1252 34. Christopher, Brother of Abel and Ericus.
- 1260 35. Ericus VI (VIII.) Son of Christopher.
- 1287 36. Ericus VII. (IX.) younger Son of Ericus, supplanted his eldest Brother Christopher.
- 1327 37. Christopher II. eldest Son of Ericus, at first dispossessed of his Birth-right by his Brother Ericus; after whose death he succeeded in the Crown, by the help of his Half-Brother the Earl of Holstein.
- 1334 38. Waldemar III. Son of Christopher the second, against whom and his Encroachments the Sea Towns, commonly called the Hanse, did first confederate, and vanquished him in many Battels. This Prince (saith the other Histories of Denmark) succeeded in the year 1346, and conquer'd the great Schoneck, King of Sweden, and so became the sole King of Scandinavia.

dinavia in the year 1360. He obtain'd Gothland by a Treaty with King Albert. In 1366 he managed a War against the Hanse-Towns of Germany, and died in the year 1375, leaving Margaret his Sole Daughter of all his vast Dominions. The Reason of this difference is, that there was two Waldemars, the first was Duke of Sleswick, and was chosen King of Denmark about 1326; the second Waldemar was chosen King about 1340, and married the Daughter of the first Waldemar, who was the Father of Margaret, Queen of Norway, Denmark and Sweden.

1376 39. Margaret, Daughter and Heir of Waldemar the third, married with Aquin King of Norway, so uniting the Kingdoms: of whom and their Successors we shall speak hereafter, when we have took a view also of the Kingdom of Norway, and the Appendixes thereof.

3. NORWAY.

NORWAY is bounded on the East with Swethland, from which is parted by a perpetual Ridge of rough and wild Mountains, called the Dofrine Hills; on all other parts by the Sea: that is to say, by the Frozen Sea upon the North; the German or Norwegian Ocean upon the West; and on the South with the Danish Sea, interposing betwixt it and the Cimbrick Chersonese, being in breadth from Schagen, the most Northern point of Fuitland, to Congel, the most Southerly Town of Norway, no less than 250 Miles.

It is called Norway quasi Tractus seu Via Septentrionalis, from the Northern situation of it; containing in length 1300 Miles, in breadth not above half so much, inhabited by a People given to Hospitality, Plain-dealing, and abhorring Theft. Anciently they were great Warriors, and became terrible to all the more Southern Nations; by whom they were called Normans (that is to say, Hominibus Borcales, or North-men, as Williclmus Gemiticensis rightly hath it) being at that time a Mixture of all the Northern Nations together, or of the Norwegians and Swethlanders, apart from the Danes, whose steps they followed in their frequent, or rather continual, Piracies on the Coasts of England, France and Ireland. By Helmoldus in the same sense they are called Nordluidi, a name made into Latin out of the Dutch word Nord, and the French word Lieu, signifying Men a Northern Place or Nation.

Of the Position of it in regard of the Heavens we have spoke already; but more particularly it reacheth from the first Parallel of the twelfth Clime, where the Pole is elevated 58 Degrees, 26 Minutes, as far to the 71 Degree of Latitude. By which account the longest Day in the Southern point is but 18 hours; whereas at Wardhuys, being situate farthest North of all this Country, they have no Night for almost three whole Months together.

The Country is for the most part rocky, mountainous and barren, full of vast Woods, extream cold, and but ill inhabited. In the best parts thereof it affords little Corn, and in the most Northern none at all: insomuch that the common sort of People are fain to use dried Fish (that which we commonly call Stock-Fish) in stead of Bread; but the better (that is, the richer) sort buy Corn of such Merchants as come to Traffick with them. Their chief Commodities are Stock-fish, rich Furs, Train-oil, Pitch, and Tackling for Ships, as Masts, Cables, Deal-boards, and the like, which the Inhabitants exchange for Corn, Wine, Fruits, Beer, and other necessities for Mans life. The Country is exceedingly troubled with certain little Beasts which they call Lemmers. They are about the bigness of a Field-Mouse, and are by the Inhabitants said to drop out of the Clouds in tempestuous Weather.

They devour, like the Locusts, every green thing on the earth; and at a certain time die all in heaps (as it were) together, and with their stench so poison the Air, that the poor People are long after troubled with the Jaundies and with a Giddiness in the Head. But these Beasts come not so often to infect the Land, as the Whales do to terrifie and molest the shores; the Western Seas being very deep, and therefore a fit habitation for those great Leviathans: against whose Violence and Fury the Mariners and people of the Sea-coast have found a Remedy, which is by casting out some Water intermixed with the Oil of Castor; the smell whereof doth force them to retire immediately. Without this help there were no Fishing on these Coasts, which is the greatest Staple-commodity (besides materials for Shipping) which the Country yieldeth.

The Towns here are exceeding thin, and in them the Houses for the most part very poor and miserable; commonly patch'd up of Dirt and Hurdles, not much unlike our ordinary Cottage Houses in the Fen-Countries. It is distributed into five Prefectures or Governments, according to the number of the Castles which command the same.

1. The first most towards the South is the Castle of BAHUTS: to which are subject the Towns of, 1. Marstrand, seated in a Demi-Island begirt with Rocks; of most note for the infinite quantity of Herrings caught hereabout. 2. Congel, upon the Sea, a Town of Merchandise, opposite to Schagen in Denmark. 3. Oddewald. The Castle of Bahuts was resigned to the Swedes in 1660, who were before possessed of it: the Danes in 1678 attempted the Recovery of it, but without any success: The rest of the Province was yielded to the Swedes by the Treaty of Roschild in 1658.

2. AGGERHUTS, the second of the five Royal Castles, hath under its command the Towns of, 1. Anslo, or Asloia, on a Bay or Gullet opposite to Fuitland, an Episcopal See, and of most Esteem of all the Country, by reason of the Courts of Judicature which are therein held. 2. Tonsberg, or Koningsberg, that is to say, the King's or the Kingly Mountain, formerly a retiring-place of the Kings of Norway. 3. Frederickstadt, built by one of the Fredericks, Kings of Denmark. 4. Schin, or Schon, remarkable for its Mines of Iron and Copper. 5. Saltsburg; 6. Hammar the greater, and 7. Hammar the less, divided by the interposing of the Bay called Sinus Mæstianus, in former times the See of a Bishop, since removed to Asloia, or rather thereunto united in these latter Times, as many poor Bishopricks be in Ireland.

3. BERGERHUTS, is the third Castle of Command herein. Subordinate whereunto are, 1. Bergen, the principal Town of the Country, an Episcopal See, and the ordinary Residence of the Governor for the Kings of Denmark, situate amongst high Mountains, at the bottom of a deep Creek or Arm of the Ocean called Carmesunt. A noted Port, and much resorted to by Merchants of most foreign Nations, bringing in Corn, Meal, Bread, Beer, Wine, and Aqua Vitæ, to supply the natural wants and defects hereof; and in exchange transporting hence Fish, Furs, Cordage, and other materials for Shipping. In which regard it was accounted formerly one of the four chief Staple-Towns of the Dutch Merchants of the Hanse: the other three being London in England, Novogrod in Muscovy, and Bruges in Flanders. But of late time this Bergen hath lost most of its Trade, removed hence to Wardhuys, nearer unto Muscovy: as the great Town of Novogrod, by reason of the change of Navigation from the Baltick into that of the Northern passage, hath given way to S. Nicholas; and Bruges was deprived of her Traffick by Antwerp, from whence it is removed to Amsterdam. For the Hollanders, by blocking up the Haven, but especially by keeping Bergen op Zoon, have such a command over the River, that no Vessel can pass or repass without their Licence. This Town and Harbour of Bergen will ever be remembered by by all English Men, on the account of a desperate Attempt made by five English Men of War upon a vast East-India Fleet of the Hollanders, which had here sheltered themselves in the Year 1665, the 16th of August, many of which Ships were destroy'd, and they had all Perished if contrary Winds had not forced the English to retire. 2. Staffenger, an Episcopal See also, but not else observable.

4. The Castle of TRONDHEIM is the fourth, situate in the Town of Trondheim, or Drontheim, formerly called Tronden, and in Latin, Nidrosia; the See of an Archbishop, who is the Metropolitan of Norway. A beautiful City heretofore, but since the Subjection of this Country unto the Danes reduced to a Burrough. So called of the River Nider, upon which it is seated, and Rosa, the name then of the principal Church; which in time gave place to the Cathedral for greatness and neatness of the Fabrick, all of polish'd Stone, not giving place to any in Europe; about the year 1530 much defaced with Fire, which began at the Altar, the damage done by it being estimated at 7000 Crowns; a great sum of Money in those times, and so poor a Country. So that, by casting up our reckoning, we find in Norway one Archbishop and four Bishops; that is to say, the Archbishop of Trondheim or Nidrosia, the Bishops of Bergen, Auslo, Staffangor, and Hammar: of the same Power, Jurisdiction and Revenue, since the Reformation, as those of Denmark; whereof, and of the first Conversion of this People to the Christian Faith, we have spoke already.

5. The fifth and last Castle which commands this Country is that of WARDHUY, so called of the Town of Wardhuys, as that is from the Isle Ward, in which it is seated. A small Castle, and the Town in former times but mean and poor, situate in the extreme North-point of all this Kingdom; but in those times accounted (as easily it might) for the chief of this Prefecture, and honoured in the Summer time with the Seat and Residence of the Governor, retiring more Southwards in the Winter, at what time, by reason of the extremity of the Cold, and long absence of the Sun for some Months together (the Town lying within the Arctic Circle) it is hardly habitable. But of late time it is much improv'd both in Wealth and Building, by reason of the removal of the English Trading from Novograd, near the Baltick Sea, to the Town of S. Nicholas, not far from hence; drawing by that means the Trade of Muscovy and Norway more near together. So that now it is not only useful unto the Danes, in regard that it somewhat aweth the neighbouring Lappians, and commandeth the Natives, for that cause fortified very strongly by King Frederick the second; but made very profitable to him also, by the resort of Dutch and English, who must of necessity touch at it (if they make no stay there) in their way to Muscovy. Other Towns in these two last Prefectures are not worth looking after.

And so much for the Continent or Main-land of Norway: let us next look upon the Islands in the Northern Ocean which belong unto it.

The ISLANDS in the Northern Ocean.

THE Northern Sea, so named from its Northern Situation, is by some called Mare Scythicum, because it coasted along the Shores of Scythia; by Juvenal Oceanus Glacialis, because often frozen; by Pliny in the same sense, Mare Amalbinum, the Word in the Scythick Language signifying frozen, or congealed; by the Russes or Muscovites, Myrmanskoy More; by the Cimbrians, in their Tongue, Marimorusa, that is to say, the Dead Sea, because of the slowness of its motion, often clogged with Ice; and, in the same sense, Mare pigrum, by Tacitus. This Tacitus doth best describe, from whom take it thus. "Trans Sueones Mare aliud pigrum & prope immotum, &c. Beyond the Smedes there is another Sea, so slow and almost immovable, that many think it to be the Bounds which compals the whole World.

"Some are persuaded that the sound of the Sun is heard as he ariseth out of this Sea; and that many shapes of Gods are seen, and the Beams of his Head. Illuc usque (& fama vera) tantum Natura; At this Sea (the Report is credible) is the end of Nature and the World. The English were the first of all civil People who adventured to open and discover the Passages of it, under the conduct of Richard Chancellour, arriving by this way in Russia, Anno 1553, and tracing out the way; which others of that Nation, together with the Flemmings, Hollanders, and some Towns of the Hanse, have since followed. Of which more in Muscovy. The principal Islands dispersed in it are, 1. Greenland. 2. Iceland. 3. Freezland, belonging to the Crown of Norway, to be surveyed at the present: Nova Zemla and Sir Hugh Willoughbie's Island, appertaining (if to any) to the Knez, or great Duke of Muscovy, of which more hereafter.

1. ISELAND, is situate under the Arctic Circle; in length 144 German Miles, 65 in breadth. So called from the abundance of Ice in it and about it; frozen continually for the space of 8 Months, and so vehemently chilled with the Northern Winds, that it yieldeth neither Corn nor Trees, except Juniper only: yet there is Grass in such abundance that the People are of opinion, that if they do not sometimes keep their Cattel from feeding, they are in danger to surfeit and die with fulness. Beasts for Labour here are both Horses and Oxen; the Oxen and Kine without Horns, but the Sheep not so: and they have also here a fine breed of little Dogs, known amongst us by the name of Island Dogs, the delight of Ladies; as also white Falcons and white Ravens, Eagles with white Tails, and Hares with Bears of the same colour. By reason of their want of Corn, the People eat Stock-fish (as in Norway) in stead of Bread: yet notwithstanding, by reason of the benefit of the Sea and access of Strangers, they have all things necessary brought unto them (even to Wood and Timber) of which the richer sort make use, giving the Merchant in return sometimes the Flesh of Beeves and Mutton, but ordinarily Butter. Skins, Horses, Hawks, Brimstone, and Fish especially, the Staple Commodity of the Country; of which they have such plenty, and of so good Condition that a piece of Island Ling is counted with us as a fit Dish for a Nobleman's Table.

The People for the most part are of a plain and simple nature, living (as in the Golden Age) on that which Nature gives them, which help of Art, more than that of making Cheese and Butter (which is very ordinary too:) the Mountains serving them for Towns, and the Rivers for Drink, and their Lodging is all under one roof with their Horses and Oxen. They use neither Physick nor Physicians, yet live so long (and probably the longer for it) that many of them attain to the Age of 150 years and more. The Women are exceeding fair, but they know not how to attire themselves; nor is there any difference in Apparel betwixt the Sexes, so that it is not easie to know one from another. Few of them but have some familiar Spirit to do them service: and notwithstanding the endeavour of the Ministers to purge them from this Impiety, yet it is so grafted in them that they cannot leave it.

It is observable, that notwithstanding the cold condition of this Island, yet in many places it is full of Heats and Fire under the ground: which, by the Antiperistasis of the cold Air stopping the Pores of the Earth, and taking from it the liberty of Evaporation, doth burn more vehemently: insomuch that there are three high Mountains whole tops are always covered with Snow, and yet continually burning. The names of them are Hecla, Helga, and La-Croix, but the first the principal, by some called Heclafort; which sometimes casts out Fire, sometimes flaming Water, then black Ashes and Pumice-stones, in so great abundance that it darkneth the Sun, and makes the Country for six Miles round about it to be uninhabited. Stranger things are not spoken of

Atina

Aetna than of these three Mountains: and here the Superstitious People have the same opinion which they have in Sicily, viz. That underneath must needs be Hell, and the Habitations of the Damned. But to judicious Men the natural Reason of these Flames is plain and obvious; occasion'd by those veins of Brimstone (great quantity whereof they send into Foreign Parts) on which the Foundation of the Hills is laid: here being many Baths and Fountains of hot Water, which have Sulphur swimming at the top.

At the first planting of this Island, about the year 860 or 874, the People did not trouble themselves with building of Towns, but every one feated himself where he thought convenient, dwelling in Cells and Caverns digged in the bottom of the Rock. By means whereof the Inland parts have not many Houses: but the Sea-coasts, since the coming of so many Strangers to them, begin to be built in many places, the Buildings for the most part being of Timber, roofed with Flags with an Hole on the sides of the Roof to let in their Light. So that we are not to expect many fine Towns or Cities: the principal of them which are, being, 1. Halar, in the North, and 2. Schalholt, in the Southern part; both Bishops Sees, having petty Schools, consisting of 24 Scholars apiece, to whom the Latin Tongue is taught at the charge of the Bishops. 3. Fæffenfordt, an Haven Town, where under Tents the Dutch Merchants barter their Commodities. And 4. Besfede, a Castle, the ordinary Residence of the Governor for the Kings of Denmark.

It hath been generally conceived that this Island is that Thule which the Poets so often speak of: as Tibi serviat ultima Thule, in Virgil; Nec sit terris ultima Thule, in Seneca the Tragedian. Nor did there want some reason to perswade them to this opinion; this being indeed the farthest part of the old known World. But greater reasons are against it. For when Solinus saith Multa sunt circa Britanniam Insulae, e quibus Thule ultima; I hope Thule must be one of the British Isles. And when Tacitus saith of Agricola, Insulas quas Orcadas vocant dominit, despecta est & Thule; I am sure that Island is so far from being kenned by any one of the Orcades, that it is at least eight Degrees distant. So that Thule must be sought for in another place, and where that is, hath been shew'd already. As for Island, it was so far from being known unto the Ancients, that it was hardly known unto those of Norway till the year 874, when some of the Norwegians were driven out of their Country by Harald the first, who first suppressed the many Petty Kings of the Norwegians, made many of them seek new Dwellings; of which some few arrived here; where finding room enough to plant in, and no great loss (if any) by change of their Dwelling, they invited many of their Friends and Country-men to come unto them, Anno 1070, they were converted to the Gospel by some Preachers sent hither from Adelbert the Archbishop of Breme. By whole perswasion and procurement they founded two Episcopal Sees; adding thereto in tract of time eight Religious Houses: that is to say, the Monasteries of Pingore, Remessede, Atodur, and Monkeniere, under the Government and Jurisdiction of the Bishop of Halar; and those of Videy, Pernebar, Kirkebar, and Skiade, under the Bishop of Schalholt. In the year 1260, it was first brought under the Crown of Norway, following since the Fortunes of it in all Changes both of Church and State; made subject with it to the Kings of Denmark, together with it reformed in matters of Religion according to the Confession at Augsburg, retaining still their Bishops, with a limited power, and turning the Revenues of their Monasteries unto other uses, as there they did, according to the will and pleasure of their Lords of Denmark.

2. South-west of Island lies another, and as cold an Isle, commonly called by the name of FREESLAND, from the continual Frosts unto which it is subject. By the Latins it is called Frizlandia, to distinguish it from Frissa, or Friesland in Germany. It is situate under the North Frigid Zone; but not so much within the Arctic as Island is; the longest day here in the height of Summer not exceeding 20 hours: and yet the Soil is so cold and barren, that it beareth neither Corn nor Fruit, the Inhabitants living most on Fish; which is their only Food, so is it also their chief Commodity, wherewith to entertain or move the Merchant. And heretofore there is such abundance caught upon their Coasts, that they are never without the Company of Hollanders, Danes and English; by which last it hath been so frequented in these later times, that it hath been called by some the Western England. For quantity it is somewhat bigger than Island; but by reason of the bitter Air, and the Defects above-mentioned, very thinly inhabited. The chief Town of it is called Freestad, by the name of the Island; situate on the Eastern Shore of it. Besides which, there are some others set down in the Maps; as, 2. Sanctor, 3. Adfort, 4. Serud; but not much observable. Westward whereof, as Zeyglorn (and out of him Magnus) telleth us, is a little Island called Idria, giving the name of Mare Idrium to the Sea adjoining: so called (by his mistake or translation of the Fable) from Idria the Son of Dadalus, a King of Scotland, who did once (but no body knows when) Lord it over these Islands. It is much disputed of late whether there be any such Island in the World, and by some positively denied.

III. GROENLAND, so called, as some say, from the Greenness of it in the Summer; as others say, by Antiphrasis, because never green, by reason of the sharpness of Winter. But the former Etymology is more agreeable to the state of the Country. For though it be continually cover'd with Snow, except in June, July, and August (inasmuch that though the People be always clad with Furs and Skins, yet they feel no heat) yet in those Months it is exceeding fresh and green, and affords good Pasturage. It is situate for the greatest part within the Arctic, between the 65 and 77 Degrees of Northern Latitude: so that the longest day in the Southern Part is 21 hours and a half; and in the most Northern they have no night for three months and two weeks. The known length of it is affirm'd to be 600 miles, and may be much longer than so for ought that any body knows: there being no perfect discovery made of it hitherto, tho' much frequented by the English and Hollanders (two great Seafaring Nations) for the benefit of the Whale-fishing, much there in use. Their chief Commodities are Fish, white Bears, wild Deer, and some store of Cattel there bred upon their Pastures, but housed for the most part all the Winter. The greatest part of the People dwell in the Caves, and delight in Necromancy, to which they are more wilfully addicted than those in Island, because less acquainted with the Gospel.

Places of most importance in it are, 1. Saint Thomas, (in which there is a Monastery of Dominican Friars) seated in the North-East part of the Island; concerning which Mercator speaks of one thing which is very observable, relating, that it is not far from a flaming or burning Mountain, seated upon hot scalding Springs, conveyed by Pipes of stone into the Monastery, and serving both as a Stove to warm them, and for a Fire to boil their Victuals. The Walls of the Monastery are built of Pumice-stones cast out of that Mountain; which, being temper'd with the Water of those burning Springs, doth make a glutinous substance, serving instead of Lime, and as long durable. The Gardens of the Convent, in regard of this heat, flourish all the year with Herbs and sweet smelling Flowers; and the adjoining Sea, for the same reason being never frozen, affords good plenty of Fish and Fowl the whole year about, not only for the Monks, but the neighbouring Islanders. So far and to this purpose he. The second Town of note is Iiva, not far from this Monastery: and 3. Atundorpe, on the South-East-point. Others, as in a Country not well discovered, we have little notice of: though it be near 300 years since Nicolas Zeni, a Venetian, call by Tempest on the Coast of Freeland, land, and by the King thereof imploy'd upon new Discoveries, Anno 1380, first made it known to us of Europe; it being immediately on that discovery possessed by the Norwegians, and made a Member and Portion of that Crown.

As for the Norwegians themselves, now their Fellow-subjects, they were first known in the time of Ptolomy by the name Chedini, possessing then the Western parts of Scandia. Uniting with their Neighbours, both Danes and Swithlanders, they became better known in the flourishing Times of the French Empire by the name of Normans; first called so by Eginhartus in his History of the Life of Charles the Great, infesting then the Sea-coasts of France and Belgium. Under this name they fell so heavily on the French, especially in the times of Charles the Simple, that they extorted from him that goodly Country, since of them called Normandy, conferred on Rollo, first Duke thereof, Anno 912, whose Successors much encreased their glory by the Conquest of England, as some private Adventurers of them did by the Conquest of the Kingdoms of Naples, Sicily, and Antioch. Afterwards settling on their own bottom, every one of these Northern Nations acting by it self, they were called Norwegians, sometimes, as formerly, commanding over all three Kingdoms, subjects successively to each; but most an end governed by their own Kings, till their final Subjugation by the Danes. And as a Nation acting solely and by it self, they subdued Ireland under the conduct of Tingefius, who tyrannized there for a time; as also all the Orcades and the Isle of Man, sold or surrendered by them upon good conditions to the English and Scots, who by those Titles still possess them. The Catalogue of their Kings, leaving out all those of the darker times (parallel to our Brute and the first Scottish Fergus) as meerly fabulous, we will begin with King Subidagerus, who was King of all the three Kingdoms, and at his death divided them again amongst his three Sons; whose Successors Munster thus reckoneth.

The Kings of NORWAY.

1. Subidagerus.
2. Haddingus.
3. Hetharius.
4. Collerus.
5. Frogerus.
6. Gotarus.
7. Rotherus.
8. Helga.
9. Hajmum.
10. Reginaldus.
11. Gummarus.
12. Osmundus.
13. Olaus.
14. Osmundus II. not long after whose time, Anno scil. 800, the Normans began their Irruptions.
15. Aquinus.
16. Heraldus.
17. Olaus II.
18. Sueno, King of Denmark by Birth, and of Norway by Conquest.
19. Olaus III. Son of Swain or Sueno, succeeded in the Realms of Denmark and Norway, Canutus his younger Brother being King of England. In this King's time the Norwegians first received the Gospel.
20. Canutus, King of England, succeeded his Brother Olaus in the Kingdoms of Denmark and Norway, to which he also added the Crown of Sweden.
21. Sueno II. by whom the Kingdom was restor'd to the Norwegians.
22. Canutus II.
23. Magnus.
24. Harald II.

25. Magnus II. King of Sweden and Norway.
1326. 26. Magnus III. King of Sweden and Norway, intending the Crown of Sweden for Ericus his eldest Son, conferred that of Norway on Hagquin, or Aquinus, his second Son.
- 1359 27. Aquinus, King of Norway, younger Son of Magnus the third, married with Margaret, eldest Daughter of Waldemar the third, King of Denmark; so uniting the Kingdom. And though Olaus, the only Son of his Bed, died young without any Issue; yet the Danes, having once got footing in Norway, so assured themselves of it, that they have ever since possessed it as a subject Kingdom, keeping the Natives so poor and low, that they are not able to assert their former Liberties, and not permitting them to use any Shipping; so much as for transporting their own Commodities, for fear they should grow wealthy and strong at Sea. Besides the strong Garrisons maintained in most parts of the Country, kept it in such an absolute Awe, that they dare not stir against the Danes if their stomachs served them. So that now Norway being made subject to the Crown of Denmark, or both made Fellow-subjects to the same King, we must next look upon these Kings as Kings of each distinct and separate from the other, but as they are in Fact and Title

The Kings of DENMARK and NORWAY.

- 1376 1. Hagrin, or Aquinus, King of Denmark and Norway: of this last by Descent, of the other by Marriage.
- 1380 2. Olaus, Son of Aquinus and Margaret, King of Norway, Denmark, and Sweden, died in the year 1387.
- 1383 3. Margaret, Wife of Aquinus, Mother of Olaus, and Daughter of Waldemar the third, after the death of her Son (in whose time she governed as his Guardian) took upon her the Kingdom in her own Right; not only keeping Norway in the State she found it, but adding unto Denmark the Crown of Sweden, won by the Vanquishment of Albert Duke of Mecklenburg, then King thereof. (In the year 1396 she was elected Queen of Sweden.) A gallant and magnanimous Lady, the Semiramis of Germany.
- 1411 4. Ericus, Duke of Pomeran, and Knight of the Garter, Son of the Lady Mary, Dutcheis of Pomeran, Daughter of Ingelburgis, the Sister of Margaret, by whom he was adopted for her Heir, in a Dyet held at Calmar in the year 1397, he succeeded after her decease in all the three Kingdoms: outed of all before his death by a strong Faction made against him, and his Estates conferred on
- 1439 5. Christopher, Count Palatine of the Rhene, and Duke of Bavaria, (but in Title only) the Son of Margaret, Sister of Ericus; chosen by the joint consent of all the States of these Kingdoms. After whose death (without Issue) the Danes considering the great Advantage they had gotten by the addition of Norway, pitched upon Adolphus, Duke of Sleswick and Earl of Holstein, for the next Successor, that they might get in those Estates to the Kingdom also. Who, excusing himself by reason of his Age and want of Children, commended to them Christiern Earl of Oldenburg, his Kinsman and next Heir, who was chosen accordingly.

- 1448 6. Christiern, Earl of Oldenburg, upon the commendation of his Uncle Adolphus, chosen King of Denmark and Norway, succeeded his said Uncle in the Estates of Holstein and Sleswick, continuing since united unto that Crown, and added also therunto by Conquest the Kingdom of Sweden in the year 1458.
- 1482 7. John, Son of Christiern, succeeded in all these Kingdoms; Knight of the Order of the Garter.
- 1514 8. Christiern II. Son of John, King of Denmark, Norway and Sweden, which last he held under with great cruelty; hated, by reason of his Tyranny toward all sorts of People, and outed of his Kingdoms by his Uncle Frederick, Anno 1522, by whom at last he was taken and kept in Prison till he died, Anno 1559. He was born in the year 1481. He was Disobedient to his Parents, so that he drew upon himself his Father's Curse. In the year 1519 he refused a Reconciliation with Frederick his Cousin, and entered upon the Conquest of Sweden, the next year he made the horrible Massacre of Stockholm.
- 1523 9. Frederick, Brother of John, and Uncle of Christiern the second, chosen King of Denmark and Norway on the Abdication of his Nephew, in the Dyet of Malmöen in the year 1527. He Reformed Religion in both Kingdoms, according to the Confession of Augsburg.
- 1535 10. Christiern III. born in the year 1503, suppressed with great trouble the Party formed against him in behalf of Christiern the second, perfected the Reformation begun in the time of his Father, and was a great Benefactor to the University of Copenhagen.
- 1559 11. Frederick II. Son of Christiern the third, subdued Dithmarsch, before unconquer'd by the Danes or Earls of Holstein, and added it unto that Dukedom, (both being united to that Crown though held of the Empire) Knight of the Garter.
- 1588 12. Christiern IV. Son of Frederick the second, Brother of Anne Queen of Great Britain, and Knight of the Garter; who engaging in a War against the Emperor Ferdinand the 2d, for the Liberty of Germany, was suddenly beat out of all the Cimbrick Cherfonese by the prevailing Imperialists, but compounded the Business upon very good Terms, and was restored to all his own.
- 1648 13. Frederick III. the youngest Son of Christiern the fourth, his eldest Brethren being all dead without Issue, succeeded in the Crowns of Denmark and Norway. This Prince in the beginning of his Reign was much endanger'd by one Plesfeld, a great, rich, powerful Noble Man, but more after this by a War he began upon Sweden (then engaged with Poland) by the procurement of the Dutch, in the Year 1657; but in the Year 1658, he was forced to purchase his Peace in the Treaty of Roschild, sign'd February 26. with the Resignation of Huland, Scania, Bleckling, Bornholm, Rahuis, and Drontheim: yet the next year the War broke out again, and the Swedes took Landskroon, and in 1659 besieged Copenhagen, which yet escaped them: So that in 1660 Charles Gustavus, King of Sweden, dying, a second Peace was concluded; by which he recovered Drontheim and Bornholm. After which he procured the making this Kingdom Hereditary, which before was Elective.
- 1670 14. Christiern V. his Son, born in the year 1645, succeeded him. This Prince, in the year 1675, seiz'd the Duke of Holstein, and forc'd him to resign his Dukedom. The next year he invaded Schleswig, and took Hildesburg, Landskroon, Christiansbad, and Glabbe only with great ease, but fail'd in his Design upon Haldesburg, was beaten first at Landskroon, and then at the Siege of Malmogoe and Falckenberg. And at last by the Treaty of St. Germain was forced to restore back to the Swedes, in 1678, all that he had retaken. And his Attempt upon Hamburg, in 1686, had no effect. His eldest Son is Frederick, who was born the 11th of October 1671. And his only Brother is George, who was born the 21th of April, 1653, and married Anne, the second Daughter of James the second, King of Great Britain, the 7th of August, 1683.

Having thus mustered up the Kings of these several Kingdoms, taken distinctly and conjunct; we must next look upon the way of their coming to the Regal Throne, their Form of Government, together with their Power and Revenues incident unto it. As for the manner of their coming to the Regal Throne, the Danes pretend their Kingdom to be Elective, and not Hereditary; yet so as they have always set the eldest Son on the Throne of his Father, unless some extraordinary occasion have disposed it otherwise. But they that look upon their Stories in the former times can see no such matter, the Kingdom going generally in the way of Succession, unless by Faction or Usurpation some popular and powerful Pretender hath interloped; as oftentimes hath happen'd in such other Estates as are Hereditary merely, without claim or colour of Election. 'Tis true, that the Male-issue failing in Olavus the Son of Margaret, and the Princess which pretended by the Females after her decease not being of sufficient power to assert their Titles, the Kingdom was transferred to the House of Oldenburg, who held it on no other ground than by that of Election. Which, being an extraordinary case, is to make no Precedent, though seconded by the ousting of King Christiern the second, and the advancement of Frederick unto that Estate; these being acts of Violence and Force, and justified only by the false Topick of Success. But who-soever lost by the hand, the Danes got well by it; King Frederick taking up the Crown upon such Conditions as have made him and his Successors little more than a Tyranny. For he was sam to swear at his Coronation, that he would put none of the Nobility to Death or Banishment but by the Judgment of the Senate, that the Great Men should have power of Life and Death over their Tenants or Vassals; that no Appeal should lie from them to the King's Tribunal; nor the King be partaker of the Confiscations, nor, finally, advance any to Commands and Honours but by consent of his great Council. Which Oath being also taken by his Successors, made Bedinnus say, Non tam re ipsa quam appellatione Reges esse; that they were only Kings in Title, but not Kings indeed. Yet in regard that the Nobility (so they call their Gentry) have but small Estates, none of them above the degree of Knights (except only the Princes of the Blood) and that Decree conferred by the King alone; it is not often found that they have dared to cross or oppose their King, but when some of the Royal Family (out of private ends) have concurred with them in it: as in the case of Christiern the 2d, deposed by the People, but those People headed and set on by his Uncle Frederick, who had an Eye upon the Crown. This was altered by Frederick the third in the year 1660, when the Crown was again in a Dyet made Hereditary, and these vast Privileges of the Nobility retrench'd. Ut ab omni Nunc & Arbitrio omnia Penderent, as Pufendorf has it; so that it seems now to be an Absolute Monarchy.

As for the Senate or great Council, spoken of before, it consists wholly of Men chosen out of the Nobility (who are to prove their Gentry by a long Descent) seldom exceeding the number of 28, to each of which there is allowed a convenient Salary, with some fair Casle in the Country for his Retirements, during his being of that Body: his whole Estate being freed also for that time from all publick Payments. Without their Counsel and Advice the King is neither to determine of Peace or War, or to enter into any new League or Confederacies, nor impose any Tax upon the Subject; and unto them and the King jointly is the last Appeal: such being the Constitution of this Estate, that all Causes and Controversies are first decided in the Prefecture or Heret (184 in number) where they first arise; from whence it is lawful to appeal to the Judge of the Province, from him to the Chancellor of the Kingdom, and finally to the King and Council. By the Laws of Waldemar the first, who first reduced the Laws into set form and writing, the Bishops were to sit with his Council in all Causes of moment: but were discharged from that Employment by King Christiern the third, by whom it was also ordained, that the Clergy should not sell any of the Church-lands without leave of the King.

The Forces which this King or Kingdom are able to raise may best be seen by some of their particular Undertakings, those specially of Christiern the second, who, at the request of Henry the second of France, sent a Navy of an hundred Sail into Scotland against the English, and therein no fewer than 10000 Soldiers; and of Frederick then Duke of Holstein, who in his War against this Christiern (whose removal from the Crown he had then projected) brought 80000 Men into the Field to make good his Quarrel. And questionless considering the many Ports and Islands that this Crown is Master of, both within the Baltick and without, it cannot be but he may suddenly raise a strong power at Sea. And then considering that each of the Nobility, which are here numerous enough, is bound to find a certain number of Horse upon all occasions; as are those also who hold Lands of the King, which the Danes call Verlihnunge: it will accordingly be concluded, that they are able to make good Levies for a suddain Service, especially in defence of their own Dominions.

The Revenue of this King consisteth principally in the great Impost laid upon all Ships which pass through the Sound: the greatness whereof may easily be conjectured at by the multitude of Ships which of necessity must pass by it in the Trade of the Baltick; though of late somewhat lessened of what it was, since the English found out and frequented the Northern passage into Muscovia. There are also some Crown-lands and a great yearly Toll made of the Cattel which pass into Germany; as also of the Fish transported into other Countries. And yet it is conceived that the Treasures of this King are not very great: partly because there is no other important Commodity but Fish to draw Merchants thither; and partly, that there is not any one Town of any great Traffick in all his Realms for the entertaining of Commerce.

Since our Author wrote, the Trade of Deal, Timber and Masts is become equal, perhaps greater, than that of the Fish, especially since the Fire of London in 1666; the greatest part of that vast City having been built with Timber brought from Norway and Denmark: besides which, the Danes have begun to open a Trade with the East-Indies, which will much enrich them in time, if the Hollanders do not interrupt it.

The Present State of the Kingdom of Denmark.

THE Account our Learned Author has given of the Kingdom of Denmark respects the State it was in when he concluded this Work about the year 1648, since which time it has received so great a Change in all things, as I have above hinted from the Learned Samuel Puffendorf; that what he has said will no way comport with it. I shall therefore from a late Book stiled, An Account of Denmark as it was in 1692. represent as briefly as I can the Present State of the Government, and by what means it came to be so altered.

There were in all the Ancient times frequent Assemblies of the Three Estates, in which all matters relating to good Government were transacted, Laws consider'd, Peace and War, Alliances, disposal of the great Offices, Contracts of Marriages for the Royal Family, &c. were debated. Nay, their Kings (as my Author saith) were formally made to answer before the Representatives of the People for their Miscarriages. But if that could not be done, but he that Reigned seemed too powerful to be legally contended with, then they dispatched him without any more Ceremony the best way they could, and elected presently a better Man in his Room: sometimes the next of Kin to him; sometimes the Valiant Man that had exposed himself so far as to undertake the Expulsion or the Killing of the Tyrant; at other times a private Person of good Reputation who possibly least dreamt of such an Advancement. Thus far my Author, who seems no Enemy to the King Killing Doctrine, tho' he has (not without good cause) a great Aversion for that of Nonresistance. In these Assemblies the Imposing Taxes according to the Exigencies of Affairs was considered; because there was no standing Crown-Revenue paid by the People; the Rents of certain Lands annexed to the Crown; his Herds of Cattle, Forrests, Services of Tenants, &c. was his Income, so that he lived like one of our Noblemen of his own Estate: And it was his Interest as well as Duty to keep fair with the Nobility and Gentry, and to be careful of the Prosperity of the Commons, who were indeed his Masters, and not his Subjects. Thus things went on till the year 1660, when of a suddain all this goodly Fabrick was pulled down, and the People brought as much under the King, as he and his Ancestors had before been under them. And I think no Man can justly wonder that a Crown thus born down should endeavour a return to its more natural position.

To go on with my Author, after the Conclusion of the Peace between the two Northern Crowns, some considerable care and time was necessary to redress the Disorders occasioned by so terrible a War. The Army was not yet disbanded, nor could for want of Money to discharge its Arrears; and the Burghers and Country People were in a manner ruined by the Miseries attending the War: the Nobility and Gentry, though Masters of the rest, were full of Discontents; and the Clergy not in the Condition they wish'd to be in.

To redress all which, the King called a Meeting of the Three Estates, viz. the Nobility, Commonalty and Clergy about the beginning of October 1660. After several Days spent in debating the methods of raising the Money that was needful, the Nobility insisting upon a pretended Privilege not to pay any part of it, though the greatest part of what was left remained in their hands, but rather seeking to widen their Advantages over the other two Estates, there follow'd sharp and hot Contests between them. At length one Otto Craeg, a principal Senator, told the President of the City, That the other two Estates were no other than Slaves, so their best way was to keep within their bounds, and acquiesce in such measures as ancient Practice had warranted, and which they (the Nobility) were resolved to maintain. This word Slave put all the Burghers and Clergy in disorder, and Nanfon the President of the City and Speaker of the Commons, in great anger rose out of his Seat and swore, That the Commons were no Slaves, nor would they from thenceforth be called so by the Nobility, which they should soon find to their Costs. And rising in disorder they left the Hall, and adjourned to Brewers-Hall in the City, the Clergy joining with the Commons: After some time there they agreed to wait upon the King, and to offer him their Votes and Assistance to make him Absolute Monarch of the Realm, and also the Crown should for the future descend by Inheritance to his Family, which hitherto had gone by Election. They knew the King, and had seen him bear with admirable Patience all his Calamities, and valiantly expose his Person for the sake of of the Publick, and therefore they thought they could never do enough to shew their Gratitude. It was then too late to do this that Night, but all the necessary measures were then taken for the doing it next Morning. The Clergy expected to benefit themselves by this Oblation above the other, and the Event answered their expectation. One Hanibal Seestede the Prime Minister of State, Swaz the Bishop, Nanfon the President of the City of Copenhagen, and the Queen, were the principal Managers of this Affair: The King on the contrary either was or seemed to be less engaged in it. The Nobility had very little knowledge in the mean time of the Intentions of the Commons, and having been long used to slight and tyrannize over them, feared no hurt from thence, contemning their Threats as well as their Persons.

By the next morning the Nobility had some general intimations of the Intentions of the Commons and Clergy; but before they could resolve what to do, they understood the Commons were coming towards them, being huzza'd through the Streets by the Mob. The Nobility were perfectly confounded by this brisk attack of the Commons, who told them roundly, If they, the Nobility, would not join with the Commons, they would do it without them. The Nobility now crest fallen, pretended they liked the thing, but not the manner of doing it, and therefore only desired to gain time to avoid this first shock, but to no purpose. The Commons and Clergy thereupon went to the King without the Nobility, and there they tendred to the King what had before been agreed, assuring him their Swords and Purles should make good their Gift against whosoever should oppose it.

The Nobility were in great Distraction, their former Insolencies was now sunk into a base dispirited meanness, and they broke up without coming to any Resolution.

That Afternoon the King ordered the City Gates to be lock'd up, and no Body to be suffered to come in or go out but by his leave; the Nobility took this for a design to Murder them, and in that fear they submitted to all that had been done by the Clergy and Commons. Three days after Scaffolds were erected before the Castle, the Soldiery and Burghers ordered to be in Arms, and on the 27th of October in the morning the King, Queen, and Royal Family mounted the same, and the Nobility, Clergy and Commons came before them, and on their Knees swore.

That to the best of their Power they would defend him from all Danger and Harm, and that they would faithfully serve his Majesty, as Men of Honour and Hereditary Subjects ought to do, &c.

This Oath they were forced to pronounce aloud, and no Man sick or well was exempted from it, and yet not one Man durst oppose it. Thus in four days time this Kingdom became Absolute and Hereditary.

The Clergy, saith my Author, always make sure Bargains, and were the only gainers by this Change; and are still much encouraged by the Court, as the Instruments that first promoted, and now keep the People in a due temper of Slavery, the Passive Obedience Principle riding triumphant in this unhappy Kingdom.

Now doubtless this wise Court has not either so little sense as to allow such Men as my Author to inspire the People with a conceit that it is both their Interest and Duty to rise in Arms against their Prince, and to make him away as well as they can; nor is any Brutus Junior to be openly wheedled into a conceit, that no Glory is equal to that of murdering a Prince that takes a little too much upon him. But then, after all, 'tis not upon this Passive Obedience Principle that the King relies for his safety; for he very well knew that one Raviliack, that is not of this Opinion, may murder a Prince as well and much sooner than a Thousand. He very well saw the Reluctance of the Nobility, and knew the Incon-stancy of the Commons, and to prevent all Dangers from either, has ever since kept his Army on Foot to the number of 32000 Men Horse and Foot; by these he assures his Royal Power, forceth his Subjects to pay what Taxes he thinks fit, and to submit to his Orders as well as if they had the consent of the Three Estates. To this, and not to any Principle whatsoever; doth that Prince own his Security.

But there is a Generation of Men who think nothing makes them look so great as a Declamation against that ancient piece of Christianity, which teacheth Subjects not to rebel against their Princes, but this is only for the sake of the hatred they bear to all Monarchies: For it is to be noted, all the Cry is, it is lawful and needful to resist the King. This is the Peoples last resort against Tyrants and ill Princes, but still against Kings, against Princes, Monarchs, Tyrants, all single Governments. But if it be so, then sure it is as lawful for the People of Venice, Holland, Switzerland, to resist and depose their Masters, as it is for the Subjects of any Prince to do it by their Master, yet I fear it is not so safe to Preach and Print this Doctrine there as it is here in England.

If Princes are content to be made low and mean in the Eyes of their Subjects, to be exposed to the Contempt of every Pamphleteer, and to have their Subjects every day told how much it is their Duty to cut off Tyrants and Arbitrary Princes, let no Man be concerned for them; but even leave them to the Destiny they either seem to court or despise. But when all is done, the Saviour of the World in due time will convince these Scribes that his Doctrines are not to be fooled with, though Princes may; and he is well able to assert his own Ordinance when he thinks fit, if they are not.

This Mutation changed the whole face of the Government in Denmark, the King levying Taxes, making and repealing Laws at his own Will and Pleasure: And these Nobles and Gentry, who lost the Liberty of their Country, by not complying with their Clergy and Commons in the most reasonable thing that ever was asked, to preserve to themselves an unreasonable exemption from the publick Burthens of the State, at a time when the other two Estates were not able to bear the Burthen without them, have since been tax'd to that height, that they have courted the King to take great part of their Estates into his own Hands, and begged to be freed from the Tax by the loss of the whole; and sometimes have not been able to obtain the favour of such a Discharge. So dangerous it is for any of the States of any Country, to endeavour to Oppress their Fellow-Subjects, to which, and not to the Doctrine of Nonresistance or Passive Obedience, was owing the loss of the Liberty of Denmark.

The chief Order of Knighthood in it is that of the Elephant; Instituted by Frederick the second. Their Badge, a Collar powdered with Elephants troyed, supporting the King's Arms, and having at the end the Picture of the Virgin Mary.

The Arms hereof are Quarterly, 1. Or, three Lions passant Vert, crowned of the first, for the Kingdom of Denmark; and secondly, Gules, a Lion Rampant Or, crowned and armed of the first, in his Paws a Dansk Hatchet Argent, for the Kingdom of Norway. What Arms belong to him as Duke of Holstein and Sleswick, I am yet to seek.

There are in Denmark
Archbishops 2. Bishops 13.

Universities 2. Viz.
Copenhagen. Sora.

And so much for the Kingdom of DENMARK.

O F SWETHLAND.

SWETHLAND is bounded on the East with Muscovie, on the West with the Dofrine Hills, which divide it from Normay; on the North with the great Frozen Ocean, spoken of before; on the South with Denmark, Liefland, and the Baltick Sea, (the late Conquests made on the Continent, have taken in all the Provinces formerly belonging to Denmark, so that Sweden is now wholly bounded to the South by the Baltick Sea) So called from the Sueci, Sue-thans, or Suethidi, and the word Land, added for a termination; of which more hereafter.

It is in length, from Stockholm unto the borders of Lapland, above 1000 Italian miles; and in breadth from Stockholm, lying on the Bodner Sea, to the Borders of Denmark, about 20 good days journey on horseback: infomuch as they which have travelled the length and breadth of it, on this side of Lapland and the Gulf or Bay of Bodner, account it little less than all Italy and France together; but taking in Lapland, and the Provinces on the other side of the Gulf, bigger than both by the quantity of 900 miles.

The situation of it in regard of the Heavenly bodies is the same with Normay, under the same Parallels and Degrees; but of so different a temper, both for Soil and Air, as if disposed of under several and long distant Climes. For the Air here is very pure, but not so sharp and insupportable as it is in Normay: though in some places, where the Moors and Waters settle, for want of care to open and cleanse the Water courses, they have great Fogs and Mists, which do somewhat putrifie it. And for the Soil, it is more fertile than any of the other Northern Provinces: so that besides those Necessaries which they keep for themselves, they usually transport into other Countries store of Malt and Barley; together with great quantities of Brass, Lead, Steel, Copper, Iron, the Hides of Goats, Bucks, Oxen, and costly Furs. They have also some Mines of Silver, not mixt with any other Metal; plenty of Fish in their Lakes and Rivers; abundance of Pine-trees, Furr, Oaks, both for Ships and Houses; yielding besides, among the Woods, good store of Tar and Honey, and some other Necessaries. But hereof we shall speak more punctually in the several Provinces.

The principal Mountains of this Country are the Dofrine Hills, a vast and continual Ridge of Mountains which divide it from Normay. And though they want not Rivers fit for common uses, yet partly by reason of their great Frosts and flakes of Ice, partly by reason of the falling of Trees which lye cros their Channels, they have not many navigable, or any of great fame. The principal of such as be, are 1. Meler, at the mouth whereof stands the City of Stockholm, 2. Lusen, 3. Dalacarlle, giving name to the Province so called, or denominated from it. And of the Lakes, whereof here are exceeding many, that of most note is the Lake of Weret, which, receiving into it 24 Rivers, disburtheneth it self at one mouth into the Baltick, with such noise and fury, that they call it commonly the Devil's head.

The people are naturally strong and active, provident, patient and industrious; hospitable towards Strangers, whom they entertain with great Humanity; so healthy, that, if they do not shorten their days by Excess and Riot, they live commonly to 140 years of age, and so laborious, that a Beggar is not seen amongst them. Of no great note for Arts or Arms in the times foregoing: not much addicted to the one; and so kept under by the Danes, that they could not grow eminent in the other: but much improved in both respects in these latter days: Ericus, the first King of the present Race, who cleared his Country of the Danes, and Gustavus Adolphus, the last King, who freed the Germans from the Yoke of the House of Austria, not being easily to be matched in the Arts of War. And since they began to give themselves to the sweets of Learning, this Country hath produced (amongst some other Learned Men) Olaus Magnus, Archbishop of Upsal, of great note for his History of the Goths and Vandals, the First-fruits of this Nation in the liberal Sciences. And it is probable by reason of their late Commerce with the German Nations, they will give better testimony to the World hereafter of their proficiency in this kind, as being generally exceeding apt to learn the Art Mechanical, every man in a manner being his own Artificer, without employing Smith, Mason, Carpenter, or any other manual Trades. Very Valiant they are both on foot and horseback, which their long Wars against the Danes, and their late Wars in Germany, have given good proof of. Their Women are discreet and modest, free from that intemperance which these Northern parts are subject to. Both Sexes use a corrupt Dutch, common to all three Northern Kingdoms; except in Finland, and the Provinces on the other side of the Bodner Sea, where they partake somewhat of the Muscovite or Russian Language.

The Christian Religion was first planted amongst them by the care and diligence of Ansgarius Archbishop of Breme, the Apostle-general of the North. Corrupt with Popish Superstitions, it was reformed, according to the Augustine Confession, in the time of Gustavus Ericus, the first of that present Royal Family, solicited thereunto by one Peter Nevicin a Lutheran Divine, and Laurence, the Archdeacon of Strengnes; but chiefly moved (as others say) by a desire to appropriate to himself the Goods of the Church. And this appears to have had some strong influence upon him in it, in that he presently seized upon what he pleased; and made a Law that Bishops should enjoy no more than the King thought fit: yet having pretty well lessened their Revenues, he was content they should remain as formerly both in power and number; reserving to himself and his Successors the Nomination of the persons; but so as the Approbation of the Clergy (in a kind of Election) doth usually go along with the King's appointment.

Christianity was not received in Sweden till about the beginning of the 9th Century, and not in Finland till 300 years after. It was first established by one Sigfrid an English man, who is said to have been Archbishop of York, and was Martyred by the Pagan Goths. The Reformation was established here upon Luther's Moddle, and never but once disturbed from abroad, and since that never distracted at home with any Nonconformity, all orders of men agreeing in a constant attendance on Divine Service, and a Zeal for their own way, without any nice enquiries into disputable points. The Clergy rather employing their pains, to perswade men to Piety, than to oppose the Doctrine of others, or defend their own. The Revenues of the Archbishop of Upsal, exceed not 400 l. the year, and the rest of the Bishopricks are proportionable, which ariseth from their Glebes, and one third of Tythes, the other 2 parts being annexed to the Crown for Pious uses. Their Clergy are generally the Sons of Peasants, and not of the Nobility or Gentry, which enables them the better to subsist on their their small Revenues, and maintain good Hospitality besides, for which they are much Reverenced by the common people.

The Bishops are in number seven: that is to say, 1. Of Lincopen, containing in his Diocels 226 Parishes. 2. Of Nexime, under whom are 210. 3. Of Scara, ruling over the same number of Churches. 4. Of Strengnes, under whom are a hundred only. 5. Of Abo, the greatest for extent of all, as comprehending under it 500 Parishes. 6. Of Wyborg, and 7. of Habsay; whose Dioceses for the most part lie out of the bounds of Smeden, in Muscovic, Livonia, and some other of the out-parts of the Realm of Poland: All of them are under the Archbishop of Upsal, as their Metropolitan, whose Diocels, extending into Lapland and Finmark, containeth 171 Parish-Churches. By which account there are in all the Kingdom of Smedhland but 1417 Parishes; but many of them a thousand or eight hundred Families: the people being dispersed in Forests and other places, where they have store of Timber to build them Houses, and store of Pasturage for their Cattle; which is the reason why they have not so many great Towns, not so well inhabited, as is usual in far lesser Countries. As for the Authority of these Bishops, they still retain their Voice in Parliament, and with them so many of the inferior Clergy as are from every Socken (a certain number of Parishes, like our Rural Deanries) deputed to appear there in the name of the Church: the Affairs whereof the Bishops do direct and order, as well in as out of publick Meetings, according to the Ecclesiastical Constitutions formerly established; and if any great occasion be, they may either advise with their Consistorials, or call a Diocesan Synod, (as they think most fit) and therein make such Laws and Canons as they conceive to be most proper for their own Edification.

The whole Kingdom is divided into two parts, the one lying on the East, the other on the West-side of the Bay or Gulf of Bodner, called Sinus Bodicus in Latine, being a large and spacious Branch of the Baltick Sea, extending from the most Southernly Point of Gothland, as far as to Lapland on the North. According to which division, we have the Provinces of 1. Gothland, and 2. Smeden, lying on the West-side of the Gulf; 3. Lapland, shutting it upon the North; 4. Bodia or Bodden, and 5. Finland on the East-side thereof; and 6. the Swedish Islands, where it mingleth with the rest of the Baltick.

The Dominions of this Crown extend from 56 to 69 degrees of Latitude, and from 32 to 55 in Longitude and consequently are twice greater than the Kingdom of France, but the abatements that must be made for several Seas, great Lakes, Rocks, Woods, Heaths and Morasses that cover very much of this Country, will reduce the habitable parts to a very small portion, comparatively to the extent of the whole. The Soil is in some places tolerably fruitful, though seldom above half a Foot deep, and therefore often plowed by a Maid with one Ox, the barren Lands are enriched with the Ashes of the Trees, growing on the places that are burnt, and the Seed being raked among the Ashes, produceth a plentiful Crop without any further Labour. If the inhabitants were industrious, they could not want Corn for their own use, which now is imported from abroad, and is wanted in the poorer Countries. The Cattle are of a very small size, and cannot be mended for want of good Fodder in Winter, and Nourishing Grass in Summer. It hath plenty of wild Beasts, such as Bears, Elkes, Deer, Hares, Wolves, Foxes, Wild-Cats, wild and tame Fowles especially Hawkes. Their Woods and vast Forests over-spreading much of the Country afford a plentiful and cheap Fireing. They consist of Fir, Beech, Birch, Elder and Juniper, and some Oak, and grow so thick, that the Woods are scarce passable. In Summer the fields are clothed with variety of Flowers; Strawberries, Rashberries, Currants, which grow upon every Rock, the heat of the Sun is so great, that it often sets the Woods on Fire, which sometimes spreads many Leagues and is not stopped, but by great Lakes or Plains, which yet never happeneth in the hottest parts of the Earth. In their Gardens Apples are brought to good Perfection in dry years, but Apricocks, Peaches, and other Wall fruits are almost as rare as Oranges, they have Cherries of many sorts, some tolerable good; which cannot be said of their Apples, Pears, and Plumbs, which are scarce and not good, all kinds of Roots are plentiful, and contribute much to the Nourishment of the people. The people are well provided of good and warm Cloathing, befitting their condition, and the Climate they live in, because if any neglect or failure happen, it usually proves fatal and occasioneth the loss of some of their Members, and sometimes of their Lives. The Air is healthful, dry and sharp, and disposeth the Natives to a vigorous Constitution; and that again confirmed by an hardy Education, coarse Fare, hard Lodging, &c. qualifies them to endure any uneasy circumstances that befall them, better than those that are born in a more moderate Air, and more indulgently bred up. As to their minds they are seldom endued with any eminent share of Veracity or Pregnancy of Wit; yet by industry, experience and Travel, some of them arrive to a Mature and solid Judgment, being by their Genius led to serious things, in which they become excellent, and merit the Title of Great and Able Men, but this is applicable to but a few, because it requires much patience, Study and Industry to attain it. The dispositions aforesaid, generally qualifies them more for a Life of Labour, than of Art and Curiosity, hence the most of the Nobility apply themselves to a Military Life, in which they are more famed for courage and enduring hardship, than for Stratagems and Intrigues, and those employed in the Administration of Civil affairs, though very laborious in their business, do not often rise to any great perfection. In point of Learning they are rather Transcribers than Authors. As to Trade, they more easily do the Drudgery of it, than dive into the Mystery either of Commerce or Manufactures. The common Soldiers endure Cold, Hunger, long Marches and hard Labour to admiration; but they learn their Duty slowly, and are better at standing their ground, and obeying their orders, than attacking an Enemy. The Peasants are laborious as far as need compels them, but are not neat in their Works, and very hard to learn new ways that are better and quicker than their old ones. The Clergy are but moderately learned, they affect gravity and long Beards; and are much esteemed for their Hospitality, which together begets a great Authority among the common people, whose heads are not troubled with disputes in Religion, for here and in Denmark, there are no Factions in Religion, the common banes of the more Southern Countries. The whole Nation are very Religious in their way, and constant frequenters of the Church, eminently Loyal and well affected to Monarchy, grave even to Formality, Sober, suspicious, apt to Envy each other, as well as Strangers, more inclined to pilfing and frauds than to open Violences, such as breaking into Houses, and Robbing on the High-way, Crimes as rarely committed in this, as in any Country whatsoever.

1. G O T H L A N D.

G O T H L A N D is bounded on the East with the Bodner Sea, on the West with the Mountains which divide it from Norway, and so much of Denmark as lies in the same Continent with it, on the North with Sweden, on the South with the Sea Baltick. So called either from the Goths, whose original Country it is commonly affirmed to be; or quasi good Land, from the goodness and fertility of the Soil, (Gootlandia, que Germanice Terra bona sonat, as Ataginus out of Atunster hath it) the Soil being very fruitful of Corn and Cattle, affording plenty of mines, with great store of Fish, and generally a better condiconditioned Country than any of the rest of these Northern Regions.

It is divided commonly into Ostro-goth, or East-gothland; Wester-Goth divided from the former by the great Lake of Werret, spoken of before; and South-Gothland, subdivided into Smalandia, Tuisia, and Verendia. Chief Towns in Ostro-goth are, 1. Lincopen, a Bishops See. 2. Loduse, adorned with a very fair Haven. In Wester-goth, 3. Scara, on the Lake Werret, a Bishop's See also. Elseborg, on the Western Sea, betwixt Denmark and Norway; a place of consequence, and flanked with two very strong Castles in the parts adjoining, the one called Croneberg, and the other Goldberg. 5. Tragualle, remarkable for Iron works, occasioned by the Mines adjoining. And finally; in South-Gothland there is 6. Vixime or Vexio another of the Episcopal Sees. 7. Walburg, a reasonable fair Town, with a strong Castle. 8. Elholm, in that part hereof which is called Verendia, near the Confines of Denmark, 9. Calmar, a noted and well traded port on the Baltick Sea, beautified with a Castle not inferior to that of Millain, and so well fortified throughout, that at the taking of it by Christiern the fourth of Denmark, An. 1611, there were found mounted on the works 108 brass pieces of Ordnance, six men of War to guard the Haven, with all manner of Ammunition in proportion to them. It was restored to the Swedes in 1613, by Treaty. 10. Gottenburg, (or Gothorum Burgus) the chief Town of the Goths or Gothland, as the name importeth; enjoying a commodious Haven, on the Baltick also, and very much frequented for the Trade of Germany, to which it serves exceeding fitly; the principal Town of all this Province, and for that cause the ordinary Seat or Residence of the Governour for the King of Sweden.

The first Inhabitants of the South parts of Scandia are commonly affirmed to have been the GOTHS: whom Jornandes in his Book de Rebu Geticis makes to have issued out of this Country, and to plant themselves on the North Banks of the Isther near the Euxine Sea, sometime before the Trojan War, ascribing to them whatsoever is reported in old Writers of the ancient Scythians, as their Encounter with Vexoris or Sesostris the King of Egypt, the Acts and Achievements of the Amazons, their Congress with Alexander the Great in his Persian War, and the like to these. In which Jornandes, being himself a Goth is no more to be credited than Geofrey of Monmouth a Welsh-man, in the Story of Brute and his Successors, to whom he doth ascribe the taking and sacking of Rome under the conduct of Brennus, whom he makes to be the Brother of Belinus a King of Britain. Most probable it is, that they were originally a Dutch or German people part of the great Nation of the Suevi, called by Tacitus the Gothones, inhabiting in his time (as it is conceived) in the Land of Prussia; who finding their own Country too narrow for them, might pass over the Baltick into the next adjoining Regions; and not well liking that cold Climate, might afterwards in some good numbers go to seek new Dwellings, and at last seat themselves on the Banks of the Isther, where Jornandes found them. That they were Dutch originally, besides the general name of the Gothones or Goths, and those of Ostro-goths and Wisi-goths, into which they were afterwards divided; the particular names of Alarick, Theodorick, Riccard, (the names of their Kings and Captains) seem to me to evidence. That they were once seated in this Country doth appear as plainly, 1. by the name of Gothland here still remaining; 2. by the Title of Rex Gothorum, which the Kings of Swethland keep in the Royal Style; 3. by some Inscriptions in ancient unknown Characters engraven on the Rocks near Scara in the Continent, and in Wisby in the Isle of Gothland, supposed by learned men to be some monument of that People. And finally, that their first Dwelling, when first known by this name amongst the Romans, was on the North-side of the Isther, is evident by the testimony of all ancient Writers, from the time of Antonius Caracalla, with whom they had some tumultu-ary Skirmishes in his way towards Persia, till their violent Irruption into Italy and the Western Provinces: most famous in this Interval for a great Fight with Decius the Roman Emperor, whom they overcame and slew in a Battle, Anno 253. In the time of Valens and Valentinian, the Roman Emperors, a Quarrel being grown amongst them, managed by Phritigernes and Athanaricus, the Leaders of the opposite Factions; Phritigernes, overthrown in fight, had recourse to Valens, from whom he received such Succours, that giving his Adversary another day for it, he obtained the Victory. Whereupon Phritigernes and his party received the Gospel, but intermixt and corrupt with the Leven of Arianism, by the practice of Valens, who sent them none but Arian Teachers, to whom and their Factions in the Church he was wholly addicted. Afterwards the whole Nation being driven over the Ister by the barbarous Huns, they obtained of Valens the out parts of Thrace for an Habitation, on condition they should serve under the pay of the Emperor, and become Christians: the cause that Arianism over-spread the whole Nation generally, which had before infected but one part only. Ulphilas, a devout and learned man, was their first Bishop; who, for their better Edification in the way of Godliness, invented a new Gothick Character, and translated the Scriptures into that Language: in the study whereof they so well profited, that many of them in the time of their first Conversion suffered death for it at the hands of Athanaricus, and were counted Martyrs. Burthened by Valens, and denied their accustomed Pay, they harass and depopulate the rest of Thrace, marching towards Constantinople; encountred in the way by Valens, whom they overcame and killed, after all his Favours. Vanquished by Theodosius the succeeding Emperor in many Battles, they became good neighbours, enlarging their Bounds with his leave and licence as far as Pannonia, and grown into such estimation with him, that Ricimer and Franita, two of that Nation, did obtain the Consulship: not to say any thing of that exorbitant power and favour which Gainas had attained unto in the Court itself. Made insolent by so great Honours, and apt to pick Quarrels with their Patrons, they invaded Italy in two great Bodies, consisting of no fewer than 200000 fighting men. The first whereof, under the Conduct of Rhadagisus, was discomfited and cut in pieces by Stilico, Lieutenant to Honorius the Western Emperor, at Fesula in the Streights of the Appennine. The other, by his Treachery permitted to pass, sacked Rome, and subdued the most part of Italy, under the leading of Alaricus. He dying immediately after this great Victory, let the fruits of it to his Son Athaulfus; who marrying with Galla Placidia the Emperors Sister, relinquished Italy, and had all Gallia Narbonensis, and a great part of Hispania Tarraconensis, assigned unto him, where he erected the Kingdom of the Wisi-Goths or Western-Goths, possessed of Spain and Tingitana for the space of 300 years and upward, when they lost that Kingdom to the *Moor*s, as hath there been said. In the mean time the Goths which were left in their own Countries, distinguished from these by the name of Ooster-Goths, by reason of their more Eastern situation, kept themselves in quiet: being first subdued by the Huns, and when by Wilamir freed from that subjection, not intermeddling or attempting any thing against the Empire, till called by Zeno Emperor of Constantinople into Italy against Odoacer and the Heruli, who had then subdued it. Which action they managed with so much prudence and good fortune by their King Theodorick, that they vanquished Odoacer, possessed Italy, and held it above Sixty years; when, broken in many set Battles by Belisarius and Narses, Lieutenants for the Emperor Justinian, their Kingdom and Name there came unto an end.

As for the Kings of the Goths, we have a succession of them in Jornandes from Berig, who first conducted them out of Scandia towards the East, till the going of Theodorick into Italy; but made up with so little probability, that that I dare give no more credit to it than the Stories of Brute, Dan, Fergus, or the Lady Scota, Pharaoh's daughter. Such of whom there is any certain knowledge and succession are these few that follow.

The Kings of the GOTHs.

- 344 1. Athalaricus, King of the Goths in the time of Constantius and Constans, the Sons of Constantine the Great.
- 357 2. Alaricus, the first of that name, in the time of Constantius.
3. Phritigernes, King of the Goths in the time of Valens, the first Christian Prince among that People.
- 370 4. Athalaricus II. in the time of the Emperors Valens, Gratian, and Valentinian the second; under whom the Goths were first settled on this side of the Ister.
- 379 5. Rhadaguisus, who in the time of Honorius first led the Goths into Italy; slain at the Battle of Fesula.
- 410 6. Alaricus II. who, pursuing the War of Italy, sacked Rome, subdued Naples, and the most of Italy.
- 412 7. Athaulfus, the Son of Alarick the second, who first erected the Kingdom of the Wist-goths in Gaul and Spain, continuing there for the space of 300 years and upwards; the present Kings of Spain coming from this Stock.
- 417 8. Athalaricus, King of the Goths remaining in the East at the departure of Rhadaguisus and Alaricus, distinguished from their Plantations by the name of Ostro-goths: vanquished by Attila, they became Subjects to the Huns in the time of Theodosius the second and Valentinian the third, Emperors of the East and West.
9. Wilamir, one of the Blood-Royal of the Goths, Vassal to Attila, at the first, whom he assisted, or served rather, in the great Battle near Tholouse against the Romans: but taking advantage of some Quarrels amongst the Sons of Attila, shook off that Yoke, and recovered the Kingdom of the Goths, in the time of the Emperor Marcianus.
10. Theodimir, Son of Winithar, and Brother of Wilamir, in the time of Leo Emperor of Constantinople.
11. Theodorick, Son of Theodimir, kept at Constantinople in his youth as a Pledge or Hostage for his Father, where he was instructed in all the Greek and Roman Learning, and made the adopted Son (as is said by Scaliger) of the Emperor Zeno, by whom he was sent into Italy against Odoacer and the Heruli, and erected there the Kingdom of the Ostro-goths: which continued till the Reign of Justinian, when it was destroyed by Belisarius and Narses, as before is said: the name of Goths in Italy being thus extinct, but their Blood intermixt with the best Italian. The sum of their whole Story, for varieties sake, take thus out of Du Bartas.

The warlike Goth, which whilom issued forth
From the cold frozen Islands of the North, Incamp'd by Vistula: but the Air almost
Being there as cold as in the Baltick Coast,
He with victorious Arms Scalonia gains,
The Transylvanian and Polonian Plains;
Then flies to Thracia, and then leaving Greeks, Greedy of Spoil, four times he bravely seeks To pluck from Rome (then Marcus his Minion)
The Plumes, which she from all the World hath won,
Guided by Rhadaguisus and Alarick,
Bold Vindimarus and Theodorick,

Thence flies to France; from whence expulst, his Rest ever since upon the Spanish Regions. (Legions)

The Arms of these Kings are said to have been Or, three Ravens with displayed wings Purple, membred Gules. And let this suffice for the Original, Successes, and final Period of the Goths; reserved by me unto this place, because most commonly conceived to be their original Country, at least the place out of which they issued, when they first moved towards the East to seek new Dwellings.

2. S W E D E N.

SWEDEN is bounded on the East with the Bodner Sea, on the West with the Dofrine Hills, which part it from Normay on the North with Lapland, on the South with Gothland. So called from the Suethans, or Suethidi, the old Inhabitants hereof; of whom more anon. A Country sufficiently fruitful, but for the goodness of the Soil inferior to Gothland; and not so well planted or inhabited as that is, by reason of the vast Woods which they will not suffer to be destroyed, and the greatness of some Marshes hitherto undrained: But might be made as rich and fertile, if the people would; as appeareth by that plenty of Corn growing amongst the Woods, though much hindered by their shade and thickness both from Sun and Rain. But for the Character of this Country, we had it formerly, when we spake of Swethland, in the general; relating specially to this as the principal part.

And, as the largest and principal part of this great Body, it contains in it many Provinces and Subdivisions: as namely, 1. Upland, 2. Sudermannia, 3. Nericia, 4. Westmannia, 5. Deccarlie, 6. Vermiand, 7. Coperdale, 8. Gestrícia, 9. Helsingia, 10. Middelfar, 11. Angermanna, bordering on Lapland, the farthest of these Provinces towards the North. Many of these have no Towns or Cities of any greatness or beauty, the people living thin and scattered, where they have Wood for Building, Pasturage for their Beasts, and elbow-room enough for themselves and their Cattle. Of these the principal are, 1. Upsal, an Archbishops See, and an University, situate not far from the Bay of Bodner, beautified with a large Cathedral, wherein many of the ancient Kings of Swethland are interred. From this City the Country hereabouts is stiled Archiepiscopus Upsalensis. 2. Holm, by the Inhabitants called Stockholm, by the Russians Stecolne; the Royal Seat of the Kings, a noted and well traded Port, and the chief of the Kingdom; exceeding strong both by Art and Nature, as being situate in the Marshes, like Venice, at the mouth of the Lake or River of Meler, the passage to it out of the Bay being very narrow, and by consequence easily defended, and yet so deep withal, that the greatest Ships of Burthen may sail up to the City: the Port within the Streight being so safe and capacious, that it is able to receive at one time 300 Sail, which usually ride there without any Anchor. The Castle of this City is conceived to be one of the strongest holds in the world; fortified for the more assurance of it with 400 brass pieces, many of which are double Canon. A Person of Quality, who saw this place in the year 1664, saith it is not so big as Roan in France, the buildings are most of Stone, and the rest of Wood, the former are many of them very magnificent, some part of the Town only is built on Piles, the rest upon an Island, the Kings Palace has nothing very remarkable, but the Civility of the Inhabitants, and the wonder of finding such a Court and City environ'd with Rocks, and uninhabited Island, which yet serve instead of so many Natural Forts to the Town, thus far he. In the year 1518, it was besieged by Christiern 2. King of Denmark, and taken, but using the Inhabitants Cruelly, he was expell'd in the year 1520, by Gustavus the Son

Son of Errick, the first of this Race of Kings now Reigning. This City lies in 59 D. 20 M. North Latitude. About three hundred years ago, it was only a bare Island, with 2 or 3 Cottages for Fishers, but upon the building of a Castle there to stop the inroads of the Ruffs, and the Translation of the Court thither, it grew by degrees to surpass the other ancient Cities, and it is at present the Metropolis of this Kingdom, and supposed to be as populous as Bristol. The Castle here which is covered with Copper, is a place of no strength or beauty, but of great use, being a spacious building, that besides entertaining the Court, furnishes room for most of the great offices, the National Court of Justice, Colleges of War, Chancery, Treasury, Reduction, Liquidation, Commerce and Execution, as also an Armory, Chappel, Library and Archives. Yet it Lodgeth very few of the inferior Officers and Servants of the Court, they together with the Foot Guards being Quartered upon the Burghers, and at their charge for Lodging, Fire, and Candle. In this City are 7 large Churches built of Brick, and covered with Copper, besides two more now (in 1692) building, and three or four Wooden Chapels. The Palace of the Nobility, in which is holden the assembly of the States, The Bank and several Magnificent Houses of the Nobles, and the most of the Burghers Houses being built with Brick, do altogether make an handsome prospect. An account of Sweden written in 1692. This City is in a manner the Staple of all Sweden for Iron, Copper, Wire, Pitch, Tar, Masts, and Deales are brought to be exported, as also the greatest part of what comes from abroad is Landed here; the Haven being large enough for a Thousand Sail of Ships, and the Key an English Mile long, to which the greatest Vessel may lay her broad-side to Load or Unload, the Sun at the highest, is above the Horizon of this City, 18 hours and a half, and for some Weeks makes a continual Day. In Winter the days are in the same proportion shorter being but five Hours one half long, which defect is so well supplied by Moon Light, the whiteness of the Snow, and the clearness of the sky, that Travelling is as usual in the Night as in the Day, and the want of the Sun is made good by stoves within Doors, and by warm furs abroad. 3. Nicopen, a Sea Town on the same Bay also. These three are in that part hereof which is called Upland. Then there is 4. Strengnes, an Episcopal See, and 5. Telga, on the Lake of Meler, in the Province of Sudermannia; the Title and Estate of Charles, Father of Gustaphus Adolphus late King of Sweden, before his getting of the Crown called Duke of Suderman. Next, in the Province of Westmannia, there are 6. Arboga, on the West-side of the said Lake of Meler, and 7. Arrosta, rich in Silver-mines, out of which are made the best Dollars of Sweden; the Mines here being so rich and profitable, that out of every fifteen pound weight of Silver, the workmen draw a pound weight of Gold. 8. Helsing, upon the Bay of Bodner, in the Province of Helsingia, taking name from hence. 9. Orebo or Ourbo, a strong piece in Nericia: and 10. Lefinger, on the Bay of Bodner, one of the farthest North of Sweden distinctly and specially so called.

3. L A P L A N D.

LAPLAND, the most Northern part of all Scandia, hath on the East Russia, on the West the Province or Prefecture of Wardhuys in the Kingdom of Normay, on the North the main Frozen Ocean, and on the South Bodia, or Bodden, on both sides of the Bay so called.

It is named thus originally from the Lappi or Lappones, the Inhabitants of it, as they are from their blockish behaviour; the word Lappon signifying the same with ineptus or insulsus in Latin; for such they are, rude, barbarous, and without the knowledge of Arts or Letters, as also without Corn and Houses, or any certain Habitations, (except only in Finmark;) feeding for the most part on Fish and the flesh of wild Beasts, with the Skins whereof they hide their nakedness. Generally they are meer Idolaters, giving Divine honour all the day following to that living Creature, whatsoever it be, which they see at the first setting out in the morning; great Sorcerers, and abhorring the sight of Strangers, whom till of late they used to flee from at their first approach, but within few years past beginning to be more sociable and familiar. In a word, they are the true descendents of the ancient Finni; possessed in old times of all that Tract which lieth between the Bay of Finland and the Frozen Ocean, whose natural rudeness and barbarity, unmixt with the conditions of more civil people; they do still retain.

It is divided into the Eastern and Western Lapland. The former appertaining to the Knez or great Duke of Muscovy, by which people the Inhabitants are called Dikiloppi, or the wild Lappians, is subdivided into Burmia and Corelia; of which, if there be any thing in them worth taking notice of, we shall there speak more. The latter doth belong to the Crown of Sweden, subdivided into two parts also that is to say, 1. Finmark, and 2. Scricfinnia.

1. FINMARK, being that part hereof which lieth next unto Norway, is the more populous of the two. The people are for the most part Idolatrous, but by the neighbourhood of the Norwegians, and resort of Strangers unto Wardhuys and the parts adjoining, somewhat civilized, and in the Borders of both Kingdoms favouring of Religion, possessed of Sheds or sorry Houses, and those Houses reduced to Parishes under the Jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Upsal; the chief of which (if there be any chief amongst them) are named, 1. Sammun, and 2. Hiclsö. Called Finmark; as the ancient Bounds and Marches of the Finni (of whom more anon) and therefore erroneously by Maginus made a part of the Kingdom of Norway.

2. SCRICFINNIA lieth between Finmark and Russia. The name is derived from the Finni, a great People of Scandia, and Schirken, a Dutch word signifying leaping, sliding, or bounding, for such is their gate. An Etymologie not much improbable, in that the Wooden soled-shoes with sharp bottoms, which they used for their more speedy sliding over the Ice, of which this Country is full, are by the Germans (who also use them) called Scrickshoenen, or sliding-shoes. The ancient Writers call this people Scricfinni.

These are indeed the natural and proper Laplanders, and unto these the former Character doth of right belong. Of stature very low, little more than Pygmies, but strong and active; well skill'd in Archery, and patient of cold and Labour; much given to hunting of wild Beasts whom they kill with their Bowes, devour the flesh, and cloath themselves with their Skins, which they tye at the top of their Heads, and leave no place open but for the sight; giving thereby occasion unto some to write that they are hairy all over, like Kine or Horses. Such Deer (whereof they have great plenty) as they take unkill'd, they make to draw in little Carts, as they shift their Quarters. But having served them for a while, they are killed at last, though perhaps for nothing but their Skins: a certain number of which they pay yearly to the King of Sweden in the way of Tribute. Three Companies of these Laplanders, so clad and Armed, as aforesaid, came into Germany in the year 1630, to serve Gustavus Adolphus in those Wars: looked on with admiration by all Spectators.

Towns we must look for none here, where no Houses be: and yet there are some Sheds and Cabbins on the Sea shore, which Mariners having made for their refreshment when they came on Land, have bellowed some names on, and possibly in time may become good Towns, now not worth the naming.

4. BO-

4. BODIA.

BODIA, BODDEN, or BODNER, is situate on the South of Sericfinnia, betwixt it and the Bay or Gulf hence named; extending Southwards on the West side of it, till it joins to Sweden, and on the East-side, till it meets with the Province of Finland. Hence is the division of this country into the Eastern, Northern and Western Bodden, with reference to the Situation of it on the Bay aforesaid. The Country is not very plentiful of Grain or Fruits, but full of great variety of wild Beasts, whose rich Skins yield great profit unto the Inhabitants, and by reason of the commodious situation on all sides of the Bay, is well stored with Fish. Anciently it was part of the possessions of the Finni, but how or whence it had the name of Bodia, Bodden or Bodner, I am yet to learn. But whence soever it had the name, certain I am, that from hence the Gulf adjoining is called Sinus Bodicus, the Bodner Zee by the Dutch or Germans.

Chief Towns herein are, 1. Birkara, in West-Bodden, betwixt the Bay and a great navigable Lake. 2. Toronia, a well-traded Empory at the very bottom of the Bay, in North-bodden. 3. Helsingelac, more North than that, towards the Borders of Lapland. And 4. Kerlabi in East-Bodden, on the Bank of the Gulf, conveniently seated for a Town of Trade.

5. FINLAND.

FINLAND hath on the North Bodia, on the South the Baltick Sea or Mare Suevicum, on the East Sinus Finnicus, on the West Sinus Bodicus. It is by Munster thought to be called Finland, quasi fine land; quod pulchrior & amœnior sit Suecia, because it is more fine and pleasing Country than Sweden itself. But indeed it is so called from the Finni or Fenni, a potent Nation who have here dwelt, whose Character is thus framed by Tacitus, Finnis mira Feritas, fada paupertas, non Arma, non Equi, non Penates, Victui Herbe, Vistini Pelles, Cubili Humus, sola in Sagittis spes. The Finni, saith he, are wonderfully barbarous, miserably poor, without Arms, Horse or Household-goods; Heibts their Food, the ground their Bed, and the Skins of Beasts their best Apparel, armed only with their Arrows, and in them their hopes. A Character which agreeth every way with our present Finlanders, especially those of Sericfinnia and some parts of Finnarchia; who are not so well reclaimed to Civility as the others are: but very different from that which Jornandes gives them, who, living within 400 years after Tacitus, before they had much (if any) intercourse with foreign Nations, telleth us of them, that they were Scanzia Cultoribus omnibus mitiores, more tractable and civil than any of the Inhabitants of Scandia, not excepting the Suehidi themselves. If so, they did deserve to live in so good a Country, more plentiful and plain than Sweden, and neither so Hilly, nor so Moorish.

The principal places in it are, 1. Abo, an Archbishops See; situate on the most Southern point of it, shooting into the Baltick. 2. Wyborg, a Bishop's See also, whose Jurisdiction for the most part is without this Province, on some part of Russia, all Finland being in the Diocels of the Bishop of Abo. A Town conveniently seated at the bottom of the Bay or Gulf of Finland, (called Sinus Finnicus in Latin) which divides this Country from Livonia, well fortified as the chief Bulwark of this Kingdom against the Muscovite; and so well garrisoned withal, that the keeping of this Town, and Rivallia or Revel in the Borders of Liefland, do cost the King of Sweden 100000 Dollars yearly. 3. Udden, on a Point or Promontory of the same Gulf, opposite to Narva, another Garrison of this King in Liefland. 4. Verma, upon the Bodner Zee. 5. Cronaburg, more within the Land, at the efflux of a River out of the Lake called Piente. 6. Dec- kala, on the Banks of the great Lake called Holida. 7. Karta, more Northwards towards Lapland. Of which last four I find not any thing observable in the way of Story.

6. The SWEDISH Islands.

AND now at last I come to the Swedish Islands, here and there intersperst in the Baltick Seas, betwixt the Isle of Pornholm, which belongs to Denmark, and Liefland or Livonia, appertaining to the King of Poland. The Principal of which are, 1. Gothia, or the Isle of Gothland; and 2. Isule Olande, or the Isles of Oeland.

1. GOTHIA, or the Isle of GOTHLAND, is situate over against Calmar, a strong Town in the Continent of Gothland; in length 18 Dutch miles, and five in breadth, of a rich Soil, but more fit for Pasturage than Tillage, yielding great Herds of Cattle, more of Game for Hunting, plenty of Fish, excellent Marble, and abundance of Pitch, which it sends forth to other Countries. There are in it 18 large and wealthy Villages, besides the Haven Town of Wibsy, heretofore rich and of very great Trading, as much frequented by the Merchant as most in Europe; but now much decayed and neither so well peopled nor so rich as formerly. The Trade removed hither from Wollin in Lomerania (destroyed by Waldemar the first of Denmark, Anno 1170) made it flourish mightily; the greatest Traffick of the Baltick being managed here: but after that by reason of the long and continual Wars betwixt Denmark and Swethland for the possession of this Isle it became unsafe, the factory was transferred unto other places. For being conveniently seated to annoy the Suedes, the Danes have much contended for it, and sometimes possessed it; but at the present it is in the hand of the Swethlander. By some conceived to be the Enngia spoken of by Pliny.

2. OELAND, or the Isles of Olandt, so called in the plural Number, because there are many of them, of which this the principal is situate over against Abo, the chief City of Finland. Of no great note, but that it is commodiously seated to invade or annoy this Kingdom; and therefore very well fortified and as strongly garrisoned: here being the good Towns of 1. Viborg, 2. Vames, and 3. the strong Castle of Castrolm.

Besides which Countries here described, the King of Sweden is possessed of the strong Towns of Narva, and Rivallia or Reuel, and Pernaw in Liefland of Kexholm, or Hexholm in Corelia, a Province of Russia; with very fair and ample Territories appertaining to them: subdued and added to this Crown by John the second, An. 1581, except Rivallia which voluntarily submitted to Lithuania the 2. King of this present Race, An. 1561. But being these Towns and Territories are not within the Bounds of Swethland, we shall defer all farther discourse thereof to a place more proper.

The first Inhabitants of this Kingdom, besides the Goths and Finni spoken of already, were the Siones and Suiones, mentioned in Tacitus; together with the Phavoniae, the Phirasi, and the Levoni, whom we find in Prologomy, placed by him in the East and middle of this great Peninsula. Which, being the general names of some mighty Nations are by Jornandes branched into lesser Tribes of the Suehans, Theustad, Vagoth, Bergi, Hallin, Liothida, Atbelnil, Gaurigoth, Kaumarica, Rauracenicii, Grannii, Aganzia, Unixia, Arochitami, Enagera, Othingi, and divers others by them named, but from what root the name of Sweden, Suedes or Swethland, by which the chief Province of it, the people generally and the whole Kingdom is now called, is not yet agreed on; nor spoken of at all by Munster or Cranzius, which two (but specially the last) have written purposely of this people. Gasper Peuterus deriveth them from the Suevi, who anciently inhabited in the North parts of Germany, beyond the Albis; from whom the Baltick Sea, was called Mare Suevicum: which people he conceiveth to have been driven by the Goths and Daci into this Country, and by the change of one letter only to be called Sueci. But this hath no good ground to stand on, though I meet with many others which are more improbable. For when they left those colder Countries they fell into these parts which are still called Suevia, (the Schwaben of the modern Dutch) where we find them in the time of Cæsar. And after, in fatali illa Gentium commigratione, when almost all the Northern Nations did shift their Seats, we find such of them as had staid behind to have accompanied the Vandals in their Invasions into Gaul and Spain, of any expedition of theirs cross the Baltick Seas, ne gry quidem, nothing to be found in more ancient Authors. We must therefore refer the original of this people either to the Suiones, or the Suethidi, or perhaps to both; both being anciently settled in these Northern Regions. Of the Suiones we read in the Book of Tacitus inscribed, De moribus Germanorum; by whom they are reported to be strong in Men, Armour and Shipping. And that they were Inhabitants of Scandia, appears by two Circumstances in that Author, 1. That the people were not permitted to wear weapons, quia Subitos Hostium Incursum prohibet Oceanus, because the Ocean was to them a sufficient Rampart; which could not be affirmed of the ancient Suevians, but agreeth very well with the situation of this present Country, defended by the Baltick and vast Northern Ocean from the sudden Assaults of any enemy. 2. Because the Sea which hemmed in that people was conceived to be the utmost bounds of the World; Trans Suiones Mare aliud, quo cingi claudique Terrarum orbis fines, as his words there are: which we know to hold good of this Country. 3. Add unto these this passage of the old Annals of the Emperor Lewis the second; where it is told us of the Danes, relicta patria apud Suiones exsulabant, that they were banished into the Country of the Suiones, which cannot so well be understood of any place as of this Sweden, being next neighbour unto Denmark. And 4. that this people both by Munster and Cranzius, are as well called Suiones, as Sueci, or Suedi; which sheweth what they conceived of their true Original. Then for the Suethans or the Suethidi, whom Jornandes speaks of in his Book De rebus Geticis, they are by him placed in the Isle of Scandia, (for such this great Peninsula was esteemed to be by most ancient Writers.) Now that these Suethidi are no other than the present Swethlanders appeareth 1. by the propinquity of the Names. 2. In that he maketh the Finni and Finniathæ the next neighbours to them. And 3. in that they are affirmed by the same Author to have furnished the Romans with rich Furs, and the Skins of wild Beasts with which Commodities this Country is abundantly well stored. Now to which of these two Nations, either the Suiones or the Suethidi those of Sweden are most indebted for their Original, will (I conceive) be no great controversie: the Suethans and Suethidi of Jornandes being no other than a Tribe of the Suiones, though the greatest and most powerful of all those Tribes; placed therefore in the Front to command the rest, and so most like to give the name unto the whole,

Their Government was anciently under Kings, affirmed so to be by Tacitus, who telleth us also that they were absolute and free, nullis exceptionibus, non precario jure regnandi; not bound in Covenant with their people, nor holding their Estates at the will of the Subject. But their Historians have gone for Antiquity hereof beyond the story of Brute or the Trojan War, (beyond which very few of that strain have dared to pretend) as high as unto Magog the Son of Japhet, reigning here within 90 years after the Flood. But letting pass these Dreams and Dotages of the Monkish times, certain it is that sometimes they were under the Danes, sometimes under the Normegians, sometimes had distinct Kings of their own; and finally sometimes were comprehended with the Danes and Normegians under the general name of Normans, conducted by one King or Captain upon Foreign Actions. Omitting therefore the Succession of their former Kings, of whose very being there is cause to make great question; we will begin our Catalogue of them with Fermanicus, who entertained Herald King of Denmark and his Brother Regensfride, driven out of that Kingdom of Gotricus or Godfrey, the Contemporary of Charlemaign; of whose Successors Munster giveth us more certainty.

- 1326 27. Magnus 4. King of Sweden and Norway, which last he gave in his life time to Haquin or Aquinus, his second Son; and after the death of Ericus his eldest Son (his designed Successors in this Crown) was outed of this Kingdom by the practice of
- 1363 28. Albert, Duke of Mecklenburg, Son of Euphemia, the Sister of Magnus the fourth; to the prejudice of Aquinus King of Denmark and Norway, made King of Sweden, on that Quarrel Vanquished by Margaret Queen of Denmark and Norway Widow of Aquinus, Anno 1387, to whom, desirous of liberty, he resigned his Kingdom, and died in his own Country Anno 1407.
- 1387 29. Margaret, Queen of Denmark, Sweden, and Norway, the Semiramis of Germany, having united the three Kingdoms under her Command, caused an Act of State to be passed in Calmar, a chief Town in Swethland, for the perpetuation of this Union unto her Successors; the Law and Priviledges of each Kingdom continuing as before they were.
- 1411 30. Ericus 4. Duke of Pomeran, adopted by Margaret, of whose Sister Ingelburgis he was descended, was in her life time chosen King of the three Kingdoms, into which he succeeded actually after her decease; but outed of them all by a strong Faction raised against him, Anno 1439, he died in a private Estate in Pomeran, Anno 1459.
- 1439 31. Christopher, Count Palatine, and Duke of Bavier, (in Title only) Son of the Lady Margaret, Sister of Ericus, succeeded in all three Kingdoms. After whose death the Swethlanders, being weary of the Danish Government, broke the Agreement made at Calmar, for the uniting of the 3 Kingdoms under one Prince, and chose one Carolus Canutus to be their King, Anno 1448,

- 1448 32. Carolus Canutus, one of the meanest of the Nobility, and not long pleasing to the great ones: whose displeasure when he had incurred, and feared the consequents thereof, he gathered together all the Treasure he could, fled unto Dantzick, and there ended his days.
- 1455 33. Christiern, King of Denmark and Norway, called in by a party of the Swedes, and crowned King of Swethland; but out again under colour that he had not kept Conditions with them: the Kingdom being governed after that for a time by Marshals.
- 1458 34. John, King of Denmark and Norway, the Son of Christiern, received King by the Swedes, then over-powered by the Muscovite: but their turn being served, they expelled him, again, returning to their former Government under Marshals. Of which Marshals (descended from Steno Stur, the Uncle of Carolus Canutus by his Mothers side) there were three in number; viz. 1. Steno. 2. Suanto, and 3. Steno Stur the second: of which the two first died natural deaths, and the last being by Christiern the second slain in Battel, this Kingdom was again possessed by the Danes.
- 1519 35. Christiern II. King of all three Kingdoms, used his Victory so cruelly here, and his Subjects so insolently at home, that here he was outed by Gustavus Ericus and driven out of Denmark by his Uncle Fredrick.
- 1523 36. Gustavus Ericus, descended from the ancient Race of the Kings of Sweden, having vanquished and expelled the Danes, was on the merit of that action chosen King of Swethland, which still continueth in his House. He is stiled by Antonius William Schowartus Erick de Wasa a Grypsholm, he managed many and dreadful Wars with the Danes and Russ, and the City of Lubeck, and died in the year 1560.
- 1561 37. Ericus V. Son to Gustavus S. Was Crowned King of Sweden, and managed Wars against the Danes and Poles, he Courted Elizabeth Queen of England, and being rejected by her he Married a mean Concubine, whom he Crowned at Stockholm, in 1568, by which Act he lost the Hearts of his Subjects, and was deposed the next year.
- 1569 38. John II. Brother of Ericus, married Catharine the Siller of Sigismund the second, King of Poland. He made a Peace with the Danes in 1570, but continued the War with Lubeck, and the Russ and died in 1592.
- 1593 39. Sigismund, the Son of John the second, in the life-time of his Father chosen King of Poland, Anno 1586, but was dispossessed of the Crown of Sweden (after a long War) by his Uncle Charles. Which War was begun in the year 1595, when Charles assum'd the Title of Governor of Sweden, and was not ended till the year 1607, the year after Sigismund was Crowned, and in the year 1599, the Nobility of Sweden deposed Sigismund and elected Charles his Uncle, who was the Third Son of Gustavus Ericus.
- 1607 40. Charles II. Duke of Suderman, the youngest Son of Gustavus Ericus, and Brother of John and Erick the two former Kings, first governed here as Viceroy for his Nephew Sigismund. But having an aim upon the Crown, (to which he found the Lutherans not very favourable) he raised up a Calvinian party within that Realm; according to whose Principles he began first to withdraw his obedience from his natural Prince, and afterwards to assume the Government to himself: speeding so well in his Design; that after a long War he forced his Nephew to desert from all farther Enterprises, and made himself King, Anno 1607.
- 1611 41. Gustavus Adolphus, Son of Charles, was born in the year 1594, crowned King of Sweden, in 1617, having settled his affairs in Sweden, and made Peace with the King of Denmark, in 1613, with the Russ in 1617, with whom his Father was in War at the time of his death, fell first on his Cousin Sigismund, the King of Poland, from whom he took many places of importance in Prussia and Livonia; and in pursuance of that War was made Knight of the Garter. Afterwards, having settled a Truce with him, he passed into Germany in 1630, then in great danger of being absolutely intralled to the House of Austria. In which he prospered so beyond all expectation, that in one year he passed over the Elb, the Rhene, and the Danow, (which no Conqueror ever did before:) and having twice vanquished the Imperialists led by Tilly, and restored many of the German Princes unto their Estates, was in the current of his Victories slain in the Battel of Lutzen, Novemb. 1632; his body royally conveyed to Swethland, and there interred.
- 1632 42. Christina, sole Daughter of Gustavus, of the age of seven years, acknowledged Queen of Sweden; the Estate being governed by the Counsels of the Nobility. After a long War, with variable success in Germany, they came at last to this accord in the Treaty of Munster, that she and her Successors, Kings and Queens of Swethland, should peaceably enjoy all the higher Pomeran, with the Isles of Rugia, Wollen, and the Town of Stetin, in Lower Pomerland, the Town and Port of Wisnar in the Dukedom of Mecklenburg; and the whole Bishopricks of Bremen and Verden, and the Prefecture of the Town of Wilchusen; with the Title of Dukes of Bremen, Pomeran, and Verden, Princes of Rugia, and Lords of Wisnar, and by those Titles to have place, as princes of the Empire, in all Diets and Assemblies which concern the Publick. By which agreement (if it hold) the Swedes have not only got a good footing in Germany, a strong influence upon all the Councils of the Empire, a Door open for more Forces, (if occasion be) and a free passage into the Western Ocean, which before they wanted; but may in time prove absolute Masters of the Baltick Sea, and make the Hamburgers, those of Lubeck, and possibly the Kings of Denmark and the Empire it self, be at their Devotion.
- 1654 43. Charles Gustavus the 4. Son of Cassimir Count Palatine of the Rhene, and Bipont, and of Catherine the Sister of the Great Gustavus Adolphus King of Sweden, upon the Resignation of Christina (who forsook her Religion and her Kingdom together) became King of Sweden, which he managed with great Prudence Conduct and Valour, he reduced Frederick the 3. King of Denmark to that distress, that his whole Kingdom was in a manner confined within the Walls of Copenhagen: And in all probability he had intirely Reduc'd it. If that Courageous but Unfortunate Prince, had not resolved to live and die in his Nest, and not Survive the Fate and Glory of his Country, as he said. This Victorious King of Sweden, died of a Malignant Feaver the 13th of February 1660, and was succeeded by his only Son.

1660 44. Charles the V. born the 25th of November 1655, was then an Infant, and was afterwards Crowned at Upsal the 28th of September 1675, though he has not been equally glorious with his Ancestors, yet he has kept or recovered all that was left him. His eldest Son is Prince Charles, born the 22th of June 1682, and his 2. Son Gustavus, born the 4th of June 1683.

1697 45. Charles the VIth, succeeded his Father, a Prince of great expectation, and now reigns under the Tutelage of his Guardians.

Of the Increase of the Crown of S W E D E N.

Gustavus de Wasa, was the Founder of the present Royal Line of Sweden; he was Crowned in the year 1522, and acknowledged King of Sweden properly so called, 2. Gothland, 3. Northland, and 4. Finland, and whatever else belonged then to this Crown. In the year 1578, the Knights of Livonia delivered up themselves, and all they possessed in Livonia to Erick King of Sweden, which was afterwards confirmed by the Treaty of Olivo Kloster (a Monastery one mile from Dantzick) in the year 1660, between the Emperor and the Kings of Sweden and Poland, by which all that part of Livonia, which lieth beyond the Dwina, was by the 4th Article for ever yielded to the Crown of Sweden. In the year 1618, there was a Peace made between the Russ and the Swedes, at which time all the Provinces of Carelia and Ingria, were yielded by the Russ to Gustavus Adolphus. In the year 1648, the Swedes gained by the Treaty of Osnabruck, the Possession of the hither Pomerania, the Island of Rugen, the City of Wismar, the Dukedom of Bremen, and the Principality of Ferden in the Lower Saxony. In the year 1658, by the Treaty of Roschild, this Crown gained from the Danes, Halland, Scania, Bleckling and Bahuis, three Provinces of great extent in Norway, all which were confirmed by the Treaty of Nimmeghen in the year 1678, So that this Crown is one of the most Fortunate in Europe. Antonius Gul: Schowartus observationes Historica Genealogica, page 120.

I have in the Additions to Denmark shewn, that one of the most dreadful Consequences of the War between that Crown and Sweden, was the intire loss of the liberties of Denmark; the three Estates being divested of all the Authority they heretofore had in the publick affairs of that Kingdom, which a late Author ascribes wholly to the slavish Doctrine of Non-resistance, though by his own relation of it, any man may see it was owing to the Insolence of the Nobility, and the Resentment of the Clergy and Commons made desperate by the poverty an improsperous War had brought upon them, and wanting Money to pay off an Army, which they then thought they were as little able to maintain as they knew how to get rid of it, but have ever since been forced to maintain to their great impoverishment, for the assuring that over-great Subjection they then brought upon themselves. The same Fate hung over the Kingdom of Sweden, though it fell a little later, because the King then reigning was an Infant, and so not capable of seeking or accepting such a power over his own people, as the King of Denmark had gained over his.

Who ever remarks the Steps and Gradations, by which France, Spain, Italy, Denmark and Sweden lost their Liberty, will find it was the consequence of improsperous Wars, by which the body of these States, in several ages and at different times were brought so low, that they were not able to assert their own Rights; which cunning active and ambitious Princes observing, took the advantage the times afforded them, to raise their Authority higher than that which had been enjoyed by their Ancestors. In which, however they met with great troubles, and if their Crowns shone brighter, yet those of their Ancestors sat more easie, and had less of Envy and Danger in them. But such is the nature of Mankind, that neither Governours nor Governed can always be kept in the same state, but each aspiring to be higher, the Ballance is broken, and the advantage for the most part falls on the side of the Prince, it being much more easy and natural to erect and preserve an absolute Monarchy than a common wealth.

The Swiss and Hollanders are the only people that have raised their liberties by Wars and cast off the Yoke which is owing to the nature of their Countries, both difficult of access, and the latter had also the assistance of most of its neighbours, more out of fear and hatred, which they bore to the Grandure of Spain than Love to the Dutch: And that which then gave birth to these States, has ever since preserved them, and will do so till a Prince arise that is great enough to oppress them and their Allies, and then there will be the end of their Liberty. And in the mean time, England of all Countries, has no reason to envy, and much less to imitate the states of Holland, or any of the other commonwealths, being much more happy and free under her Regular Monarchy, than they, or any other commonwealth that ever was since the Creation of the World.

Charles the present King of Sweden, was but 5 years of age, when his Father died in 1660, so his Mother Hedwig Eleonora of the House of Holstein and Sister to the present Duke, was made Regent of that Kingdom, together with the 5 great offices of the Crown which she held till the year 1672. The King was bred mostly to Military exercises by the contrivance of the Principal Ministers, who found it most for their Interest not to acquaint him too much with books, that they might the better govern him. He was no sooner Crown'd than he was engaged in a difficult War that gained him much experience and honour, having never lost one Battle in which he was present. The French engaged him in this War by the Temptation of 200000 l. the year subsidy, for which he lost his Army in Germany, and four of the six fortified Towns he held in Schonen, Wismar, so that when he took the field against the Danes, he found the effects of his Ministers neglects, yet with a small Army he gained 3 Battles in one year, and so re-established his declining Fortunes. This gave him an ill opinion of the Senate, and discovered to him the ill designs of his Ministers in his Minority, so that during the War he slighted all these Lords, neither communicating his Counsels, nor acquainting them with the Success of his Actions, till in 1680, returning to Stockholm in an Assembly of the States, he gave an account of the State of affairs during the War. The Odium of all the Misfortunes of War fell upon the Ministers that had managed the affairs in his Minority, and a Committee was there chosen out of the several bodies of the Estates, to enquire into the Misconducts and evil Counsels of those Ministers, and to pass sentence on the Delinquents.

Hereupon they were fined to ruine and all their Authority abrogated, the King was declared to have received his Crown from God, and to be only accountable to God for his Actions, and tied by no other engagement but his Coronation Oath, viz, to Rule the Kingdom according to Law. Then they gave him large Taxes, and a power to assume all the Crown Lands that had been gained from him or his Ancestors, to settle such a Militia, Fleet, and such Fortresses as should to him appear needful for the future security of the Kingdom: so favourable was this Conjunction for the advancement of the Royal Authority, that he scarce needed to ask any thing, each body of the States striving which should out bid the other in their Concessions. The Nobility and Gentry being poor, were under a necessity to comply with every thing to keep their present Employments or secure their future hopes of Advancement, and the Officers of the Army, who sat in their House, vigorously promoted the Kings affairs, the Clergy, Burghers, and peasants were easily perswaded that the Miseries they had had suffered, proceeded from the too great power of the Nobility; that the King could never be too much trusted, and they were glad of the opportunity to humble the Nobility, who in their prosperity had been too imperious; and concluded that the burthen that fell upon them, would redound to their own ease.

These Dispositions of the people, added to the excessive affection they had for the Kings person, the opinion of his Piety, admiration of his Courage, and knowledge of his Frugality, Chastity and Industry, gave him an opportunity to lay the foundations of as absolute a Sovereignty as any Prince in Europe possesses.

The next assembly of the States was in the year 1683, in which, besides large supplies, he obtained the explaining the Article of Ruling the Kingdom according to Law, viz, that he might alter the Laws, and add such Constitutions as he thought most useful for the present state of the Kingdom, and that all his instructions to any Colledge or Officer, were Laws to them and all others that they concern'd, only they hoped he would communicate to the States such Laws, as intended to bind the whole Kingdom.

All this was again confirmed in a third assembly of the States held in 1686, which has so riveted his power in this Loyal Kingdom, that had not the necessity of his affairs forced him to raise excessive Taxes, and Ruine many of the most Loyal and well deserving Families, by his assuming those Crown Lands, that had been given upon valuable consideration; there had been no discontentment in his Kingdom.

It is worthy of a remark, that the same things that occasion'd the loss of the Danish Liberty, had the same effect in Sweden, viz, an Odium of the Pride of the Nobility; an over great opinion of the persons of the Kings; and a great Sense of the obligation they had to them for having delivered their several Nations from two very dangerous and destructive Wars. The poverty that followed those Wars, made all men in both the Kingdoms shift off the burthen, till like Efa they sold their birth-right very cheap, forgetting in the mean time, these now good Kings shall not live for ever.

But leaving these things to the doubtful issue of Contingency, let us next look upon the Forces and Revenues of the Crown of Sweden before the time of Gustavus Adolphus, or as he found them at his Succession to that Crown. For though the Swedes pretend their Kingdom to be Elective, especially since the failing of the Royal Line in Magnus the fourth, and Albert of Mecklenburgh: yet still the eldest Son or next Heir succeedeth; unless put by by Faction and strong hand, as in case of Sigismund and his Uncle Charles. Which Charles so ordered his affairs, that having engaged the Kingdom in a War against his Nephew, he was solicited at the last to accept of the Crown: to which he would by no means yield, till a law was made for the entailing the same for ever unto his Posterity, whether male or female, as an Hereditary Crown. But whether Hereditary or Elective, the King once settled in the Throne is an absolute Monarch; having not only a power to levy Taxes on his Subjects, as he seeth occasion, as five, six, seven, eight Dollars, or more yearly upon every Householder, according to the proportion of his Estate, but also to grant a certain number of Peasants unto such as he means to favour, to be as Subjects and Vassals to him, according to his well-deserving. And whereas in the Constitution of this Government every Parish hath a Landman or Consul to decide the Controversies of the same, as every Territory hath its Vicount, and each Province its Lamen; there lieth an Appeal from the Landman unto the Vicount, and from the Vicount to the Lamen; who, if they be supposed not to judge uprightly, then the Appeal lies unto the Council, and from the Council of Estate to the King himself, (in whom is fixed the Sovereignty and Demerit Resort) and not unto the King and Council, as before in Denmark.

The Forces of this King are either by Sea or Land. By Sea he is Commander wholly of the Bay of Bodner, and hath a great Power in all the rest of the Baltick; being able to set out 70 good men of War, as John the 2. did in the year 1578; seven of which were good Gallions, and all the rest did carry above 50 cast Pieces of all sorts, besides many other good Vessels fit for service. And if a Navy of this size will not serve the turn, he is not only furnished with Timber, Cordage, and all other necessaries for the building of Ships, and with good store of Ordnance and Ammunition for present use, but is able to raise upon a sudden 6000 Mariners, and upon little warning as many more; all which entertaineth at no other charges in a manner than to find Victuals: insomuch as John the second, before mentioned, did use to say, that that which cost the King of Spain a Million of Crowns, cost not him 100000 Dollars.

For his Land-Forces they may best be estimated by the Trained Bands (as we call them) in every Province; there being in all 32 Vexilles (or Ensigns) of Foot constantly trained and mustered in the several Provinces: each Vexille comprehending 600 or 700 men, amounting in the Total to 20000 Foot; all in a manner Musketeers, ready to march whensoever the Kings occasion shall so require. And then for Horse, there are eleven Cornets in continual readiness for Sweden and Gottland, and two for Finland, maintained at the Charges of those Countries: to which the King may add at his own charges as many more as he pleaseth. And for an instance of what this King is able to do, without putting his Estates in hazard by draining them too dry of men to make good his Kingdom, we find that John the second, in his Navy of 70 Ships spoken of before, had above 18000 Land-Souldiers, besides Mariners. And in the Army which Gustavus Adolphus, the late King, brought into Germany, there were mustered no fewer at one time than 12000 Horse, and 34000 Foot, all *Finn*s and Swethlanders. For the accommodating of which Armies with Artillery and the like Engines of War, it is thought that the Kings hereof are Masters of 8000 great Pieces, for the most part Brass, with Mortar-pieces and Granado's in proportion to them.

But that which makes his Land Forces most considerable is their Hardiness in enduring the extremities of Wind and Weather (insomuch that it is usual with them to stand Centinel a whole Winters night of 18 hours long without being relieved) their exact Discipline, and Obedience to their Commanders, and finally their indefatigable Industry in making their own Shooes, Apparel, Stocks for Muskets, and all other necessaries. Which doth not only make them fit to endure any labour which is put upon them in the wars, but keeps them from Idleness and the pride of Mutinies; the ordinary effect, in great Armies of Sloth and ease. Nor do they want encouragement on the Kings part neither; who, 1. gives to every Souldier Victuals, which he accompts not in their pay, and that according to his Obedience and desert. 2. If a Souldier be taken Prisoner, him the King doth usually redeem at his own charges. And 3. If a Soldier's Horse be slain under him, the King supplieth him with another. Which makes the Souldiers (very sensible of such Obligations) exceedingly conformable unto his Commands, how dangerous soever they seem to be.

Finally, as for his Revenues, they must needs be great, there being four ways allowed him to amass his Treasures. First the Revenues of the Church, consising before the Reformation of seven Bishopricks and sixty Monasteries, which enjoyed very great possessions; all seized on by Gustavus Ericus, and by him incorporate to the Crown excepting only what is given back to maintain the Bishops. Secondly, Mines, which are here of all Metals in very great plenty, except of Gold and Silver, which they have more sparingly; the Tenth whereof in all places belongs to the King, and yields him such a fair Intrado, that in the year 1578, the King's part out of two or three Mines of Copper only amounted to 30000 Dollars. Thirdly, Tenths out of all Increase, as Rye, Wheat, Barley, Fish, Oxen, Skins, and the like Commodities; the sum whereof though not certainly known, (because the increase is so uncertain) yet it was once computed, that the Tenth of the Oxen only came in one year to 18000 Dollars, besides Provision for his Household. Fourthly and lastly, Customs imposed on Merchandise, and paid in all his Haven-Towns for all Commodities imported or exported, of what sort soever. Besides all which, he hath his Contributions in all times of War, power of imposing Taxes, (though moderately used) as his Necessities require; and on the Marriage of a Daughter, the Kingdom is to provide her Portion, which of late times hath been fixed at the certain sum of 100000 Dollars, besides Plate and Moveables. Out of which several Items to sum up the Total: It was observed, that in the year 1578 King John the second (all Charges, ordinary and extraordinary, being first deducted) did lay up into his Treasury no less than 700000 Dollars; which was a vast sum for those times, considering especially the great Charge which the King had been at that year, in furnishing a Navy of 70

Sail, and raising 18000 Land-Soldiers, (besides Horse) for defence of his Realm against the Danes. And yet it is conceived by some knowing men, that his Revenues would be much greater than they are, if he did employ Strangers to work the Mines, which the Native do not husband to the best advantage; and yet are fearful to discover them to other Nations upon some Jealousies, which they are naturally addicted to: or if he would turn Merchant, and in his own Ships send out Corn and Cordage, with Masts and Timber fit for building, and in them bring back Salt and other Necessaries which his Kingdom wants, setting them at a far less price than now they go at, and yet gaining very greatly by it too.

The Arms of this Kingdom are Azure, three Crowns Or.

There are in Swethland.

Archbishops 2. Bishops 8.

And thus much for SWETHLAND.

R U S S I A.

RUSSIA is bounded on the East by Tartary, on the West with Livonia and Finland, from which it is divided by great Mountains and the River Poln; on the North by the Frozen Ocean, and some part of Lapland; and on the South by Lithuania, a Province of the Kingdom of Poland, and the Crim-Tartars, inhabiting on the Banks of Palus Meotis and the Euxine Sea, and by Georgia. It standeth partly in Europe, and partly in Asia, the River Tanaïs or Don, running through it, the common Boundary of those great and noted parts of the World.

It was thus called from the Rossi or Russi, a people of Mount Taurus, or Taurica Chersonesus, (if not both) who in the declining times of the Greek Empire possessed themselves of some parts of it, and, being the prevailing People, imposed their Name on all the rest. Called also Russia Alba, to distinguish it from Russia Nigra, a Province of Poland; quod Incole omnium Gentium ipsius imperio subiectarum (as one observes, discoursing of the Affairs hereof) Vestibus Albis & Pileis plerunque utantur, because the Inhabitants use to wear white Caps and Vestments. And why not thus? thence the People of Margiana and Sogdiana in Asia have the name of Jesels only because they wear green Turbants, as the word importeth. Finally, it is called Moscovite, from Moscovia the chief Province of it; as that is denominatèd from the Moschi, of whom more anon.

In reference to the Heavenly bodies, it is said by some to be situate betwixt the 8. and 20. Climates; the longest Day in the Southern parts being but 16 hours and an half, and almost 22 hours and a half in the Northern part. But this is to be understood only of the Province of Moscovy properly and specially so called, and not of the whole Empire of the Moscovite according to the Bounds before laid down. For taking in the Northern Provinces belonging to it, as East-Lapland, Condora & Petzora, lying within the Arctic Circle, the longest Day in Summer will be full 6 months, (for so long do those Countries see no Night at all;) which is a mighty disproportion from the length of the longest Day in the most Southern parts, being but 16 hours and a half, as before is said. And by this Rule we are to take the Dimensions also. For tho' some make the length hereof from North to South, that is to say, from Calain in the North to Astracan near the Caspian Sea, to be no more than 2260 Versts, or 3690 Italian miles; yet they confess that, reckoning forwards from Tromschua, the farthest point of Petzora, the full length thereof will be nigh so much more. And for the breadth reckoning from Narva on the Bay of Finland, (now in possession of the Swedes) to the Province of Sueveria in the East, it amounteth to 4400 Versts, or 6300 Italian miles; each Vest being estimated at three quarters of an English mile. Which mighty Territory, if it were peopled answerable to some other parts of the World, would either make it too great for one Prince to hold, or make that Prince too great and puissant for all his neighbours.

The people, as is commonly reported of them, are very perfidious, crafty and deceitful in all their Bargains, False-dealers with all they have to do with, making no reckoning of their Promises, and study nothing more than ways to evade their Contracts. Vices so generally known and noted in them, that when they are to deal with Strangers, they dissemble their Countrey, and pretend to be of other Nations, for fear lest no body should trust them. Destitute they are of humane Affections, and so unnatural, that the Father insults on his Son, and he again over his Father and Mother. So malicious one towards another, that you shall have a man hide some of his own Goods in the House of some man whom he hateth and then accuse him for the stealth of them. They are exceedingly given to drink, insomuch that all heady and intoxicating Drinks are by Law prohibited, and two or three days only in a year allowed them to be drunk in. For the most part they are strong of Body, swift of Foot, of square Proportion, broad, short and thick: grey-eyed, broad-bearded, and generally furnished with prominent Paunches. The commons live in miserable subjection to the Nobles, and they again in as great Slavery to the Duke or Emperor; to whom no man of all the vulgar dares immediately exhibit a Petition, or make known his Grievances, nay, the mean Lords and officers are squeamish in this kind, and, but on great submission, will not commend unto the Duke a poor man's Cause. They are altogether unlearned, even the Priests meanly indoctrinated; it being cautioned by the great Duke, that there be no Schools, lest there should be any Scholars but himself; so that the people use to work commonly on the Lord's day, holding it fit to be kept by none but Gentlemen; and to say in a difficult question, God and our Great Duke know all this; and in other talk, All we enjoy, Health and Life, is all from our Great Duke; according to whose pleasure every man is prescribed what Habit he shall wear, both for matter and fashion, suitable unto their Condition. In the time of my Author their Habit was a long Garment without Plaits, which hung down to their heels, commonly of white or blew, with very straight Sleeves; on their Legs wearing Buskins up as high as the calf, for the most part red, high at the heels, and beset with nails of Iron. The stuff and trimming of the Dress is the only difference betwixt the Noble and the Peasant.

The Women are attired also much after this manner; but if great and noble, suffered to set forth themselves with store of Pearls and Precious Stones which hang so thick about their ears, that they do almost pull their ears from their heads. A second Marriage is conceived no blemish in point of Chastity, but the third condemns them of Incontinence. They are naturally subject enough to the Lusts of the flesh, but private, and fearful to offend; if once lascivious, then most intolerably wanton. It is the fashion of these Women to love that Husband best which beareth them most; and to think themselves neither loved nor regarded, unless they be two or three times a day well favouredly swaddled. The Author of the Treasury of times telleth a Story of a German Shoemaker, who travelling into this Country, and here marrying a Widow, used her with all the kindness that a woman could (as he thought) desire; yet did not she seem contented. At last learning where the fault was, and that his not beating her was the cause of her Pensiveness, he took such a vein in cudgelling her sides, that in the end the Hangman was fain to break his Neck for his labour.

They use the Slavonian Languages, but so corrupt and mixt with other Languages, that they and the Slavonians understand not one another's meaning but by circumstance only: yet in Ingria (out of which the Hungarians are thought to have issued) they speak a corrupt Hungarian; and in Peterson and the Country of the Czeremissians they have a Language to themselves, distinct from others.

They first received the Christian faith in the year 987, or, as some say, Anno 942, by the preaching and ministry of the Greeks sent hither by the Patriarch of Constantinople; of which Church they are constant followers, both for Rites and Doctrine: but not without some Superstitions of their own superadded to them; viz, not coming near a Cross, Church or Monastery, but they kneel down, and make the sign of the Cross, saying Miloy Hissodi, i. e. Lord have mercy upon us; nor entering into any Church until washed and bathed. They bear a deadly hatred to the Jews, whom they suffer not to live amongst them; and so great friendship unto a Calf, that they hold it a great offence to kill one, or to eat his flesh. Their Church is governed by 18 Bishops, and 2 Metropolitans, all of them subordinate to their Archbishop or Patriarch; as he in former times to the Constantinopolitan, by whom he used to be confirmed. But about an hundred years ago they withdrew themselves from that subjection; the Patriarch being nominated by the Great Duke, and consecrated by two or three of his own Suffragans. Without the counsel and advice of this Patriarch, the Emperor or Great Duke doth nothing of any moment. The Bishops are all chosen out of the Monastick or Regular Clergy; which makes the Monks (being all of the order of S. Basil) to live very religiously, in hope to be advanced to the Episcopal Dignity. And for the Secular Clergy, or Parochial Priests, there is not much required of them, but to say their Masses, (which being in their own Language they may easily do) and to read now and then one of St. Chrysostom's Homilies, translated heretofore for the use of those Churches. After the death of their first Wives they are not permitted to marry; in other things little differing from the rest of the people. Once in the year it is lawful and usual with them to hold a Synod, at which the Patriarch hath his Crozier or Pastoral-staff carried before him, as the Pope's Legate hath the Cross; where they make Constitutions for the publick Government, and the regulating of Divine matters; which are punctually and carefully observed by the Prince himself.

As followers of the Greek Church, (but so as to be counted a Church distinct) they differ much both from the Romish and Reformed. 1. Denying the Holy Ghost to proceed from the Father and the Son. 2. Denying Purgatory, but praying for the Dead. 3. Believing that holy men enjoy not the presence of God before the Resurrection. 4. Communicating in both kinds but using Leavened bread, and mingling warm Water with the Wine which both together they distribute with a Spoon. 5. Receiving Children of 7 years old to the Sacrament of the Eucharist, because then they begin to sin. 6. Forbidding extreme Unction, Confirmation, and fourth Marriages. 7. Admitting none to Orders but such as are married, and yet prohibiting Marriage to them that are actually in Orders. 8. Rejecting Carved Images, but admitting the Painted. 9. Observing 4 Lents in the year. 10. Reputing it unlawful to fast on Saturday; or to eat Blood, or any thing that hath been strangled, according to the first Council holden at Hierusalem. 11. And finally, dissolving Marriage by Divorcement upon every slight occasion, or conceived displeasure. Which diversity betwixt the Romish and this people in point of Religion hath bred such a difference betwixt them in point of affection, and made them so ill-conceited of one another, that if a Muscovite be known, or but suspected to have conversed with any of the Church of Rome, he is accounted to be a polluted person, and must be solemnly purged and purified, before he be admitted to partake of the Blessed Sacrament.

In matters of War the people are indifferently able, as being almost in continual Broils with their Neighbours; and have a Custom, that when they go to the Wars, every Soldier giveth to the Emperor or great Duke a piece of money, which at the end of the War he receiveth again: and by that means the number of the slain is exactly known. At their Funerals they use to put a Penny into the Mouth of the party deceased, a pair of Shoes on his Feet and a Letter in his Hand, directed (such is their Superstition) to S. Nicola, whom they deem to be the Porter of Heaven: an opinion doubtless very prejudicial to the Pope's and S. Peter's Privileges.

This Country is not so populous as spacious. The Eastern parts are vexed with the Tartars, who, like Aiup's Dog, will neither dwell there themselves, nor suffer the Muscovites to plant Colonies in them: the Western parts almost as much molested by the Swedish and Polonian Kings; the Southern by the Turks and Pre-copenes; and the Northern by the coldness of the Air, which is of such vehemency, that Water thrown up into the Air, will turn to Ice before it fall to the ground. The better to resist the extremity of this Cold, not only the Cloaths of this people, but their very Houses, are lined with thick Furs. Every Gentleman or man of note hath in his dwelling-House, a Stove or Hot-house in which they they keep as it were to thaw themselves. Such as travel on the way use often to rub their Nose or Ears with Snow or Ice, to rattle and recal their motive Spirits into those parts which otherwise they would be in danger to lose; the ignorance of which preventing Chirurgery was not the least cause that, in the year 1598 of 70000 Turks which made an Inroad into Muscovy, 40000 were frozen to death. By reason of these extremities of Frosts and Cold, it is the Custom of this people to lay the Bodies of their Dead all the Winter long on heaps in the Belfreys of their Churches, where they lie without putrifying or any ill favour to the end of March; at what time the Air beginning to wax warm, and the earth to be fit for digging each Family looks out their dead Bodies, and takes care to bury them. This excess of Cold in the Air gave occasion to Castalian in his Aulicus wittily, and not incongruously, to feign that if two Men being somewhat diliant talk together in the Winter, their words will be so frozen that they cannot be heard; but if the Parties in the Spring return to the same place, their words will melt into the same order as they were frozen and spoken, and be plainly understood. Such is their Winter: neither is their Summer less miraculous. For the huge Seas of Ice, which in a manner covered the whole surface of the Country, are at the first approach of the Sun suddenly dissolved, the Water quickly dried up, and the Earth dressed in her holy-day Apparel: such a mature growth of Fruits, such flourishing of Herbs, such chirping of Birds as if here were a perpetual Spring. The reason of which strange and sudden alteration is conceived to be the long lying of the Snow on the Face of the Earth, keeping it from the rigour of the Winter Frosts; which being dissolved by the Sun in the beginning of the Spring, doth so thoroughly drench and soke the Ground, (being of a light and Sandy mold) and consequently make it the more penetrable by the beams of the Sun shining hotly on it, that it forceth in a manner the Herbs and Plants to shoot forth in great plenty, and that too in a shorter time than can be imagined.

The whole Country generally is very much overspread with Woods, parts of the great Hercynian Forest, heretofore over-running all the North, and still more visible here than in other places; either by reason of the Idleness of the People, naturally given to Sloth and Ease; or for that the Country is not populous enough to overcome them: or that there is already Ground enough for Tillage to supply their necessary uses. For here do grow the goodliest and tallest Trees of the World, through which, by reason of their thicknets, the brightness of the Sun-beams can hardly pierce; affording shelter to great multitudes of Cattel, but of wild Beasts especially, whose Skins are better than their Bodies, as Bears, Martens, Zibellines, Wolves, black Foxes, whose Skins are of very great estimation. Of the Timber of these Trees are squared all necessities both for Forts and Houses: the Fortifications in this Country being made of huge Beams fastned together (the chinks filled with Earth) not easily shaken by Battery, though much subject to Fire. And out of them issueth an unspeakable quantity of Pitch and Rosin, which are hence distilled: besides an everlasting Fountain of Wax and Honey; the Bees, without the Midwifery of the Art of Men, building their Hives or Houses in the hollow Trees. Concerning this there goeth a Story (reported and believed for a certain truth) of a Country-man who accidentally had slipped down into a great hollow Tree, where he stood up to the breast in Honey, continuing there two days without other Sustainance: at the end whereof a Bear coming to partake of the Booty, he laid hold of his Legs, and so terrified him with his Cries, that he made him leap out with the Man at his Heels. The Country yieldeth also great store of Flax and Hemp, which is transported yearly into other Countries (and would make them very excellent Cordage, if the People had any skill in Manufactures or Mechanical Arts) and in some places rich Pastures, and such store of Corn, that therewith they do furnish Lapland and the North part of Sweden. Fish they have also in good plenty, which they salt and dry, and either vent it to the Merchant, or lay it up in store for their Forts and Families. By which account it will appear that the principal Commodities which they send abroad are rich Furs, Flax, Hemp, Whales-grease, Honey, Wax, Pitch, Rosin, Nuts, Filberds and the like: which either the Dutch and English buy of them at the Fort of S. Nicholas, or the Armenians at Astracan near the Caspian Sea; giving them in return Cloth, Silks, Tapestry, and some other Merchandise, transported to the value of 500000 Rubbles yearly. Particularly of Wax 50000 Pood, (every Pood containing 40 English Pounds;) of Tallow 100000 Pood, 100000 Hides, 100 Ships laden with Flax and Hemp, the rest of their Commodities proportionably in the time of my Author; since whose time the Trade hereof hath been much increased.

This Country not improperly may be called (as by some it is) the Mother of Rivers. The chief of which are, 1. The Don, called Tanaïs by the old Geographers, and by them thought to be the only Boundary betwixt Europe and Asia; the Northern parts of this Country being then unknown. It disburdeneth it self into Palus Maotis; and hath its Fountain not out of the Riphean Mountains, as was thought of old, but out of a great Lake called Iwanowesero, in the Forest of Okonieskilies or Tephapinolies, some 20 English Miles from the City of Tulla; and having run a great way Eastward; turneth back again and then proceedeth Southwards towards the Maotis, as was said before. 2. Borysthenes, now called Neiper, whose Spring was unknown unto Herodotus, but now discovered to be near Duiperck, a Village of Muscovy (specially so called, in the Forest of Wolkonskie. Whence passing South, and running by the Town of Smolensko, it receiveth many other Rivers, and amongst them that of Desna (by the ancient Writers called Hypanis) notwithstanding whose muddy Waters it still retains its natural Clearness, and so falls into the Euxine Sea. 3. Turanus, (so called by Ptolomy) or Duina the less (to difference it from Duina the greater) which rising not far from the Head of Borysthenes, out of the Lake of Duina, and washing the Walls of Riga, the chief Town of Livonia, loseth it self in the Baltick Sea. 4. Duina, or Dwine (commonly called Duina the greater) so call'd from the meeting of two Rivers, the Juga and the Sachan (whereof more hereafter) of which that of the longest course, not known unto the Ancients, hath its Head in the Province of Permia, and it falls into the Frozen or Northern Ocean at the Port of S. Nicolas. 5. Occa, or Ocyne; rising in the Territory of Misceneck, and making all the Country fruitful through which it passeth, emptieth it self into the Volga. 6. Volga, by Ptolomy called Rha, by the Tartars Edill; which riseth 25 Dutch Miles from Mosco, towards Lithuania, and fetching a great compass in and out, after it hath swallowed up many lesser Rivers, dischargeth it self with 70 Mouths into the Caspian Sea, now called Mardi Buchu. [This is a great mistake, there being not above five Mouths] Here are besides these Rivers many notable Lakes, as those of Duina and Volga, out of which the said two Rivers issue; that called Ilmen, not far from Novogrod the great, 80 Italian miles in compass; that of Ladoga, 100 Dutch miles in length and 60 in breadth, in which are many pleasant Islands; and that called Bicloyesero (Lacus Albus in Latin) about 12 German miles long and as many broad, into which 360 Rivers are said to discharge their Streams; in the midst whereof is a strong Castle, said to be impregnable, in which the Great Duke keeps the most part of his Treasure, and into which he doth withdraw in the times of Danger and Sedition.

As for the Mountains of this Country, here are the Montes Amadoci, Riphei, and Hyperborei, so much talk'd of and so little known amongst the Ancients: a continual and craggy Chain of Hills running cross Sarmatia Europea, South and North, and thence Eastwards into Asiatica. Beginning not far from the fall of Borysthenes into into the Euxine, they extend directly towards the North, and are there called Montes Amadoci; afterwards bending for a long space towards the North-East, they are called Riphei; and then passing on directly East, by reason of their Northernly situation, called Hyperborci. And though Sir Walter Ramleigh says, I know not on what authority, that there are no Riphaean Mountains in rerum natura: yet Mercator placeth them in this Tract, and telleth us, that in regard of their being always covered with Ice and Snow they are hardly passable: calling these and the said Hyperborci (in his Europa) by the name of Cingulum terra, or the Girdle of the Earth, a great part whereof (though known in divers places by different names) they do seem to compass.

It is divided, for the better Government hereof, into four parts (by them termed Chetfords) and those governed by four Lieutenants, not resident upon their Charges, but attending on the Emperor's Person wherefoever he goeth, and there holding their Courts, but especially at Mosco, the prime Seat of the Empire, where from their Under-Deputies they receive the Complaints of their Provinces, and inform the Emperor's Council of the business, and from them again receive Instruction for Reformation. But as to the Chorography of it, it is divided into the Provinces of, 1. Muscovy, especially so called. 2. Smolensko. 3. Mosaiski. 4. Plescow. 5. Novogrod the great. 6. Corelia. 7. Biarmia. 8. Petzora. 9. Condora. 10. Obdora. 11. Jugria. 12. Severia. 13. Parmia. 14. Rezan. 15. Wiatbka. 16. Casan. 17. Astracan. 18. Novogordia inferior. 19. The Morduits, or Mordua. 20. Worotine. 21. Tuver. 22. Wolodomir. 23. Dwina. And, 24. the Russian Islands. Others of less note (of which there is no want) are reduced to these. In my Description whereof I shall not be so exact and punctual as I have been hitherto; the Country not being much travelled by Strangers, nor any of the Natives suffered to go into Foreign Nations, or permitted (out of Jealousies of State) to hold discourse with the Embassadors of Neighbouring Princes, but only in the Emperor's hearing. By means whereof the Chorography of this vast Empire is come but lamely to our hands, tho' the Power, Policy and Revenues of it, being Points discernible by the Ministers of other Princes, and by the course and conduct of their Affairs, are as well known as those of less distance. Which said, we will first begin with Moscovy, the prevailing Province, that which gives name to this whole Empire; with reference to which the Situation and Position of the rest of the Provinces is set forth unto us in our Authors.

MOSCOVY specially so called, is seated in the very Center of this Estate, and so more fit to order the Affairs thereof. It is the largest Province of the whole, extending from East to West 600 Dutch, or 2400 English miles: so populous withal, that besides 30000 Boiars or Gentlemen, bound to serve on Horseback at their own charges, (like the Turks Timariots) the Great Duke is able to raise 70000 Foot, (which is a great matter for a Country so little cultivated. It is bounded on the North by Rostow and Susdale, on the East by Rhozan, on the South by Worotine, and on the West by Bielkia.

The Soil hereof is stiff and clammy, but might be made more profitable than it is, were it well manured, or ploughed and ordered, as it is in all other Countries. For here, and in most parts else of this large Dominion, the People are accustomed to Sow no more of their Land than what they dig with the Spade, or can break up with a Stick very sharply pointed; whereof they carry great numbers into the Field, that when one breaks they may use another.

Chief places in this Province are, 1. Mosco, the Imperial Seat, and the See of the Patriarch, so called of the River Mosco upon which it is situate. Exceedingly improv'd both in state and beauty since the time that Daniel the fourth Lord of Moscovy, removed the Seat-Royal hither from Wolodomir, where before it was; insomuch that it was once grown to nine miles in compass, containing then 41500 Families: but being fired by the Tartar, Anno 1571, (at what time there were burnt 80000 Persons) it is reduced to five miles only. The Houses for the most part are of Wood and Dirt, the Streets very miry, without either Ditch, Wall, or Rampart to defend it against an Enemy. Instead whereof there are two Castles in the outward parts of it, the one called Kiragorod, the other Balsgorod. It is environed with the River Mosco, and another Water called Neglinna, which here falls into it. It contains 16 Churches, most of them of the same materials as the Houses are; and the Palace of the Great Duke, situate in the midst hereof, (which for the greatness of it may be thought a little City:) fortified with 17 Towers, 3 Bulwarks, and a continual Garrison (if the Great Duke be there) of 25000 Men for the Guard of his Person. This City was burnt by the Poles in 1611; in 1636 a great part was burnt; and in 1668 almost the whole City by Accident. 2. Sloboda, a Bishop's See, North-east to Mosco, on the Banks of one of the greatest Rivers which fall into the Volga. 3. Ruschow, the Title of a Dukedom, fortified with a Castle of Wood, (of which stuff most of the Fortresses of this Country are made) situate 23 leagues from Mosco towards the West, on the Banks of the Volga, which hath its Fountain in the Territory and Precincts hereof. 4. Jaroslav, on the Volga also, a Town and Castle distant about 46 Dutch miles from Mosco; formerly the Estate and Patrimony of the second Sons of the Great Duke, but united to the Royal Domain by John Vasilivich, and by him added also to the Style Imperial. It is also one of the Sees Episcopal. 5. Rustow, the See of one of the two Metropolitans, situate in a fruitful Soil, well stored with Fish, and yielding good plenty of Salt. One of the ancientest Principalities of all this Empire, and held accustomably by the second Son of the Great Duke as a State distinct; but conquered by John Vasilivich, Anno 1565, and added to the Style and Patrimony of the Great Duke himself, the younger Sons being from thenceforth put off with Pensions. 6. Vologda, a Bishop's See, situate in a fenny and woody Country; very strong by nature, and beautified with one of the strongest Castles of all this Estate, where the Great Duke doth sometime lay a part of his Treasure, that part especially which is raised of the English and Dutch Merchandise, which, being landed at the Port of S. Nicholas, is first brought hither, where having paid a new Toll or Custom, it goeth on to Mosco. Betwixt this City and that of Jaroslav before mentioned, for the space of an Hundred English miles, where stood in former times 50 goodly Villages (some of them of a mile in length) the Country in a manner is left wholly desolate and without Inhabitant; abandon'd by the People by reason of the insupportable Pressures which were laid upon them.

2. SMOLENSKO. 3. MOSAISKI. 4. PLESKOW.

THE Dukedom of SMOLENSKO is situate on the course of the River Neiper or Boryssbenes, full of many thick Forests, from whence they carry a great number of rich Skins yearly. Places of most observations in it are, 1. Smolensko, situate on the Neiper, a Bishop's See, about 80 Polonian miles from Mosco, begirt on every side with Mountains and spacious Woods. A large Town, and of great esteem in these parts of the Empire, and giving name unto this Province; which heretofore was governed in a free Condition under the Patronage and Protection of the King of Poland, in the time of Alexander a late King thereof; but by Basilins the Great Duke conquered and added unto this Estate: taken by the Polanders in the year 1610, after a long siege of two years, with the slaughter of 200000 Muscovites, covites, and the loss of many of the Besiegers. It was besieged by the Russ to their great Loss and Ruine in 1616 and 1633; but taken at last in 1654 the 13th of October, and yielded to them in 1656 by the Poles upon the Treaty of Peace. 2. Biela, a Principality of it self, having the honour of a Castle, and reckoned in the usual Style of the Knez or Emperor.
M m m

MOSAIISKI hath in length 350 Italian miles, and as much in breadth; so called from Mosaiski, the chief Town hereof, and a Bishop's See; taken, together with the Territory or Province appertaining to it, from Alexander King of Poland, by John the Great Duke, Father of Basilus before mentioned.

P L E S C O W, or P S K O W, contains in length 350 Italian miles, in breadth 230 or thereabouts, so called from Plescow, or Pskow, the chief City in it, and a Bishop's See, great, powerful, and well wall'd about, the only walled City of all this Empire: so large within the Walls, that when it was besieged and taken in the year 1581 by Stephen King of Poland, there were in it for defence thereof 70000 Foot and 7000 Horse, besides the natural Inhabitants of it, which in all ordinary computation must be many more. In the year 1615, it was again taken by Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, and the Russ were forced to redeem it by the payment of a vast Sum of Money. It belonged formerly to the Poles, in the Right of the Dukedom of Lituania; taken from them by Basilus the Great Duke of Muscovy, Anno 1509, by whom and his Successors it is used in the Royal Style.

5. NOVOGORD.

NOVOGORD, or NOVOGROD, is one of the largest Provinces or Dukedoms in all Russia, bordering on Livonia, towards Sinus Finnicus or the Gulf of Finland. A colder Country and less fruitful than that of Muscovy, because situate somewhat farther North: the longest Summer day in Mosco not being above 18 hours; whereas in Novogrod, the chief City hereof, it is very near 20. By consequence, the Winter-nights being of that length must make the Air exceeding cold, and the Soil as comfortless. Here is in this Province the great Lake Elmen, spoken of before, 80 Italian miles in compass; as also that called Ladoga, before also mentioned.

Towns of most estimation in it are, 1. Novogrod it self, the wealthiest and goodliest City of all the North, affirmed to be in greatness not inferior to Rome; call'd therefore Novogrod the Great (to difference it from another of the same name near unto Wolodomir;) an Archbishop's See, and one of the four Mart Towns of the Hanse-Merchants, resorted to from all parts for the Trade of Muscovy, brought thither by Land, and thence transported through the Baltick to most parts of Christendom. So confident were they in those times of their power and strength, that they used to say, that Men could do nothing against God and them: but they found the contrary, when taken from the Crown of Poland by the Great Duke of Muscovy in 1477. In the year 1569, John Basilowitz, Duke of Muscovy, slew a vast number of its Inhabitants without cause, on a bare groundless Suspicion: and in 1611 it was also taken by the Svedes, who kept it till 1634; and then restored it to the Russ. The Trade hereof is since much decayed, by the finding out of the North-East passage to the Port of St. Nicholas, where the English and Dutch Merchants barter with the Muscovite. Yet still it keeps the reputation of the principal City; situate on the River Naf, which the Dutch call Ny. The Buildings are for the most part of Wood and Clay. It is distant from Mosco 120 Dutch Miles, and about 200 from the main body of the Baltick, between which and this City lieth the whole Bay of Finland, the Entrances whereof upon the Duina which leads towards Novogrod) are fortified with the strong Towns and Garrisons of Narva and Revel, both in the hands of the King of Sweden; which is another great hindrance to the Trade of this Town. 2. Narva, on the North-Bank of Duina, where it falls into the Bay of Finland, or Sinus Finnicus, in the Province or Territory of Wichidaw: heretofore reckoned of as a part of Livonia; but being taken by Basilus the Great Duke, with the rest of this Country, and the Town of Novogrod it self, Anno 1477, it was impreguably Fortified by the care of his Son Wasiliwich, who for a reward unto the Architect, being a Polonian, put out both his Eyes, to disable him from building the like again. But having left all the Natives in their own Habitations, without abating either their strength or number, the Town and Castle not long after was betray'd to the King of Sweden, who still holds it. It was taken by the Muscovites in 1558, by the Svedes in 1581, and by the Svedes again in 1617. In the Year 1654, there being a War between the Dutch and English, the whole Trade of Muscovy was again driven this way. 3. Pozow, or Pozovia, and 4. Volocoluc; two strong Pieces, situate in the Borders against the *Poland*ers. 5. Vobsko, besieged by Stephen King of Poland with an Army of 100000 Men; who was forced to retire without taking it, with the loss of many of his best Captains and common Soldiers. It is distant from Novogrod 28 Dutch miles: the Country about it is called Volsk; where they say for certain, that all Cattel which are brought thither, of what hair or colour soever they be, upon a little stay they become all white. The People of this Tract have a Language (or some Dialect rather) peculiar only to themselves. 6. Juanagorod, a strong Castle not far from Vobsko, 40 miles from Novogrod, a Frontier Castle against the Svedes garrisoned in Narva, to repulse whose Inroads it was built.

In this Country, and not far from the Town of Novogrod, was fought that memorable Battel betwixt the Sarmatians and their Slaves. For when the Asiatick Scythians went to plant themselves in Media, and the parts adjoining, some of the Sarmatians, then Inhabitants of this Tract, went along for Company. Their long stay caused their Wives, despairing of their return, to comfort themselves with their Slaves both at bed and board; to whom they brought a lusty encrease of Youths: who being well grown, and hearing that the Sarmatians were upon their coming back, joined together against them: the Slaves to retain their Wealth and Freedom which they were possessed of, the Women, for fear of the displeasure of their Husbands, and the Young men for defence of their Fathers and Mothers; with joint Forces they go out to meet them before their entry into the Country; neither are the Masters slow in their advance, hoping to take them unprovided. At Novogrod they have the first sight of each other. The Masters, scorning to defile their Swords on so ignoble an Enemy, assault them with Whips, and by the terrour thereof got a signal Victory. In memory of which Battel, the People of that City have ever since stamped their Money with the figure of an Horseman shaking a Whip in his hands: And it is the Custom of all Muscovy, that the Maids in the time of wooing send such a Whip, curiously wrought by her own hands, to that Suitor whom she resolves on for her Husband, in token of her future Subjection to him. But of this more hereafter in another place.

6. CORELIA. 7. BIARMA.

Sixty Dutch miles from Novogrod lieth the Province called CORELIA, extending Northwards as far as to a Branch of the Frozen Sea where the longest Day is 20 hours and a half; the Nights proportionable in the Winter make it cold and barren. It bordereth on the East of Finland, from which it is parted by a long and rough ridge of Mountains. By reason of which Situation, betwixt two great Princes, the People are enforced to pay Tribute to both, though properly the Subjects of the Great Duke of Muscovy. Chief Towns hereof are, are, 1. Kexholm or Hexholm, in the hands of the Swedes ever since the year 1617. They took it once before in the year 1580; but then the Russ recovered it again, it stands upon the River Voxin near to the Western Shore of the Lake Ladoga, towards the South-Eastern bounds of Finland, 40 German miles from Narva to the North. And, 2. Corelnburg, the chief Towns of the Province, belonging with the rest of the Country unto the Muscovite. By some this Province is made a part of the Eastern Lapland; but, I think, erroneously: the People having some good Towns, and favouring of some Humanity, neither of which are known or heard of amongst the Laplanders. 3. Nodenburg, on the mouth of a Lake, which by the River called Warfuga, emptieth it self into the Bay of S. Nicholas.

On the North-side of that Branch or Arm of the Frozen Ocean which bounds Corelia, lieth the Western part of Lapland, which by a proper name is called BIARMA: the Country of the Dikiloppi, or wild Lappians, as the Muscovites call them, to whose Duke or Emperor they are subject. We had their Character before when we were in Swethland, nor shall we need to repeat it here: as barbarous and as rude as the worst sort of those mentioned in Sericfunia, and as Idolatrous as they; but more (if more may be) inclined to Lustfulness than the others. In the Winter Solstice, when the Sun entrencheth into Capricorn, they have Night for three whole months together: during which time, lurking in their Caves, they have leisure to consult with the Prince of Darkness: being very great Sorcerers, able (as some affirm) to raise Winds, Clouds, Tempests, and do many strange things. Towns here are none. Some Sheds and Cabins on the Sea-coasts, patched up by the Sailors for their reception and refreshment as they came on Land, and named according to their Fancies, but not here considerable.

8. PETZORA. 9. CONDORA. 10. OB-DORA. 11. JUGRIA.

Opposite to Biarmia, or West-Lapland, on the other side of the Bay, leading towards the Port of St. Nicholas, lieth a large Promontory or Head-land, stretching out far into the North, beyond the Arctick comprehending in it 4 Provinces of the Russian Empire; that is to say Petzora, Condora, Obdora, and Jugria: belonging formerly to the Tartars, but won from them of late years by the Russian Emperors; extending by that means their Territories to the River Ob, but not a whit improving them in Power or Patrimony. Howsoever somewhat must be said of them, because parts of this great Body which we are to dissect.

PETZORA, so called from a River of that name, is fenced on every side by Mountains and unpassable Rocks, extending Northwards to the Sea, and crossed with a vast Chain of Hills, part of the Hyperborei, spoken of before; so high, that a certain Man, having travelled in the ascent of them 17 days together, is said to have returned back again, despairing to attain the top of them: cover'd in the Winter-time with perpetual Snows, in the Summer with as scorching Heats, by the continual lying of the Sun in all parts thereof. The People are of a plain and simple Nature, and received the Russian Faith and Empire at one time together, Anno 1518. The chief Town of it is Petzora, or Pechora, at the fall of that River into the Sea, a small Town, but having three Churches in it: the People whereof, though otherwise sufficiently simple, as before is said, do in the Summer-time catch Partridge, Ducks, Swans, Geese, and other Fowl, which they salt and lay by till the Winter, and then live upon them. So good a Tutor is the Belly, that the Poet did not unfitly give it the Titles of Artis Magister, and Ingenii largitor Venter: whereof this may serve for one Example.

CONDORA lieth on the North of Petzora, more near the Pole; by consequence is a colder Country, and of worse condition; one half of the Year being continual Day, and the other half as a long Night. The People are universally Idolaters, worshipping some Images (or Idols) in the shape of a Man, others in that of Bears, Wolves, &c. which they adorn with the richest Furs they can get, and hide them in their Caves for fear of the Russes; who if they chance to light upon them, as they hunt those parts for Sables; Foxes and Bevers, take away their Furs, and bestow a greater heat upon them in Fires. The chief Town hereof is Pustozera, over against Nova Zemla, on or near the great Lake called Ozera, whence it hath the name; situate in the 68 Degree of Northern Latitude, 50 minutes over. This Country lies to the South of Petzora, between it and Düina and the Frozen Ocean.

OB DORA, so called from the River Ob, on both sides of whose Banks it lieth, is the most North-Eastern Province of all those Dominions; won to the Obedience of the Russes in the Reign of Theodore the Son of John, Great Duke of Muscovy. At what time the People had no Cities, lived in Hoords or Companies; ate the Beast they took, knew no Corn nor Bread. They were then very good Archers, sharpening their Arrows with Fish-bones; with which Bones and the Sinews of the Beasts they sowed Furs together for their Clothing; which they wear inward in the Winter, outward in the Summer, covering their Houses with Elk-skins. By this Theodore were some Castles built on the River-side, to which he sent condemned Persons, and brought it into the form of a petit Kingdom. But his Successor Boris built Tooma, the chief Town hereof, with divers other Towns on both sides of the Water, not worth naming here. But notwithstanding this Subjection to the Muscovite, they continue still in their old Idolatry, worshipping an ancient Idol in form of an old Woman, holding in each Arm a Child, and a third at her Feet, called by them Zlatu Bahu, or the Golden old Wife; to which they offer precious Furs, sacrifice Harts, and therewith do consult touching things to come. But some account this for a Fable or a meer Mistake.

JUGRIA, or JUHAR, lieth also on the Northern Seas, but more South than either of the other, betwixt Petzora or Pechora, and the Province of Düina: the longest Day in Summer being not above 21 hours, or not fully that. The People are for the most part Idolaters, and worship the same Images as do those of Obdora: affirmed by some to be the Progenitors of the present Hungarians, who, coming out of this Country, over-ran all Pannonia, and there fixed their Dwellings. For proof of which it is affirmed that they spake the old Hungarian Language, not used but in this Country and the North parts of Hungary, betwixt Danubius and Tibiscus, which more learned Men affirm to be the Jazygian, the Language of the Jazyges, who anciently possessed that Country in the times of the Romans. But leaving this dispute to another place, certain it is they are subject to the Muscovite, but so poor and miserable a People, that they have few Towns, and not many Houses; and so bare of Money, that instead thereof they pay Furs for Tribute to their Emperor.

SEVERIA, or SIBIOR, as the Muscovites call it, lieth in a long Tract on the Banks of the River Ob, or Oby, South-East of Obdora and the rest of the four last Provinces. The Country is very fruitful, and abounding with all things necessary, notwithstanding that there be great Deserts, and some Forests also; but those Forests well stored with black Foxes, Ermines, Sables, and the like wild Beasts, which yield more profit by their rich Furs, than any more fertile Country doth by its Corn and Fruits. Inasmuch that in the year 1589 there were collected out of this Province only in the way of Tribute for the Emperor, 466 Timber of Sables, (every Timber containing 40 Skins) five Timber of Martens, 180 Cases of black Foxes, (every Case containing 40 Skins) besides other Commodities. The Woods also do offer good plenty of Honey, and the Plains of Herbage, well watered with the River Sem, which falleth into the Desna, and both together into that of the Nieper, or Borysthenes. There are in it many Towns and Castles, the principal whereof are, 1. Sibir, on the West side of the River Ob, which gives name to the Province. 2. Branki, not far from the great Forest from hence named. 3. Starodus, 4. Potuvolo, and 5. Czernigo. [Here by mistake the two Provinces of Siberia and Severia (which differ as the farthest North-East and South-West points of Muscovia, betwixt which there is a vast Tract of ground) are confounded, part of the Towns belonging to one, part to the other, as do the two Rivers, the Ob, and the Nieper.]

The people hereof, by reason of their continual Skirmishes with the neighbouring Tartars, are the most Warlike Nations of all the Russes: heretofore governed by a Duke or Prince of their own, who at the first acknowledged no Superior, but afterwards was severally and successively tributary, to the Lithuanians, the Polanders, and the Muscovite; and finally, the last Duke, being falsely accused of Treason, was outed of his Estate by Basilius the Great Duke, who added it to the rest of his Dominions, as it hath continued ever since.

PERMIA is situate on the South-West of Sibir, or Severia, a large Province, distant 250 Dutch miles from Mosco to the North East; so called from Perm, or Permia, the chief Town hereof, situate on the River Vischore, or Vistorna. The second Town of note is called Sicmiarskey. The people (as also those of Sibir) are of the Moscovite Religion, and live most by hunting wild Beasts, whose Flesh they eat, and make good Merchandise of their Skins, many of which they pay yearly to the Great Duke in way of Tribute, who makes a good Commodity of them, selling them to the Merchant at excessive rates. They have no Corn of their own growth, nor will they buy any elsewhere; but, instead of Bread, eat the flesh of Stags dried and prepared in the Sun; speaking a Language of their own, differing from the rest of the Russes; and instead of Horses and Oxen, make use of great Dogs and Stags, whom they train up to draw their Sleds from one place to another. There is good store of Woods amongst them; but they want Cedars, and they have paid dearly for that want. For John Vasilivich, meaning to pick a Quarrel with them, sent to them for certain loads of Cedar-wood whereof he knew their grew none in their Country; and upon word returned that they had no such Wood, he fined them at 12060 Rubbles.

REZAN, a great and goodly Province, is situate betwixt the River Tanais and that of Occa, the most fruitful Country of all Russia, and (if report be true) of the World also: it being credibly affirmed that one grain of Corn doth bring forth six Ears; the Stalks hereof growing so thick, that an Horse can hardly pass through them, or a Quail fly out of them, but with very much difficulty. Here is also great plenty of Fruits, better than are to be found elsewhere in Russia; together with good store of Honey, Fish, Fowl, and other Commodities; besides Ermins, Bevers, and the like, common in these Countries. Chief Towns hereof are, 1. Tulla, famous for the Fountain or Spring head of the River Tanais, which riseth near it. 2. Colluga, well garrisoned for fear of the Crim-Tartar. 3. Cossira, a Bishop's See, as is also 4. Rezan, the principal of the Province, which it giveth name to, seated upon the Banks of the River Occa. Thirty six German miles from Mosco, to the South East, and 12 from the Fountains of Tanais. This Province lies between the Don and Occa, having Maseoy on the West, divided from it by the River Aka. A Country populous and well planted, affording to the Great Duke 15000 Boiares, or Gentlemen which serve on horse-back, and betwixt 30 and 40000 Foot.

15. WIATHKA. 16. CASAN.

South-east of Rezen, beyond the banks of the River Kamme, and about 150 Dutch miles from Mosco, lieth the Province called WIATHKA, feyny and barren, but well stored with Fish and Honey, and wild Beasts good plenty. Heretofore subject to the Tartars, and then the receptacle or retreat of all fugitive Servants, here very gladly entertained: but the Tartarians being expelled, it was made Subject by Basilius to the Dukes of Moscovie. I do not read of any Towns which should be here, which makes me think that they do still retain so much of the Tartar with them as to live in Hoords and Companies, without any fixt Dwellings, or at the best in scattered houses, nor hitherto united into Towns and Villages; except it be the Town of Wiathka it self, built since the subjection of it to the Muscovite, and make a Garrison to defend these out parts of this Empire against the Incurfions of the Tartars.

CASAN, a Kingdom formerly of Tartaria deserta, lieth on the South-east of Wiathka, the most civil people of the Tartars, but owing much of that Civility to their conversation with the Muscovites, (though none of the civillest themselves) tilling their Lands and building Houses where they may with safety. For although the Soil hereof be tolerably fruitful and fit for Habitation, yet the Country for the most part is desolate and ill inhabited; partly by reason of some vast Desarts, lying betwixt the Cities of Casan and Astracan; but principally in regard of the Crim-Tartar, who will not suffer the Moscovite to plant it with Colonies of his own people, nor the Natives to live there in quiet, except only in the Western parts, where they are protected by Garrisons. Chief Towns hereof are, 1. Cusan, upon the River Volga, which gives name to the Kingdom; since the Subjection of this People to the great Duke, and since their Conversion to the Faith, made a Bishop's See. 2. Surick, upon the River Sure, in the middle of the vast Desarts between Casan and Astracan; built by Basilius the great Duke for a Stage or resting-place for Merchants and Travelers, that there they might repose themselves without fear of the Tartars. The people hereof had once a King of their own, as before was said; the last of which named Chelcalcesk, submitted himself unto Basilius the great Duke, and became tributary; but afterwards revolting, he was vanquished by John Vasilivich, Anno 1553, and his Kingdom thereupon united to the Empire of Russia: the Emperors since that time writing themselves Czar Casanski, or King of Casan. And possibly enough it is that Basilius, who first made it tributary, might from hence take the name of Basilius Casan, according to the custom of the ancient Romans.

Under the Government hereof are the Czeremessi, a People that live in great Forests without any Houses, living for the most part of Honey and the flesh of wild Beasts, with the Skins of which they are apparelled. Their Language is different from the rest. They are swift of foot, and very good Archers, carrying their Bows in their hands continually, and practising their Children so timely in it, that they give them nothing to eat (after such an Age) until they can hit a White which is set before them.

ASTRACAN lieth also South East of Casan, more near unto the Caspian Sea; parted from Casan by those Deserts spoken of before, but situate on the same branch of the River Volga; which, having run a course of 2000 Italian Miles, dischargeth it self into this Sea with no less than 70 Mouths or Channels. This is a great mistake, there being in reality but 4, or at most 5 Mouths. It took this name from Astracan the chief Town hereof, situate about 20 Italian miles from the fall of one of those 70 Mouths or Channels into the Caspian; by the commodiousness whereof it is one of the best Towns of Trade in all these Dominions, the Armenian Merchants coming coming hither, and bartering their Silks and Manufactures for the Furs and other natural Commodities of the Russes or Moscovites. A Kingdom formerly, but a Kingdom of less esteem than that of Casan, conquered (together with it) by Basilus the Great Duke, Anno 1494, and by him made a Christian. But afterwards revolting, they were more absolutely subdued by John Vasilovich, who brought into the field against them no fewer than 120000 Horse and 200000 Foot, (enough to over-run a far greater Country) and yet had hardly got the better, but for the terror of his great Ordnance, which the others wanted. Upon that Victory it was made a Member of the Empire of Russia, the Emperor whereof hath since styled himself the King of Astracan.

18. NOVOGORDIA Inferior.19. The MORDWITS.

BUT it is now time we return towards Europe, out of which we have wandred up and down in the skirts of Asia, in tracing out the several Provinces of this Empire, since our first crossing over the Bay of Grandvic, or Saint Nicolas, into the Country of Petzora. But in our way we must first take a view of the Dukedom of Novogrod the Lower, so called to difference it from Novogrod (surnamed the Great) spoken of before, situate almost in the midst betwixt Casan and Mosco, distant from the last 100 Polonian miles, and 60 miles from the Borders of the other; every Polonian mile being reckoned at four Italian. The Country is generally very rich both for Tillage and Pasturage, inferior unto none in all this Estate but Resan and Wolodomir only. So called from Novogrod, the chief Town situate at the Confluence of the Occa and Volga; besides which it hath the neighbourhood of a very great Lake, which storeth it plentifully with Fish. A City of great esteem in all this Empire, partly for the great number of Houses, in that not easily equalled by any other; partly for an impregnable Castle cut out of the main Rock with incredible charges in the time of Basilus the Great Duke; but principally for a stately and magnificent Temple, built above 600 years ago, in imitation (or emulation, as some say) of the famous Church of S. Sophia in Constantinople. To this Town the Story of the Scythian or Sarmatian Slaves ought, in my mind, to be ascribed; though commonly reported of the other Novogrod, in the West parts of this Empire. My reason is, because it is not likely that the Sarmatians dwelling on the Borders of the Baltick Sea should cross all this Country, to join with the Asiatick Scythians, so remote from them in a needless War, which those of this Tract might well do, as near Neighbours to them, if not of the same Nation or Extraction with them: nor is it probable that the Slaves would suffer their Masters to waste all the Country as far as the Baltick Sea, and to increase their strength by the Spoil thereof, before they met them in the Field to give them Battle.

Subject to the Estate hereof are the MORDWIT Tartars, lying on the South, betwixt the Volga and the Don or Tanaïs, where it beginneth to return Westwards towards the Euxine. A people much of the same nature with the Czeremissais, but that they have some Villages and scattered Houses, which the other either want or else care not for. They are Idolaters for the most part (and the rest Mahometans) carrying their Idols in their Carts wheresoever they go; worshipping that Beast all day which they first see in the morning, and swearing by it for that day, as their chiefest Deity.

20. WOROTINE. 21. TUVER.22. WOLODOMIR.

AND now again we are in Europe, where the Great Duke hath almost as many Titles as Towns with Territories. Four of them (besides those before) are either situate in the Province of Moscovy, or else so intermingled with the Towns thereof, that they may easily be taken (or mistaken) for Members of it. The principal are,

WOROTINE, seated on the West side of the River Occa, a distinct Dukedom of it self; so called from Worotin the chief City of it, built upon that River, about 3 Dutch miles from Colluga in the Province of Rezen lying on the farther Bank thereof, beautified with a strong Castle, and a pleasant Soil. The 2. Miscneck, the next Town of note, remarkable for the Head of the River Occa, which ariseth in the fields adjoining.

TUVER, or OTUVER, as some call it, is a large and goodly Country lying along the Banks of the River Volga; so populous, that it is said to contain 40000 Boiars or Gentlemen fit to serve on horseback, and double that number of the common or inferior sort. It gives the Title of a Duke to the Russian Emperor, and is so called from Tuver the chief Town thereof, and a Bishop's See; affirmed to be a fairer and more stately City than Mosco it self, from which it is distant 36 Dutch miles.

WOLODOMIR is one the most fruitful Countries in all Russia, not parallel'd by many Countries in the World; the Soil here (if all be true which is said of it) yielding such an Increase, that many times the Husbandman hath twenty, and sometimes twenty five, for one. It gives the Title of a Duke to the Russian Emperor and hath precedency before Moscovy in the Style Imperial. So called from Wolodomir, the chief City of it, and a Bishop's See, and that so named from the Founder, who probably was the same Valadomir (one of the first Kings of the Russes) who married Helena the Daughter of Nicephorus Phocas, Emperor of Constantinople. The City is situate 36 Polonian miles on the East of Mosco, anciently the chief Seat and Residence of the Great Duke, and so continued till the time of John, the Son of Daniel, who first translated it to Mosco, that from thence he might more easily confront and oppose the Tartars, with whose Irruptions and Invasions both he and his Predecessors had long been troubled. Under the Government hereof is the City of Susdali, of great esteem, and very well peopled as long as the Royal Seat remained at Wolodomir, betwixt which and Mosco it is seated. After it fell into decay, and being once destroyed by the Tartars, could never since recover its ancient Lustre; having now little to uphold its reputation but a Bishop's See.

23. DWINA.

D*WINA*, so called from the chief Town, is situate on the Confluence of two Rivers, Juch and Sachona, whence it hath the name; Dwine in the Language of that Country signifying two, as twain doth with us amongst Country-people. A Country of great extent, but exceeding barren; which makes the Villages hereof to stand very thin, the Towns (considering the great compass of it) to be very few, and the Inhabitants for the most part to live upon dried Fish and the Flesh of wild Beasts, which they have no want of. The chief Commodity is Salt, with which they use to furnish the neighbouring Provinces, and provide such Necessaries for themselves as they stand in need of. Chief Towns hereof are, 1. Dwine, spoken of before, situate in the midst of the Province on the meeting of the said two Rivers, which here united into one Stream take the name of Dwine, or Dwina, the greater; known by that name until its fall into the Northern Ocean in the Bay of Grandvic. 2. Sagan, so called of the River (one of the two which makes the Dwine) upon which it is seated. 3. Colmagro. 4. Pinneguc, two strong Castles.

Unto this Province (because I know not else how to dispose of them) I must reduce these four Towns following; that is to say, 1. Usting, a Bishop's See, situate on the Western side of the River, over against the Town of Dwine, and in a Country so ill furnished with Necessaries, that the people eat dried Fish instead of Bread, but have Salt enough to season it from those of Dwine.

2. Cargapol, a Bishop's See also, on the same side of the River that Dwina is of. 3. S. Nicolas, a well known Port, and a Bishop's See; situate at the influx of Dwina into the Gulf of Granvicius, or the Bay of S. Nicolas, from hence denominated. A Town much Traded since the discovery of the North-east passage by the English, and the removal of theirs and the Dutch Traffick from Novogrod hither; from hence dispersed with more ease and speed into all the parts of this vast Empire. 4. S. Michael, on the Sea-side, commonly called Archangel, a Town of great Trade, by the English especially, who have of late here fixed their Staple, to the great enriching of the place; by reason whereof the English Merchants have not only great Priviledges and Immunities (as the Authors of so great a benefit unto this Estate) not granted to others, but the whole Nation have found better and more noble entertainment from them than any others have received. The cause of which was primarily the great opinion which their Emperors had of Q. Elizabeth, who held very good correspondence with them, continued ever since by mutual Embassies on both sides; and secondly, the conformable Behaviour of the English themselves, so acceptable to those Barbarians (both Prince and People) that when John Vasilivich nailed the Hat of another foreign Ambassador to his Head, for his too much perverseness, he used our Sir Thomas Smith with all kindness imaginable. Another time, when the Jesuite Possevine began to perswade with him to approve of the Religion of the Church of Rome; upon the information of the English Ambassador, that the Pope was a proud Prelate, and would make Princes kiss his feet, he grew into such a rage, that the Jesuite was afraid he would have beat out his Brains. But to return again to the Port of St. Nicolas; it is so called from an Abbey there built unto that Saint, the Tutelary Saint and local Patron of the Nation. Which said, I will set sail from this Port to the Russian Islands, and see what may be said of them to our present purpose.

24. The R U S S I A N Islands.

THE R U S S I A N Islands are but two, both of them in the Northern or Frozen Ocean, on the Coasts of this Country; that is to say, 1. Sir Hugh Willoughby's Island, and 2. Nova Zemla; both subject (if to any) to the Knez, or great Duke of Moscovie.

1. WILLOUGHBIES Island was so called from Sir Hugh Willoughby, because he first discovered it, Anno 1553, and was hereabouts found frozen to death the next year following. For being employed by the Merchants of London in the time of King Edward the sixth, to find out a new way to Muscovy, Cathai and China; he proceeded so far as to this Island; (situate almost opposite to the Bay of S. Nicolas) where the Weather proved so extreme, and the Frosts so vehement, that his Ship was set fast in the Ice, and all his people with himself frozen to death, in which condition they were found the next year after, with an exact description of their Voyage and Fortunes. Notwithstanding which disastrous beginning, the Enterprize was pursued by some noble Adventurers, as Jenkinson, Burroughs, Pet. Jackman, and others of the English Nation, who opened the way as far as to the River Ob, (the East Bounder of Russia) but by reason of the length of the way, the vast floating Islands of Ice, and perpetual Night for many Months together in Winter, could advance no farther.

2. NOVA ZEMLA, situate on the East of Willoughby's Island, opposite to Pustozera in Condora before mentioned, was first discovered by such Adventurers as followed Willoughby's Design. Famous for nothing but a race of short-statured men, not above four foot high, a degree above the height of Pigmies: not yet so far discovered as to know any thing thereof, but by the relation of the Russes, who affirm the Inhabitants to have neither Religion, nor Civility, nor the Prescripts of any Law; but that they worshipped the Sun, Moon, and Northern Star, to which they offer an yearly Sacrifice of their Deer; that the Island is woody, desert, and not easie for Travel, having in it neither green Bough nor Grass, yet harbouring great store of Bears, and such ravenous and dangerous Beasts. Found experimentally true by William Barrentson and his Associates, employed by the Hollanders for this Discovery, Anno 1594, and 1596, in which last year, after many dreadful Combats with huge flakes of Ice, they were forced to winter in this Island, where they built an House, as well to preserve themselves from being buried in Snow, as from being devoured by the Bears, (some of them 13 foot in length) which, with the loss of two of their company devoured by those savage creatures, they at last effected; some of them coming home in safety the October following. And though they seemed to give some hope that a way might be found unto Cathai on the North of this Island (themselves having gone as far North as the 81. Degree of Latitude, within 9 of the Pole) yet it is generally conceived that the undertaking is unprofitable, the success impossible.

And so I leave it, to return to the Story of Russia, called anciently by the name of Sarmatia Europea, but known no farther Northwards than the Head of Tanais. And for Sarmatia Europea, it was bounded in the time of Ptolomy by the Baltick Sea and some Terra Incognita on the North, the Jazyges Metanasta (now Transylvania and the Upper Hungary) upon the South, the River Vistula, or Wessel, which divided it from Germany, upon the West, and the Tanais upon the East, beyond that, all along the Banks of the Euxine Sea to the Mare Caspium, and as far North as any Conqueror had gone, it was called Sarmatia Asiatica: the Countries farther Eastward being then called Scythia. By which accompt, as Russia, containeth not all Sarmatia Europea, of which Prussia and the rest of the incorporate Provinces of Poland pass for a part; so neither is it totally comprehended in it, extending beyond Tanais into Asiatica. The ancient Inhabitants, called by a general name Sarmata, by the Greeks Sauromata, were subdivided, for so much of this part of it was then made known, into the Agathyrsi, Rutheni, Pagiritæ, dwelling in the North; the Osyli, Alauni, Roxolani, &c. dwelling in the South. Amongst many other barbarious Nations, these were some of the principal. And from these Roxolani, as the principal of all the rest, Matthias a Michou, a learned Polander, doth derive the Original of the Rosses, (which we now call the Russians;) seconded herein by the more learned Bochartus, who proveth out of ancient Authors, that the Inhabitants of Taurica Chersonesus (from which the passage into this Country is both short and easie) have been formerly called Rhos. Ταυρος τὸς Ῥῶς καλεῖσθαι, Tauros vocari gentes Rhos, as he saith from Tzetzes. Which Ros, or Rhofes, first mingling with the Alani, a Sarmatian People, might get the name of Roxolani; and afterwards possessing the more Northern Countries, or mingling with the Rossi, of Mount Taurus (from whom those of Taurica descended) in their enterprizes on Constantinople and the parts adjoining, return to their old name of Rossi. The Rossi, or Russians, were then the first Lords of this Country generally, the Moscovites possessors of a Province only; so called from the Moschi, spoken of by Lucan in his Pharsalia, and placed by Pliny near the head of the River Phasis, which rising from the Armenian Mountains, falls into the Euxine. Derived no doubt from Mesech, (or Mosoch, as the Ancients called him) the Son of Japhet, placed originally in the North and North-east of Syria, on the Confines of Colchis and Armenia; where Pliny, as before it said, hath fixed the Moschi, and where there is a long Chain of Hills, which most of the old Writers call Montes Moscici. But to return unto the Rossi, we hear not of them by this name till the time of Michael the third, Emperor of Constantinople; in whose Reign they infested the Euxine Sea, and had the boldness to attempt the Imperial City, Anno 864; said by

by Cedrenus and some other of the Eastern Writers to be a People of Mount Taurus, (next neighbours to Mesech or the Moschi) Failing in their attempt upon Constantinople, and not willing to go home again, they spread themselves, with their Confederates and Associates in this expedition, upon the North-west Banks of the Euxine Sea; enlarging their bounds Northwards with less opposition than they were likely to have done on the Southern parts: Constantinople being once again in vain attempted in the Reigns of Constantine the 7. and Henricus Auiceps. Converted to the Christian Faith, or growing into better terms with the Eastern Emperors, Helena, Daughter of Nicephorus Phocas, is married to Valodimir one of their Kings. From that time forwards they turned their Forces on the Polanders and their weaker neighbours; save that, provoked by the death of one of their Country, slain accidentally at Constantinople in a private Quarrel, they made another fruitless Journey against that City, in the time of Michael Calaphates. Enlarging their Estate to the West and South, they became Masters of a great part of Sarmatia Europea, Lituania, Podolia, Russia, Nigra, and other Provinces, now subject to the Crown of Poland, being then parts of their Estate. Anno 1240, the Tartars under the Conduct of Bathu, or Baydo, the Son of Occatan Chan, broke in upon them and subdued them: the Country before this entire, under one sole King, being broken afterwards into divers petit and inferior Governments, according to the will and pleasure of the insolent Victors. The principal of these (descended from the former Kings) were Lords of Volodimir, Mosco, and some other Cities; held by them with no other Title than that of Lords of Moscovy, and for that Tributary to the Tartars, as were all the rest. Their Seat was originally at Volodimir, till the time of John, the Son of Daniel, the fifth Lord of the Russes, descended of the old Regal Line, taking a good liking of the River and Town of Mosco, repaired the Town, being before but mean and ordinary, and made it the chief Seat of his Principality. From whence the residue of the Russes, united in succeeding times unto this Estate by Marriages, Fraud and Conquest, had the name of Moscovites. But notwithstanding this increase of their power and Empire, the Tartars held them for their Vassals, and tyrannized upon the Country with a barbarous Insolency. Under which Thralldom they long groaned, till the Tartarians, being divided amongst themselves, and grown less terrible to their neighbours, were outed of their Power and Command here by the valour of John, Son of Basilus the second, who thereupon changed the Title of Lord into that of Duke, and after into that of Great Duke, as his Fortune thrived. Yet not so great, but that he was contented to be an Homager of the Tartars: it being finally agreed on at the end of their Wars, that the Tartars should relinquish all their Holds in the Country; and on the other side, that once every year, within the Castle of Mosco, the Great Duke, standing on foot, should feed the Horse of the Crim-Tartar with Oats out of his own Cap. This Homage was by Basilus changed into a Tribute of Furs; which being also denied by his Successors, (as they grew in power) occasioned the long Wars betwixt the Nations; the Tartars always pressing on them by sudden Inroads, sometimes by Armies of no less than 200000 fighting men. But notwithstanding all their Power, and the Friendship of the Turk to boot, the Moscovite is not only able to assert his Sovereignty, but hath also wrested from them many goodly Provinces.

As for the Princes of this Country, I shall not trouble my self (as I see some do) in tracing a Succession of them as far as from the times of Augustus Caesar; when neither the Rossi nor the Moschi had here any footing. We will therefore go no higher than the time of George, whose Daughter Anne I find to have been married to Henry the first of France. From whom in a direct Line descended another George, with whom we do intend to begin our Catalogue, as being the last King of the Russes before the coming of the Tartars. He, wisely yielding to the Storm, waved the Title of King, contented only with the Title of Lord, as more safe for him, and less invidious to the Tartars. The fifth from whom, called John, (as before is said) having removed his Seat to Mosco, took to himself the Title of Lord of Mosco, the chief Seat of that Power and Sovereignty, which he transmitted afterwards to his Posterity; affecting for that cause the Title of Duke of Moscovie (though all the conquered Towns and Territories have their place also in his Style) as much as that of Emperor of Russia; which some of them have assumed also since the time of Basilus, who stiled himself Basilus, by the Grace of God, Emperor and Lord of Russia, Great Duke of Volodimir, Moscovie, Novogrod the Great, Plescom, Smolensko, Tuver, Jugar, Wiathka, Bulgar, &c. Lord and Great Prince of the Lower Novogrod, Czernigow, Rezan, Wologda, Psom, Biele, Rostow, Jarossine, Poloskie, Bielloziere, Odore, Obdora, Condora, &c. King of Casan and Astracan. But leaving them to their swelling and voluminous Title, (little inferior unto that of the Kings of Spain) let us next look on the Succession from the time aforesaid of

The Lords of MOSCOVIE of the old Royal RUSSIAN Line.

A. Ch.

- 1237 1. George, the last King of the Russes, and first Lord of the Russes of the Royal Line.
2. Jaceflaus.
3. Alexander.
4. Daniel.
5. John, who transferred the Seat to Mosco.
6. John II.
7. Basilus.
8. Demetrius.
9. Georgius II.
10. Basilus II.

The Great Dukes of MOSCOVIE.

- 1450 1. John, the first Great Duke, who shook off the Tartarian Bondage.
2. Basilus Casan, won the Provinces of Severia, Roscovia, and Smolensko, with the Realms of Astracan and Casan.
- 1533 3. John Basilus, conquered Livonia and Lituania. Both which his Successor,
- 1548 4. John Basilides, or Wasilwisch, lost in his age; though in his youth he had subdued the Noyhacensian Tartars to his Empire, and vanquished Selim Emperor of the Turks, Anno 1569. With this King the English first began to confederate. He died the 18th of April 1584.
- 1584 5. Theodorus Johannides, the last of the old Royal Line of Moscovie, called Phedor in Russ.
- 1591 6. Boris Theodorus, Brother to the Wife of the last Great Duke, partly by the last Will of his Predecessor, partly by practising with the people, obtained the Empire, but being an unmerciful Tyrant, was dispossessed by the Polanders, coming in favour of one
- 1605 7. Demetrius, pretending himself to be the Son of John Wasilwisch (and generally believed to be so) preserved in a Monastery from the Tyranny of Boris, in hatred of whom he was brought in by the Polander; by whose aid he overcame the Tyrant, and rooted out his Family, and was with great joy crowned Emperor in the City of Mosco. But the Russian Lords disdaining to have a Prince imposed on them from Poland, rose in Arms against him, and and at last vanquished and slew him in open Field: his Wife, a noble Polonian Lady, being sent poorly home, and the Polanders beaten out of the Country.

- 1606 8. Basil Juanniwich, surnamed Sniskius, the chief of the Conspirators, was by the rest of his Faction chosen Knez or Emperor, and held the State with great Trouble till the year 1610, when
- 1610 9. Demetrius II. another pretender to the State as the Son of John Basiliwich also, in opposition unto Sniskius, set up by a stronger Faction, gave occasion to the Polander to work upon this Distemper, by whom Sniskius was taken Prisoner, Demetrius slain, Smolensko and other great Towns subdued, and Vladislaus, Prince of Poland, recommended to the Russians to be chosen Emperor. But the Russes, loth to fall under the Power of the Polander; and weary of their own Confusions, made choice at last of
- 1615 10. Michael Fedrovitz, Son of Theodore the Patriarch of Mosco, who at last settled this vast Empire, and managed it in a more constant way of Peace with the Turk, Tartar, Polonian, and Swetherland, than any of his Predecessors had done before him.
- 1646 11. Alexius Michaelwitz (or the Son of Michael) succeeded his Father in the Empire; troubled at first with some Distempers in the State (as in all other Countries about that time) but now quietly settled, Anno 1648.
- This Prince died in 1675: in the year 1664 he was 34 years old, being born the 17th of March, 1630.
- 1675 12. Fædor Alexovitz, Son of Alexius, succeeded his Father. This Prince died in May in the year 1682, without Issue, though twice Married.
- 1682 13. Alexovitz and Peter, both Brothers of Fædor, were set up and now Reign together; the Eldest of these was but 10 years old, and half blind, and altogether unfit for Government, and therefore the Boiars passed him by and set up his younger Brother; upon which the 15th, 16th, and 17th of June a Tumult was made by the Army in Mosco, and many of the great Men being Assassinated, they set up the Elder Brother with the Younger, and they have hitherto made a shift to Reign together about 5 years. In the year 1689 a Conspiracy being discovered to Murder the younger Brother (or at least pretended) he sent the Elder into a Monastery, and began to govern alone.

The Formalities with which these great Emperors are invested or settled in the Throne are not many nor state-ly; such as they be, I here afford you out of the History of the Life of Johannes Basilides, written in Latin by Paulus Oderbornius. On the 2d of June, Anno 1583, Theodorus Johannides went towards the Temple of S. Michael, being the principal Church in all Mosco; the Streets all cover'd with Flowers, the Doors of the Citizens crowned with Garlands, the Air echoing with the noise of Flutes and Trumpets, and the People so crowding to behold their Prince, that had not the Guard with naked Swords forc'd a passage through them, it had been impossible for him to have gone on. Being now come to the Church door, the Lords of the Country (Knezes as we call them) went out to meet him; and the Archbishop of Mosco, clad in his Pontificalibus, when he was come into the Church, imbraced him. The Pavement of the Church was hidden with Tapestry, and the Stalls adorned with costly Hangings. The Great Duke late down in his Throne, being attired in a garment of Silk, buttoned down with golden Buttons: on his Head he wore a Purple Cap spangled with rich Jewels, and on his Fingers abundance of Rings. Being thus seated, the Patriarch made a Prayer to God to bless him, his People, and his Government: which was seconded by the joyful Shouts and Acclamations of his Subjects; amongst whom no small store of Silver-money was flung by the Treasurer, and so they returned to the Palace.

The Government of this Country is meerly Tyrannical, the Emperor being absolute Lord of the Lives, Lands and Goods of all his Subjects: all of them, the Noble as well as the base, subscribing themselves in their Petitions to him by the name of Keloptery, that is, Slaves. Whereupon Mahomet, a Turkish Bashaw, was used to say, that his Master and the Muscovite were the two most absolute Princes in all the World. First for their Goods; when any Ambassador returns home, the Great Duke takes from him all the Presents which he hath received, giving him perhaps some small Reward, perhaps none at all: and as for Lands, they pass not from Father to Son, but as he confirms it. But more particularly (besides the case of Permia spoken of before) John Vasilivich sent a Command to Mosco, to provide a Coal-pack of live Fleas for a Medicine: and when the Citizens returned answer that it was impossible, he fined them at 700 Rubbles for their Disobedience. Another time he laid a Mulct of 300000 Rubbles upon his Nobility, because he had no good Sport in his Hunting: which they again extorted from the common people; and under colour of want, commanded from some Bishops and Monasteries the sum of 100000 Rubbles, from some 50000, more or less from others, according unto their Revenues. And it is usual with the best of them to cause the Boiars (or Gentlemen which serve on Horseback) to pretend themselves robbed, that he may send unto the City to find out the Felon, and, on a Non est inventus, Fine them at discretion, sometimes 8000, sometimes 10000, and sometimes 20000 Rubbles. Then for their Lives, there is a Story, that Vasilivich having found that one of his Secretaries had received a Goose stuffed full of Silver for a Bribe, caused him to be brought into the Market-place of Mosco; where without any legal Tryal, he commanded the Executioner first to cut off his Legs about the Shins, and then his Arms about the Elbows, (still asking the miserable Man how he liked Goose-flesh) and in the end to cut off his Head, in similitude of a Goose ready for the Spit. And that they may the better preserve this Power, the Great Dukes seldom shew themselves unto the People but in Apparel of inestimable value, joining the Ornaments of a Bishop unto the Majesty of a King, by wearing a Mitre on their Heads shining with Diamonds and rich Stones: and when they wear it not on their Heads, they place it before the Chair of State (over which are the Images of Christ and the Blessed Virgin) holding in their hands a most Rich Crozier-Staff, and all their Fingers full of Rings. And upon solemn Festivals and Entertainments the great Chamber is beset with Cupboards of Plate of infinite value, and filled with Men clothed with Cloth of Gold to the very foot; all of them seeming to be Men of the chief Nobility, but many times being no other than the gravest and portliest Citizens of Mosco, richly apparelled for the time out of the Emperor's Wardrobe; which to such as do not understand the Fraud, look like so many Princes, and cause no small wonder at his Magnificence. So that the People seeing him in such Royal State, and knowing no more than what they are taught at home, reverence him as Slaves, not Subjects, and look upon him rather as a God than a King.

Having so absolute a Command on their Lives and Goods, it will be easily supposed that he may raise what Forces and amass what Treasures he hath a mind to. First, for his Forces, it is said that he is able to raise raise 300000 Horse, if occasion be: and that he may come near that number it is more than probable, in that John Vasilivich, in his War against those of Astracan, had actually 120000 Horse; and that a great part of the Country is in the hands of the Boiars, bound by their Tenure to serve with Horse whenever he pleaseth; and that there are 110 Men chosen by the Emperor, and by him enfeoffed with Lands, (during pleasure only) who for these Lands are to find 65000 Horse with all things necessary for the Wars, and those in a continual readiness fit for present Action. Then for such Horse as he himself doth keep in continual pay, there are no fewer than 25000 which attend him as a Guard to his Person, all of them well-experienced Men and fit for Service: which added to the 65000 spoken of before, make up a standing Body of 90000. Had he Foot answerable unto this proportion of Horse, there were no dealing with him; but therein his Militia is defective: Vasilivich to his great Army of 120000 Horse having but 20000 Foot; the Foot-men which he hath in continual Pay amounting to 12000 only, far short of such a standing Body of Horse as before we spake of. And this defect hath been the reason why the Polanders with far less Armies have prevailed against them: the Great Duke not being able with all his power to hinder King Stephen of Poland from taking Villocolne, or besieging Plescom (though his Army was not above 60000 in both Horse and Foot) for want of standing Bands of Foot to make good his ground. Generally both Horse and Foot are very obedient to their Captains and Superiour Officers: patiently enduring all Discommodities of Cold, Rain, and Hunger; (in that regard fitter to keep a Fortress than serve in Field) and so regardless of their Lives in the day of Battel, that they will rather loose them than either yield themselves Prisoners or demand Quarters.

Of late years they have taken into pay many Scotch and Polish Gentlemen, who have endeavoured to teach their Soldiers the modern way of Exercise used by other Countries, and to improve their Foot; which may in time make them an overmatch for all their Neighbours; but we see however no great effect of this in their War began at the Solicitation of the Poles against the Crim Tartars in the year 1686, entered upon in 1687, without any Success; and now carried on, but with what Effect is not yet known.

This Prince has extended his Dominions since our Author wrote, to the South as far as Persia, the Caspian Sea, and the City of Tarky, in 41 Degrees of Latitude, by which he is become Neighbour to the Georgians and Persians, who can yet do him no damage: to the North-East upon the Frozen Sea he has taken in the Samoeds, and enlarged his Borders beyond the River Obb: to the South-West he has the Province of Severa extending as far as the Boristhenes, whose Inhabitants are called the Russ-Cossacks, and are very warlike, strong and numerous; so that he has only three Enemies to fear, the Crim-Tartar, the Pole, and the Swede. And as for the last, he is not much in pain; he is now conjoined with the Poles to conquer the Crim-Tartar and the Turks being low, he might have succeeded in it, if his own Cossacks had not proved Treacherous and Disobedient.

The Revenues of this Country have been infinitely improved, not only by the Silver, Gold, and other Merchandize Imported by the Dutch and English, but by the vast Numbers of Scotch, English, Hollanders, Poles, Germans, and Swedes, which have gone thither and taught those People Husbandry, Mechanick Arts, Manufactures and Civility, by which they are very much improved and enriched, and their Traffick is enlarged beyond belief, and consequently the Power and Revenues of this Prince (who is called the Czar in imitation of the word Caesar, which they cannot pronounce) are thereby much advanced, and grow every Year greater and greater, especially since the Hollanders have taken large quantities of Corn yearly off his hands.

For his Revenues, they may be what he will himself, considering (besides his extraordinary power of oppressing his Subjects before-mentioned) the many ordinary ways he hath of amassing Treasure: viz. the Forestalling of home-bred Commodities, and ingrossing the foreign; selling them at what price he list, and hindring all Men else from Trade till his own be sold; Provision of Rent-corn and Victual, raised in some years to 200000 Rubbles; Rent-wood and Hay to 30000, Poll-Money to 400000, Customs on Merchandise to 800000. By which and other means of collecting Monies, and the Domain of his Crown, though he raise vast Sums: yet it is thought that, his Household-charges being deducted, there remain not towards all other Expences three millions of Rubbles; every Rubble being as much as an English Mark.

The Arms are Sable, a Portal open of two Leaves and as many Degrees Or.

And so much for RUSSIA.

O F P O L A N D.

POLAND is bounded on the East with Russia and the Crim-Tartar, from whom it is parted by the River Borysthenes; on the West with Germany, on the North with the Baltick Sea and some part of Russia, on the South with the Carpathian Mountains, and the Niester, which divide it from Hungary, Transylvania and Moldavia.

It is an aggregate Body, consisting of many distinct Provinces united into one Estate, of which Poland, being the predominant, hath given name to the rest, called altogether the Realm of Poland: and that so named from Pole, which in the Sclavonian Language (the common Language of the Country) signifieth plain; because it is but little swelled with Hills. It is of Figure round, in compass 2600 miles, situate under the eighth and twelfth Climates; so that the longest Day in the Southern part is but 16 hours, and about 18 hours in the parts most North.

This Country is plain, but full of Woods, which serve to rectifie the Air, being naturally so cold that they have neither Wine nor Grapes; instead whereof they use that kind of Drink called Ale, in former times the usual Beverage of England and this Country only. Barley they have, and Pulse in such abundant measure, that no small quantities of each are transported yearly: nor yield they any thing at all to Denmark or Hungary for their plenty of Cattle. But of this more in our description of the several Provinces.

The People are very industrious, and studious of all Languages, especially of the Latine; to which they are so devoted, that there is scarce a mean man who is not able in some measure to express himself in it. According to their abilities they are rather prodigal than truly liberal; and good Soldiers generally. The Peasants live in miserable Servitude unto their Lords; the Lords in such Equality of Estate amongst themselves, that none of them (excepting the greater Princes) exceedeth 25000 Ducats of yearly Rent. Proud in their Garb, costly in their Apparel, impatient in their Humours, and delicate in Diet. These last Conditions are common to the Women also, who are for the most part indifferently fair, and rather witty than well spoken. But this, being the peculiar Character of the Polander properly so called, is not perhaps communicable to the People of the rest of the Provinces, whom we shall speak of severally in their proper places.

The Christian Faith was first planted in this Kingdom at several times and by several persons, according to the different parts of which it consisteth: in Poland specially so called in the time of their Prince Meicislaus, Son of Nemomysslaus Anno 963; in Livonia, by the preaching of one Meinardus, Anno 1200, or thereabouts in Lithuania, not until the year 1386, at the admission of Jagello to the Crown of Poland, and then done (as some say) by Thomas of Walden (or Waldensis) an English Frier; in Samogitia and Volhinia, at the same time with Lithuania; in the rest at other times and on other occasions, yet so that in many places of it Idolatry was never totally rooted out, the seeds and practice whereof in many Points still remain amongst them. Corrupted by the Superstitions of the Church of Rome, a Reformation was endeavoured at such a time as John Hus flourished in Bohemia, the next neighbouring Kingdom: but by the rigour of Vladislaus the sixth, then King thereof, assisted by his Bishops and Noblemen, it was at that time hindered. Afterwards in the time of Luther, some who had studied at Leipsick, and Wittenberg (Universities of Saxony) brought his Opinions home with them into the Province of Poland; as some Dutch Merchants (with the rest of their Commodities) did into Dantzick, the chief Town of Pomerellia, Anno 1525: from whence it spread it self over most part of that Country. According as it was favoured or disliked by the Palatines, Chastellans and other great men of the Realm, so was its entertainment either good or bad: the Gracians in the mean time taking opportunity to win some parts of it to their side, and confirm others in it, who being originally Members of the Church of Greece, because originally converted by the Bishops thereof, did still continue in Conformity and Obedience to it. In the end, by reason of the over-great Liberty of the Nobility and People, and want of Power in the King to controule their doings, every man took up what Religion he best liked; some following the Augustine Confession, others the Helvetian, others adhering as tenaciously to the Church of Rome; and some inclining to new Sects, or rather to old Heresies under new Disguises, have brought in such a Miscellanie or Babel of Religions into this Estate, (Jesuites, Lutherans, Calvinists, Socinians, Arians, Anabaptists, and indeed what not? being here all tolerated) that at last it grew into a by-word, that If any man had lost his Religion, he might find it in Poland, or else believe it to be vanished. A by-word afterwards applied unto Amsterdam, communicable since unto other places, Libertas Prophetandi, or the Liberty of Prophesying, being now as much allowed of in some parts of Christendom, as Libertas opinandi was in Rome under Nerva's Government, ubi & sentire quæ velis, & quæ sententias loqui liceat, when as a man might think as he listed of the publick, and speak what he thought. But whether this be such a rara temporum Felicitas, such a Felicity of these our times, as Tacitus conceived the other to be of those, future times will shew.

But to return again to Poland: notwithstanding this mixture of Religions, yet that most publicly allowed and countenanced is the Religion authorized by the Church of Rome, asserted here by the Zeal of the Kings unto that Cause, and the great Power of the Bishops, who seeing how those of their Order have siped in Germany and other places, under colour of Reformation of some things amiss, have hitherto upheld the Ecclesiastical Estate in the same form they found it. The Government of the Church is as formerly by 3 Archbishops and 19 Bishops, who challenge a Jurisdiction over all the Kingdom, but exercise it upon those only who submit unto them: those who embrace the Doctrines of Luther or Calvin following the Forms of Government by them established; as others do some new ones of their own devising. And for those Provinces and people which lie towards Greece, or were parts heretofore of the Russian Empire, and still hold a Communion with those Churches, they have Archbishops and Bishops of their own Religion; that is to say, the Archbishops of Vilne and Lemberg, the Bishops of Poloczko, Lusko, Pinzko, Volodomir, Presmil, and Kiovia. Yet amongst all these different Churches and forms of Government there is this Conformity, that whensoever the Gospel is read openly in the Congregation, the Nobility and Gentry use to draw their Swords. (according to an ancient Custom which they had amongst them) signifying their readiness to defend it against all Opposers. Which reason doubtless gave beginning to the standing up at the the Creed and Gospel in the Primitive times, retained still in the Church of England, whereby we do declare how prepared and resolute we are to defend the same: though some of late, holding it for a Relique of Popery, with greater nicety than wisdom, have refused to do it.

Principal Commanders of this Countrey in the Art of War were, 1. Casimir the third, the great Establisher of this Kingdom after long Dissensions. 2. Jagello, or Wladislaus the first, who first brought down the Pride of the Dutch Knights in a famous Victory. 3. Casimir the IV. the fortunate Conqueror of the Knights of Prussia, brought by him under the Command of the Kings of Poland. 4. Sigismund the first, by whose Valour and good fortune the Dutch Knights were totally suppressed, and the greatest part of Prussia for ever added to that Crown. 5. Sigismund the second, surnamed Augustus, fortunate in his Wars against most of them of Livonia, by him united to this Kingdom. Of most special note for learning, Hofius a Divine of the Papal Party, whose great Abilities advanced him to the state of a Cardinal. 2. Crellius, and 3. Volckelius, of the contrary Party in Religion, men of great parts, but Heterodox and unsound Opinions. 4. Cromerus, the Historian. 5. Keckerman, the Professor at Dansk or Dantzick; a man of universal Studies, but of greater industry than exactness.

Chief Rivers of this Kingdom are, 1. Vistula or the Weyssel, the ancient Boundary betwixt Germany and Sarmatia Europea; which rising in the Carpathian Mountains passeth by Cracovia, the chief City of Poland, and, dividing Prussia from Pomerellia, falleth into the Baltick Sea, not far from Dantzick and is navigable for the space of 400 miles, of old called Vandalis. 2. Warta, which runneth through the lesser Poland. 3. Diuna the less, watering Livonia; and 4. Borysthenes, or the Nieper, passing through Podolia: both spoken of before, when we were in Russia. 5. Niester, by Ptolomy called Tyras, which falleth into the Euxine Sea, having first parted Podolia from Moldavia. 6. Jugra, by some called the lesser Tanais, arising in Lithuania, and falling into the more noted Tanais which is now called Don. Of less note there are, 1. Reuben, or Reuhon. 2. Chronus, now called Pregel. 3. Bog, said by some to be the Hypanis of the Ancients. 4. Memel. 5. Niemen, the Meander of these Northern parts. 6. Windaw, a Livonian River falling into the Baltick. Mountains of note here are not many, the Countries for the most part being plain and champain, and those which be are rather Boundaries betwixt this and some other Kingdom, than proper unto this alone. The chief of which are those called Sarmatici dividing Germany from Sarmatia Europea, by Solinus named Sevo, by Ptolomy the Carpathian Mountains; the Boundary at this time betwixt Poland and Hungary, of which more anon.

The common Meets and Landmarks being thus laid down, we will next take a view of those several Provinces, of which this Kingdom doth consist, being eleven in number; that is to say, 1. Livonia, 2. Samogitia, 3. Lithuania, 4. Volhinia, 5. Podolia, 6. Russian nigra, 7. Masovia, 8. Podlaffia, 9. Prussia, 10. Pomerellia and 11. Poland, specially so called: all of them (except the proper Poland) within Sarmatia Europea.

1. L I V O N I A.

LIVONIA, or LIEFLAND, is bounded on the East with Ingeria and Pleskow, two Provinces of the Empire of Russia, on the West with the Baltick Sea, on the North with the Gulf or Bay of Finland, on the South with Samogitia and Lithuania, cut off from it by the River Dvina; extended in length along the Shore of the Baltick for the space of 125 Dutch, or 500 Italian miles, and 40 Dutch, or 160 Italian miles in breadth; and called thus perhaps from the Levoni, a people of Germany, inhabiting not far from the River Vistula.

The Country is for the most part plain, without any Mountains; furnished with Corn and Fruits in so great abundance, that they send part thereof into other Countries: and yet there is much Ground untilld in it, by reason of the Bogs and Marshes, which are very frequent. Here is also store of Wax, Honey and Pitch, but they have neither Oyl nor Wine: the want of which last is supplied by Meeth. Of tame Beasts fit for man's service they are well provided; as also such whose Skins are of more value with the Merchants than their Flesh at the Market; as Ermins, Sables, Castors, and others of that kind, besides good store of Game for Hunting, the Country having in it many large Woods, parts of the Hercynian. And as for the Rivers, there are few Countreys which have more; it being watered by the Windaw, the Beck, the Dvina, the Reuhon, all of them falling into the Baltick; many great Lakes, whereof the chief is that of Baybas, Forty Five miles long, and full of Fish.

The people are much given to gluttony and drunkenness, especially in rich mens houses, where it is to be had: for the Peasants live in want enough, meer Slaves to their Tyrannical Landlords, who spend in Riot and excess what these get by Drudgery: and when at any time the poor Wretch leaves his Landlord to mend his condition with some other, the Lord if he can overtake him, will cut off his Foot, to make him sure for the future. They are mixture of many Nations: as the Esthones, which are the natural Inhabitants, (derived from the Estii, a Dutch people, spoken of by Ptolomy) of which Nation are almost all the Peasants; the Moscovites, Suedes, Danes, Dutch and Polanders, intermingled with them, coming in upon several Conquests, and planting themselves in the best parts of it, in which they still Lord it over the Native, but the Dutch especially, for long time Masters of the whole.

The Christian Faith was first here planted by Nicander of Lubeck, (imployed herein) in the time of Frederick the first) at the perswasion of some Dutch Merchants who traded hither, by the Archbishop of Breme, by whom he was made the first Bishop of the Livonians in 1190. The Church hereof at this time is governed by the Archbishop of Riga, the Bishops of Lup, Asilia, Ofel, Carland, and Rivallia. In those parts which remain subject to the Polander, the Religion of the Church of Rome is only countenanced. Such part of it as are under the Suedes or Danes are for the most part of the Lutheran Profession, planted with Colonies of that People, but the Esthones, or original Inhabitants, as they have a Language, so they have a Religion by themselves also, mixt of the Christian and the Pagan. Extremely well affected unto their Priests, to whom they present Salt, Candles and Fruits, when they come to them for their Blessings; great lovers of Confession, esteemers of Holy Water, and diligent frequenters of their Churches; but so extremely ignorant in all Points of Religion, that there is hardly one in a Village that can say his Pater Noster. When they bury any of their dead every one drinketh an Health to him, and powreth his part upon him, when his turn comes to drink; putting into the Grave with him an Hatchet, Wine, Meat, and a little Mony for his Voyage. And in some places they are wholly Idolatrous (if not converted very lately by the care of the Jesuites) some of them worshipping the Sun, others Stocks and Stones, and some Serpents also. The Language of the Country is for the most part the High Dutch, being the Language of those Nations who first Lorded over them; the Esthones having generally a peculiar Language, which none of the others understand.

It was divided formerly into the Provinces of Curland, Estland, Semigal, Virland, Harland, and Lettenland; but these six, since the Conquest of it by the Polanders, are reduced to three, Harland and Virland being united unto Estland, and Semigallia unto Curland.

Chief places in Eftland are, 1. Rivallia, or Revel, a Bishops See, and a well traded Port, situate on the Gulf of Finland; a Town belonging to the Swede, the keeping whereof, and of Wiborg on the Borders of Moscovy, stand him yearly in 100000 Dollars. This City was built by Waldemaring of Denmark in the year 1223, and being frightened by the Threats the Russ, in 1558, they had recourse to this King for Protection, missing it there, they applied themselves to Erick King of Sweden who accepted them. In 1570, Magnus Duke of Holstein besieged it for the Russ without Success, in 1577 the Russ besieged it themselves but with the same effect, and since then it has Peaceably been enjoyed by the Swede. 2. Habsay, or Habsel, (Asilia in Latin) a Bishops See; and 3. Pernaw, a well-fortified place, belonging to the Swetblander also, ever since the Conquest of these parts of the Country by John the second. Places of great importance to the Crown of Sweden, as also other pieces of this nature are, which, standing in an Enemies Country, not only do defend our own, but offend our Adversaries. For they are not only Doors, to open a farther passage into their Territories, whensoever we shall see occasion; but whilst the Enemy is besieging thereof, or otherwise busied in recovering them into his power, our own State is preserved in quiet, and time may yield fit opportunity to relieve them if they be distressed, without wasting of any part of our proper Countries. Of which nature was Calais when it was in the hands of the English; the Garrisons which the Spaniards and Portuguese have in Africk and India: the Charge of keeping them being sufficiently defrayed (if the charge prove greater than the Income, as sometimes it doth) by the advantages they give unto him which hath them. 4. Velin, a strong Town, fortified with an impregnable Castle, betrayed by the Dutch Garrison at that time in it, together with William of Furstenburg, the Great Master, into the hands of John Basilus the Great Duke of Moscovy, who still holds it. 5. Derpt, or Derbern, (in Latin Turpatum) a Bishop's See, situate on the Beck, or Embeck, betwixt two Lakes, in the midst of the Province, and taken at the same time by the Moscovite, who, transporting the Livonians into other places, planted these parts with Colonies of his own people. 6. Terveft, a Castle of great strength, taken then also by the Russes; but being recovered by the Polander, was blown up with Gunpowder, that it might no more come into the hand of the Enemy. Hitherto nothing of this Country which belongs to the Polanders; these that follow do; that is to say, 7. Borcholm, the Seat and residence of the Bishop of Rivallia, since the taking of that Town by the Swedes. 8. Wesenburg, incommodiously seated betwixt two ill neighbours, Narva and Rivallia; but serving very well to prohibit the Incursions of those Garrisons farther into the Country. 9. Wernebeck, in that part of Eftland, which is called Odinpo; and 10. Weissenstein; in that part thereof which is named Fervia.

In LETTENLAND, lying in the midst betwixt Eftland, and Curland, the places of most note are, 1. Riga, (the people call it Rig) seated on the Mouth of the River Dvina, falling there into the Baltick first built and planted at the charges of the Merchants of Breme; after that the Archbishop's See, the ordinary Residence of the Great Master, and the chief City of the whole Province of Livonia. A Town well fortified, according to the modern Rules of fortification, with a strong Wall, large Bulwarks, double Ditches, Palisadoes, and well provided of all manner of Ammunition: a famous Empery, of great resort for foreign Merchants, who carry hence Pitch, Wax, Hemp, Flax, and such other Commodities. They are governed (notwithstanding their Subjection to the King of Poland) by their own Laws; and such stout defenders of their Liberties, that they will by no means admit of any Forreigner to have Command of the City, obedient in all other things to the will of that King. This City was built about the year 1196, in 1215 it became a Bishop's See, in 1561 it willingly submitted upon good Terms to the Crown of Poland, in 1605, it was in vain besieged by the King of Sweden, but in 1621 Gustavus Adolphus took it, in 1656 it was besieged in vain by the Russ, in 1677, it suffered much by Fire, and it is still under the Swedes, saith John Bunon. Mr. Mercil, who saw it in the year 1664, saith it is a Town of no great extent, but compact and very well peopled. Its Buildings are all of Brick and Stone, and it is fortified with a good Wall, and good Ditches and Ramparts, on that side towards Muscovie, and towards the River it has a strong and well fortified Castle, in which the Swedish Governour of Livonia Resides; the Town is principally considerable for the Commerce it draws from all parts, the Ships coming up to the Walls of the Town, and in Winter the Merchants pass in their Sledges to Plesco, Novogrod and Mosco. 2. Dunamund, an impregnable Fortrefs, two Dutch miles from Riga, well garrisoned by the Polanders, who here take Toll of all Foreign Merchants. 3. Blokaws, a Garrison of the King's betwixt Riga and Dunamund, where the Merchants are tolled over again. 4. Wenden, more within the Land, on the River Treider. 5. Wolmar, upon the same River. 6. Kakenhaufe, a strong Town on the Banks of the Dvina. This Country belongs wholly to the King of Poland, and stood firm for him in the War made by Charles Duke of Suderman against his Nephew Sigismund King of Poland and Sweden, when almost all Eftland had submitted to him. The Eastern part of this Province is under the Russ, and the Western, which is much the greater part is under the Swede.

CURLAND, the third and last member of this Division, containing Semigallia also, lieth South of Lettenland, and North of Samogitia and Lithuania: an entire Dukedom of it self, but holden under the Sovereignty and Homage of the Kings of Poland. Places of most importance in it are, 1. Candaw, 2. Goldingen, 3. Kies, (the Dutch call it Windaw) the Seat of the Great Master of the Teutonick Order in time past; now most frequented as the place of Parliament or general Assembly for Affairs which concern the publick. 4. Dubin, 5. Grubin, on the Sea-side but of no Trade at all. 6. Hasenpot. And then in Semigal, 7. Mittaw, the Court and Residence of the Dukes of Curland. 8. Selborg, 9. Bessinborg. 10. Dobelin. There is no Town in all this Dukedom of any Trading, though lying for a great space all along the Baltick; because none of them are furnished with commodious Havens. A Dukedom first begun in the person of Gothardus Ketter, (of one of the noble Families of Denmark) the last Great Master of the Dutch Knights in this Country, who in the year 1562 surrendering his Order, and the whole possession of Livonia, to Sigismund Augustus K. of Poland, received back again for him, and his Heirs for ever the Dukedom of Curland and Semigal, to be held by them of that Crown; the Nobility of these Countries doing then presently their Homage and Allegiance to him as their Hereditary Prince. Since which time the Princes of this House have continued Feudataries unto Poland, but not reckoned as parts or members of the Body thereof; not coming to the Diets, not liable to the publick Charges, nor having any thing to do in the Kings Election; in a word, rather honourable Neighbours of the King's of Poland, than Subjects to them. The present Duke is like to be much increased in Estate and Power, if the now Marquis of Brandenburg (whose Sister is his Mother) should depart without Issue. For by that means there will be added to this House the great Dukedom of Prussia, those of Cleve and Gulick, together with such other Countries possessed now by that Marquis as he holds by descent from the Heirs-general of those Dukedoms: which makes him cast an eye already upon those Estates.

The Dukes of Curland, are Originally of Westphalia in Germany.

- 1562 1. Gothard Kedler, being the Son of Gothard Kedler, a Knight of Westphalia, and being Master of the Knights of Livonia, he was by Sigismund King of Poland, made Duke of Curland.
2. James Duke of Curland, Son of Gothard, Married in the year 1645, Charlotte Daughter of George William Elector and Duke of Brandenburgh, by whom he had
3. Frederick Cassimir, now Duke of Curland, 2. Ferdinand a great Commander in the Wars. 3. Alexander, who was wounded at the Siege of Buda, and is since Dead. Frederick Cassimir, the present Duke of Curland, in the year 1688, 25th of December, Married Sophia Amalia Nissun, of the Line of Sigen Showartus.

There belong also to Livonia some few Islands situate in the Baltick See, that is to say, 1. Osilia, 2. Dachden, 3. Mona, 4. Wormse, 5. Wrangen, and 6. Keyn. Of which the four last do belong to the King of Poland, Dachden to the King of Swethland, and Osilia, or Ofel, to the Danes. This last is the chief of all the six, distant from the main Land of Livonia 12 Dutch miles; 14 of the same miles in length, half as much in breadth: the chief Towns hereof being 1. Ofel, a Bishop's See, which gives name to the Island. 2. Sunneburg. The Island was made subject to the Danes by Magnus, Brother of Frederick the second, King of Denmark; who, being chosen Administrator of the Bishoprick of Decript in Estland, made himself Master of this Island and some other pieces, which, dying without Issue, he bequeathed to the King his Brother, Anno 1580.

As for Livonia it self, it was first under the Levoni and Estii, two German Nations, from whom the Country had the name of Livonia, the People of Estlanders or Estones. Distracted into many petit Principalities, it was made acquainted with the Christian Faith by the care of the Merchants of Bremen, as before was said. Meinard their first Bishop being dead, and Berthold his Successors slain by such of the people as had not yet received the Gospel; the Knights of the Port-glaive, or the Short-Sword, were sent hither to defend the Preachers and the Doctrine by the force of Arms. Finding themselves too weak to effect the business, they united with the Order of Dutch Knights in Prussia, to whom from that time forwards they became subordinate; the great Master of Livonia acknowledging him of Prussia for his Superior. These Knights continued Masters of it without contradiction till the year 1557, (embracing in the mean time the Opinions of Luther, Anno 1528) then quarrelling with the Archbishop of Riga, of the House of Brandenburg, because he would not adhere unto their Opinions; who, to secure his own Estate, was forced to put Riga into the hands of the Polanders. Afterward being overlaid by the Muscovite, who had taken from them almost all their Country, they were fain to put themselves under the Protection of Sigismund-Augustus King of Poland, Anno 1559. But William of Furstenburg, the Great Master being betrayed by his own Mercenaries into the hands of the Muscovite, Gothardus his Successor (following the example of Albert the Great Master of Prussia) transacted with the said Sigismund for the whole Estate, which he surrendered to his use in the Castle of Riga, March 5. 1562, together with his Cross, the Seal of the Order, the Charters and Grants of many of the Popes and Emperors which concerned the same, as also the Keys of the City and Castle of Riga, the Office of Great Master, the Rights of Cohage, and all the Powers and Priviledges appertaining to it: receiving back again from Ratzevil, the King's Commissioner, the Dukedom of Curland to him and his Heirs for ever; as before is said. By this Transaction the Kings of Pole became Masters of Livonia, and were more absolutely settled in it after a long War betwixt Stephen King of Poland and John Basilovich the Great Duke of Moscovie, who in the end surrendered all his Claim therein to the said Stephen and his Successors, Anno 1582, reserving only some few Towns on the Eastern Borders: the Danes and Swethlanders taking occasion by their Troubles to impatronize themselves of Narva, Kokena, Ofel, and some other pieces.

Mr. Ateril, Secretary to the Earl of Carlisle, in his Embassie into Moscovy in the year 1663, hath p. 337, That Livonia is so desolate, that in 60 Leagues that they pass'd from Nibuisen to Riga, they found only two or three Towns, and they remarkable for nothing but their Antiquity. Though it is sufficiently fertile in Grats and Corn, and full of Forests and Lakes. The Inhabitants are more Blockish and Barbarous than the Muscovites, but in their Habits and Caps like them, their Language is as unpleasant as their Behaviour and manner of Converse, and they carry upon their Foreheads all the Tokens of a Savage and Unciviliz'd Nature, and are perfectly Slaves to the Sredes, they profess the Lutheran Religion, but are so well pleased with the Pagan Superstition, that it is thought they are only outside Christians. Olearius tells us, that as they were converted more by force than Arguments, they look upon the Germans as injurious intruders, who have wrongfully dispossessed them of their Country, and hate them and the Christian Religion for their sake, as far as they durst shew it.

2. S A M O G I T I A.

SAMOGITIA is a small Province wedged in betwixt Livonia and Lithuania, having Livonia on the North, Lithuania on the East and South, and the Baltick Sea upon the West: in length extending 50 miles from East to West, but not of an answerable breadth. It is so called from the lowliness of the situation, (the word Samogits in the Language of the Inhabitants signifying terram inferiorem, or the Low-lands) by the Moscovite in the same sense called Samotkazelma. This lowliness of situation makes it very watery, and almost continually frozen: but withal it hath many Forests, which yield unto the people abundance of Honey, better, more pleasing to the taste, and less mixt with Wax, than in other places.

The people are supposed to be of the Saxon Race, of a good Sature, well set, bold, and apt for War; but withal boisterous, rude and barbarous: Christians in general, but many of them do still retain their old Idotries; nourishing amongst them a kind of four-footed Serpents, about three handfuls in length, which they worship as their Household-gods, attending them with fear and reverence when they call them out to their request: and if any Mischance do happen to any of the Family, it is imputed presently to some want of due observance of these ugly Creatures. They are naturally inclined to Divinations, Charms and Sorceries, and frequently abused (as for the most part such people are) by Diabolical Illusions. Nay, they which profess the name of Christ are so ill instructed, that they use to marry many Wives, without consideration of Blood or Parentage: it being ordinary for a man to marry with his Brothers Widow, and not unusual to marry the Relict of their Fathers, (a Fornication not so much as heard of in S. Paul's time among the Gentiles.) They have some Customs also as unprofitable as these are heathenish, breaking up their Land, as they do in Muscovie, with Spades or Stricks. And when one of their Governors, observing the Husbandry of other Nations, had brought them the use of the Plough; it fortune'd that for two or three years, either by the indisposition of the Weather, or some other Accident, they had not to much Corn as they they used to have. Which want the people attributing to the use of the Plough, Nec quicquam aliud in causa esse putantes, and not believing that there was any other cause of it, grew so much incensed, that the Governor fearing some Sedition like to follow on it, was forced to leave them to the old way which before they went. An humour like to that of the present Irish, in ploughing with their Horses tails, spoken of before. So pertinacious for the most part are ignorant and superstitious people, in standing to their ancient Customs, tho' absurd and hurtful.

Towns they have few, their Houses for the generality being poor and low, covered with Straw or Dirt, with an Hole open in the Roof to let in the light. The principal of those they have (but rather Villages than Towns) are, 1. Bigla, near the head of the River Sriote; 2. Linkaw, of which nothing memorable.

This Province hath always followed the fortunes of Litvania: Subject, when that was so, to the Kings of Russia, Converted when that was to the Christian Faith, and finally united with it to the Crown of Poland.

3. LITUVANIA.

LITUVANIA hath on the East the Empire of Russia, on the West Prussia, Maffovia and Poland, on the North Livonia and Samogitia, and on the South Volhinia and Podolia. So called from Lituus the Ceremonial staff, used anciently by the Augurs in their Divinations; to which the Inhabitants hereof being very much addicted before their receiving of the Gospel, were called Lituvani; but this is but conjectural only. Yet rather thus, than that it should be peopled by some banished Italians, first named Italia, then Litalia, and after, by a most unlikely Corruption; come to Lithania, as Matthias a Michou would fain have.

The Country for the most part is full of Moors, Forests, some great Lakes like a Sea for bigness, and many navigable Rivers; which frozen over in the Winter make the ways more travellable at that time of the year than they are in Summer. The Air in most places is exceeding cold, which makes their Wheat (whereof they have some abundance) to be seldom ripe, and other Fruits of the Earth to come slowly forward. Their Forests yield them Bugles, Ermines, Sables, Deer, wild Horses, plenty of Honey, Wax, and Pitch; but their breed of Cattle is less here, and of smaller stature, then it is in Germany. These Forests also are the Store-house out of which the English and Hollanders furnish themselves with Timber, both for Ships and Building, returning to them in exchange Salt, Wine, and other Necessaries which are wanting here.

The People anciently had Fire and Serpents for their Gods; nourishing the last in their houses, and keeping the other continually burning; the Priests and Ministers of the Temple always adding Fewel, that it might not fail. The Vestal Fire was not kept more carefully at Rome, nor with greater Ceremony. To this God, whom they called Dishpan, or the Lord of the Smoak, they used to sacrifice young Pullers, to the other, their Cocks. The seed of this Idolatry is so implanted in them, that it is said, that in a Village of the King's called Lovaniski, not four miles from Vilna, their chief City, they do to this day worship Serpents. Converted with their Prince Jagello to the Christian Faith Anno 1386, they yet retained such Customs as are inconsistent with Christianity; marrying, unmarried, when, and as often as they please; no Bond being so soon cancell'd as that of Matrimony. For a married man to use the Body of an Harlot is accounted (as indeed it is) an opprobrious Crime: but for the Wife to have her Stallions and Adulterers is a thing so ordinary and unblamable, that their Husbands call them their Coadjutors, and prize them far above the rest of their Acquaintance. The common people are in a miserable Servitude unto their Lords, pillaged and beaten by them upon any occasion; yet must not come before them with an empty hand. And if any of them have committed a Crime deserving death, he must hang himself as soon as the Sentence is signified to him; or else is beaten and tormented in so cruel a manner, that Death at last is looked on as a better Life.

The Country is divided into ten parts or Provinces, subject unto the Jurisdiction of so many Palatines; that is to say, the Palatine of 1. Vilna, 2. Trock, 3. Minsko, 4. Novogrod, 5. Brestia, 6. Volhinia, 7. Kiowia, 8. Micflaw, 9. Vitebsco, 10. Polotzkic. But Novogrod and Polotzkic being conquered by the Great Duke of Moscovie, and added unto that Estate, and Volhinia reckoned (of late times) for a distinct Province of it self, not depending of it; the remaining number is but seven, most of them taking names from their Principal Towns. The chief of those, and others which deserve place here are, 1. Vilna, a Bishops See, equal in bigness to Cracow, the chief City of Poland; so called of the River Vil, or Viln, upon which it is seated; built there in the year 1305 by one Godemin, a great Prince of these parts; well walled but the Gates thereof open night and day; large, rich, and well frequented by Foreign Merchants, especially by those that drive the Trade of Moscovie, who have here their Hall, one of the chief Ornaments of the City. They have in it also some Churches built of Stone, (but the most of Wood) the Principal whereof is the Monastery of S. Bernard, which is a very comely Structure. The Natives call this Town Vilenski, the Dutch Die Wilde. It is situate in the very heart of the Country, the longest Day in Summer being here 16 hours and half a quarter; whereas in the most Southern parts of the Country it is but 16, and in the most Northern not fully 18. This place was made an University in the year 1579. It was burnt in 1610, but built after this more Nobly than before, in 1655. it was taken by the Russ and miserably sack'd; but in the year 1660, it was recovered out of their hands by the Poles. 2. Kiowia, or Kiof, situate on the Nieper or Borysthenes, where the River Desna falls into it: heretofore a beautiful and most stately City, having in it above 300 fair Churches, of which some remain unto this day; the Ruines of the rest to be traced out amongst Shrubs and Bushes, the receptacles of wild Beasts. The Seat at that time of the Metropolitan of the Russian Empire, containing also under his Jurisdiction the Countries of Walachia in Dacia, and Nigra Russia in Poland. But being destroyed by Bathu or Boydo the Tartarian, in the Conquest of these parts by that People, it never could come near its former Lustre: yet still it holds the reputation of a Bishops See, acknowledging the Patriarch of Mosco for his Metropolitan, and consequently is of the Communion of the Greek Churches, not of that of Rome. This City was built by Kio, a Russ, about the year of Christ 861, and became the Capital of Russia, in 1615 it was taken and burnt by the Tartars; in 1651 the Poles took it, but the Cossacks Mortgaged it to the Russ, who are in that Right at this day possels'd of it, which Right was confirm'd by the Treaty in 1686. 3. Grodno, on the River Chronus, the chief Town of the Palatinate of Trock, memorable for the death of Stephen King of Poland. This City was built in 1585, by that Prince who died in it soon after. The Russ took it in 1655, but it is since return'd under the Poles and is frequently honoured with the Diets of that Kingdom. 4. Grimwald, more memorable for the Great Defeat given near it, by Jagello Duke of Litvania and King of Poland, to the numerous Army of the Dutch Knights invading this Province; so confident of their Success in the underraking, that they brought with them abundance of Chains and Torches; with the one to lead captive the Nobles of Poland, and with the other to fire their Cities. But Jagello, then newly made a Christian, putting his confidence in God, with an Army of untrained Soldiers so tamed their Pride, that he slew 40000 of them; so that they never recovered of that Blow whilst their Order stood. 5. Pinsko, in the Palatinate of Brzest. 6. Klow, reckoned a Country of it self. And, 7. Strifla, Fortified with a Castle; both under the Palatine of Mieslaw. The rest of the chief Towns may be known by the Palatinates which they give their Names to, but not else observable.

The ancient Inhabitants hereof were the Aorsi, Paqarini, Savari, Tribes of the Sarmata Europaei. United into this name of Lituanians, they became subject to the Kings of Russia, till the breaking of that Kingdom by the Tartars. At what time Erdizvill, then their Prince, (but an Homager and Tributary to the Russians) withdrew himself from their Command; as did also many other of the Conquered Provinces. Afterwards Mindoch, one of the Dukes or Princes of it, being made a Christian, was by Pope Innocent the Third honoured with the Title of a King; but returning again unto his Vomit, he lost that Title. In the end, Anno 1386, Jagello, Duke of Lituania, marrying with Heguidis, Queen of Poland, was upon three Conditions chosen King of that Realm. 1. That he should immediately receive the Christian Faith. 2. That he should draw all his Subjects to the same Belief. And 3. That he should unite this Dukedom to the Crown of Poland. Of the two these first were performed without any delay, though the second not without some difficulty, the People being obstinate in their old Idolatry, especially in the Religious conceit they had of high Trees, which to cut down was held both unsafe and impious. They could not be weaned from this conceit, till by the Authority of the King their loftiest Trees were felled, and their Woods grubbed up: which when they saw done without any danger to the Prince, or any of those whom he employed in that service, Regis mandato & auctoritate cedere coeperunt, they then began to hearken unto his Commands, and generally received the Gospel, and were baptized. In the last point there was a longer time of deliberation: For the Princes of the House of Jagello, loth to deprive themselves of their Patrimonial Estate, which was Hereditary unto their Posterity, and to subject it to the Election of the Polanders, in which it was possible the Princes of their Family might be pre-empted, deferred the accomplishment hereof from one day to another, under colour that the Lituanians would revolt if they went about it. But Sigismund-Augustus, in whose Person the Male-issue of Jagello failed, foreseeing what Divisions might ensue after his decease, and fearing that the Muscovites would renew their old Pretensions, united it unto the Crown: ordaining that the Bishops, Palatines, and a certain number of the Chastellans by him established, should have their Place and Suffrage in the great Council of Poland, power in the chusing of the King, and all other Privileges which the natural Polonians have. Since that it is accounted a chief Member of that Body politic; subject to those Corruptions, Changes and Innovations in matters of Religion, which have been predominant in the other; excepting those parts only which relate to the Church of Greece, or Mosco, adhering pertinaciously to the Rites thereof.

4. VOLHINIA.

VOLHINIA, by some accounted one of the Palatinates of Lituania (as once it was) but by others a distinct Province of it self, is bounded on the North and East with Lituania, on the South with Podolia, and on the West with Russia Nigra and Podlaffia. So called, as Maginus is of opinion, from the Volgari, who, dwelling on the Banks of the River Volga, came afterwards into this Country, calling it Volgaria, whence by degrees it came unto Volhonia, and at last unto Volhinia. But this conjecture is improbable, and of no good grounds. This Country extends from East to West 450 German Miles, and in breadth 100. It has been miserably haras'd of late years by the Rebellious Cossacks and the Russ. Holman.

The Country yields good plenty both of Grain and Fruits, Pools which abound with very good fish, Forests which do afford them store of Game and Honey, and much good Pasturage for their Cattel. The People are of the same Nature with the Lituanians, but more strong and warlike, and better weaned from their old Superstitions and heathenish Customs than the others are. They are of the same Language and Religion with those of Russia, to which, together with the rest of Lituania, it did once belong. It is divided commonly into three Parts or Provinces, all taking name from the three principal Cities of it: that is to say. 1. Luske, in Latin called Luceoria, a Town of above 1000 Families, where 127 only (in the time of my Author) were of the Romish Religion, the residue being Russians, Gracians, and some Arminians. The Seat and Residence of two Bishops, of which one, being of the Communion of the Church of Rome, is of the Province of the Archbishop of Lemburg in Russia Nigra; but they which are of the Communion of the Church of Greece have also a Bishop of their own, who acknowledgeth the Patriarch of Mosco for his Metropolitan. 2. Volodomir, a Bishop's See also, of the same condition. 3. Keromence, which (as the rest) hath under it many fair Towns and Castles, besides large Villages. The whole was once part of Lituania, as before was said; but of late dismembred from it, and united to the Crown of Poland, as a State distinct: but so, that the greatest part of it is immediately subject to the Duke of Ostrogoye who is said to have 4000 Feudataries in his Country; the greatest Prince of those who hold Communion with the Church of Greece in the whole Realm of Poland.

5. P O D O L I A.

PO D O L I A hath on the North Volhinia, part of Lituania, and the great Empire of Russia; on the South Moldavia, from which it is parted by the River Tyras, now called Neister; on the West Russia Nigra; extending Eastward through vast uninhabited Countries as far as to the Luxine Sea. The reason of the name I find no where guessed at. The People are for the most part of the same Nature and Original with the Russians, to whose Empire it formerly belonged also, till gained (if such a Subjection as they give the King may be called a gaining) to the Crown of Poland, at such time as the Russes were enthralled to the power of the Tartars.

The Country is generally so Fertile, that the Husbandman is accustomed to reap an hundred for one, in regard it bears at one Ploughing for three years together; the Country-man being put to no farther trouble, than at the end of the first and second years to shake the Corn a little, as he reaps or loads it; that which so falls serving as Seed for the next year following. The Meadow-ground is so strangely rich and luxuriant, and the Grass so high, that a Man can hardly see the Heads or Horns of his Cattel; of so swift a growth, that in three days it will cover a Rod which is thrown into it, and in few more to hide a Plough, that it is not an easie work to find it. If these things seem beyond belief, let Maginus, who reporteth them, bear the blame thereof; though better take it on his word, than go so far to disprove him. And yet, which adds much unto the Miracle, the Ground is in most places so hard and stony, that there needs six yoke of Oxen to break it up; to the great toil both of the Cattel and the Men. It is also said that in this Country there are great flocks of Sheep, many Herds of Oxen, abundance of wild Beasts, and great store of Honey. And yet for all this plenty and abundance of all things necessary, the Country for the most part, especially towards the East, is but meanly inhabited, by reason of the frequent Incurſions of the Tartars, bordering next unto it, who have ſo waited it in times paſt, and thereby ſo diſcouraged the People from Building, Planting, and all other works of Peace and Huſbandry, that in ſo large and rich a Country there is nothing to be ſeen but ſome ſcattered Houſes, few Villages, and not above five Towns of Note, viz. 1. Orzabow, at the Influx of the Boryſthenes or Nieper into the Euxine Sea. 2. Vaſzow, at the fall of the River Bog into that of Nieper. 3. Braclaw, more high upon the Bog. 4. Camieneciez, on the Borders of Ruſſia Nigra, built by ſome divine Hand, as it were, amongſt the Precipices of high and inacceſſible Rocks, and ſo well fortified withal, that it is impregnable; as is apparent by the many and great Repulſes which the Turks, Tartarians, and Valachians have received before it, with much ſhame and loſs. This City is a Biſhop's See under the Archbiſhop of Lemburg, and ſtands upon the River Smotrezyc, which a little lower falls into the Nieſter, 15 Polish Miles from Bar to the Weſt, and 70 from Kiowia, and 30 from Lemburg to the South-Eaſt, and 80 from Warſhaw, and 170 from Conſtantinople. In the year 1669 it ſuffered very much by Fire, and in the year 1672 was beſieged and taken by the Turks, the Poles being then engaged in a Civil War, and the Town not in a condition to defend it ſelf. It has been Blockaded three years by the Poles, but the Turks have frequently relieved it, and ſeem to take more care of it than of any of their Frontier Places. In the year 1687 it was Bombed by Prince James, eldeſt Son to the Late King of Poland, and might be reduced if the Poles were not very much divided and very careleſs. 5. Lemburg, remarkable for the Sawces or Salt-meats which they ſend thence into other Countries. It is a great and populous City, and was made an Archbiſhop's See inſtead of Halitz, in the year 1361. It is alſo ſtrongly Walled, and has two Caſtles, one within the Town, and the other without: It was built by Leo Duke of Ruſſia about the year 1280. In 1648 it was beſieged in vain by the Coffacks: In 1672 it was taken by the Turks, and recovered the next year by the Poles. The former Fortunes of this Province, and how it was brought under the Crown of Poland (with which it was incorporated long ſince) we ſhall ſee anon.

6. RUSSIA NIGRA.

RUSSIA NIGRA hath on the Eaſt Volhinia, Podolia, and Moldavia; on the Weſt Maſſovia; and Poland ſpecially ſo called; on the North Lithuania and Podlaſſia; and on the South the Sarmatian or Carpathian Mountains. It is called alſo Roxolania, from the Roxolani, a chief People of Sarmatia Europea, and by ſome Ruthenia: but generally Ruſſia, from the Roffi ſpoken of before in the Empire of Ruſſia, who ſpread themſelves over all theſe parts. Some hold that it was firſt called Roffeia, which ſignifieth in the Slavonian Language a ſcattered Nation, or a Nation diſſeminated and diſperſed into many parts; and that this was the name generally of all that ſpeak the Slavonian Tongue, and followed the Religion and the Rites of the Church of Greece, extended from the Frozen Sea to the Adriatick, and from the Euxine to the Baltick. This and a greater Tract of Ground I grant to have been heretofore poſſeſſed by divers Nations under the name of Slavonians; a very conſiderable part of Germany and Poland being conquered by them. But for the name of Ruſſia, given at firſt to all the Ruſſian Empire, diſtinguiſhed now into Ruſſia Alba and Ruſſia Nigra, I adhere unto my former Vote, conceiving that it came from the Roffi, an Armenian People, inhabiting about Mount Taurus, who in the year 864, or thereabouts, attempting the taking of Conſtantinople, and after placed themſelves on the Northern Banks of the Euxine, getting ground of the Slavonians to the North and Eaſt, till they had made themſelves Maſters of all Ruſſia Alba, Lithuania, Volhinia, Podolia, and this Ruſſia Nigra. Diſtinguiſhed from the former by the adjunct of Nigra, after the deſtruction of that great Empire by the coming in of the Tartars, either from the colour of their Garments, or their black and more Southerly Complexion. In which regard it is called alſo Ruſſia Meredionalis, or the Southern Ruſſia.

The Country is generally Fruitful, abounding in Horſes, Oxen, Sheep, Sables, and Foxes: ſuch ſtore of Bees, that they breed not only in Hives and hollow Trees, but in Rocks and Caves. Well watered both with Pools and Rivers, affording them great plenty of Fiſh, more naturally ſpawning here than in other places, inſomuch that if a Pond be digged, and ſpring accordingly, the Fiſh will breed therein of their own accord, without being brought from other Waters. The greateſt want hereof is Wine, either ſupplied with Mede, or from other places. And it is ſaid that in the Territory of Chelm the Branches of the Pine-Trees, left upon the Ground for three years together, will be converted into Stone.

The People are generally valiant, and ſo ſtrong of Body that they uſe Bows of twelve Foot long. Being formerly governed by Dukes, they do but ill brook the name of King; which much induced the King of Poland to ſend Colonies of natural Polonians into moſt parts of the Country, inſomuch as moſt of the Knights and Gentry of it are of that Extraction, and follow the Religion of the Church of Rome; the Peaſants and the Original Inhabitants of it being more generally affected to the Rites and Doctrines of the Church of Greece.

Places of moſt importance in it are, 1. Chelm, in the Territory whereof it is affirmed that the Branches of Pine-Trees, left upon the Ground for three years together, are converted to Stone. 2. Premiſlen. 3. Halitz. 4. Belzo. 5. Grodeck. And 6. Leopolis, by the Natives called Lemburg, built by one Leo a Muſcovite; a Town of great Traffick, and an Archbiſhop's See, who is of the Religion of the Church of Rome. But the Patriarch of Moſco hath here alſo an Archbiſhop of his own ordaining, there being Churches both in the City it ſelf, and all Ruſſia generally, (as before was ſaid) which are of the Communion of the Church of Greece. There are alſo in this City ſome Armenian Merchants, who have a Church, a Biſhop, and ſome Priests of their own Religion. The Account I have given of Lemburg in Podolia belong to this place, our Author having twice mentioned the ſame place.

Of the Affairs of this Province, and how it was a part once of the Ruſſian Empire, hath been ſaid already. Diſmembred from it by the Tartars, it had a while Dukes or Provincial Governors, ſubject and tributary unto thoſe Barbarians: as had alſo Podolia, its next Neighbour. Both conquered by the Polander, were for a time kept under by ſtrong hand and the power of Garriſons. But being upon all occaſions apt to revolt, by reaſon of the hard hand which the Kings held over them, (by whom they were treated rather like Slaves than Subjects) they were aſſured unto the State, by giving the ſame Liberties and Immunities, both for the Nobility and the Commons which the natural Polonians had; and by that means made Fellow-Members of that Commonwealth. The Act of Ladiſlaw the ſixth, the Son of Jagello, imitating therein the ancient Romans, who much augmented their Forces, and aſſured their Eſtates, by communicating the Freedom of Rome and the Privileges of Latium to many of the conquered Provinces: and was imitated by Sigismund the firſt, Sigismund-Auguſtus and Stephen, his Succeſſors in their incorporating of Pruſſia, Lithuania, and Livonia, to the Crown of Poland.

MASSOVIA is bounded on the East with Lithuania, on the West with Poland specially so called, on the North with Prussia and Podlussia, on the South with Russia Nigra or Meridionalis. So called from Masse, one of the Dukes hereof, who in the year 1045, being vanquished by Casimir Duke of Poland, fled into Prussia and there unfortunately died. This Province was effectually united to Poland, under Sigismund the first, in the year 1526.

The Country is large, and for the most part full of Woods, where they find store of Bugles and wild Bulls. The people are strong, valiant and courageous in War; differing little from the Polonians in Speech, Manners, or Apparel, save that they use a kind of Whistling, which the others do not. The principal Towns of it are, 1. Warsaw, the chief of the Province, and heretofore the Residence of the Duke or Prince; remarkable for the best Mede or Metheglin. This City has been esteemed the Capital of Poland, ever since Sigismund 3. built in it a place for his Successors, by which means it is become one of the most Populous, Rich, and Potent Cities of that Kingdom. Yet in the year 1655, it was taken by the Svedes, but the next year it was recovered by the Poles, and the Swedish Garrison driven out. John Demetrius Suiscius Great Duke of Russia, who was taken Prisoner by the Poles, and died in Captivity, lies Buried in a small Chappel here. See below in Poland, properly so call'd. 2. Czirska, 3. Poltomskie. 4. Gadzick, 5. Lozara, 6. Droic the Seat of a Palatine, but not else observable.

This Province was once subject to Princes of its own, not subject or subordinate unto any Superior. Of which number that Masse was one, from whom it was named Massovia. In the year 1246 and 1260, being strangely wasted and distressed by Mindoy Duke of Lithuania, they were fain to put themselves under the power of the Polanders; by whom they were made the Portion of the second Son of that Kingdom. But John and Stanislaus, the two last Dukes hereof, dying without Issue, it returned unto the Kings of Poland, and became incorporate to that Crown, and privileged in the Election of the King, and all matters which concern the publick, as all others of the Polonians are, Anno 1526. as is above observed.

8. PODLASSIA.

PODLASSIA is bounded on the East with Volhynia, on the West with Russia, on the North with Lithuania, and on the South with Massovia and Russia Nigra. The reason of the name I know not. The Country differs not much from those before: the people being a mixt generation of Russes, Muscovites and Polonians, partake a little of the Manners and Garb of those several Nations from which they lineally are descended.

Places of most importance in it are, 1. Bielsko, 2. Bramsko, 3. Suras, all of them having fair and ample Territories. 4. Tycockzyn, strongly fortified, and well garrisoned, as being the place where the King's Treasures are kept. 5. Knyssin, beautified with a Royal Palace, and a pleasant Park, wherein are store of wild Beasts for Hunting, and Fish-ponds very well replenished. 6. Narew, 7. Vasilkom, and 8. Augustow, a very strong Town, built and well fortified by Sigismund-Augustus, and by him thus named, Anno 1569, at what time he dismembred this Province from Lithuania, to which before it appertained, uniting it for ever to the Crown of Poland.

9. PRUSSIA.

PRUSSIA is bounded on the East with Lithuania and Teutonia, on the West with Poland cut off from it by the Vistula, on the North with the Baltick Sea, and on the South with Poland and Massovia. Called first Borussia, from the Boriss, who subdued it, (of whom more anon) which by an easie alteration was changed into Prussia, by which name it is still called.

The Country is extended all along the Baltick Sea, from the City of Dantzick in the West, to Labiau on the Mouth of the Maillank, East, for the space of 50 Polish miles; and from Torne, bordering on Massovia, to Memel in the Confines of Lithuania, 58 miles of the same measure. The Air thereof is very mild and temperate, the Soil both profitable and pleasant; full of Lakes and Rivers stored with Fish, plentiful of Corn and other Necessaries, and well clad with Forests, which yield them Game for Hunting, rich Skins for profit, and abundance of Honey; of which last they make Mede for their own use, (their ordinary Drink where there is no Wine) and sell the rest unto the Merchant. But the Commodity wherein they do excel their neighbours is their plenty of Amber, which is the juice of a Stone which groweth like a Coral in a Mountain of these Baltick Seas, covered quite with water, and shunned by Marriners three Leagues off, for fear of Shipwreck; the Mountain is reasonable large, about 50 yards high of English measure. And when any Tempest mreeh in these Northern Seas, especially in September and December, the Liquor by violence thereof is rent from the Rock, and cast into divers Havens, and on divers Coasts of this Country, and sometimes upon those of Sweden and Pomerania: the people leaping into the Sea when it rageth most, whence they take up first some store of Weeds, after that this Liquor, which being taken out of the water hardeneth like to Coral. Besides the beauty hereof, and the quality it hath of attracting Straws and Iron, as the Adamant doth, burning like Pitch, and others of this nature; it is excellent good for stopping Bloud, all kind of Agues, Falling-sicknels; Drop-sies, Stone, Cholick, weaknels of Stomack, Head-ach, and the Yellow-jaundies.

The people, especially the Gentry, descend from the Germans, and retain much of their nature; having more Art and Industry then the other Polonians, and being more tenacious of their ancient Customs. They were Idolaters for long time together, converted first unto the Faith in the time of the Emperor Frederick the second, by whose setting on they were subdued by the Order of the Dutch Knights, Anno 1215, and either won or forced to the Christian Faith. As Christians, governed since the Plantation of the Gospel by the Bishops of Culm, Warmia, Sambia, and Pomesan, Sussagans to the Archbishop of Gnesna; under whom those parts do still continue which have not yet forsaken the Church of Rome: the Lutherans, Calvinians, and other separate Congregations distinct from them, having their own Forms both of Doctrine and Discipline.

Few Provinces of the North are better watered than this is, both for Lakes and Rivers: some of the Lakes being seven Dutch miles in compass, and well stored with Fish. The Rivers are 12 in number; that is to say, 1. the Vistula. 2. Chonous. 3. Nogat. 4. Elbing. 5. Vasora. 6. Passaria. 7. Alla. 8. Tregel. 9. Offa. 10. Drebnicz. 11. Lica, and 12. Lavia, all plentifully stored with Fish; besides a large Sea-Coast both for Trade and Fishing no small Commodity to the Natives.

The Country formerly divided into twelve Dukedoms, (so they called the parts and fractions of it) was by the industry of the Dutch Knights so adorned and beautified, (after they had once brought it under their Obedience) that there were no fewer than 72 Cattles and 62 good Towns of their foundation. Which number being much increased in these later times, hath made it the most flourishing part of the whole Kingdom of Poland. But the Order of these Knights being suppressed in this Country by an Agreement betwixt Sigismund the first, King of Poland, and Albert of Brandenburgh, the last great Master of the Order; both Town and Country are divided between the Successors of the said Albert, as Dukes of Prussia, and of the said Sigismund, as Kings of Pole: the Dukedoms or Divisions of Hogeland, Warmia, Galindia, Michelow, Culmigeria, with the City of Marienburgh, the Sovereignty of Dantzick and Melving, with the whole Country of Pomerellia, lying on the West side of the Vistula, being allotted to the King; the residue, containing the Divisions of Schallavenia, Sambia, Natangia, Nadravia, Bartonia, Sudavia, and Pomelania, (except the City and Territory of Marienburgh) to the Dukes of Prussia.

Chief Towns belonging to the Duke are, 1. Memel, a well-frequented Port, the Mart-Town for the Commodities of Lituania, which are brought hither, and here bought by the foreign Merchant: part of this Province interposing betwixt Lituania and the Baltick. 2. Koningsberg, as the Dutch, Regimont as the French, and Mons Regius, as the Latines call it; situate in the Province of Sambia, at the bottom of a Gulf or Bay, where the Pregel falleth into the Baltick Sea: built by the Dutch Knights in the year 1260, and made an University by Albert the first Duke hereof 1225, the Seat and principal Residence of his Successors; as also of the Bishop of Sambia; in Latine called Sambiensis, by the name of the Province. 3. Mulmeburg, founded by the Dutch Knights, Anno 1279. 4. Branderburg, on the South-side of that Bay, but more near the Sea; built, as I guess, by some of the Great Masters of that Family. 5. Ragnitz, the farthest Town of note towards Lituania. 6. Angersburg, in Schallavenia; as was also Ragnitz. 7. Nordenburg, in Bartonia. 8. Ortelsburg, in Galindia: of which little memorable. 9. Marienwerder, the farthest of the Duke's Estate towards the Vistula, and the ordinary Residence of the Bishop of Pomesan. Besides which there are reckoned in this Division 80 good Towns more, and about 54 Castles, though not of much observation in the course of Story.

Chief Towns pertaining to the King are, 1. Braunshero, upon a Bay of the Baltick Sea which they call Frijel-Hasse; a Town of good Trade by reason of the commodious Haven, and the ordinary Residence of the Bishop of Warmia. 2. Frauenberg, on the same Bay, not far from Braunshero. 3. Kesel, the chief Town of the Diocess and Dukedom of Warmia. 4. Strasburg, in Michelow, confining on Poland, specially so called, at the Siege whereof by Gustavus Adolphus King of Sweden, Anno 1628, Elias Trype, one of the Engineers of that King, found out the use of Leathern Ordnance, which afterwards did that King great service in the Wars of Germany. 5. Culm, on the River Vistula, a Bishop's See. 6. Marienburgh, on the Nogat, built by the Dutch Knights, Anno 1302, and made the Seat of the great Masters of their order, translated first from Prolemais or Acon in Syria to the City of Venice, from thence to Marpurg, and at last to this place by Sifride the twelfth Great Master of it, whose constant Residence in this Town occasioned the Bishop of Culm to remove thither also. A very fair and well-built City, the chief of those which do belong to the King of Poland: by him so well garrisoned, and furnished with such store of Victuals, Ammunition and other Necessaries, that it was thought able to hold out for a Six years Siege. But it proved otherwise when besieged by the King of Sweden, who took it in less space then so many months in 1625; being on the settling of a Peace betwixt the Crowns rendered again unto the King of Poland in 1655. Beneath this Town, down towards the Baltick, is a pleasant Island made by the Nogat and the Weyffel, for the fertility of the Soil, and the great number of Houses, Villages, and People not equalled (for the quantity of it) in all this Country.

To this part also belongeth the fair port of Elbing, (or Melving, as Maginus calls it) situate on the Bay of the Baltick called Frijel-Hasse; spoken of before, not far from a Fishful Lake; well traded, rich, and full of very wealthy Merchants; of great resort from other Nations, and much frequented by the English Merchants who have here their Staple for the Baltick: a small, but neat and well-built City, and fortified with a very good Wall, governed after the manner of a free Estate or Commonwealth, under the Patronage and Protection of the Kings of Poland, in like sort as Dantzick also is, of which more anon. The Town of Elbing was built in the year 1239, by the Order, in 1454 it withdrew from them, and put it self under the Protection of the King of Poland, in 1492 an University was opened here, in 1629 it was taken by the Swedes, in 1655 it was restored to the Poles by Treaty, the greatest part of its Wealth was occasioned by the Siege of Dantzick, about the year 1626, when the English removed the Staple hither from Dantzick.

The ancient Inhabitants hereof were the Venedi, the most potent Nation of this Tract, extended all along the Coasts of the Baltick from them by Protony called Sinus Venedicus: containing under them the Githones, Phini, Sulanes, Phrungudiones, Avarini; and more within the Land the Sodini and Galinde, whose name the Dukedom or Province of Galindia doth still retain. But great and potent though they were, they were subdued by the Borussi, inhabiting at the foot of the Riphean Mountains, who, weary of their own cold and barren Dwellings, removed into the Western parts, and vanquished the Venedi, and those other Nations, possessed themselves of this Country, which they called Borussia, now by us named Prussia. By Venedus, one of their Princes, having twelve Sons in all, it was divided into twelve Provinces or Dukedoms, one for every Son; continuing by that means distracted into divers petty Principalities, till the coming of the Marian or Dutch Knights, sent hither by Frederick the second, Anno 1215, by whom the Provinces or Dukedoms of Sudavia, Michelow, and the greatest part of Nadravia, were laid waste and desolate: the rest submitted to their power, and received the Gospel. After this it continued subject to this Order of Knights till the year 1419, when, weary of their Extortion and the continual change of Masters, they revolted to the King of Poland, to whom they offered their Obedience: seconded by the yielding up of Marienburgh, with many other Towns and Castles, sold to King Casimir by the Garrison-Soldiers, Anno 1457, for 476000 Florens. But the Knights disdain to be so dealt withal, and refusing to swear Allegiance to the Kings of Poland, they brake out into open War, which was managed with variable Success on both sides; Ludovicus, the then Great Master, being so successful at the first, that he once Beat the King out of the Field, routed his whole Army, slew 30000 of his men upon the place, and took 136 of his chief Nobility: nor was he vanquished at last, but by the Treachery and Rebellion of his own people. In the end, wearied and worn out on both sides by continual Wars, Albert of Brandenburgh, then Great Master, having for 14 years together courageously maintained the Honour of his Order, and for the four last years importuned in vain the Assistance of the Emperor and Princes of Germany, began to think of some Expedient to compound the business. Being inclined to Luther's Doctrines, and willing to advance himself unto this Estate, he secretly practised with Sigismund the first of Poland to end the War to the advantage of both parties. By whom at last it was agreed, That Albert should relinquish his Order, and surrender all Prussia into the hands of the King: That the King, possessing the Western parts, with the Town of Marienburgh, and the Sovereignty of Dansk and Melving, should invest Albert with the Title

Title of Duke of Prussia, estating on him and the Heirs of his body the whole Eastern Moiety, containing the Provinces or Dukedoms before specified: and finally, that Albert and his Heirs should hold the said Estate, as Homagers to the Crown of Poland, taking place in all Assemblies at the King's right hand. According to this Agreement, Anno 1525, Albert, attired in the compleat habit of Master of the Dutch Order, presents himself humbly on his knees before Sigismund at Cracow, the King then sitting on his Throne. The King, raising him from the ground, caused him to put off those Robes and attire himself in a Ducal Habit: which done, an instrument was read and published, whereby the King conferred upon him and the Heirs of his Body the Dukedom of Prussia, to be held of him and his Successors Kings of Poland. An act at which the whole Order were extremely incensed; but they could not help it, and thereupon retired into Germany, where there were some good Lands left, to maintain such of them as had no mind to quit that Military honour; leaving their old Estates in Prussia to the King and the Duke, whose Successors have hitherto enjoyed their part of it, with the Title of Dukes of P R U S S I A.

- 1525 1. Albert of Brandenburg, Son of Frederick Marquis of Onoldsbech, or Onsbach, created Master of the Order by the Emperor Maximilian, Anno 1511, and the first Duke of Prussia by Sigismund, the first of Poland, Anno 1525, founded the University of Koningsburg, Anno 1544.
- 1568 2. Albert-Frederick Son of Albert the first Duke, married Mary Elianor, Daughter of William Duke of Cleve, Gulick, Berg, &c.
3. Anne, Eldest Daughter of Duke Albert-Frederick, Dutchess of Prussia, brought the Estate in Marriage to
4. John-Sigismund, Marquess and Elector of Brandenburg, who was confirmed therein by Sigismund the 3. of Poland, pretending an Elcheat thereof for want of Heirs-males of the body of Albert the first Duke.
5. George-William, Marquis and Elector of Brandenburg, in right of his Father, Duke of Prussia in right of the Lady Anne his Mother, and of Cleve, Gulick, Berg, &c. by Descent from Mary Eleanor his Grandmother.
- 1639 6. Frederick-William, Son of George-William Marquiss and Elector of Brandenburg, Duke of Prussia, Cleve, Gulick and Berg; of whose Investure in the Dukedom of Pomeran and other large and goodly Seigniouries we have spoken elsewhere.
- 1688 7. Frederick-William, the second Son of the former.

As for the Government of this Province standing thus divided, that of the Duke is more Monarchical than that of the King; the one being absolute and uncontrollable in his Estates, the other subject to the great Council of Poland. If any difference grow between them, Delegates appointed by the King, but taking a new Oath to do equal Justice either at Atarienburg or Elbing, do compound the business: who, together with some other of the Dukes nomination, receive all Appeals in which the Duke is interessed as one of the parties.

The Revenues of this Dukedom are thought to be 120000 Ducats yearly.

The Armes thereof are Argent, an Eagle Vert, membered and crowned Or, langued Gules.

10. P O M E R E L L I A.

POMERELLIA is bounded on the East with the River Vistula, by it parted from Lespo; on the South with Poland specially so called, on the North with the Baltick Sea, and on the West with the Dukedom of Pomerania, of which it was anciently a part, till separated from it, and united to the Crown of Poland under this new name. By the Poles called Klein Pomeran.

The Territory is small, and consequently not capable of many Towns and Cities of consideration. Those of most note are, 1. Neuenburg, on the Banks of the Vistula, or Wesfel, 2. Dirschaw, or Darjow, (in Latine Darsovia) a well fortified Town and of great importance, at the Siege whereof, Anno 1627, Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, received the Order of the Garter. 3. Dantzick in Latine called Dantiscum, and sometimes Gedanum, situate at the mouth of the same River also, a fair and well-built City, the Houses for the most part of Brick, and the rest of Stone, raised with great beauty and magnificence six or seven floors high; beautified with a fair Council-house for affairs of State, and many publick Gardens for disport and exercise. It consisteth of three Cities, governed by as many Senates; the one called Voorstat, or the fore City; the second Altstat, or the old City, and the third Neuchstat, or the Emperors City: but all encompassed with one Wall, and governed by one chief Senate or Common-Council chosen out of all three. A Bishop's See, and the second in esteem and rank of all the Hanse-Towns; of so great Trade, such a noted Granary of all sorts of Corn, issued from hence to supply the wants of other Countries, that 1000 Measures of Wheat (besides other commodities in proportion) are here daily sold. Heretofore it was reckoned as Imperial, but now as a Free-State, acknowledging the King of Poland for their Protectors, to whom they allow many Customs upon their Merchandize, and permit their Officers to remain there for receiving them. The first Town in the Kingdom of Poland which gave entrance to the Doctrines of Luther, Anno 1525, but in so tumultuous a manner, that they that favoured his Opinions deposed the old Common-Council-men, and created new ones of their own; they profaned the Churches, robbed them of their Ornaments, and shamefully abused the Priests and Religious persons, abolished the Mass, and altered all things at their pleasure. But by the coming of the King they grew somewhat quieter, leaving one Convent of Black Friars and two of Nuns, who still enjoy the exercise of their Religion. In the year 1454, it first submitted to the King of Poland, with whom it has had several Contests, particularly in the years 1569, and 1577, 1597. In 1657, it was forced to burn its own Suburbs to prevent their being taken by the Swedes, Olearius observes that the River is so shallow below this City, that great Ships cannot come up to it; when Casimir King of Poland was deserted by all the World, this City stood by him, and was Loyal to him beyond all expectation, as Bunon observes, who also saith, Cluverius the Great Geographer, was a Native of this place.

This Country once a part of the Dukedom of Pomeran, was given by Suantibore, once Duke thereof, Anno 1107, to Bugislaus his second Son; whose Posterity enjoyed it till the year 1295, when Aleslevin 2. dying without Issue-male, gave it to Primislaus Duke of the Polonians, whose Successors have ever since enjoyed it by that Donation. It is called Pomerellia, for distinction sake, from the first separating of it from the Dukedom of Pomeran.

II. P O L A N D.

PO L A N D, properly and specially so called, is bounded on the East with Maffovia and Podlaffia, on the West with Silefia and the Marquifate of Brandenburg, on the North with Pruffia and Pomerellia, and on the South with the Sarmatian or Carpathian Mountains, which divide it from Hungary. It is in length 480 Italian Miles, 300 of the fame Miles in breadth; and took this name (as afore is faid) from the word Pole, fignifying as much as plain, the Country being plain and level, little fwelled with Hills.

The Air hereof is pure and healthy, but fharp and cold; the Country plain, fhaded with thick dark Woods, parts of the Hercynian, full of wild Beasts for Hunting, and of Bees for Honey, which they have here in great abundance, together with fuch plenty of Grain, but of Rye efpecially, by reason of the continual breaking up of new Grounds gained out of the Forests, that it may be called the Granary or Store-house of the Western parts of Europe: the Grain is fent down the Weyffel unto Dantzick, and thence transported by the Merchant into other Countries, according to their feveral wants.

The Character of the People we have had before; adding now only, that in matters of War they are ftout and refolute; fo forward in giving the Charge and Purfuit of the Enemy, that John Vafilivick, the Great Duke of Mufcovy, comparing them with the Soldiers of his own Dominions, was wont to fay, that the Mufcovites wanted a Spur to drive them forwards, and the Polander had need of a Bridle to hold them back. Their Language is the Slavonian Tongue; moft generally fpoken alfo in the reft of the Provinces, but with fome difference in the Dialect or Pronunciation.

It is divided commonly into two parts, the Greater and the Lesser Poland. The GREATER, lying wholly on the Wellern fide of the Weyffel, and fo accounted anciently as a part of Germany, contains nine Divifions, under the Jurifdiction of nine Palatines of, 1. Pofna, 2. Kalifch, 3. Siradia, 4. Lancicia, 5. Vladiflaw, 6. Brzefty, 7. Rava, 8. Ploczko, and, 9. Dobrzin; each of them fo called from fome Town of note. The chief whereof, and of the reft contained in them, are, 1. Pofna, a Bifhop's See, and the principal of the Greater Poland, feated among the Hills on the River Warta; built of Free-Stone, with very large Suburbs beyond the River, but much fubjeft unto Inundations, which add much ftrengh unto the place; of great refort by reason of the Marts or Fairs holden twice a year. 2. Kofcienc, fuate amongft Marfhes, and fortified with a double Wall. 3. Ofticzom, bordering on Silefia, begirt with Woods. 4. Gnefna, the ancienteft Town of Poland, Founded by Lechus their firft Prince, the Seat of him and his Succelfors, till removed to Cracow; fuate in Kalifch, and by old prefcription the firft place for Inauguration of the Kings of Pole, in regard that here Prince Boleflaus, the firft King of this Country, received the Regal Diadem at the hands of Orho the third. The Town is well walled, and the fee of an Archbishop, who is the Primate of the Kingdom, by ancient Privilege the Pope's Legate for all Sarmatia Europea, and in the abfence of the King or Interregnum the Vicar-general of the Kingdom, having power to Summon the Dyets, to conclude and publifh their Deerees. 5. Pietrakow, a walled Town in the Palatinate or Divifion of Siradia, fuate on a moorifh Soil; the place in former times of the General Dyets, fince removed to Warfaw. 6. Vladiflaw, on the Weyffel or Viftula, a Bifhop's See. 7. Bedgoff, a walled a Town on the Bard, a Navigable River, conveying the Merchandife of thefe parts into the Viftula. 8. Krufwick, in Brzefty, built of Wood, ftanding on a great Lake named Gopia, in the Caftle whereof Papielus the fecond, Duke of Poland, was after a ftrange manner devoured with Rats fwarming out of the Lake.

9. Ploczko, upon the Viftula, a walled Town, and a Bifhop's See, with a Caftle to it. 10. Warfaw, upon the Banks of the fame River; of no great note in former times, but of late grown the beft frequented and moft traded Town in all the Province: honoured for the moft part with the Court of the King, the holding of all publick Dyets (removed from Pietrakow to the place) and the Tranfaftion of all bufinelfes both of Peace and War, which muft needs draw to it great refort of all forts of People; the fruitfulness of the Soil and commodiousnefs of the Situation rendring it very capable of thofe publick Meetings. This City is placed above in Maffovia, to which it belongs properly. 11. Mlawia, bordering on the Dukedom of Pruffia.

The LESSE R Poland, lying on the South of the Greater; and divided by the River Weyffel, comprehendeth only three Divifions, under the Government of the Palatines of 1. Cracow, 2. Sandomir, and 3. Lublin. Principal Cities of the which are, 1. Cracow, upon the Weyffel, (called in Latin Cracovia) a Bifhop's See, the chief of all the Kingdom, the Seat of the Prince, and the Sepulchre of the former Kings; by Protony called Carodunum; fortified with a double Wall (of the old Faftion) a deep Ditch, the Caftle of Vanel, fuate on the top of an high Rock, and beautified with an Univerfity, or general Study of good Arts and Sciences, opened here in 1364. The Buildings are more fair than elfewhere in Poland, of Free-ftone, and four Stories high; but for the moft part covered with Shingles, or Tiles of Wood: in the midft is a large Market-place, in form Quadrangular; and in the middle of that the Common-Council-houfe, about which are many Shops of Merchants. On one fide of it ftandeth the Cathedral Church: and on the Eaft-fide of the City the Palace Royal, high feated on an Hill over-looking both the Town and Country, fair and well built, of Form fomewhat near a Quadrangle, but lying open to the South without any Buildings above the Wall, affording thereby to the Gallery, being on the North-fide of the Caftle, the more excellent Proftect. The Jefuits in 1635 procured the Proteftant Church here to be burnt down, for which the next year after they were banifhed in the year 1655. This City was taken by the Svedes, and recovered by the Poles in 1657. This Univerfity is infamoufly Famous for the great number of Socinians it has produced. 2. Lelom, a walled Town with a Caftle on the River Biale. 3. Sandomir, a walled Town with a Caftle alfo, feated on a Hill under which runs the Viftula or Weyffel. 4. Wiflicza, a walled Town amongft Marfhes, encompassed with the River Nid. 5. Lublin, a walled Town, but more ftongly Fortified by the Marfhes and Water with which it is environed; remarkable for three yearly Marts, drawing hither Merchants from moft parts adjoining, as alfo Mofcovites, Armenians, Turks, and Grecians. The Jews inhabiting the greateft part of the Suburbs, have here their Synagogue; making the Town, efpecially at the time of thofe Marts, a medly of all Nations and Religions. This City is not great, but very fpruce and well built, and is not only the Capital of a Palatinate, but alfo a Bifhop's See. A Synod being held here in the year 1612, the Socinians defired to be admitted to the Communion of the Calvinifts, and were rejected, the Jefuits in the year 1630 burnt their Church which they had in this Town. 6. Cufimiria, on the Weyffel, fo named from the Founder of it, a King of Poland.

The old Inhabitants of this Country were the Arii, Helverona, Elyfii, and the Naharvali, parts of the Suevi Lygii fpoken of by Tacitus, all of them lying on the Dutch fide of the Weyffel, by conftquence within the Bounds of the ancient Germany: the People of all the reft of the Provinces before defcribed being of the Sarmatian Race, next Neighbours to the Germans, and not much unlike them in Perfons, Cuftoms, or Conditions. But thefe difperfed and fcattered Nations of Sarmatia Europea, being united in the common Name of Slaves, part of them settled in that part which we now call Poland, at that time reckoned and accounted of as a part of Germany. The time of their first coming hither, and the manner of their Government when first settled here, is not very well known. But for the first it is most certain, that it was sometime, and that not long, after the Death of Mauritius the Eastern Emperor; and for the next it is as certain, that on the coming of Lechus, a Croatian, who fled his Country for a Murder, with his Brother Zechius, they settled into a more constant Form of Government than before they did. For Lechus, seeing his Brother's good success in Bohemia, where the Slaves received him for their Prince; passed into Poland, the next Province, and was as cheerfully received by the Slaves thereof, who look'd upon him as a Prince of their own Extraction, and without quarrel or competition submitted themselves to his Commands, Anno 650, or thereabouts. Of this there is good constat amongst our Authors. But neither the names or number of his Successors do occur in Story till the time of Crocus, the Founder of Cracovia, the chief City of Poland, and the Legislator of this People. After this, the Succession of their Princes and the Success of their Affairs becomes more certain: the Estate hereof being much improved by the conquest of many Sarmatian Countries, all which together constitute and make up the Kingdom of Poland, so called from this predominating and prevailing Province. The sum of their Affairs is this. The Posterity of Crocus failing in Popielus the Second, Piaſtus is elected Duke; the Princes from that time forwards becoming Elective, but always with respect to the next of Blood. In the time of Mieciſlaus, Son of Nemomyſlaus, they received the Gospel, Anno 963. Boleslaus, the Son of Mieciſlaus, was the first who had the Title of a King, conferred upon him by the Emperor Otho the third, about the year 1001, relinquished by Vladislaus the first, and not resumed again till the time of Primiſlaus Duke of Posna, Anno 1300, after which it became perpetual. In the Person of this Primiſlaus Pomerellia is united to the State of Poland, Anno 1295; in that of Jagello, or Vladislaus the fifth, the great Dukedom of Lithuania, incorporated into this Body as a Member of it in the time of Sigismund Augustus. By Vladislaus the sixth, Son of Jagello, Podolia, Russia Nigra were also added by Sigismund the first, Prussia and Masſovia; Podlaffia by Sigismund Augustus, who also took Volhinia out of Lithuania; by Stephen, the actual possession of the greatest part of Livonia; by Sigismund the third, a Title to the Crown of Sweden. The Princes follow in this order.

Dukes and Kings of P O L A N D.

 1243 27. Boleslaus V. surnamed Pudicins.
 1280 28. Lescus VI. surnamed Niger, the adopted Son of Boleslaus, and his Cousin-german once removed; after whose death, Anno 1289, the Estate, being distracted into many Factions, was for some time without a Prince, settled at last on 1295 29. Primiſlaus, surnamed Posthumus, Duke of Posna, who again assumed the name of King, continued ever since by his Successors.
 1296 30. Vladislaus IV. surnamed Lothicus, Brother of Lescus Niger, outed by Wenceslaus King of Bohemia, Anno 1300; after whose Death, Anno 1306, he resumed the Estate.
 1333 31. Casimir III. surnamed the Great, Son of Vladislaus the 4th, the first Establisher of the Kingdom after all those Troubles, died without Issue.
 1371 32. Lewis, King of Hungary, Nephew or Grandson to Charles King of Hungary, by Elizabeth the Sister of Casimir.
 1383 33. Hedwiga, the youngest Daughter of Lewis, her eldest Sister Mary succeeding in the Realm of Hungary, chosen Queen of Poland; married to Jagello, Duke of Lithuania, Christianized, and called Vladislaus the 5th.
 1386 34. Vladislaus V. Duke of Lithuania, elected King upon his Marriage with Queen Hedwiga.
 1435 35. Vladislaus VI. Son of Jagello, or Vladislaus the fifth, by Sophia, Daughter of the Duke of Kiovia, King of Hungary also; slain at the Battel of Varna by Amirath the second, King of the Turks, and without Issue.
 1447 36. Casimir IV. Brother of Vladislaus, first brought the Knights of Prussia under his Command; Knight of the Order of the Garter.
 1493 37. John-Albert, the second Son of Casimir; his elder Brother Vladislaus being pretermitted, on his accepting of the Crowns of Hungary and Bohemia.
 1502 38. Alexander, the third Son of Casimir.
 1507 39. Sigismund, the fourth Son of Casimir, his elder Brethren dying without Issue: he suppressed the Order of the Dutch Knights in Prussia, and added part thereof unto his Estate.

- 1548 40. Sigismund II. surnamed Augustus, the last of the Male-Issue of Jagello.
- 1574 41. Henry, Duke of Anjou, Son of Henry the second, the French King; chosen on the death of Sigismund-Augustus, the only Stranger to the Blood in all this Catalogue. On the death of his Brother Charles the 9th, he departed secretly into France, where he succeeded by the name of Henry the third.
- 1579 42. Stephen Bathor, Vaivod of Transylvania, by the recommendation of Amurath the third, Emperor of the Turks, having first married Anne, Sister of Sigismund the second, is Elected King. He united Livonia to the Crown, and had a great hand upon the Muscovite.
- 1587 43. Sigismund III. Son of John King of Swethland, and of Katharine his Wife, another of the Sisters of Sigismund the second, King of Poland and Sweden. He valiantly opposed Osman the Great Turk, invading his Dominions with an Army of 300000 fighting Men.
- 1633 44. Vladislaus VII. eldest Son of Sigismund the third. After whose death the Kingdom was extremely embroil'd by Factions, especially by the mutinous and seditious Cossacks, not fully settled by the Election of
- 1648 45. Casimir V. Brother of Vladislaus the seventh: Who being embroiled with the Cossacks, was Overthrown by them, though he had 50000 Men in his Army, 10000 of which perished. The next year he lost a greater Army. In the third Battel he prevailed against them. In 1653 the Russ, taking the Advantage of these Broils, took Smolensko and Vilna. In 1655 the Swedes fell upon him, and took from him Poland properly so called, Masovia, all Prussia, except Dantzick, which City saved the Kingdom; and in 1660 the War was honourably ended. This Prince voluntarily Resigned the Kingdom in the year 1668, when he had Reigned Thirty-one years, and died in 1672 at Nevers in France, in a Monastery. With him ended the Swedish Line in Poland.
- 1669 46. Michael Wiesznowizky succeeded him, and his Reign was not only short but unfortunate; for in the year 1672 he lost to the Turks the strong Town of Caminieck; and in 1673 he died, the 31th of October.
- 1674 47. John Sobiesky, was Elected after him, being then Crown-General, and in the Field: His greatest Acts are the Defeating of the Turks at Cortzheim in 1673; and the Relief of Vienna in 1683. He died in 1696, and left the Crown to the Contentions of a divided Nobility.
- 1697 48. John-George, Elector of Saxony, was Chosen King of Poland, having first renounced and abjured the Religion of his Ancestors, for which he had expressed great Zeal in his younger years. His Succession was however strongly opposed by the King of France, but being supported by all his neighbouring Princes, he is now in the peaceable possession of it, and endeavouring to drive the Turks out of Ukraine.

The Government of this Kingdom is nothing less than Monarchical. For though the first Dukes hereof were absolute Princes, and ruled after a Dispotical manner, having power not only of the Estates of their Subjects, but of Life and Death, without Formalities of Law; yet when they once became Elective, they lost much of that power: which decayed so by little and little, that at the last the King is counted little better than a Royal Shadow; Stat magni nominis umbra, in the Poet's Language. A Diminution which began first in the times of Lewis of Hungary and Jagello of Lithuania; who, to gain the Succession to the Kingdom, contrary to Law, the one for his Daughter, the other for his Son, departed with many of their Royalties and Prerogatives, to buy the Voices of the Nobility. Since which time, the Nobility in all their Elections have so limited and restrained the King's Authority, and enlarged their own, that without their consent in Council he may neither make a War, nor treat of Peace, nor impose Taxes, nor alienate any of his Demeans, nor do any thing of importance which concerns the Publick: Inasmuch, as Boterus, a great Statesman, doth expressly say, That the Government of Poland doth rather seem an Aristocracy than a Monarchy, a Commonwealth rather than a Kingdom. Besides, the King not only takes a solemn Oath at his Coronation to confirm all the Rights and Privileges which have been granted to the Subject by his Predecessors, but adds this Clause, Quod si Sacramentum meum violavero, incolæ Regni nullam nobis obedientiam prestare tenebuntur, that if he violate this Oath, his Subjects shall not be obliged to yield him any Obedience. Which, as Bodin well observeth, doth rather favour of the Condition of a Prince of the Senate, than of the Majesty of a King. He is respected accordingly by the Great ones, who look not on him as their King but their elder Brother, (and perhaps not that) and reckon his Decrees but of three days lasting. Which notwithstanding, the King, once chosen and enthroned, hath sole power in many things without consulting with the Senate; as, viz. in assembling Dyets, choosing the secular Counsellors, disposing absolutely also of his Vassals and the Revenues of the Crown to what use he pleaseth; being sole Judge of the Nobility in Criminal Causes, which is a strong point to rein them in with. By which, and either uniting himself unto the Clergy, or the well forming a party amongst the Nobility, he may do many things not allowable in strictness of Law: the power and influence which he hath in the publick Government being proportionable to the strength of his Wit and Brain.

And here it is to be observed, that none but the Clergy and Nobility have any Suffrage in the Election of the King: that is to say, the Twenty-six Palatines, and Sixty Chastellans, with the four Marshals, and some others of the principal Officers of State, in behalf of the Nobility; and the Archbishops and Bishops in the name of the Clergy; but of the Commons none at all. Which is the reason why there is so much care taken to preserve the Privileges of the two first Orders, without obtaining any Immunities for relief of the third; who are most miserably oppressed on all sides, rather as Bondmen than Tenants in respect of their Lords, and not so much Subjects as plain Slaves in regard of the King; whereof somewhat hath before been noted. Nor are the Commons excluded only out of these Elections, but have no place nor Vote in the Council of State, or in any of the general Dyets: the first consisting only of the Prelates, Palatines, Chastellans, and principal Officers spoken of before; the nominating of which pertaineth to the King alone; the other aggregated of all persons of those several Orders, and the Delegates of each Province and principal City, sent thither for the rest of the Nobility, whom they represent. Yet notwithstanding this exclusion of the Commons from this Commonwealth Council, they there conclude of all matters of publick Interest not properly determinable by the great Council or Council of State: in which perhaps (especially in the case of Taxes) the Commons may be more concerned than any other.

The Forces of this Kingdom or Commonwealth relate unto Land-Service only. For though they have a large Sea-coast upon the Baltick, yet the Danes, Swedes and Hanse-Towns, having got the start of them, keep them from doing much at Sea. And for Land-Forces, they consist consist of Horse especially, whereof they are able to raise 80000, (that is to say, 10000 out of Poland, and 60 or 70000 out of Lithuania and the Eastern Provinces) of which one half at least are thought to be for Action. And this seems probable enough, in regard of those great Bodies of Horse which Stephen and Sigismund the third had against the Moscovite, whereof the one had 40000, and the other 30000, (besides Draught-Horses) very well appointed. But for their Foot, they are not at so good a pass; their Infantry being for the most part Germans or Hungarians, whom they hire for Money; of which two Nations King Stephen, in his Enterprize upon Livonia, had no less than 16000 to convey his Ordinance. Upon confidence of this great number of Horse, and their readiness to serve upon all occasions, the Polanders bear themselves so high, that they neither fear the power of a Foreign Enemy, nor regard the Fortifying of their Towns, or the building of Fortresses on their Frontiers; boasting that they are able to defend their Country without such Helps against any Nation whatsoever, and trusting more to a Castle of Bones (as was courageously said by Savage an English Gentleman) than to a Castle of Stones. And for the raising of these Horse, the Gentlemen of the Country are bound by their Tenure (like the Turks Timariots) not only to serve in Person for defence of the Realm, but to maintain a certain number of Horse in continual readiness; especially in those parts which lie next the Tartar, where their numbers are exceeding great, and with whom many times they join to afflict and harass their own Country, though in pay against them. Of these some serve in the manner of our Men at Arms, some like unto our Light-horse, others like the Tartars. And these they call commonly by the name of Cossacks (or Adventurers:) a race of Men trained up to steal, waste, and depopulate, wheresoever they come, having little but their Swords to live by; a murderous and wicked people, chiefly in their Drunkenness, and that not only towards Strangers, but their natural Country-men. The cause of that Sedition which, for some years past, hath more depopulated and distracted that flourishing Kingdom than all the Armies of the Turks.

Pfendorf observes, that there is no Nation in Europe which has so great a number of Nobles as Poland, and saith they can pay large Contributions, whereby a good Foot Army of Cossacks or others might be maintained; but then they are quickly weary of any publick Charge, and therefore cannot maintain along and tedious War. And when the Nobility are called into the Field they come out late, and are not easily kept in good Order, and have too great a number of Servants and Attendants which devour the Country, and make Provisions scarce. They are also too hot in the first Onsets, but quickly grow weary and impatient of Hardships: And Foot they have none besides their Cossacks, and what they hire of the Germans or Hungarians. They are extremely Jealous of their Kings, and in perpetual Intrigues to prevent their invading their Privileges, and this renders them unquiet, suspicious, and seditious, uneasy to govern, and hard to please. Thus far that great Man. And all this considered, it will appear the less a wonder to us, that they have not been able to recover Caminiack, though it has been three years blockaded, or to make any Progress in Wallachia or Moldavia, notwithstanding the low Condition the Turkish Affairs have been in these three Years, and the potent Diversion the Russ have given to the Crim-Tartars in 1687 and 1688.

As for the Revenues of this King, they are computed at 600000 Crowns per Annum, drawn chiefly out of Salt and some Mines of Silver: the Profits arising from the Demesns of the Crown being for the most part given away in Pensions and Gratuities to the Palatines, Chastellains, and other great Men of the Realm, to make them the more pliant to his desires. Most of which Sum is put up yearly in his Coffers, or expended in the purchase of Estates for his younger Sons: his Daughters being married at the publick Charge, and the expence of his Household defrayed by the Parliament and most part of Poland, for the time that he remains amongst them. Nor to the Wars at any time exhaust his Treasure, in which case, by Decree of the Dyets, he is intitled to lay impositions and Taxes upon the people, levied in the way of tribute, or upon their Lands: which do amount to such a Sum that by means hereof King Stephen maintained War three years against the Moscovite, without expending any thing of his own Revenue.

Chief Orders of Knighthood in this Kingdom are,

1. The Marian or Dutch Knights, instituted under the Walls of Acon or Ptolemais in the Holy-Land, in a Church whereof, dedicated to the Blessed Virgin, their Order was first allow'd, from whence they are called Eques Mariani. The Institution was in the year 1190. The first Great Master was Henry Walsby. The Christians being beaten out of Syria, they first removed to Venice, and from thence to Munich in Hungary; where, and in some other parts of Germany, they were endow'd with fair Revenues: hence they were nam'd Eques Teutonici, or the Dutch Knights. Sent into Prussia by the Emperor Frederick the second, Anno 1239, or called in, as some say, by the Moscovite against the Prussians, they fixed their Seat at Marienburgh, under Sigysride the second Great Master, Anno 1340, or thereabouts. In the time of Ludovicus, the 18th Great Master, they were forced to submit to Casimir the 4th of Poland, Anno 1450; which was the occasion of the long War betwixt them and the Polanders, continuing till the time of Albert of Brandenburg, the 24th and last Great Master in this Country; who surrendred his Order (as before is said) to Sigismund the first, by whom he was created the first Duke of Prussia. Such of the Knights as disrelished this Action retired into Germany, where they chose one Walter Cronenberg Master of the Order: the Title being afterwards conferred upon Maximilian, one of the younger Sons of Maximilian the second, but the Order sensibly decaying, is at this time of little estimation in the World.

2. Of the Port glaive, or Sword-bearers, (Ensigni in Latin) confirmed by Pope Innocent the third, by whom they were sent into Livonia, to defend the Preachers of the Gospel against the Infidels, at the first Conversion of that Country. Being too weak to effect that business, they united themselves with the Dutch Knights by the Pope's Authority, and, instead of Knights of the Sword, were called Knights of the Cross. Separated therefrom in the time of Univus their Great Master, Anno 1541, the Dutch Knights being then dispossessed of Prussia, and these inclining wholly to the Opinions of Luther, they a while subsisted of themselves. What became of them afterwards, and how the Order was extinguished, hath been shewed already in Livonia.

The Arms of this Kingdom are quarterly; 1. Gules, an Eagle Argent, crowned and armed Or, for the Realm of Poland; and 2. Gules, a Chevalier armed Cap-a-pce, advancing his Sword, Argent, mounted on a barbed Courlier of the second, for the Dukedom of Lithuania.

There are in the whole Realm of Poland.

T H E Carpathian Mountains.

IN our way from Poland unto Hungary (whither now we go) we must of necessity pass over the CARPATHIAN MOUNTAINS, the ancient Boundary of Sarmatia Europea from the rest of Europe. A long and craggy Ledge of Hills, which beginning near the City of Presburg, and the Borders of Austria, pass on in a continual course till they come to the very Euxine Sea; and by that means not only divide Hungary from Poland specially so called, but part Transylvania and Moldavia, two Dacian Regions, from Russia Nigra and Podolia, Provinces of the Polonian Kingdom. By Ptolomy, in his second Book, they are called Montes Sarmatici. (Sarmaticæ Rupes by Solinus) because determining the Sarmatian Nation (who possessed the most part of it) from Germany and the more Southern parts of Europe: and in his third Book by one name Carpates, or Mons Carpatus, so called (as some think) from the Greek word Καρπός, signifying Fruit, from the Fruitfulness of it, compared with the other Mountains in those Northern Countries. At the present it is known by divers names, according to the Provinces and People which it passeth by. By the Dutch generally called Wurtzgarten (or a Garden of Herbs) which alludeth to the name of Carpatus, by the Hungars, Tarchzal. Betwixt Moravia and Hungaria, where it is at the highest, it is called in the Slavonian Tongue by the name of Tatri, in the German Schneberg: where it parteth Transylvania from Russia Nigra, the Russes call it Biescid, and the Dutch-men Crapack. A Chain of Hills of more length than Fame, not much observable in Story, but for the shutting up the Hungary Slaves, and others of those Northern Nations which afterwards invaded the Roman Provinces: nor of much notice at the present, but for giving an Original to many of the principal Rivers which water the Countries lying on both sides of it. And therefore having nothing more to detain us here, we will pass them over, and descend into the Plains of Hungary where we shall meet again with the Roman Empire, the Territories and Affairs whereof we shall take along without interruption until we come unto the Banks of the great River Tigris and the Caspian Sea. And so far also from this place we shall survey the Fortunes and Estates of the Turkish Empire, of which the Realm of Hungary is the most Western part or Province; not meeting either of them again till we come to Ægypt.

O F H U N G A R Y.

HUNGARY is bounded on the East with Transylvania and Walachia, on the West with Stiria, Austria, and Moravia; on the North with the Carpathian Mountains, which divide it from Poland, and on the South with Slavonia, and some part of Dacia. It extendeth in length, from Fresburg, along the Danow, to the Borders of Transylvania, for the space of 300 English Miles; and 190 of the same miles in breadth. The reason of the name we shall have anon. Transylvania and Slavonia are now both taken for Parts, Provinces, or Dependencies of Hungary; and the latter is taken into Hungary in his Description of Places by this Author, though he has excluded it here.

It lieth in the Northern Temperate Zone, betwixt the middle Parallels of the 7th and 9th Climates, so that the longest Summers Day in the Southern parts is but 15 hours and a half, and not above 16 hours in the parts most North: taking up all that Tract of ground on the North-side of Danubius possessed by the Jazyges Metanestæ, a Sarmatian People, and part also of Pannonia Superior and Pannonia Inferior, both on the South of that River.

But being it passeth generally under the name of Pannonia, we are to know that the Romans having made themselves Masters of all Pannonia, divided it into four Provinces, part of the Diocels of Illyricum Occidentale, that is to say, 1. Pannonia Superior, bordering on Æthiopia, and containing part of the Higher Austria, and the most Western parts of the present Hungary; on the South-side of the Danow. 2. Pannonia Inferior, containing the Eastern parts of Hungary, on the same side of the River. 3. Valeria, anciently part of Pannonia Superior, comprehending Stiria or Stiermark, in the Archdukedom of Austria. And, 4. Savia, so called of the River Savius, anciently part of Pannonia Inferior; now called Windischland, one of the Provinces or Subdivisions of Slavonia. But the name of Pannonia falling with the Roman Empire, and this Country being fallen into the hands of other Masters, it took a new name from the Nations who possessed themselves of it, and was called Hungaria, quasi Hunn Avaria, by a mixt name made of the Hunni and Avares, two Scythian Nations, who either successively or conjunctly were possessed thereof; or from the Hungari, another race of Scythians, mentioned by Jornandes in his Book De Rebus Geticis, drawn into this Country by the Emperor Arnulph, to aid him in his War against Suantihogius, King of the Moravians. This last I look on as most probable: the first as more probable than that of Avantine, and others of our later Writers, who finding a poor Province in the most North-East point of the Russian Empire called Jugria (and by them Jugaria) would have the name of Hungary to be thence derived.

The People are strong of Body, and rude of Behaviour, respecting neither the liberal Arts nor Mechanick Trades. The greatest Aspersions is the name of a Coward, which cannot be wiped off without the killing of of a Turk: after which they are privileged to wear a Feather, and by the number of their Feathers to shew how many Turks they have slain in Battle. They desire Wars, and like no Trade better, being naturally slothful, (like the Irish) and therefore best approve of that course of Life, whereby they may rather live upon other mens Labour than take pains for their living. Extremely covetous they are, yet having rather desire than art to enrich themselves, permitting the Dutch to ingross all their Trading, and manage such Commodities as the Country yieldeth: which is the cause (seconded by the Oppressions of the Turk and the Austrian Princes, under whom they are) that none of them rise to any considerable Wealth. And for such as have Estates in Land, they grow every day more poor than other. For though the Females be excluded from inheriting their Father's Possessions, (to whom they give no Portion, but new Cloaths on the Wedding-day:) Yet being the Sons do equally inherit the Estate, (as such who hold in Gavelkind do here in England) it must needs be that by so many Divisions and Subdivisions the greatest Patrimony that is will be brought to nothing. Both sexes in the way of their Education are inured to Hardness, not suffered to lie in Beds till the Night of their Marriage.

The Christian Faith was first planted here in the time of Stephen, surnamed the Saint, the first King of this Country; who was invited thereunto by the special means and procurement of the Emperor Henry the second, giving him upon that Condition his Sister Gisela in Marriage; and through the preaching and industry of Albert Archbishop of Prague, Anno 1016, or thereabouts. Since which time Christianity hath continued here without interruption, (defended gallantly and courageously against the Turks) but broken into Fractious and Subdivisions among themselves: Some pertinaciously adhering to the Church of Rome, some following the Doctrine of Luther, others that of Calvin and some new Fancies and Opinions disavowed by all the rest. Free exercise of Religion was first granted by Maximilian the second, and re-obtained in the time of Rodolphus, his Son and Successor, by the Pacification at Vienna, procured by the power of Bolsai Prince of Transylvania, Anno 1606. The violating of which Pacification by Ferdinand the second, in the beginning of his Reign occasioned great Wars and Troubles betwixt him and this People, not quieted in a long time after. Yet all these different Parties do agree in this, to punish Adultery and Fornication with no less a punishment than Death; the Father forcing his Daughter, the Husband his Wife, and the Brother his Sisters, to the place of their Execution.

The Language generally here spoken is a kind of Slavonian, differing in Dialect from the Poles: but in the parts adjoining to Germany the Dutch is spoken; as the old Jazygian is betwixt Danubius and Tibiscus, the ancient Seat of the Jazyges Metenaste.

The Soil is wonderful fruitful, yielding Corn and Fruits in great abundance; the Grass in some places, (as in the Isle of Komara) if it be suffered to grow to its full length before the cutting of it down, being said to exceed the height of a Man: which doth breed such a number of Cattel, that this Country alone is thought to be able to feed all Europe with Flesh. They yearly send into Germany and Slavonia 80000 Oxen: they have Deer, Partridge, Pheasants, in such superfluity, that any man that will may kill them, which in other places is utterly prohibited, these Creatures being preserved as Game for Gentlemen. For at that great Insurrection of the Boors in Germany, (before the end of which 50000 of them were slain in fight) their chief Demands were, 1. That they might chuse their own Ministers. 2. That they might pay no Tithes but of Corn. 3. That they might be free from the power of Magistrates. 4. That Wood, Timber and Fewel might be common. 5. And especially, that they might hunt and hawk in all times and places. The other Commodities of the Country are Gold and Silver, whereof they have some very rich Veins; as also of Tin, Lead, Iron; good store of Fish, Copper, Wine: this last as good as that of Candia.

The worthiest Scholar that ever this Kingdom produced was St. Hierom, a worthy Father of the Latine Church born in Stridon. The most worthy of all their Soldiers were 1. Johannes Huniades, who so valiently resisted the Incursions of the Turks, and slew of them 50000 at the Battle of Asaron. And 2. Matthias Corvinus, his Son, afterward King of Hungary; of whom thus Adrian out of a Poet,

——— Patria decus, unica Stirpis
Gloria, Pannonicæ Cædis fortissimus ultor.
His Countries Pride, the Glory of his Race,
Revenger of th' Hungarians late Disgrace.

The principal Rivers are, 1. Danubius, spoken of before, when we were in Germany. 2. Savus, which rising in Carniola, 3. Dravus which rising in Carinthia, and 4. Tibiscus, which rising in the Carpathian Mountains, pay their Tribute to Danubius: of which Tibiscus the Hungarians use to say, that two parts are Water, and the third Fish. Besides which, and some others of inferior note, there is the famous Lake called Balaton, (by the Dutch Platsee) forty Italian miles in length, but of breadth unequal, in some places being ten miles broad, and in some but three. There be also many Medicinal waters, and more hot Baths than any one Country hath in Europe: some Waters also of a strange nature, whereof some falling on the ground is turned to Stone; others (about the Town of Smalnice) which falling into Ditches made a kind of Mud, out of which tried and melted they make very good Copper; and some again which flow in Winter, and freeze in Summer; and near unto Bistrice, or Mensol, a Spring or Fountain, out of which commeth a green Water whereof they make Solder for their Gold.

Principal Mountains of this Country are, 1. Carpatus, the Sarmatian or Carpathian Mountains, spoken of before. 2. Matzan, near the City of Agria, covered with rich Vines. 4. Erdol, omnium amplissimus, the largest of the three, saith the Atlas minor. Which words, if true, must needs be understood of the height of this Mountain, but neither of the length or breadth; in both which without question it comes short of Carpatus.

The Country is commonly divided into the Upper Hungary, and the Lower: the Upper lying on the North of the River Danow, out of the Bounds and Territories of the Roman Empire; the Lower lying on the South of that River, and comprehending all Pannonia Inferior, and part of Superior, two Roman Provinces. The Upper again was subdivided (before the coming in of the Turks) into 32 Counties or Juridical Resorts; that is to say, 24 on the West-side of Tibiscus (or the Tieff) and 8 on the East-side of it: The Lower (at the same time) into 16 only; of which ten were betwixt the Danow and the River Dravus, and the other six betwixt the Dravus and the Savus: But this Division and the Subdivisions depending on it being since the coming in of the Turks almost out of use, we will now look upon it as it stands divided at the present, betwixt the Emperor as King of Hungary, by a mixt Title of Descent and Election; and the great Turk, as Lord of the most part of it by Arms and Conquest, two parts of three at least being forced into his possession. But here we are to understand, that by reason of the great Jealousies and Distrusts betwixt these great Princes, every ordinary Town is fortified and garrisoned like a Town of War, and so are almost all the Houses of the Nobility and Gentry throughout this Country: so that it were an infinite labour to specify in this place all those Towns and Fortresses which do occur in reading the Hungarian Histories, Histories of these later times. Some of the principal for Strength, Antiquity, or other mark of Estimation which is set upon them, we shall here subjoin. This was the true state of Hungary, when our Author Wrote, and continued so, till in the year 1683, Mahomet 4. Emperor of the Turks, espousing the Quarrel of Count Tekely an Hungarian Noble-man, by him made King of Hungary: and demanding the Island of Schut, which the Emperor could not part with, he unjustly began a War upon the Emperor, and sent an Army of 100000 Men to besiege Vienna, which being driven from that Siege by John Sobieski King of Poland, and Charles Duke of Lorrain, they followed their blow, and the same year took Gran, and have ever since had such a Torrent of Victories, as have almost totally extirpated the Turks out of Hungary and Sclavonia. So that I shall only make it my business to shew when the several strong places were retaken by the Germans; adding my Prayers, that God would still prosper the Arms of the Christian Princes against that bitter and implacable Enemy of Christianity or indeed Mankind in General.

And first in the Emperors part of the Lower Hungary, we have; 1. Rab, on the meeting of the Danow with the River Rab, coming out of the Lower Hungary, whence the modern Dutch name; by Antonine called Arabo, by the French Javarine, by our present Latinists Javarinum. Memorable heretofore for being the Boundary of the two Pannonias, Inferior and Superior; hereabouts divided: of late most principally for a strong Fortress against the Turks, by whom it was once taken, An. 1594, but within four years after again recovered by the Industry of Monfieur de Vandrecourt, a French Gentleman, as the French-men say; but as the Germans write, of the Earl of Swartzenburg, at that time Governour of Komara. This River ariseth in the Lower Stiria near Gratz, and below this City falls into the Danube, upon the banks of it near St. Gothard, the Germans in the year 1664, defeated a Potent Army of the Turks, which had passed it in order to besiege Vienna, which Victory produced a Peace for 20 years, though broken to the cost of the Turks within the time. 2. Altensburg, in the Road leading towards Assiria; a strong Town, and the best out-work of Vienna, for which cause much aimed at by the Turks, but without success. It stands 3 Hungarian miles from Presburg to the South, and 6 from Rab. 3. Castre-Novo, a new-erected Fortress, as the name importeth, but of special strength, erected purposely in the time of the Emperor Rodolph, to confront the Turks. 4. Sabaria, anciently the Metropolis of Pannonia Superior; the Birth-place of S. Martin Bishop of Tours; now of less account; by the Hungarians called Kimaronuspath. Others conceive it to be that which the Dutch call Leibnitz. 5. Stridon, now Sdrin, the Sidrona of Ptolomy in the Confines of Hungaria and Dalmatia, by the common people called Strigman. A Town of good repute, till destroyed by the Goths; but after made of more esteem by the Birth of St. Hierom, one of the four chief Fathers of the Latine Church, and for all parts of Humane Learning nothing inferior to the best of the Grecian Sages. 6. Sopron, (Soprinium in Latine) on the Borders of Austria. 7. Komara a strong piece, in an Island of the same name made by the Circling of the Danow; but commonly called Schut by the Germans, oft-times attempted by the Turk, but in vain at all times. Then in the Upper Hungary we have 8. Presburg, on the edge of Austria also, but on the North-side of the River, the Carnutum of Antoninus, but by the modern Latines called Posonium; seated in a pleasant healthful Country, on the River Lycet, whose waters the Danow there receiveth: in the Suburbs whereof, on the top of an high Mountain, standeth a goodly Castle, the ordinary Residence of the Emperors, as Kings of Hungary. For though it be a little City and not very beautiful; yet being safe by the Neighbourhood of Austria, it hath been made the Metropolis of this Kingdom since the loss of Buda. Before the Walls hereof died Count

Dampierre, one of the chief Commanders of Ferdinand the second, in the Wars of Hungaria and Bohemia. 9. Fillek, a place of great Strength and Consequence taken by Solyman the Magnificent in his first attempts upon this Kingdom: and lost by Amurath the third, the Turks in vain attempting the recovery of it. 10. Niriat, a Bishop's See on the River Boch. 11. Vacia, a Bishop's See also, on the River Danubius; once in possession of the Turks, but restored again unto the Christians at the making of the Peace between the Emperor Rodolphus and Sultan Achmet. 12. Cissovica, a strong piece towards Transylvania. This City was in a manner free till setting up Count Tekely in the year 1682, it was taken by the Imperial Forces in 1685, and has been since curb'd by a strong Garrison. 13. Lippe, in the Borders of that Country also, commanding the Entrances thereof and therefore much affected by the Princes or Vainvods of that Province; possessed by whom in the latter times of the Emperor Rodolph, it was by them incorporated into Transylvania; but how long it continued so I am not able to say. This Town was taken by the Turks in the year 1595, and was retaken by the Germans the 19th of June 1688, after a short defence 2000 Turks that were in Garrison here being made Prisoners of War. 4. Tokay, a place of great strength, and as great Fidelity, the people and Garrison hereof holding out for the Emperor Rodolphus, Anno 1605, against some of his Rebellious Subjects, in the time of so extream a Famine, that the Soldiers did not only eat two Boys, but many times cast lots who should eat one another. It submitted to Count Tekely in 1682, and was taken by the Imperialists in 1685. It is seated in an Island made by the River Bodroch, which passing by Espieres falls into the Tibiscus, and is very subject to inundations, yet the Soil is thereby made fruitful, which produceth excellent Wines. 15. Eperies, a place of no less consequence, and exemplary Loyalty. Taken by Count Tekely in 1678, and retaken by the Imperialists in 1685. 16. Nemsol, or Newbemsel, a strong Town, and as strongly fortified, not far from the Spring-head of the River Gran, which in the year 1621 proved fatal to that great Commander the Count of Bucquoy, who at the Siege hereof (the Town being then in Rebellion against Ferdinand the second, Emperor and King of Hungary) lost his life. For going privately, to view some places of advantage for a general Assault, he fell into an Ambush of Hungarians, who suddenly set upon him, discomfited his small Party, killed first his Horse under him, and at last himself, having in that Skirmish received 16 wounds. There were slain with him at the same time also Torquato, an Italian Prince, Count Vardugo, a Spanish Earl, and one of the Gonzagues of the House of Mantua. The Grand-Vizier sat down before this Town the 14th of August 1663, and took it the 27th with the loss of 15000 Men, the Duke of Lorrain sat down before it the 7th of July 1685, and took it by Storm the 19th of August following, putting all the Garrison to the Sword.

Places of most importance in the Turks possession are, 1. Buda, by the Dutch called Offen, supposed by some to be the Curia of Ptolomy, by others the Abrincum of Antoninus; and to have took the name of Buda, either from Buda the Brother of Atrila, said to be the Re-founder of it, or from the Budini, a Saythian People, mentioned in Herodotus. It is unevenly seated amongst Hills on the Southern shore of the Danow, but in the most fruitful part of all the Country, exceedingly well fortified, especially by a strong Castle, thought to be impregnable, and therefore very carefully guarded by the jealous Turks, adorned with many Buildings, both private and publick and furnished with some Medicinal Baths, which owe much of their Pomp and Sumptuousness to their new Masters the Turks, who took it from the Christians August 20. 1591, Solyman the Magnificent then being present at the taking of it. Before that time the Seat-Royal of the Kings of Hungary, and the chief City

City of the Kingdom; as now the Seat of the chief Bassa, or Lord-Lieutenant for the Grand Seignor. This City is divided into two parts, separated from each other the distance of a mile, and called the higher and the lower Buda: the higher stands towards the North, and is by Nature one of the strongest Forts in the World, being built on a steep-hard-Rock, and having a very strong Castle and good works, and was the Royal Palace and the Seat of the Turkish Visier or Bassa. It was besieged by the Duke of Lorraine, from the 14th of July to the 1st. of November 1684, and yet could not be taken, but the 15th of July 1686, it was reinvested by that Prince, and taken the 2d. of September following by Assault. An Army of 50000 Turks coming on and not being able to relieve it: the Baths are in the Lower-Town, which was taken in both the last Sieges very easily by the Germans, the difficulty being in the gaining the Upper-Town. 2. Alba Regalis, by the Dutch called Stul-Weissenburg, betwixt the Danow and the Dravus; strongly, but unwholly feared, in the midst of an inaccessible Marsh, joined to the firm land by three broad Causeys, blockt up at the ends with three great Bulwarks, but for all the Situation of it, taken by the Turks Anno 1543; before that time the usual place both for the Coronation and Interrment of the Kings of Hungary; recovered from the Turks Anno 1601, and lost again unto them in the next year after. After Buda was taken, the Prime-Visier of the Turks, retired to Albaregalis, and man'd and victual'd it for a long Siege, making it the Capital of Hungary. The Germans being not willing to Ruin either the Place or their Men by a Siege of this strong place, Blockaded it: and the 18th of May 1688, it was surrendered to them; the Garrison having in the mean time endured by Hunger, Cold and Nakedness, all the Misery that can be imagined. 3. Walpo, or Valpo, on the River Dravus, taken by Solyman marching towards Alba Regalis, to leave no enemies behind him at the Siege of that City in 1594, now in the hands of the Emperor since the taking of Esseck in the year 1687. 4. Gran, in Latin called Strigonium, seated upon the Danow, but opposite to the Mouth of Gran, which arising in the Upper Hungary doth there end its course, whence this Town had the name of Gran, honoured of a long time with the See of an Arch-bishop, who is the Primate of the Kingdom, and of great power in all business which concern the State; taken by the Turks Anno 1534, Solyman the magnificent being in person at the Siege, and lost again, Anno 1595, at what time Sir Thomas Arundel of Wardor Castle in Wiltshire carried himself so gallantly, that forcing the Water-Tower, and taking thence with his own hands the Turkish Banner, the Emperor Rodolphus created him a Count of the Empire, and King James afterwards made him Lord Arundel of Wardor: but the Christians were not suffered to keep it long; for being many times after besieged by the Turks, who were resolved not to end the War without it, it was finally recovered by them, Anno 1605. In the year 1683, there was under the Walls of this City a sharp Fight between the Turks and Germans; in which the latter prevailed and took the City the 23th of October. July the 30th 1685, the Turks besieged it again, whilst the Germans besieged Newbenschel, but being forced to draw off August the 16th, the City has continued ever since in the Hands of the Emperor without disturbance. 5. Funkirchen, in Latin called Quinque Ecclesie, from five Churches in it, a Bishop's See, conceived to be the Tentoburgium of Antoninus; taken by the Turks Anno 1566, and giving them a great Command on the River Dravus, upon which it is seated. It was retaken by the Imperialists in the year 1686, after Buda was surrendered without any Resistance; the Turkish Bassa saying, Now the Old Hen (Buda) is escaped, the Chickens will follow her. The truth is, though it was a strong and populous City when the Turks took it, they had so neglected and dispeopled it, that a small party of Croats surprized and plundered it in 1685. 6. Sirmish, betwixt the Danow and the Sav, or Sava, now noted for a Vein of the best Wines, but otherwise of no estimation at the present, though heretofore of most account in all this Province; the Metropolis (as I conceive) of Pannonia Inferior, the Seat of the Prætorio Illirici before the Division of the Empire, honoured with the personal Residence of many of the Emperors, and made in those respects the Stage of many great and memorable Actions. For here Vetranus or Bretanio, as other call him, took on himself the Purple Robe, and was declared Emperor by the Illyrian Soldiers lying here in Garrison: here, being deserted by his own Souldiers, he submitted himself unto Constantinus, the Son of Constantine the Great: here Constantine the Emperor, son of Valentinian the first was born, and finally here was held a Council against Macarius, Bishop of this City, who held that Christ had no existence of God the Father till he was conceived and born of the Virgin; which Tenet, being contrary as well to that of the Arian as the Orthodox Prelates, was here condemned by both parties in the time of the said Constantinus, (who was there in person) An. 356. 7. Zigeth, a strong Town, situate in a Marsh-ground on the North-side of the Dra, taken by Solyman the magnificent, Anno 1566, who there ended his Days. This City after a Blockade of 18 months, was surrendered to the Imperialists the 12th of February 1688, there was then in it 600 Turkish Soldiers, and about 1000 other Persons. The Bastions of it were well faced with Masons work, but the Courtins are only supported by three Rows of Trees, driven into the Earth very to near each other and the space between the first and second Row served instead of a Parapet. The Earth between them being so hardened and strengthened by the Trees, that it seems to be of no less force than the Walls of the Bastions. The Castle was also of great strength, being seated in a Marsh surrounded with four Walls, &c. Strengthened with Bull-Warks; There was then standing in this place 400 Houses, 3 small and one great Mosque, and they found in it 45 pieces of Canon, and a vast quantity of Ammunition, but almost no Victual; Thus fell that noble Fortress, which in the year 1536 baff'd a Royal Turkish Army, though it was twice besieged in one Summer, and ten years after had the Consolation to see Solyman the great Dye before it, before it fell into the hands of the Turks. 8. Murfa, now Esseck, upon the confluence of the Dra and the Danow, once a Roman Colony, and as remarkable in the Stories of elder times. Esseck is supposed by many to be the Marsa of the Ancients, seated on the South side of the Sava, in a low Ground, a Great Populous and Strong Town, and the usual pass of the Turks into Hungary, who had here for that purpose a Bridge 5 miles long, built by Solyman the magnificent in the year 1521, destroyed by Count Sereni in 1664, by Count Lassy in 1685, by the Duke of Lorraine in 1687. The Town preserved it self from the Germans in 1637, and being attempted by the Duke of Lorraine in 1687, he was forced to retire, the Prince Visier covering it with 80000 Men, but that Army being routed at the Battle of Mohatz the 12th of August, the 30th of September the Imperialists found the Town of Esseck deserted by the Turks, and had nothing to do but to take possession of it, since which time no cost has been spared in Fortifying and Strengthening it. 9. Belgrade, on the confluence of the Sav and the Danow, hath been in the later. This last being a Town of divers names; first called Taurinum or Taurunum; after Alba Graca, by the Dutch, accordingly Griechs Weissenburg, by the French and modern Latins Belgrade and Belgradium, from a beautiful situation of it, hemmed in upon the North with the Danow, on the East with the Sav, on the other sides defended with strong Walls, deep Ditches, and impregnable Rampiers. It belonged anciently to the despots of Servia, by whom it was consigned over to Sigismund, King of Hungary, as best able to keep it, the despots being satisfied with lands and Territories of a better value. It was the bulwark heretofore of Christendom against the Turks, who, received before it many great and notable Repulses, (of which the most memorable were those of Amurath the second, and Mahomet surnamed the Great :) but taken at last to the great loss and shame of the Christian World, not succouring the Defendants in convenient time, by Solyman the magnificent, Anno 1520. This City continued in the hands of the Turks, without any care bestowed upon its Fortifications till the year 1686 and 1687, when they began after the loss of Buda and Esseck, to re-fortify and strengthen it what they were able; but in the year 1688, the Emperor sent the Duke of Bavaria with a potent Army to reduce it, who forced his way over the Save the 8th of August, N. S. and the 10th marched towards Belgrade: The Turks firing the Lower Town, abandon'd it. The 12th the Germans began their Attack against the Upper Town and Castle, which was defended till the 6th of September, when it was taken by Storm at the third assault, and about 7000 of the defendants put to the Sword, and about 3000 had quarter given them. The Germans took in this place 70 Canon great and small: it is seated upon an Hill, and is now re-fortifying with great expence and care. Then on the North side of the River, in the Upper Hungary, there is 10. Pesth, over against Buda, on the River Danow. 11. Colocza, an Archbishop's See, on the same River also. 12. Zegedin, or Segedin, on the West-side of the River Tibiscus, which was taken by the Turks in the year 1552, and retaken by the Christians in the year 1686. 13. Agria, an old Bishops See; and strongly fortified, having a great Command over all those parts of the Country; in vain besieged by Haly the Bassa of Buda with an Army of 36000 Turks, in the time of Solyman the Magnificent, Anno 1552, but taken by Mahomet the third, himself lying at the Siege in person, Anno 1578; not far from which, immediately after the taking of Agria, Mahomet gave the Christians so great an overthrow, that, if he had pursued his Victory, it is thought that he had finished the Conquest of Hungary, as on the other side, the Turks were so worsted and disordered at first, (Mahomet himself and most of his Commanders flying out of the field) that, had the Christians followed the chase, and not betook themselves to the Spoil of the Camp, they had in probability for ever freed that Kingdom from the Turkish Tyranny. This Battle, from a Village near unto which it was fought, was called the Battle of Kerefture; a Battle of so strange a Fortune, that the Conquerors were driven out of the Field, and the vanquished Army ran away with the Victory. It continued in the hands of the Turks till the 17th of December 1687, and then was surrendered into the Hands of the Imperialists, having besides Bombing and other Calamities of War, suffered a Blockade of two years continuance without the least relief. The Germans have since taken good care to keep it from falling back into the hands of Infidels. 14. Hatroan, now called Hatman, a very strong Town, and as strongly garrisoned, recovered by the Christians after two long Sieges, and many sharp Assaults, Anno 1558, and presently again abandoned, upon the noise of Mahomet's coming into Hungary, with a dreadful Army. 15. Temeswar, on the East of that River towards Transylvania, the ordinary residence of a Turkish Bassa. 16. Gyula, a strong Town on the Borders of Transylvania, betrayed by Nicholas Keresken, Governor hereof, in the last year of Solyman: on a promise of some great reward; but Selimus the Son of Solyman caused him to be put into a Barrel stuck full of Nails, with the points turned inwards, and so to be tumbled up and down till he (most miserably) died; there being on the Barrel this inscription written, viz. Here receive the reward of thy Avarice and Treason; Gyula thou soldest for Gold: if thou be not faithful to Maximilian thy natural Lord, neither wilt thou be true to me. 17. Singidum on the South of Gyula, betwixt which and Belgrade are the Fields of Maron, memorable for the slaughter of 50000 Turks, slain here in Battle under the fortunate Conduct of John Huniades. 18. Poffega, the Capitol of Slavonia properly so called, seated upon the River Oriana, 8 miles from the Save to the North, and 30 from Gradisca to the East, containing about 10000 Houses but mean and small. It is seated in a fruitful Country, and was taken by Solyman the magnificent in the year 1544, and retaken by the Christians in 1687, after the Battle of Mohatz, the Turks deserting it, and either slaying or carrying away the Inhabitants, whereupon the Germans took care to re-fortify it. 19. Petrowaradin, a Town upon the Danube, 6 Hungarian miles from Belgrade to the North, much celebrated in the present War, and often taken and retaken, but now in the hands of the Germans, and ordered to be Fortified. 20. Illock, a Town upon the Danube, of great strength between Walcowar and Petrowaradin, which was the last Town the Turks held in Slavonia, but was deserted and burnt by the Turks in 1688, upon the march of the Imperial Army to besiege it.

The first Inhabitants of this Country on the North-side of the Danow, and the West of the Tieffs or Tibiscus, were the Fazyges Motanastæ, and on the East-side of the Tieffs the Daci, known, but not conquered, by the Romans; on the South of the Danow the Pannonæ, (by some called the Peonæ) subdivided into the Azuli Lato-vici, Wercianni, Jassii, Oseriates, and some others inhabiting the West parts thereof, or Pannonia Superior, and the Ercuneales, Brouci, Arivisci, and Scordisci, dwelling in the Eastern parts, or Pannonia Inferior. First conquered by the Romans, Anno U, C, 719, L. Cornificius and Sextus Pompeius being Consuls; but many times rebelling, and not fully subdued till forty years after the Insurrection of Bato, being then crushed by Augustus Caesar, and thereby the whole Province settled in Obedience. Divided first into two parts or Provinces, Superior and Inferior; out of which Savia, and Valeria were after taken, as before is noted. Under the Romans it continued, till subdued by the Hunns, a People not heard of in the time of the Roman Greatness, unless we take them, as some do, for the Chuni of Ptolomy. But being those Chuni are placed by him betwixt the Bastarne and the Roxolani, on the South-West of Barysthenes, I see not how to fit that dwelling unto the Hunns, who were shut up within Fens of Palus Mæotis, and by all the Writers of those times accounted a Nation not so much as heard of when they first set footing in Europe. Letting that therefore pass as an improbable and ill-grounded Conjecture, certain it is that from the Fen-Countries of Asia, on the other side of the Tenais, they came first into Europe, living in their own Country a poor and miserable life, till God thought fit to make use of them as a Scourge to chastise the Christians of the West, then grown luxurious, and almost incorrigible, by too much Felicity; and to that end miraculously opened them a Passage never found before. For having neither mind nor meaning to invade the Roman Empire, which possibly they had not heard of, nor knowing how to clear themselves of that uncomfortable Country in which they dwelt; it pleased the great disposer of all things, by following an Hart or Stag which they had in chase, to shew them a safe passage into Europe through the Fens of Mæotis, which before they thought to be unpassable. The report made by those Hunters at their coming back, of the rich and pleasant Land which they had so fortunately discovered, invited the chief Heads of their Clans, with all the several Rascalities depending on them, to flock into Europe: into which they fell so suddenly and unexpectedly; that they forced the Goths, then dwelling on the North-side of the Ister, to fly over that River, and supplicate to the Emperor Valens for new Habitations. This happened in the year 373, Athaniricus the second, or Ermanaricus, (as Jornandes calls him) being then King of the Goths, and and Balamir, Captain of the Hunns. Fleshed with this Victory, Balamir, or Balbember, (as Sigebert calls him) takes the name of King, Anno 386, or thereabout; and following the course of the Ister towards this Pannonia, which he had an aim at, found a great Army raised on the other side of the River, of purpose to encounter with him, commanded by Detricus General for the Roman Army, and Macrinus (or Matrinus) Commander in chief of the Pannonians. Both Generals presuming too much on the depth and wideness of the River, and knowing well that the Hunns had neither Boat nor Ship to pass them over, betook themselves unto their Rest with too much security. But the Hunns, to the number of 100000, having crossed the River upon Bladders, fell on the Quarters of the Romans, whom they slew like Sheep, Macrinus after this fought two Battels with them, in the first whereof he was victorious, there being lost on both sides about Thirty Thousand Men: but in the second being slain, and his Army routed, the Huns possessed themselves of both Pannonia's, buying this Victory with the loss of 40000 Men, in the year 401. Balamir being dead, Bleda and Attila his Sons succeeded, Anno 436; and Oleda, dying also in the year 450, left Attila sole King of the Huns, that great Scourge of the Christian World; who having first wasted Illyricum and Thrace, compelled the Emperor Theodosius the second to buy his Peace of him at the price of 6000 pound weight of Gold, and an yearly Tribute. Invited afterwards by Gensericus King of the Vandals in Africk, to War upon the Goths of Spain, (out of which Country they had driven him) he forced his way through all the Nations betwixt him and Gaul, and beating down all the Towns and Fortresses on the River Rhene, on that side of the Roman Empire, entred that Province in the Reign of the third Valentinian, divided at that time betwixt the Romans, French, Burgundians, and the Goths of Spain. Discomfited by Aetius and the Kings of those Nations then in League against him, in that famous Battel near Tholouse, spoken of before, (with the loss of 180000 of his Men) he went back by the way of Italy, where he sacked Aquileia, Millain, Vincentia, Pavia; and not without much difficulty was diverted from the Spoil of Rome, by the intercession of Pope Leo: committing in all places such unspeakable Cruelties, that he was always after called (as he styled himself) Mallens orbis, and Flagellum Dei. Returning home he picked a Quarrel with Martianus the Eastern Emperor, as if the Tribute promised him by Theodosius had not been well paid. But being pacified for the present, and mindful of his former Project upon the Goths, he resolved once again to try his Fortune with that People; and was again defeated by them under the Conduct of Thorismund, the third King of the Visigoths, or Goths of Spain, and so returned ingloriously to his Country. Choaked after with his own Blood, violently breaking out at his Nostrils on his Wedding-night; he left Pannonia to his Sons, named Hernac, Aladarius, and Chaba; who, disagreeing amongst themselves about the Kingdom, gave an advantage to the Goths, then possessed of Dacia, to make themselves Masters of this also; who were scarce through-warm in their new Estates, when sent by Zeno the Emperor into Italy against Odoacer, where they finally settled. After this time we hear no more of the Goths in Pannonia, or any-where of the Hunns, at all, unless acting under the Auaries, or joining with them in the name of Hun-Auari, as some think they did.

The Country, being thus left to the next Invader, was presently possessed by the Longobards, said to be originally of Scandia; and there called Winnili, (and of the Winniloib in Scandia Jornandes speaketh, afterwards ob longas barbas, Longobardi. But concerning this last name, take along with you this old Wives Tale, recited, but not approved of, by Paulus Diaconus. The Vandals warring upon the Winnili went unto Goddan, (he should rather have said Wodin) to sue for the Vi-story: which the Winnili hearing, wrought by counter-mine, and sent Gambata, the Mother of their King Anjou, on the like business to Freia, Goddan's Wife. So it was that Goddan had promised the Vandals, that they should be victorious whom he saw first in the Morning: Whereupon Freia, willing to please Gambata, and not loving, as it seemeth, the sight of Men, gave order that all the Women of the Winnili, parting their Hair, bringing one half over one Cheek, the other over the other, and tying both under their Chin, should appear betimes before the Window the next Morning. This they did, and she shewing them to her Husband, he demanded of her, Qui sunt isti Longobardi? Hence the occasion of the name. And like enough they might be called so from the length of their Beards, though otherwise the whole Tale be vain and foolish. Compelled by scarcity of Victuals to seek new Habitations, they settled first on the Island Rugia and the adjacent Countries; and settled about the time of Cornelius Tacitus in those parts of Germany, which now make up the Bishopricks of Meyzburg and Halberstadt. Afterwards, finding that Country too narrow for them, they left their Dwellings there, and fell next upon some parts of Poland; next on this Pannonia: and at last, having tarried in Pannonia Forty-two years, or thereabouts, at the solicitation of Narfes (provoked by many Indignities from the Empress Sophia, the Wife of Justinus the second) Anno 568, under the leading of their King Alboinus, they went into Italy; and there fixt their Kingdom; being at the end of 206 Years overthrown by the power of Charles the Great, the most mighty Monarch of the West. Of their Kings, before their coming into this Country, I shall only make mention of Lamissus their third King, and of him this Story. Agilmond, the second King of the Lombards, one morning went a Hunting: as he was riding by a Fish-pond, he espied seven Children sprawling for Life, which one, as saith Paulus Diaconus, (it may be many Harlots) had been delivered of, and most barbarously thrown into the Water. The King amazed at this Spectacle, put his Boar-spear or Hunting-pole among them. One of the Children handfasted the Spear, and the King, softly drawing back his hand, wadded the Child to the Shore. This Boy he named Lamissus, from Lama, which in their Language signifieth a Fish-pond. He was in the King's Court carefully brought up; where there appeared in him such tokens of Vertue and Courage, that after the death of Agilmond, he was by the Lombards chosen to succeed him. This Lamissus, together with his Predecessors and Successors, we find thus Recorded.

The LONGOBARDIAN Kings.

The History of this People epitomized by Du Bartas (but with far more of the Poet than the true Historian) is summed up thus.

The

The Lombard Frong, who was in Scotland nurst,
 Of England and Livonia testid first.

Then having well reveng'd on the Bulgarian
 The death of Agilmond, the bold Barbarian,
 Surprized Poland: thence anon he presses
 In Danow's Streams to rinse his Amber Tresses.
 When he freight after had surrendred
 The double-named Ister's flowry bed
 To scar-fac'd Huns; he hunteth furiously
 The rest of Gauls from wealthy Insubrie.
 There reigns 200 years, triumphing so,
 That Royal Tefin might compare with Po.
 Which after fell in French Mens hand again,
 Won by the Sword of worthy Charlemaign.

The Longobards having thus left the Stage, the Avars entred. Some say they were the Avarini of Ptolemy, a Sarmatian People; but most probably (as Nicetius) a People of Scythia, inhabiting about Palus Maotis. They first began to stir in the Reign of Tiberius the second, (forced by the Turks, their next Neighbours, to pass farthest Westward) and gave that Emperor's Forces a great Overthrow at the Mouth of Danubius. Tiberius notwithstanding did somewhat quiet them; but he being dead, they took heart again, and with great Courage warred upon Mauritius, his next Successor. Their King at that time was called Caganus, we may English it Cham, as not being the proper name of any one; but the common Attribute of all their Chiefs. This Caganus made his first Wars upon the Turks, which People were about that time first made known to the Inhabitants of Europe; and with the help of the remainder of the Huns, invaded and possessed Pannonia, vanquishing both the Emperor's Forces, and the Goths and Gepida, who had still kept some footing in it, and on the departure of the Lombards were of no small power, the name of Goths being swallowed up in that of the Gepida, though not quite extinct. After this Blow Mauritius raised a second War, but more with an intent to revenge himself on his own Soldiers, which had formerly offended him, than with hope of prevailing against the Enemy. Comentiolus, according to the Emperor's Directions, betrayeth his Army; 12000 of them were slain, and the rest taken. Caganus, an heroick and merciful Conqueror, offers to ransom them for 8s. 6d. a piece (for so much was that Nummus or Νόμισμα which he demanded for them.) When the Emperor, as much loving his Gold as hating his Soldiers; had denied that Condition; he offered them all for one Nummus, and after for half a one: but being also here unsatisfied, he put them all to the Sword. For this cause the rest of the Soldiers not long after made Phocas, one of the Centurions, Emperor; and he most barbarously slewed the Emperor in his own Broth, putting him, his Wife, Friends, and Children to the Sword. After this we find mention of them in the time of Phocas and Heraclius, foraging Thrace to the very Walls of Constantinople, afterwards settled in Pannonia and part of Noricum, containing now the Upper Hungary and some part of Austria, divided from the Boiarians by the River Ems. They continued possessed hereof till the time of Charles the Great, by whom after a War of eight Years, they were utterly subdued, and driven out of these parts, their Country being peopled with new Dutch Colonies: the remainders of them were forced to betake themselves into Transylvania, or that part of Hungaria which lieth beyond the River Tibiscus, there subject for a time to Suantibogius, King of the Moravians; in whose Overthrow by the Hungarians they were so broken, that their Name was never heard of.

And so we come to the Hungarians, the last and principal Actors on the Stage of this Kingdom, the givers of the present Name: before whose coming into this Country it had no other name than that of Pannonia, for ought I can find, in any Authors for those Times. A Scythian People, as the Huns and Avars were, by

Jornandes called then Hungary; first known in Europe by their Acts in the time of the Emperor Arnulphus, when wandering in Sarmatia Europea without any certain Abode, they were by him called into this Country against Suantibogius, King of the Moravians, before-mentioned; from whom they took Transylvania, and so much of the modern Hungary as lieth on both sides of Tibiscus, inhabited at that time by the Slaves and some scattered Remnants of the Avars, whom they killed up, or forced to seek new Habitations, planting themselves in those places which they took from them, now called the Upper Hungary. In the times of Lewis the fourth, Successor to Arnulphus, they passed over the Danow, and subdued Pannonia, dismembring it from Empire and name of Germany: after that they ranged with unmerciful Cruelty over all Germany, Italy, Greece, Sclavonia, Dacia, till, broken by the Forces of the Dutch Emperors, and mollified by the softness of the Christian Religion, they became more quiet. Their Government at the first was under Dukes: Stephen the fourth Duke, on his receiving of the Gospel, being honoured with the Title of King; enjoyed by his Successors to this very day. In the time of Ladislaus, surnamed the Saint, Dalmatia and Croatia were added to the Crown of Hungary, bequeathed to him by his Sister Zelomira, the Widow to the last King. In that of Bela the Fourth, the Tartarians, to the number of 500000 fighting Men, brake into this Country, and like a violent Whirlwind carried all before them, Anno 1248, tyrannizing here for three years space, committing merciless Massacres, and making horrible Spoils where-so-ever they came. In that of Stephen the Fourth, Austria and Bulgaria were made tributary. By the Daughters of Bela and Stephen, both the Fourth of those Names, the Houses of Naples and Bohemia came to join the Kingdom of Hungary; as Lewis the first, by Elizabeth his Mother, Sister of Casimi the second, did the Kingdom of Poland. The rest of their Affairs shall be briefly touched at in the following Catalogue of

The Dukes and Kings of HUNGARY.

A. Ch.

1. Cusala, the first Duke (or Captain) of the Hungars, subdued Transylvania and the Upper Hungary, and passed over the Danow; slain in his Wars against the Dutch then possessed of Pannonia.
2. Toxus, subdued Pannonia or the Lower Hungary.
3. Geisa, Son of Toxus.
- 1000 4. Stephen, the fourth Duke, and first King of Hungary.
- 1039 5. Peter, surnamed the Alman, Nephew of Stephen; deposed by Andrew and Bela, Sons of Ladislaus, Son of Geisa the first, and Brother of Stephen the first King.
- 1047 6. Andrew, eldest Son of that Ladislaus.
- 1059 7. Bela, the Brother of Andrew.
- 1062 8. Solomon, the Son of Andrew, expelled his Kingdom by
- 1075 9. Geisa II. Son of Bela.
- 1078 10. Ladislaus, surnamed the Saint, Brother of Geisa the second.
- 1096 11. Coloman, Son of Geisa the 2d.
- 1114 12. Stephen II. Son of Coloman.
- 1132 13. Bela II. Nephew of Geisa the 2d. by his Son Almus.
- 1142 14. Geisa III. Son of Bela the 2d.
- 1162 15. Stephen III. Son of Geisa the 3d.
- 1172 16. Bela III. Brother of Stephen the 3d.
- 1191 17. Emaricus, Son of Bela the 3d.
- 1201 18. Ladislaus II. Son of Emaricus, reigned but six Months, being slain by Treason very young, and without Issue.

- 1201 19. Andrew II. Son of Bela the 3d. and Brother of Emericus.
- 1236 20. Bela IV. Son of Andrew the 2d.
- 1271 21. Stephen IV. Son of Bela the 4th.
- 1273 22. Ladislaus III. Son of Stephen the 4th.
- 1290 23. Andrew III. Nephew to Bela the 4th by his Brother Stephen.
- 1302 24. Charles, surnamed Martel, Son of Charles, King of Naples, by Mary, Daughter to Stephen the 4th. Against whom was Chosen Wenceslaus King of Bohemia, Son of Wenceslaus the second, and of Anne his Wife, Daughter of Bela the fourth; and after three years Otho of Bavaria, descended from Elizabeth, another of the Daughters of Bela the fourth, was chosen also by a Faction against Wenceslaus. But Wenceslaus surrendering his Claim to Otho, and Otho not long after being forced to renounce his Title, Charles Martel remained King of the whole.
- 1343 25. Ludovicus, Nephew to Charles Martel by his Son Carlbert, succeeded King of Poland also, in right of Elizabeth his Mother, Sister of Casimir the 2d.
- 1383 26. Charles II. King of Naples, descended from Charles of Naples, and Mary, Daughter of Stephen the 4th, before-mentioned, by their Son John of Durazzo, one of the younger Brothers of Charles Martel; poisoned after a short Reign by the Widow of the former King, to make a way for her Daughter to the Crown.
- 1387 27. Sigismund, Emperor, King of Bohemia, and Duke of Luxemburg, succeeded in right of Mary his Wife, eldest Daughter of Lewis or Ludovicus, her younger Sister Eduigis being Queen of Poland.
- 1438 28. Albert of Austria, Emperor, and King of Hungary and Bohemia, in right of Elizabeth his Wife, the Daughter of Sigismund.
- 1440 29. Ladislaus or Vladislaus, Son of Jagello King of Poland, in the minority of Ladislaus the Son of Albert, chosen King of Hungary; unfortunately slain at the Battel of Varna, with 30000 of his People; and perhaps his Perjury might deserve it. For having made and sworn a Truce with the Turk, the Pope's Legate, upon a seeming advantage, absolved him of his Oath, and drew him into the Field. At the beginning the Christians had the better: but at the last, Amurath the second, against whom they fought, lifting up his Eyes to Heaven, and desiring Christ to look upon the perfidious Dealing wherewith his Followers had dishonoured him, re-encouraged his Men, and so got the Victory.
- 1444 30. Ladislaus V. King of Bohemia, the Son of Albert by Elizabeth, Daughter of Sigismund and Mary.
- 1458 31. Matthias Corvinus, Son of the Famous Hunniades, after the death of Ladislaus the 5th chosen King of Hungary.
- 1491 32. Vladislaus II. or Ladislaus VI. Son of Casimir the 4th of Poland, and of Elizabeth the Daughter of Albert, succeeding in the Kingdoms of Hungary and Bohemia; his three younger Brothers successively in that of Poland.
- 1517 33. Ludovicus II. King of Hungary and Bohemia both, born dead before the ordinary course of Nature; being in the 21th year of his Age, and in the 10th of his Reign, unfortunately drawn into the Field, to encounter Solyman the Magnificent, one of the hardiest Captains in his time. The Battel was fought at a Village called Mogachz or Mugace, just betwixt Belgrade and Buda; in which 19000 of the Hungarians were slain, and the young King drowned in the flight. A most lamentable discomfiture. Lewis thus dead, John Sepusio, Vaivod or Governor of Transylvania, was by the States chosen King of Hungary. But Ferdinand, Archduke of Austria, and Brother unto Charles the Fifth, challenged the Kingdom in Right of Anne his Wife, Daughter to Vladislaus, and Sister to Lewis, King of Hungary and Bohemia. On this Pretence he invaded the Kingdom, and drove out John his Competitor; who, to recover his Right, called Solyman the Magnificent into the Country, who took so fast footing in it, that his Successors could never since be removed.
- 1527 34. John Sepusio, Vaivod of Transylvania, chosen King upon the Death of Ludovicus the second, outed by Ferdinand of Austria, restored by Solyman the Great Turk, died Anno 1540: after whose Death the Hungarians caused his Son Stephen, an Infant, to be crowned King in his Cradle, of which he was immediately deprived by Solyman his pretended Patron, who, under colour of preserving that Kingdom for him, seized Buda, and other the chief Towns thereof, which he after kept unto himself.
- 1540 35. Ferdinand of Austria, elected King of Bohemia, in respect to the Lady Anne, his Wife, Sister of Ludovicus the second, Anno 1527, did in the same Right lay Claim to the Crown of Hungary; chosen to which by a party prepared for him, he was always in contention with John de Sepusio; each of them acknowledged King by their several Factions: but he was by both sides received on the death of John.
- 1562 36. Maximilian, Emperor, King of Hungary and Bohemia, Archduke of Austria, Son of Ferdinand.
- 1572 37. Rodolphus, Emperor, &c. Son of Maximilian.
- 1608 38. Matthias, Brother of Rodolphus, afterwards Emperor.
- 1618 39. Ferdinand II. of Gratz, next Heir unto Matthias, of the House of Austria, afterwards Emperor, &c. against whom a Party of Hungarians called in Bethlen Gabor, Prince of Transylvania, whom they elected for their King intending (as they said) to crown him also. But the Affairs of Bohemia going on the Emperor's side, Gabor relinquished his Pretensions, and hearkened to a Peace betwixt them.
- 1625 40. Ferdinand III. Son of Ferdinand the second, chosen and crowned King in the life of his Father, and in the year 1627 King of Bohemia also, succeeding after him in the Empire.
- 1647 41. Ferdinand IV. Elected in the Life of Ferdinand the third, his Father, King of Hungary, before whom also he died of the Small Pox, in the year 1653.
- 1658 42. Leopold, Elected after the Death of Ferdinand the third, his Father, a Prince born to Revenge the Injuries of his Ancestors, beating the Turks in 1683 from the Walls of Vienna, and winning Gren, in 1684 besieging Buda; in in 1685 he took Newbanfal; in 1686 he took Buda; in 1687 he defeated a vast Body of Turks in the Plains of Mohatz, the 2d of August: After which followed the Surrender of Esseck, Agria, and Alba Regalis. And in the Winter he assembled the States of Hungary at Presburg, wherein

- 1687 43. Joseph, his eldest Son, was choien the first Hereditary King of Hungary, the Crown being entailed upon the Heirs of his Body, and for want of such Issue upon the King of Spain and his Issue, the Hungarians swearing an Absolute Allegiance instead of the Conditional they had promised to his Ancestors; and accordingly he was crowned King of Hungary the 9th Day of December. He was born the 26th Day of July, 1678, and is a Prince of great Expectation.

This Kingdom doth pretend it self to be Elective, and to have special Privileges induiged them by their former Princes; and anciently indeed it was so in both respects, the last especially; King Andrew giving Authority to his Prelates, Peers, and other People, Ut sine nota alicujus Infidelitatis, &c. that without any imputation of Disloyalty they might contravert, oppose, and resist their King, if he did any thing in violation of their Laws and Sanctions. But both their Liberty of Elections and pretence of Privileges have been so shaken and restrained by their Kings of the House of Austria, that the Elections are become a matter of Formality only, and their Privileges depending wholly on their Prince's pleasure, now grown too potent for them to contend withal, unless they should betray their Country into the hands of the Turks. To which some of them have expressed some strong Inclinations, the Oppressions laid upon them by the Austrian Family being deemed unsufferable.

The Forces of this Kingdom, when it was entire, may best be seen by those great Armies which they have brought into the Field against the Turk. By whom two parts of three being since subdued, that which remains must not be thought able to answer the proportion of former times; though they have done more than could be reasonably expected from it. For at the Battel of Kereslure, Anno 1596, there were 6000 Hungarian Horse, and 10000 Foot of this Nation only; besides those of Germany and Transylvania: and the next year, notwithstanding the Dilcomfiture of that Army, they raised no less than 20000 Horse and Foot, on the noise of some Preparations among the Turks.

'Tis true, their Foot are commonly but meanly armed; the defect wherein is rather to be imputed to the Prince, than unto the People, who can but bring their Bodies (which is all they have) for defence of their Country. And for their Horse (whom they call Hoyducks) maintained in continual readines at the charge of the Nobility and principal Gentry, they are next Cousins to the Cossacks, almost as mischievous as they, and hold as strict Intelligence with the Turks as those do with the Tartars.

The chief Revenues of this Kingdom come from the Silver-Mines, out of which is yearly raised about a Million and a half of Guldens. Maximilian the second made it up Two Millions, by seizing on the Lands of Cathedral and Collegiate Churches, and alliging Annual Pensions to the Bishops, Cannons, and other Religious Persons. Most of which Sum comes clearly to the Emperor's Coffers, the Presidiary Soldiers being paid with Contribution-Money raised upon the Country; and the Lieutenant General, whose Entertainment comes to 30000 Dollars yearly, defrayed upon their Purfes also.

The chief Order of Knighthood in this Kingdom was that of the Dragon, instituted by Sigismund, Emperor and King hereof, at such time as by the Council of Constance against John Hus and Hieron of Prague, and by the sharpness of his Sword proved upon their Followers, he had cast down (as he conceived) the Dragon of Heresie and Schism. But the Device proved of no long continuance, expiring almost with the Author.

The Arms of Attila the Hunn, once the King of this Country by the name of Pannonia, are said to have been Guels, a Falcon displayed Or, membred and crowned Argent. But the Arms of the Kingdom at this time are Barrewise of eight pieces, Guels and Argent.

The 13th of April, 1690, the strong Fort of Canisa was surrendered to the Germans, which was all the Places the Turks then had in the Lower Hungary. So that the Emperor was then possessed of all the Places as far as Nissa, on the Western side of the Danube; but on the Eastern the Turks had Grand-Waradin, Giula, Lippa and Temesware; but the first was much streightned by a Blockade.

And so much for HUNGARY.

O F SCLAVONIA.

SCLAVONIA is bounded on the East with Servia, Macedonia, and Epirus, from which it is parted by the River Drinus, and a Line drawn from thence unto the Adriatick; on the West with Carniola in Germany, and Istria in the Seignioury of Venice, from which last it is divided by the River Arfia; on the North with Hungary, on the South with the Adriatick Sea. So called from the Slaves, or Slavi, a Sarmatian People; of whom more anon.

The present Sclavonia is but a small (if any) part of that here described by Heylin, and is bounded on the North by the Drave, which parts it from the Lower Hungary on the East by the Danube, dividing it from the Upper Hungary; on the South by the Save, which separates it from Croatia, Bosnia, and Servia; and on the West it has Carniola and Stiria, and it is in length from West to East 50 German Miles, in breadth 12; which is but a small part of our Author's Sclavonia.

It contains in length from Asra to the River Drinus, according to Pliny's Computation, 800 Italian Miles, the greatest breadth being 325 of the same Miles. But others reckon the length of it at no more than 480 Miles: who may be reconciled with Pliny by supposing this, that these last measure in a straight and direct Line from River to River; and that Pliny coasted by the Creeks and Reaches of the Adriatick. It is situate in the Northern Temperate Zone; betwixt the middle Parallels of the sixth and seventh Climates; so that the longest Day in Summer is about fifteen Hours and an half.

The Country is generally fruitful of all those Commodities which are found in Italy, to which it is little inferiour; yielding not only Wine and Oil in very good plenty, but good store of Cattel; and of wild Beasts of pleasure is no want at all; some rich Veins also of Gold and Silver. The Northern parts are mountainous, cold for the most part, lying under Snows, not capable of Wine, or any the like Productions which require much Heat. But even these mountainous parts afford very good Pasturage, and breed a wealthy race of Sheep, which bring forth young twice a year, and are shorn four times. Nor do the Sea-coasts come behind in advancing the Profit of the People, not only yielding store of Fish, but the benefit of many excellent and convenient Havens.

The People are courageous, proud, stubborn, and untractable, of strong Bodies and able Constitutions, fit for works of Drudgery; and so employed by the Venetians, when first brought under their Command: who, using them in all servile Offices both at home and abroad, occasioned the neighbouring Nations to call their Villains or Bond-servants; as they of Venice did by the name of Slaves; that being originally as to this People the name, not of their Condition, but of their Ancestors and Country.

The Christian Faith was here planted, I mean in reference to this People who do now inhabit it, about the time of Charles the Bald, Emperor of the West, Anno 877, Sueropilus being the first of their Kings who embraced the Gospel. But lying in the mid-way of Greece and Italy, the Religion of the Church of Rome, and that of the Greek Church are both allowed of; that of the Greeks being as prevalent in the East parts hereof, as that of Rome is in the Western. But here it is to be observed, that though this People, according to their Division into East and West; follow the Rights and Ceremonies of those several Churches; yet on both sides it is indulged them to celebrate Divine Offices in their natural Language, contrary to the usage of the Church of Rome in all places else. And yet the People are not all of the Christian Faith, the Turkish and Mahometan prevailing in those Towns and Territories under their Obedience.

But though they be not of one Religion, they are all of one Language, which is the old Sarmatian (or, Sclavonian) Tongue, generally spoken in the Empire of Russia, Livonia, Poland, Silesia, Bohemia, Moravia, some part of Hungary, Istria, Sclavonia, where we now are, Dacia, Epirus, Georgia, Mengrelia, (both in Asia) and by all the Captains, Officers, and other Soldiers of the Turkish Empire: the Language generally spreading over all those Countries which either were Sarmatian in their first Original, or made theirs by Conquest under the united name of Slaves, or otherwise intermixed with them by the necessity of Commerce and Trade, or dispatch of their common Businesses. Inasmuch as, taking in the Subdivisions of the Provinces and Countries before specified, it is affirmed by Gesner, a right learned Man, that there are no fewer than three-score Nations which have the Sclavonian Tongue for their vulgar Language.

Chief Mountains in this Country are those called Scardonici, (from Scardona, one of the best Towns of Illyris) dividing Dalmatia in the midst, and extending along the Coasts thereof; by Ptolomy called Arduum. Of Rivers those of special note amongst the Ancients were, 1. Titius, now Varietcha; separating Illyris from Dalmatia. 2. Arfia, now Asfa, the utmost bound upon the West; as, 3. Drinus is upon the East: of which the first falleth into the Bay of the Adriatick, which is called Golfo di Quernero (Sinus Flanaticus by the Ancients;) the other into the Sav or savus, somewhat West of Belgrade. 4. Narvon, now Narento, running not far from Epidaurus.

The Boundaries and Land-Marks being thus set out, I should proceed to the Division of the Country as now it standeth. But I must first look on it as it stood in the time of the Romans: in whose time that part of the whole Province which lay from the River Arfia to the Titius was named Liburnia and Illyris; that from the Titius to the Drinus was called Dalmatia. But the Illyrians being the stouter and more warlike People, and such as created greatest Troubles to the Romans, it pleased the Conquerors, when they had fully subdued both Nations, to call the whole Country by the name of Illycum; and not so only, but to extend this name over all their Provinces (the Diocese of Thrace excepted) which lay between the Alps and the Euxine Sea, the Adriatick and the Danow; for so far the Jurisdiction of the Praefectus Praetorio of Illyricum did at first extend. Italic Praefecto (saith Zosimus) Constantinus, ejus Institutor, Macedones attribuit, Thessalos, Cretenses, Graciam, & circumjacentes Insulas, Epirum utrumque, Illyricos, Dracos, Triballos, & Pannonias, Valeriam usque & Mysiam superiorem. And that all these did then pass by the name of Illyricum appeareth as well by that of Pollio in the Life of Claudius the second, expressly saying, Illyricum, Thracas, Mysos, Dacos, Dalmatia, & Pannonias continebat; as by that of Socrates the Historian, who, lib. 32. cap. 10. calleth Sirmium the chief Town of Pannonia Inferior, and lib. 5. cap. 6. Theſſalonica, the chief City of Macedon, Urbes Illyricas or Illyrian Cities. By which account Illyricum, in the largeſt extent of that name, contained no leſs than 18 Provinces of the Roman Empire; that is to ſay, 1. Noricum Mediterraneum, 2. Noricum Ripenſe, 3. Pannonia Superior, 4. Pannonia Inferior, 5. Valeria, 6. Savia, 7. Dalmatia, 8. Mœſia Superior, 9. Dardania, 10. Dacia Mediterranea, 11. Dacia Ripenſis, 12. Macedonia, 13. Theſſaly, 14. Achaia, 15. Crete, 16. Epirus Vetus, 17. Epirus Nova, and 18. Prævalitana. Theſe 18 Provinces being caſt or made up into three Dioceſes, viz. the Dioceſs of Illyricum ſpecially ſo called, containing the ſeven firſt, 2. the Dioceſs of Macedon, containing the ſeven laſt, and 3. the Dioceſs of Dacia, comprehending the other four, were governed by the Præfeſtus Prætorio for Illyricum, who had firſt his chief Seat and Reſidence at Sirmium before mentioned. But in the Diviſion of the Empire betwixt the Sons of Theodoſius the Great into the Eaſtern and Weſtern, the Dioceſs of Illyricum ſpecially ſo called (after that named Illyricum Occidentale) was laid unto the Weſtern Empire, under the Governance of the Præfeſtus Prætorio of Italy; and thereupon the Seat of Reſidence of the Præfeſtus Prætorio for Illyricum removed from Sirmium unto Theſſalonica. So that we are now to look upon Illyricum in a ſtricter Notion, as a Dioceſs of the Weſtern Empire, containing the ſeven Provinces before ſpecified, whereof both Noricums, both Pannonia's, and Valeria, (if at leaſt Stiermark be that Valeria, as ſome ſay it is) have been deſcribed already in their proper places. There now remains only Savia and Dalmatia to be ſpoken of: the firſt containing all thoſe parts of this Country lying on both ſides of the Savus, (whence it had the name;) the laſt, thoſe parts hereof which lie towards the Sea, known by the ancient name of Dalmatia, the Region of Illyris properly ſo called being added to it. But as new Lords give new Laws, ſo they give new Names: the Country being divided by the Sclavi into two Kingdoms, viz. of Croatia and Dalmatia; of which the firſt contained the Province of Savia, the laſt took up the whole Province of Dalmatia, bounded as before, but keeping the name of Sclavonia to it ſelf alone, being the only Province in which the name and memory of the Sclavi is retained amongſt us. Afterwards as it came to be divided (as at laſt it was) betwixt the Kings of Hungary and the State of Venice, we find it ſubdivided into theſe 6 parts; that is to ſay, 1. Windiſchland, 2. Croatia, 3. Bosnia, 4. Dalmatia, 5. Liburnia, or Contado di Zara, and 6. the Sclavonian Iſland.

1. WINDISCHLAND.

WINDISCHLAND is bounded on the Eaſt with part of the Lower Hungary, from which it is ſeparated by a Line drawn from St. Nicollus near the River Dravus, to the Town of Polega, ſtanding on a little River which falls into the Savus; on the Weſt with Carniola, or Krain, a Province of the Archdukedom of Auſtria, on the North with the River Dravus, on the South with Croatia. It is thus called by the Dutch, as the Land or Country of the Winnithi, or Venedi, the greateſt Nation of the Sclaves, whom generally they call by the name of Windiſch; and anciently, for ſo much of it as lieth on the North of the Savus, accounted part of Pannonia Inferior, as afterwards of the Province of Savia, till conquered by the Sclaves, and laid unto their Poſſeſſions, from them named Wendiſchland, as before.

Places of moſt importance in it are, 1. Windiſch-gratz, ſeated on the Dravus, the Venundria and Vindomana of the Ancients. 3. Sagona, near unto the Savus. 3. Gradiſkia, on the South, and 4. Zagabria, on the North of the ſame River: from which laſt a great part of this Country is called Comitatus Zagabrienſis. 5. Novigrad, on the Savus alſo, but more near to Germany. 6. Petromyna, ſituate at the foot of the Mountains which are between the Savus and the Dravus; and divided Hungary from Sclavonia. 7. Siffeg, or Siffaken, (the Siffia of Pliny and Antoninus) ſituate on the Sam, over againſt Zagabria, where it receiveth the River Kulp; famous for the notable Reſiſtance which the Turks there found, Anno 1593, who, hoping by the Conqueſt of this Province to open a free paſſage into Germany, entered it with a puſſant Army, (having in their way taken the Caſtle of Oſtrowitz, and the ſtrong Town of Wibits in Croatia) and ſate down very ſtrongly intrenched before this Town. But the Town held it out moſt gallantly againſt all their Batteries and Aſſaults, till relieved by a power of Germans who came to ſuccor them: by which 8000 of the Turks were ſlain in the place, and moſt of the reſt drowned in the River Savus as they fled haſtily and (through that great haſte) blindly from the Sword of the Conqueror.

This Province, for the moſt part, is under the Princes of the Houſe of Auſtria, as Kings of Hungary, to which Crown it formerly belonged: thoſe parts of it which lie next to Hungary, on the North and Eaſt, groaning under the Tyranny and Bondage of the Turkiſh Garrifons.

2. CROATIA.

CROATIA is bounded on the North with Windiſchland, from which it is parted by the River Una or Wana, on the Eaſt with Bosnia, on the South with Liburnia, or Contado di Zara; on the Weſt with Carniola. The reaſon of the name I find not among my Authors, but only impoſed by the Sclaves at the firſt coming hither; who comprehended under this name all the Inland parts of Sclavonia, from the Mountain Ardium to Pannonia, including Bosnia and Windiſchland, though diſtinguiſhed afterwards.

The Country is for the moſt part cold, mountainous and hilly, overſpread by the Branches of the Mountains Babii, ſpoken of by Ptolomy, yet reaſonably fruitful, ſtored with all neceſſary Proviſions for the life of man, and would yield more increaſe and profit both to Lord and Tenant, were it not for the ill neighbourhood of the Turk, to whoſe Tyranny and Oppreſſions it hath been and is ſtill expoſed. The People for the general are held to be good Soldiers, mentioned in our modern Stories by the name of Crabats, or Croats.

Chief Towns in it are, 1. Mafch, or Moſth, bordering upon Germany, the Aleta of the Ancients. 2. Oſtrowitz, a ſtrong Fort on the ſame Frontier. 3. Wibits, or Vibitz, by the Dutch called Bibighn, by the Ancients Funium, the Metropolis or chief place of the Country, encompassed like an Iſland by the River Una, and fortified with ſtrong Works by the help of Art; but taken by the Turk, Anno 1592, and all the Soldiers in it cruelly murdered, contrary to the Articles agreed on at the Surrendry. 4. Zeng, 5. Wackat, 6. Tarnaw, 7. Modriſch, of which little memorable.

This Country, with the reſt included anciently under this name, was one of the two Kingdoms of Sclavonia; the Princes whereof were uſually entituled Kings of Croatia and Dalmatia. In the year 1007 the Venetians having before poſſeſſed themſelves of ſome Towns on the Sea-ſide, firſt ſet footing there: How the whole Country of Sclavonia came to the Crown of Hungary ſhall be ſhewn anon. It is held a part of it, in the right thereof, by the Houſe of Auſtria; part of it by the Turks, in the way of Conqueſt: the Venetians having now no ſhare in it, for ought I can find.

3. BOS-

3. BOSNIA.

BOSNIA is bounded on the East with Servia, a Province of Dacia; on the West with Croatia, on the North with the River Savus, parting it from Sclavonia properly so call'd, and the East parts of the Lower Hungary, on the South with Dalmatia. So call'd, as some think, from the River Bosna, which runneth through it; as others, from the Bessi, a People of Dacia, driven out of their Country by the Bulgari, and removing hither, by the Change of a Vowel call'd Bossi, whence the Country Bosnia.

Places of most importance in it are, 1. Jaicza, by the Latines call'd Jazyga, situate on the top of an high Hill, at the bottom whereof it is almost encompass'd with two Rivers, which there uniting pass from thence unto the Savus. The Town, by reason of the rocky Precipices of the Hill, the Unfordableness of the River, and an inaccessible Castle, is held to be impregnable: the Metropolis in former times of this petit Kingdom, and the ordinary Sepulchre for the Kings thereof. It was taken by the Turks in the year 1530, or thereabouts. 2. Warbojoni, at this time the chief Town of the Country, but not walled about. 3. Cazach, the usual Residence or Retiring-place of the Bosnian Kings. 4. Schwannica, not much observable. 5. Dorobas, the first Town taken by Mahomet the Great in his Conquest of this Kingdom; as 6. Cliffa was the last, the unfortunate King Stephen being taken in it. This Town in the year 1648, was taken from the Turks by the Venetians.

This Country anciently accounted of as a part of Croatia, together with it was united to the Crown of Hungary, under the Patronage and Homage whereof it was erected into a Kingdom; but the precise time when, I find not. Some say about the year 1420, If so, a Kingdom of late date, and short continuance. For in the year 1464 Mahomet the Great, first Emperor of the Turks, having taken Constantinople, and almost all the rest of Greece, cast his eye upon it, suddenly surprized it, and having taken Stephen the last King hereof, most barbarously commanded him to be slay'd alive. After whose death this Kingdom was converted to a Province of the Turkish Empire, and governed by one of the Bassas of it, as it still continueth.

The BANS and Kings of BOSNIA.

1. Budimirus, who was also call'd Smetoplekus, the first Christian King of Dalmatia and Servia, in the division of his Province parted Surbia, his Northern Province into two Regions, which he call'd Bosnia and Ruscia, whereof the first lies between the River Drin to the East, and Mount Pinus to the West. In these Provinces he Instituted Bans which were Governours, and Gupans or Zupans which were Sheriffs: whereupon the Bans in times following were call'd Megajupani, or Magni-supani, by the Greek and Latin Writers respectively. These Governours in time shook off the Yoke, and became Sovereign Princes in Bosnia.
2. Crescimirus, Brother of Predimirus, and Son of Tiescimirus, driving the Ban of Bosnia by force of Arms into Hungary, and joyned Croatia to it, which he had before as Successor to Cidomirus his Uncle.
3. Stephen the Son of Crescimirus, succeeded his Father, and maintained a good correspondence with the Ragufians.
4. Legetus a Bastard Son of Stephen, he rebelled against the lawful off-spring of his Father after his death.

5. Wimirus a Son of Stephen, recovered Bosnia out of the hands of Legetus.
6. Crescimirus second, Brother to Wimirus, who is call'd by the Venetian Writers Aurimirus, and was King of Croatia, and Bosnia, 994, and 1015. This Prince had only one Daughter, who was married to a King of Hungary.
7. Stephen the 2. who reigned about the year 1080.
8. Thwartkus Ban of Bosnia.
9. Borichius, or Boritzius, or Boritus, who was beaten by the Inhabitants of Ragusa, about the year 1154. These last were subject to Servia.
10. Culinus, or Culienus, succeeded Borichius, and in some Letters of Pope Innocent the third, is call'd Bacilinus, but in others more truly Ban Culinus. He lived about the year 1171, at first he imbraced the Roman Rites, but became latter-wards a Patran, or Waldensian. The Pope hereupon in the year 1200, wrote to the King of Hungary, to force this Ban to purge his Country of Heresie, on pain of being deposed. Which Emericus, then King of Hungary, accordingly endeavoured. He reigned above 36 years.
11. Zibisclaus, to whom Pope Gregory the 9th wrote about the year 1236, who was a zealous Roman Catholic, but being not able to extirpate the Heresie of his Country, the Pope imployed Calomay Duke of Sclavonia, Brother of Bela 3d. King of Hungary, with an Army in this Pious Work, who yet could not totally effect it, though he entered Bosnia with a powerful Army.
12. Ninostlaus, was Ban of Bosnia about the year 1244, and joined with the Inhabitants of Splatro, against them of Traguria, by which he brought upon himself an Hungarian War.
13. Paulus, Son of Stephen, Ban of Dalmatia and Croatia; he was also Ban of Servia under Vladislans King of Hungary. He reigned in the years 1284 and 1307.
14. Mladinus, was call'd Prince of Croatia and Bosnia, in the Life of Paul his Father in the year 1302, and was taken by Charles King of Hungary in the year 1322.
- 1302 15. Stephen 3. succeeded Mladinus, though he was not of his Family. Stephen the third Son of the former Stephen, a Prudent and a moderate Prince. He lived in the years 1326 and 1345, and died in 1357.
- 1357 16. Thwartkus, the Son of Vladislans, succeeded his Uncle Stephen when he was 22 years of Age, and governed his people with great Prudence and Moderation. Yet one Paul Culizichius or Clusichius, made a defection from him, who was taken by this young Prince. Hereupon Lewis King of Hungary invited him to his Court, as Congratulating his good Fortune, but detained him till he parted with some of his Country for his Liberty. During this his stay in Hungary, they set up Wchius his Brother, whom at his return he drove out of Bosnia, he fled into Hungary, and Lewis espoused his Quarrel. This War ended in the year 1366, when he assumed the Title of King of Bosnia, and was Crowned by the Abbot of Milescen, by the name of Stephen Myrces, with this Prince, Gregory the 2. and Urban the 5th, had many transactions, as also with Lewis King of Hungary, for the extirpating the Waldensians out of Bosnia. He prevailed in his Old Age against the Turks also, who then first invaded Bosnia, and after a peaceable Reign died in the year 1591, without lawful Issue.

- 1391 18. Stephen the Fifth, called Daviscia, the Bastard of Stephen, his Brother succeeded him in all his Dominions. He died Childless in the year 1396.
- 1396 19. Thwartkus II. Scurus Bastard Son of Thwartkus I. was crowned King of Bosnia after Stephen the 5th, but reigned but a short time.
20. Ostvia Christichius, the Son of Paul, of the Family of Sablanowich, usurped upon Thwartkus the second, pretending he was not of the the Royal Family; which caused a Civil War in which the Turks took part with Thwartkus. Ostvia in the year 1403 invaded the Ragusians.
- 1415 21. Stephen 6. called Ostoichus, or Ostoia, was Elected King of Bosnia, with him Thwartkus the second joyned against Ostoia in the year 1422. This War was ended by the Nobility of Bosnia, upon Condition these three should all be stiled Kings of Bosnia. Stephen died unmarried soon after, Ostoia in 1435, and Thwartkus having survived his Rivals, died sole King of Bosnia, in the year 1443.
22. Stephen 7. Thomasus Son of Paul Jabelo which upon the Death of Thwartkus, was presently proclaimed King of Bosnia, by the Nobility of that Kingdom, who being a Manichean, presently abjured that opinion, received Baptism from a Roman Cardinal, and in 1449 banished out of his Kingdom all those of that Sect who would not Conform. Eugenius, the then Pope, sent him a Crown, and would have persuaded him to set up the Latin Rites in Bosnia, but he fearing the Turks his too near Neighbours, refused the Overture. Refusing after this to joyn with the Christians against the Turks, Matthias King of Hungary surrender'd up against him Stephen his Son, and Radiovius his brother, by whom he was strangled in his Bed, and a Rumour spread abroad, that he died of an Old Distemper. Catherine his Queen call'd in Mahomet 2. to punish these Paracides, who glad of the opportunity came with great Forces. The Queen thereupon went to Rome, where she died in the year 1458.
- 1456 23. Stephen 8. the base Son of the former Stephen, succeeded in his Fathers Kingdom, sorely laid at by the Turks, and pursued by the Divine Vengeance for the Murder of his innocent Father. The Sultan in 1457, only rifled his Kingdom, but in 1458 finding him averse to Peace, and enraged with his ill usage of his Ambassadors; Mahomet entered Bosnia with a powerful Army, and took the wretched Prince Prisoner, and cut off his head, contrary to his promise given him. Radiovius, underwent the same punishment, at the same time also. Pope Paul the second, saith Mahomet, slew Stephen with his own hands in a Bull dated in the year 1464. The same thing is mentioned by Pius the 2. in the year 1463.
- 1467 24. In the year 1467, the Bosnians by the Procurement of Matthias King of Hungary, endeavoured to regain their Liberty, and expel the Turks by calling in the Hungarians, others say one Nichanus, was made King of Bosnia by his means. He held out till the year 1473. In 1482, the Christians recovered it again, how long they then kept it, I find not.

4. D A L M A T I A.

DALMATIA is bounded on the East with Albania, from which it is parted by the River Drino; on the West with the Titius, (now Varietca) which divides it from Liburnia; on the North with Bosnia, on the South with the Adriatick Sea. This only of all the Provinces of Slavonia retaineth its ancient Name and Bounds. So called from Dalminium, the chief Town hereof in the time of the Romans, from which the People were called Dalmatae, and the Country Dalmatia.

Dalmatia, in the flourishing times of the Greek Empire, contained all that Coast or Country which lieth between Diwazzo, (Dyrrachium) to the South, the Mountains of Istria to the North, and extended from the Adriatick Sea on the West, to the Danube on the East, which was then inhabited by various People, and contained then in it the Provinces of Morlachia, Croatia, Bosnia, Dalmatia and Servia, but it stood then divided into the Provinces of Dioclea, in which was Dyrrachium, Terbunia, Zachlunia, Pagania, Croatia and Servia, and that part which has now Appropriated to it self the name of the whole, was then call'd Croatia Baptizata by the Greeks. This vast Country was then possessed by the Slaves, who had erected in it divers Kingdoms, which they defended with great Courage against the Greeks, and the Barbarous Nations which afterwards invaded them. Du Fresne, De Familis Bizantinis. p. 295.

The Country in the time of the Romans was full of Woods, and those Woods of Robbers, who from thence issued out to make Spoil and Booty. Dalmatae sub Sylvis agunt, inde ad Latrocinia promptissimi, saith the Historian. And by the advantage of these Woods they intercepted and discomfited Gabinus, one of Cæsars Captains, marching through their Country with 1000 Horse and 15 Companies of Foot towards Alacedonia, to the Aid of his General against Pompey. But their Woods being destroyed, they became more peaceable, and, instead of Robberies by Land, began to exercise themselves at Sea in the way of Merchandizing, to which their large Sea-coast and commodious Havens served exceeding fitly.

Places of molt consideration in it are, 1. Sebenico, on the Sea-side, not far from the Influx of Titius or Varietca; by Ptolomy called Sicum, in whose time a Colony of Roman Soldiers was sent hither by the Emperor Claudius. This place has 4 times humbled the Pride and Fury of the Ottoman Forces, and is still under the Venetians. 2. Salona, a Roman Colony also, one of the Juridicial Resorts for these parts of the Province, and the ordinary Arsenal for their Natives. Renowed in ancient Stories for the Retreat of Dioclesian, a native of this Country, who, having governed the Roman Empire 20 years with much Felicity, but a great deal of Cruelty, deposed himself, and retired to this City, where he followed the Trade of a Gardner, working with his own hands, and observing with great content the productions of Nature. Inasmuch that when Maximianus Herculens, his Associate (who at his persuasion had done the like) invited him to resume the Empire, he returned this answer. Utinam possitis visere Olera nostris manibus plantata, &c. That if he would come unto Salona, and see how well the Worts which he had planted with his own hands did thrive and prosper, he would never trouble his head with Crowns, nor his hands with Scepters: a rare expression of a settled and contented mind. The name and some of the Ruins do still remain, to preserve the memory of so remarkable a place. This City was once 7 or 8 miles in compass, but is now only Ruines and Fields of Corn. It lies 4 miles from Cliffa. 3. Spalato, East of Sebenico; a Sea Town, and an Archbishop's See, who writes himself Primate of Dalmatia; as anciently and of right he was, till till the Bishop of Venice, being made a Patriarch by Pope Eugenius the fourth, Anno 1450, assumed that Title to himself, together with a Superintendency over all the Churches of this Country, as subordinate to him. Of note for many learned Prelates, but for none more than for Marcus Antoninus de Dominis, who, seeming to loath the Romish Superstition, came for Refuge into England Anno 1616, and having here both by Preaching and Writing laboured to overthrow the Church of Rome, upon I know not what Projects he declared himself to be of another mind, Anno 1622, and returned again to Rome, where he writ as reproachfully of the Church of England. So that we may say of him, as Socrates in his Ecclesiastical History saith of Ecebolius, who under Constantinus was a Christian, under Julian a Pagan, and a Christian again under Jovenian, Τοῦτο μὲν ὡς κῆρ' οὐκ ἐνυχαῖντος Ἐκεβόλιου περὶ τῶν τε καὶ ὅσων. So wavering and unconstant a Turn-Coat was Ecebolius from his beginning to his end. But Ecebolius spied better than Antonius did, he being received into the Church upon his Repentance: but this infatuated man was imprisoned in the Castle of St. Angelo, and his dead Body burnt to ashes. A just reward for so great Levity and so gross Apostasy as he shewed unto the World in his going hence. This City in the year 1420, destroyed an Army of Turks which came against it. Mr. Wheler, p. 15. has given us an exact plat of this place, which is about 400 miles from Venice. 4. Almissa, the Piguntium of Strabon, mounted on a high Rock, and defended with an impregnable Castle. 5. Stagno, upon the point of a long and spacious Chersonese, not far from which the River Naron (or Narento) falls into the Adriatick. 6. Cassiel Novo, a strong Fortress within the Gulf of Cattaro, now in possession of the Turks, but taken in the year 1687 by the Venetians, after a sharp defence made by the Turks. Mr. Wheler represents the figure of this place, page 28. 7. Antivari, on the farther or Eastern side of the Bay, an Archbishops See; but that and the Sees of his Suffragan Bishops being seven in number, are now in the possession of the Turks. 8. Cattaro, on the same side of the Bay; by Ptolomy called Afcrivium, inhabited in his time by Roman Citizens; now a strong hold for the Venetians against the Turks, and giving name unto the Gulf, which formerly called Sinus Rhizonicus, from Rhizana, (now Risne) situate at the bottom of it, is at this time called from this Town Golfo de Cattaro. 9. Dulcigno, by Ptolomy called Ulcinium, originally founded by the Colchians and therefore called Colchinium by some ancient Writers. It may contain at this day 7 or 8000 Souls. 10. Scutari, more within the Land, (the Scodra of Ptolomy and Antonius) strongly seated on a steep Rock, memorable for the stout Resistance which it made for a whole year against the whole Puissance of Mahomet the 2. battered for the most part of that time with 70 pieces of Ordnance of wondrous bigness, especially that called the Princes piece, which carried a Stone or Bullet of 1200 l. weight; but taken at the last, Anno 1578. Not far from this Town is the great Lake called by Strabo Labeatis, now the Lake of Scutari, 130 miles in compass, and environed on all sides with Mountains, except towards the North: out of which issueth the Drinus, now called Drino, or Drina, which parting Sclavonia from Macedon and Servia, passeth into the Savus. 11. Alesio, the Lissus of Ptolomy, the farthest Town of all Dalmatia towards Greece; memorable for the Grave of Scanderbeg, who was buried here, whereof more hereafter. 12. Medon, raised out of the Ruines of Dioclea, an ancient and famous City, the Birth-place of the Great Emperor Dioclesian, spoken of before. 13. Dalminium, once the Metropolis of this Province, situate on the River Drinus; first sacked by Marcus Figulus, a Roman Consul, Anno V. C. 689, and after, on a new Revolt, by one Nasica, spoken of by Strabo: not able after two such Ruins to revive again; nothing being now left of it but the name and memory.

Betwixt the Chersonese of Stagno and the Gulf of Cattaro lies the Town and Territory of RAGUSI; not subject, as all the rest are, either to the Turk or to the Venetians, but governing themselves by their own Laws and Magistrates, as a free Commonwealth: paying only to the Turk 14000 Zecchins yearly in a way of Tribute, and as much in Presents; discharged in that regard of Customs and Impositions in all his Dominions. It was anciently called Epidaurus, (of which name there were two other Cities in Peloponnesus). But that Town being raised by the Goths, the Inhabitants, (after their departure) not knowing where to retire themselves, built this in the place of it, at the Foot of a steep Mountain; enjoying a pleasant situation near the Sea, with a little, but commodious Port, forced out of the water by the art and industry of workmen. The Town is well built, fortified with Walls and a well-furnished Castle; now an Archbishops See, and a noted Empory; rich and strong in Shipping, commanding over a small and barren Territory within the Land, and some pleasant Islands in the Sea. So that the Riches of it proceed not from their Rents and Revenues rising out of the Earth, but by the benefit of their Traffick upon the Waters: in which they are secured by the Protection of the Turk, without which they had fallen before this time into the hands of the Venetians; as on the other side preserved by the State of Venice from being a Prey to their Protectors. They were of more Wealth heretofore than they are at present, at what time they traded to most parts of this Western world in those great Vessels which from hence were called Raguses, but corruptly Argosies; the last of which (their number lessening with their Trade) they lent unto the King of Spain for the War of England, Anno 1588, in which Action it was lost and wrecked on the Coast of Ireland. This City in the year 1686, desired the Protection of the Emperor.

The Catalogue of the Kings of Dalmatia, or Croatia Baptizata, from du Fresne.

1. The Avars and Huns passing the Danube in the Reign of Heraclius, and invading these Provinces, that Prince (who was much weakened by Cosroes King of Persia, and the Sarazens) called in the Croats, who were then his Allies and Friends, and lived under the Command of one Porga; and gave them the Province, on Condition they should drive out the Avars, who had began to settle in it. They accordingly entered it, and in a Battle defeated the Avars, and forcing them to return home, made themselves Masters of the Country, and embraced the Christian Faith; after which they lived under Elective Princes, which were confirmed by the Emperors of Constantinople, as an acknowledgment of their dependance on that Empire. Heraclius ended his Reign in the year of Christ 640. So that before that time, this Kingdom was erected, but the precise time is not known to me.
817. 2. Borna, who submitted to Charles the Great.
- 821 3. Ladislavus, or Ladusclavus, Nephew of Borna, was elected Duke of Dalmatia, with the consent of the Emperor Lewis, the Gentle. Porinus named by Porphyrogenetus, but without the times in which he lived.
5. Mislavus, Myslavus, or Mevius, about the years 836, and 839.
6. Tirpimirus Duke of Dalmatia, mentioned about the year 837, in a Charter of the Foundation of a Monastery.
7. To him succeeded Cresimirus his Son.
8. Dirci-

8. Dirciflausus Son of Cresmirus, both mentioned by Porphyrogenitus. He reigned about the year 1000, and was the first that assumed the Stile of King of Dalmatia.
9. Mircimirus and Surgina his Sons, contended for the Kingdom, the eldest prevailing.
10. Pribinna, or Pribunius slew Mircimirus, and reigned under the Title of Ban.
11. Godemirus, Ban of Dalmatia, laid at by the Grand-children of Mircimirus, who fought to recover the Kingdom. Their Names were Swetflausus, Cresmirus, and Gosflaus.
12. Cresmirus prevailed, and was owned King in the year 1019, and 22, or rather in 1017.
13. Stephen Son of Cresmirus.
14. Cresmirus 3. called Peter, Son of Stephen, was King of Dalmatia in the year 1059.
15. Slaviso, probably about the year 1075.
- 1076 16. Demetrius Suinimirus, of another Line, was King in the year 1078. He shook off the Yoke of the Greek Emperors in the times of Michael Drvas, under which till then his Predecessors had lived and took the Stile from Pope Gregory the seventh, he was living in 1087.
17. Stephen Son of Cresmirus 3. succeeded Demetrius, he dying without any Issue.
- 1091 18. Almus, made King by Ladislaus King of Hungary, in opposition to Stephen, the Kingdom being at the same time invaded, and as to the Sea Towns in part possessed by the Venetians, by the grant of Alexius Emperor of Greece.
- 1102 19. Calomannus King of Dalmatia, by the consent of Almus his brother, who had then obtained the Kingdom of Hungary, upon the Death of Ladislaus his Uncle. He expelled the Venetians out of Dalmatia about the year 1111. And died in 1114.
- 1117 20. Palcerus an Hungarian, re-expelled the Venetians, who returned after the Death of Coloman Neeman, King of Servia, taking the opportunity of these Broils, endeavoured to Conquer this Kingdom, but Emmanuel then Emperor of Constantinople, sending great Forces to support the Dalmatian, he return'd without doing any thing considerable, this expedition was in the year 1119. Thus the Emperor, the Hungarians, and the Venetians contended which should be the Masters of Dalmatia.
21. Almerius Son of Bela, the brother of Stephen 3. King of Hungary, became King of Dalmatia, and wore that Title in the year 1194, succeeding in it after his Father, for whose sake Emmanuel Emperor of Greece, made the expedition last mentioned. In 1203, the Venetians by the help of the Franks took Zara.
22. Almericus, after the Death of his Father, became King of Hungary, and resigned Dalmatia to his brother Andrew, under the Title of Duke of Sclavonia, in the year 1198.
23. Calomannus his Son succeeded him, who was slain by the Tartars, who had then invaded Hungary.
24. Bela 4. King of Hungary, after this time sent Viceroy's, who stiled themselves Bans of Dalmatia, of which Ladislaus is mentioned in 1245. Stephen in 1251. The Croats set up also Radicus or Stepcon, and Paulus his Son after him, who under the Title of Ban reigned in 1311. To him succeeded Maldinus his Son, who defended Zara against the Veneti- ans in 1313. About the same time Gregory the Brother of Paul was Ban of the Maritim parts, whose Son of the same name followed him. Mladinus in the interim growing great, became so insolent, that his Subjects forced him to flee into Hungary, by which means the Venetians became much greater than before.

Charles King of Hungary, thereupon sent Banovichius, Nicholaus and Mihacus his Bans into Dalmatia; and Lewis the Successor of Charles, in the year 1344, sent an Army against this Country, which subdued the Inhabitants, and drove out the Venetians in the year 1381. After this Emericus Rubelus in 1382, Stephanus, Laschovichius and Thomas, were successively Bans under Lewis. And Mary under Sigismund. Joannes Chus, and Joannes Horwathus: Sigismund recovered Dalmatia, and in the year 1409, sold Zara to the Venetians, who in 1420 by a Fleet reduced all the Sea Coast under them, which 3 years after were resigned by Sigismund by Treaty, and from thence forward they kept it, the Kings of Hungary long after possessing the Title.

5. CONTADO DI ZARA.

CONTADO DI ZARA, or the Country of Zara, called anciently Liburnia, and Illyris specially so named, is bounded on the East with Dalmatia, on the West with Istria, on the North with Croatia, and on the South with the Adriatick Sea, or Gulf of Venice.

It took this latter name (the former being long discontinued) from Zara the chief Town thereof, the Jadera of Ptolomy and the Ancients; a Roman Colony at that time, now an Archbishops See, enjoying a safe and large Port, and situate on a low Chertoneſe thrusting out like a Promontory into the Adriatick, belonging to the State of Venice, by whom it is well fenced and fortified against foreign Invasions. For the possession and command of this Town there have been great Wars betwixt the Hungarians and the Venetians, to whom it seemeth to be of such importance, that being once taken by the Hungarians, it was redeemed for 100000 Crowns of Ladislaus King of Naples, pretending against Sigismund of Luxemburg to the Crown of Hungary. In this Town is the Church of S. John de Malvasia, which was built by a company of Sailers, who, being in a tempest, made a Vow, that, if they escaped, they would consecrate a Temple to S. John de Malvasia, whose Morter should be tempered with Malinſey: and accordingly they paid their Vows. Far less did another Master of a Ship intend to perform his Promise, though he spoke bigger, who, in a like extremity of Danger, promised our Lady to offer at her Altar a Candle as great as the main Mast of his Ship: For when one of his Mates jogging him, told him he had promised an impossibility: Tush, Fool, (replied the Master) we must speak her fair in time of need; but if ever I come ashore, I will make her be content with a Candle of Eight to the pound. And in a like fit of Devotion was he who on the same occasion plainly told God, that he was no common Beggar, he never troubled him with Prayers before; and if he would hear him at that time, he would never trouble him again. The Learned Mr. Wheler, has given us the Plat of this Town, in his Journey into Greece, p. 8.

Other Towns herein considerable are, 1. Albona, retaining still the old name, (the Alvona of Ptolomy) situate near the River Arſia, the Divider of this Province from Istria. 2. Flavona or Flanona, situate against the Gulf of Quernero, of old called Sinus Flanaticus, as before was noted: of ill report amongst Sailers, for frequent Tempests raised on every Wind. 3. Zegna, by Ptolomy and Pliny called Senia, situate on a Flat or Level. 4. Nona, of old called Enona, compassed with the the Sea. 5. Scriffia, now a poor Village, in the place where stood the Argyrum of Pliny. 6. Scardona, now a mean Village also, heretofore of great note, and the Juridical Resort for the whole Province; from whence the neighbouring Mountains had the name of Scardonici, the Bounds of this Country and Croatia.

The ancient name of this Country was Liburnia, as before is said, but extending more Northwards beyond the Mountains of Ardium or Scardonici; this and Dalmatia being then the Membra dividenda of the whole Illyricum. The People hereof, called by one general name Liburni, were much given to Piracies; and for the better speed therein, the Authors and Inventors of those swift Vessels which were called Liburnice and Liburnæ. Of which thus Horace.

*Ibis Liburnis inter alta navium,
Amice, propugnacula.
That is to say,
In Liburnian shalt thou be Amongst the stoutest Ships at Sea.*

In imitation of which Vessels, being swift and light, the Romans in the time of their Wealth and Pride, invented a kind of Chair or Litter (such as those we call Sedans) wherein they were carried on Mens Shoulders with such ease and pleasure, that they could not only sleep or read, but write in them also. The Porters or Bearers of them were of this Nation commonly; from whence, or from the Fashion of the Vessel which they did resemble, they were called Liburni. Of these thus Juvenal in his third Satyr,

*Si vocat officium, turba cedente vehetur
Dives, & ingenti curret super ora Liburno,
Atque obiter leget, aut scribet, vel dormiet intus.
Namque facit Somnum clausa Lætica fenestra.*

Thus Englished by my honoured Friend Sir Robert Stapleton, in his excellent Translation of that harsh Satyr:

When business calls, a Crowd the rich Man shuns,
And o'er Mens Heads in's huge Sedan he runs,
Reads, writes, and sleeps within it, as he goes:
For Sleep will come if he the Curtains close.

Besides which Office of Chair-carriers, or Sedan-men, as we call them now, this People being, when once conquered, a servile Nation, furnished the Romans with those Beadles whom they employed in calling the Citizens from the Fields to their publick Business: to whom the same Poet alludeth in the next Satyr, saying, Clamante Liburno, Currite jam sedet, &c. But to proceed. The nearness of this Country to the Adriatick occasioned the Bay of Quernero, or Cornaro, as some call it, commonly called Sinus Flanaticus, to be sometimes named Sinus Liburnicus; the parts of Italy on the other side of it to be called Regna Liburnorum in the Poet Virgil; and gave the name of Liburnades to a Shole of Islands lying on the Coast hereof, 60 at least in number, as is said by Strabo. To which and other Islands of the Adriatick we are now to hasten, leaving the Stories of Illyricum to the close of all.

6. The SCLAVONIAN Islands.

Along the Coasts of Slavonia lie a cluster of Islands, to the number of a thousand, as is said by Pliny, most of which (if indeed so many) are but Rocks, not Islands, or not inhabited at all, nor of any note. The Principal whereof, and such as deserve place here, are, 1. the Liburnades before mentioned. 2. The Abysrtides. 3. The Isles of Ragusia. 4. Arbe. 5. Curzola. 6. Zara. 7. Lissa and Brazilia; the rest not being worth the looking after as to our Design. The whole number of the Inhabitants is reckoned in the total to no more than 40000 Persons.

1. The LIBURNADES, said by Strabo to be sixty in number, lie all along the Coasts of Liburnia, or Contado di Zara. The chief whereof are, 1. Iffa, now called Pago, containing 100 Miles in compass, having a Town of the same name; but in all that Tract of ground not above 1500 Inhabitants, in the time of my Author, by reason of the sharp Air, and great want of Fuel. The Salt-pits here yield great Commodity not only to the People themselves, but also to the State of Venice, Supreme Lords hereof. 2. Tragurium, now Traù and Trabu, so called from the chief Town hereof, built by those of Iffa: so near the Continent, that it seems to be a part thereof. By Mela it is named Tigerium, with some little difference. 3. Pharus, so called from the Pharii, or Parii, of whom it was once a Colony; long since come to Ruine. It is now called Lefina, the greatest of all the Adriatick, as being 150 Miles in compass, and very Fruitful for the bigness. It hath a Town of the same name, which enjoys a safe and spacious Harbour; unwall'd and of no great beauty, but Fortified with a strong Castle, which commandeth both the Harbour and the Shipping in it. The Birth-place of Demetrius Pharius, so often mentioned in the Stories of Greece and Rome.

2. The ABSYRTIDES are in number many, so called from the River Abysrtus, which thereabouts falls into the Adriatick; according unto that of Lucan;
*Et cadit Adriaces spumans Abysrtus in undas, Abysrtus foaming with his haste,
Into the Adria falls at last.*

But whether that River were so called by the Colchians at their landing there, in memory of Abysrtus the Son of Æctus, King of Colchis, whom they went to seek, or for some other reason, I determine not. Certain I am, it could not be so named from the scattering of his Limbs hereabouts by Medea, his unnatural Sister, as is said by Pliny; that cruel Fact being done on the Shores of the Euxine, the place being called Tomos afterwards upon that occasion. But of those Islands, being in number many, as before was said, two only are of special Note; that is to say, 1. Vegia, or Vigio, not far from Segna on the firm Land, containing in compass betwixt 80 and 100 Miles, and about 10000 Inhabitants: the most populous of all these Seas. It hath a Town of the same name, with a very fair Harbour: the Island by Pliny called Curilla, the chief Towns of it in his time being, Fulsinium and Curicum. 2. Abisrtus, as Ptolomy, Abysrtum, as Pliny calls it, in whose time it was one Island only, but now divided into two by the Venetians, letting in the Sea betwixt them: the one of them is called Cherso the other Osero; both joined together by a Bridge made by the Venetians, and both together, making up 140 Miles in compass; each of them having one Town only, and that of the same name with the Island; the Inhabitants in both not exceeding 50000 Persons. Stored with sufficiency of Corn, plenty of Wine, and abundance of Wood, great quantities whereof are sent yearly to Venice. They have also goodly Herds of Cattel, and great Flocks of Sheep; affording by their Flesh, Wooll, Cheese and Butter, a good increase of profit to the Owners of them.

3. The Islands of RAGUSI, (for so I call them which belong to the Commonwealth) are but three in number. 1. Gravosa, a very pleasant place, full of Gardens of Oranges, Limons, and Pomegranates. 2. Langustra, environed about with very high Mountains, in which are the Ragusian Farms, made rich by great Charge and Industry of the several Occupants, so as to yield them Wine, Oil, and most excellent Fruits; which they receive more plentifully from a goodly Plain situate in the midst hereof, and naturally more fruitful than the other parts. Near to this last Island is good fishing for Sprats: and in both an Art of making their Trees to bring forth Oysters, by bending down their Boughs, and staying them under the Water with Stones; so as in two years there are so many Oysters fastned to them as good Meat. Melyda, lying betwixt Ragusia and the Isle of Curzola, by Pliny called Melita, and on that ground supposed by some to be that Island on which St. Paul did suffer Shipwreck, Acts 26. But the name of Barbarus which the Text joins to the Inhabitants of it, not proper to an Island betwixt Greece and Italy in the times of St. Paul, and his Landing, when he parted thence, at Syracuse, an Haven of Sicily so far from this, so near unto the other Melita, which is now called Malta, sufficiently refel this Fancy, though otherwise not improbably grounded.

4. Of those which are known only by one single name the chief are, ARBE, so called in the time of Pliny, from the best Town of it, but by Ptolomy it is named Seardona. A pleasant Island, in compass about Thirty Miles, and containing some 3000 Inhabitants; the only Havenless Isle of all the Adriatick: but that defect is abundantly recompensed by the natural Sweetness of the place, which so enticed certain disolute Rovers of Austria, that they seized upon it Anno 1618, and had like to have occasioned an heavy War betwixt Ferdinand, Arch-Duke of the House of Gratz, (not long after chosen King of the Romans) and the State of Venice, if Philip the third of Spain had not made up the Breach.

5. CURSOLA, by Ptolomy and Strabo called Corcyra, or Melena, more rightly Corcyra Melena, or Corcyra Nigra, to difference it from Corcyra, now Corfu, in the Ionian Sea. The chief Town of it, being of the same name with the Island, was Founded by the Gnidians of the Isle of Crete. It is sufficiently Fruitful, but of Wine especially; Forty Miles long, in compass Ninety, and very populous for the bigness; notwithstanding that the People, being Sea-faring Men, do much use the Seas, and build many Ships. In the year 1571, a little after the taking of Cyprus, and before the Battel of Lepanto, it was invaded by Uluç Aly, General of the Turkish Fleet, with a Navy of Sixty Gallies: for fear of whom Contareno, the Venetian Governor, together with the Townsmen and Garrison Soldiers, abandoned Curzola, the chief Town hereof. The silly Women thus forsaken, and preferring Death before Dishonour, defended the Walls, and with Fire, Stones, and such other Weapons as they had, they beat off the Enemy; till at the last a violent Tempest forced the Turkish General to remove his Gallies farther off, to a place of safety. The chief City of this Island was about 100 years since nothing but an old Castle, but now it is a good large City, and well Fortified with Walls on the South, and two Castles at the East and West ends; but there is a Rock towards the West which commands the Town and one of the Castles. The Soil of Corfu is not so Fruitful as to supply the Inhabitants with Corn, but it produceth Wine, Oil, and all sorts of good Fruit in abundance. Wueller.

6. ZARA, LISSA, BRAZZIA, three small Isles, not otherwise memorable but for their Misfortunes, spoiled by the Turks at their departure from Curzola, who carried thence 1600 Christians into cruel Bondage. The rest I purposely omit, being rather Rocks than Islands, barren and stony for the most part, and not much inhabited.

The ancient Inhabitants of Illyricum, in the full extent of it, comprehending Liburnia and Dalmatia, were the Iapodes, bordering on Italy; the Scirtones, or Scirtarii, confining upon Macedon, the Mazei, in the midst about Salona; the Perustæ, lying towards Pannonia; the Derii, Ceraunii, Daurii, Parde, Siculota, Sardiotæ, and others of inferior note: all making up the great and potent Nations of the Liburni and the Dalmatæ, and comprehended generally in the name of Illyrians. Of these the Liburnian Illyrians (Illyrici, seu Liburni, as they are indifferently called by Florus) were the first who felt the Forces of Rome: which growing State they had provoked by their frequent Piracies, but more by murdering the Embassadors which were sent unto them to require Satisfaction; Tenta their Queen, a proud and imperious Dame, commanding Execution to be done upon them. Warred upon by the Romans for so many Injuries under the Conduct of Centimulus, one of their Consuls, they were overthrown, (as having more of the Pirate than the Soldier in them) some of their chief Nobility executed, in revenge of the Wrong done to the Embassadors, a yearly Tribute imposed on them, and the Queen deprived of the greatest part of her Kingdom, conferred by the Romans on Demetrius Pharius, one of their Confederates. But he proving unfaithful to them in their War with Hannibal, and Gentius, their last King, who commanded over Illyricum, siding against them with Perseus King of Macedonia, Anitius the Prætor is sent with a sufficient Army to make an end of that work; who used such diligence therein, that Scodra, the chief Town of the Kingdom was taken, and the King himself, together with his Wife and Children, made Prisoners; by consequence the whole War ended antequam geri Romæ nuntiaretur, before they knew at Rome that it was begun. The Liburnians after that became quiet Subjects, the whole Country on the taking of Gentius being made a Province of the Romans, Anno U. C. 586, and they employed at Rome in many servile Offices, as before was said: and then the Dalmatians began to cast off the Yoke. But Dalminium, now Damnio, an Inland Town of small regard, their chief City, being first sacked by Marcus Figulus, and after by Nasica, before mentioned, they continued quiet and obedient till the time of Augustus Cæsar, when they again rebelled at the instigation of one Batto, a Man very potent with the People, who, having ten years together maintained the Liberty of his Country, at last, broken and wearied by the Forces of Germanicus and Tiberius, submitted himself unto the two Generals; who, asking the reason of his Revolt, were answered, because the Romans sent not Shepherds to keep, but Wolves to devour, their Flocks. Thus finally conquered, it continued a Roman Province till the coming of Odoacer into Italy, who brought it under his Command; as the Goths also did, having vanquished him, and thereby made themselves Masters of Italy and the rest of his Purchases. But the Kingdom of the Goths being brought to an end by the good Fortune of Justinian, and the Valour of Belisarius and Narses, two of his Commanders (but very ill requited by him) Illyricum became a part of the Eastern Empire; continuing under the power of the Grecian Emperors till the time of Phocas, that bloody Tyrant; when it was made a Prey to the Slaves.

Of these, tho' we have spoken before in several places, as their Fortunes and Affairs have led us; yet being this is the only Country which preserves their name, we will here speak more exactly of them than we have done hitherto; especially as to their Manners, Name, and first Original, and finally of their Successes in this Country. And first for their Original, I take it for a thing past question that they were no other than natural Sarmatians, inhabiting on the North of the River Ister; uniting themselves under this Name in their Undertakings and Attempts on the Eastern Empire: as the many Nations of Germany took the name of Franks and Almans in their Actions and Achievements against the Western. But why they took this Name rather than another, is not yet agreed on. Some fetch the Original of it from Slomo, which in the Slavonian Tongue signifieth a Speech or Word, because they were all of one common Language: others from Slava, signifying in that Language Fame or Glory, in regard of that great Fame and Honour which they had achieved by their Successors on the Empire. But when I find a potent Nation of the Winnithi, Winnuli or Venedi, a Sarmatian People, called Slavini by Jornandes, possessed in his time of the farther Shores of the River Ister, opposite to Illyricum and Thrace, and by that name wasting and foraging these Provinces and other parts of that Empire

Empire in the time of Justinian, as we read in Procopius that they did; I see no reason why we should look farther for the name of Slaves than from these Sclavini. For having in the time of Phocas subdued this Country, and called it Sclavinia or Slavonia, after their own Name; by that and other fortunate Successes on the Eastern Empire, and the Honour they had thereby gotten, they might very well induce the rest of the scattered Tribes of the Sarmatians to unite together with them both in Name and Action, and try their Fortunes in the Conquest of the West of Europe, as these had done already on the East parts of it. In which Design they sped so well, that they became Masters of almost all those Countries which lie betwixt the River Vistula and Euxine Sea, the Adriatick and the Baltick; communicating their Language unto all the Provinces and Nations conquered by them; and to most their Manners, Rites and Customs. Their Government was at first by Kings, but so that the Succession seldom held in a Race or Family, and those that had the Throne did not long enjoy it. For having a Law amongst themselves, that he who killed a Tyrant should succeed in his place; they had few Kings whom some or other would not vote to be a Tyrant, and then dispatch him out of the way, that a greater Tyrant than himself (as it commonly happeneth in such cases) might possess the Power. Inasmuch that they had a new King almost every year, none of them for the space of an Hundred years dying natural Deaths; and all that while the People (as it must be) were most miserably torn in pieces by intestine Wars. They were not cured of this Distemper, till the several Tribes and Nations of them (as Poles, Moravians, Bohemians these here, and those of other Countries) had their several Princes succeeding one another in a regular way. Their Religion was Gentilism at the first. For being originally Heathens, they worshipped such Gods as other of the Gentiles did; Jessan for Jupiter, Ladon for Pluto, Marzim for Mars, Zievane for Venus, and Nian for Diana. They had also a Goddess called Eugode, to whom they prayed for fair Weather and a temperate Air. To their Children they used to give no name till they began to grow great, and then they conducted them to the Temple of their Gods; where they cut off their first Hair, and offered it as a Pledge of their future Service: at which Solemnity they called together their Friends and Kinsfolks to make merry, with Banquets, Dancing, Singing, and all kind of Sports; offering in Sacrifice an Hog, and Wine mixed with Honey, somewhat like Metheglin.

The Gospel was first generally received amongst them by the Preaching of Cyrill and Methodius, two right godly Men, who had before converted the Georgians and Circassians, two great Asian Nations, employed therein by the Patriarch of Constantinople, with good Success as to the Work, and with no small Honour and Advantage to those Patriarchs also. The Eastern Slaves inhabiting those parts of this Country, which lie betwixt Ossetia, and all the Polish Provinces, except Polandia, being of the Communion of the Church of Rome; but privileged to officiate all Divine Services in the Slavonian Language. The rest, as more obnoxious to the power of the Kings of Hungary and the German Emperors, have by degrees to the Popes of Rome, who by this means had reap where they never sowed.

But to return unto the Story. The Slaves, thus settled in this Country (since called Slavonia) continued absolute Masters of it, under the Title of Kings of Croatia and Dalmatia, till the year 972; when growing intolerable by their frequent Piracies, and having ravished or surprized a company of Venetian Ladies, they forced that State (as the Libernians did the Romans) to make War upon them: which ended in the Loss of Zestum and Curzola, two of their best Islands, and almost all the Sea Towns on the Coast of the Adriatick, possessed for the most part since that time by the State of Venice: a Tribute also of a hundred Barrels of Wine, and a Present to the Duke of 3000 Coney-Skins being laid upon them; Pietro Viscolo, being then Duke of Venice, and Marcomir King of the Sclavonians. Afterwards Zelamirus, the last King, dying without Issue, bequeath'd the Kingdom to his Wife, and she as freely to her Brother Vladislavus, King of Hungary, surnamed the Saint; the right hereof accruing by this means to the Kings of Hungary, but the Possession of a great part of it remaining to the State of Venice: the cause of much War and Bloodshed betwixt those Princes, till the Turks came to part the Fray, and got the greatest part for himself by their Disagreements. Betwixt these three Sclavonia at this time doth stand thus divided: the Venetians possess the greatest part of the Islands, and all the Sea-coasts from the River Asiz to the Bay of Cattaro, (the City and Commonwealth of Ragusa excepted only) the House of Asiz, in Right of the Crown of Hungary, the Inland parts of Windischland and Croatia; and the Turks (who first set footing here in the Reign of Mahomet the second) the whole Kingdom of Bosnia, the Patronage of Ragusa, some Towns in Windischland and Croatia, and all the Residue of Dalmatia, from the Bay of Cattaro to Albania. In this present War, began in the year 1683, the Turks have lost great part of this Country to the Venetians, and are now in great danger of losing all the rest to the Emperor; Gradisca, the strongest place they have, being now besieged by the Imperial Forces.

The Arms of Slavonia were Argent, a Cardinal's Hat, the Strings pendant, and platted in a True-love Knot, meeting in the Base, Gules.

There are in SCLAVONIA.

O F D A C I A.

DACIA is bounded on the East with the Euxine Sea and some part of Thrace, on the West with Hungary and Sclavonia, on the North with Podolia and some other Members of the Realm of Poland, on the South with the rest of Thrace and Macedonia. So called from the Daci, who here first inhabited; in Strabo better known by the name of Davi: who proving, when first known to the Romans, an officious people, willingly putting themselves to Service in hope of Gain, occasioned the Romans in their Comedies and common Speech to call a Sycophant or Servant by the name of Davus.

It lieth on both sides of the Danow, fronting all along the Upper and the Lower Hungary, and some part of Sclavonia: extended from the 7. Climate to the 10. so that the longest Summers Day in the most Northern parts thereof is near 17 hours, and in the most Southern 15 hours, 3 quarters.

By this account, with reference to the other Limits before laid down, it differeth much in Situation and Dimensions from the ancient Dacia described by Ptolomy: that lying wholly on the North-side of the Danow, but taking in so much of the Upper Hungary as lieth on the East-side of Tibiscus, this comprehending all the rest of the ancient Dacia, with both the Mysia's and Dardania, and, in a word, the whole Dacian Diocesis in the largest extent thereof, the Province of Prevalatana excepted only; which, though a Member of this Diocesis, was no part of Dacia, but rather of Macedon or Albania. For the clearer understanding whereof we may please to know, that Dacia properly so called was situate on the Northside of the Danubius, as before was said, extending as far Westward as the River Tibiscus, were it frontiered on the Fazyges Metanastæ; inhabited by a military and valiant People, who many times, especially when the Frost did favour them, passed over the River, and infested the Roman Provinces. And though repressed and made tributary by Julius Cesar, yet they brake out again in the time of Augustus; who sending Lentulus against them with a puissant Army, compelled them to retire on the other side of the River, planting the Southern Banks thereof with strong Towns and Garrisons, to restrain them from the like incursions for the time to come. By means whereof, Si Dacia tunc cuncta summa atque dilata est, saith the Historian, though Dacia, was not overcome, yet it was removed somewhat farther off, and the Provinces thereby secured from the attempts of that People. After this, from the time of Cotiso, with whom Augustus had to deal, we find little of them till the Reign of Decebalus their last King, a man both ready in Advice and quick in Execution, against him Domitian made War by Julianus his Lieutenant, who gave Decebalus a great overthrow, and had then utterly vanquished him, if his Wit had not better befriended him than his Sword. For fearing that the Romans making use of their Victory, would enter and take possession of his Country, he pitched in the way a great number of Stakes in Battle-array, putting on them the old Corslets of his Soldiers; which looking like to many men at Arms, frightened the Enemy from approaching the Country. Trajan was the next that made War against him and brought him to that Exigent that having with much loss indured some few Skirmishes, he yielded himself, and is acknowledged a Friend to the Senate, and People of Rome. But being one of an high spirit, and born in a free Air, he once again fell off from the Romans; but to his own destruction: for seeing by the Valour of Trajan his Kingdom conquered, and his Palace taken and destroyed, he fell upon his own Sword, and Dacia was made a Province of the Roman Empire. Lost in the time of Gallienus, it was again recovered by Aurelianus; who finding how difficult and chargeable the keeping of it was like to be, transplanted the Roman Colonies, and the more civil sort of the Natives, to the other side of the River, placing them betwixt the two Mysia's, (in some part of each) and calling the Country given to them by the name of Dacia, or New Dacia, leaving the Old unto the Goths, and others of the barbarous Nations, whose Thorough-fare it was in all their Enterprises and Designs upon the Roman Empire. It was divided by Aurelianus into the two Provinces of Dacia Mediterranea, and Dacia Ripensis; this lying on the Banks of the Danow, the other more within the Land: which, with the Provinces of Mesia superior, Dardania, Prevalitana, and part of Macedonia Salutaris, made up the whole Diocesis of Dacia in the times succeeding. It was subject with that of Macedon to the Præfectus Prætorio, for Illyricum, and consequently appertaining (after the Division) to the Eastern Empire. And it continued in this State till the time of Justinian, who being a Native of this Country, subducted it from the Command of that Præfect, and instituted both a Præfectus Prætorio for this Diocesis only in Civil matters, and a Primate for the affairs of the Church; both settled in the City of Justinian, of his own Foundation; enlarging the Jurisdiction of the first by the addition of some part of Macedonia Secunda, and Pannonia Secunda, and giving to the other all those Preheminencies which had been anciently enjoyed by the greater Patriarchs. But this new Institution was of no continuance. For first the Slaves, and afterwards the Russians, Hungars and Bulgarians, breaking over the Danow, dismembred it piece-meal from the Empire, and divided it under new names amongst themselves. Of which, together with the nature of the Soil and people, I shall speak anon, having first took a view of the Rivers, Hills and other Land-marks, which are to be my chief Guides in the Chorography or Description of them.

The Rivers then of most note are, 1. the Danow, which here at Axiu, or Axiopolis, a Town of Bulgaria, takes the name of Ister, continuing it from thence to its Astuarium; where it falleth into the Euxine Sea, with seven Mouths or Channels; that is to say, 1. Pence, 2. Naracustoma. 3. Calistoma, 4. Plendostoma, 5. Spireostoma, 6. Borcostoma, the name of the last I find not amongst my Authors, quia languidissimum nec perpetuum, as it is in Ptolomy. 2. Marulius, now called Marisch. 3. Termes. 4. Aluta, keeping its old name. 5. Hierasus. All of Old Dacia, and all falling into the Danow or Ister, as do also Ciabus, now Ibar, a River of Cervia. And 6. Succonia of Bulgaria, or the Lower Mysia. Chief Mountains of it are, 1. the Carpathian. 2. Scardus. 3. Ozbelus, whereof the first parteth it from Sarmatia Europea, the the second from Dalmatia, and the third from Macedon.

This said, we will proceed to the description of the several Provinces which we have comprehended under this name of Dacia; that is to say, 1. Transylvania. 2. Moldavia. 3. Walachia. 4. Russia. 5. Servia. 6. Bulgaria. The first four in Old Dacia, on the North side of the Danow, the two last in New Dacia, on the South thereof.

1. TRANSYLVANIA.

TRANSYLVANIA is bounded on the East with Moldavia, on the West with the Upper Hungary, on the North with Russia Nigra, a Province of the Realm of Poland, from which it is parted by the Carpathian Mountains; on the South with Rascia (or rather Hungary) and Walachia.

It took this name from the great Woods lying betwixt it and Hungary; the name in Latin signifying the Country beyond the Woods. By the Dutch it is called Niebenbergen, from seven Castles or strong Holds anciently built in it to defend the Frontiers; Septemcastris in some Latin Authors upon that occasion. But by the more elegant Latinists it hath been named Pannodacia, as that part of Dacia, which either was inhabited by the Pannonians; or made subject to them.

The Soil doth naturally abound with Wine, Corn, and Fruit; of which it was so plentiful in the time of the Romans, that the Emperor Trajan caused a piece of Money to be coined, having the figure of Ceres, holding in the one hand a Cornu-Copia, and in the other a plain Tablet with this Inscription. Abundantia Dacia. Particularly, besides great plenty of Wheat and most excellent Wines, it yieldeth great store of Cherries, Damascens, Malacatoons, Musk-melons, not inferior to those of Italy, and also Centaury good store, and many other Medicinal plants; some Mines of Gold and Silver: many of Iron, Brass, Copper, and not a few Veins of Salt and Sulphur. Of Cattle such abundance, that many times large Oxen are sold for a Floren, or half a Crown piece; and a most notable breed of Horses; not to say any thing of that variety of Wild Beasts which they have in their Woods and Forests, and of all sorts of Fowl both for Food and pleasure. So populous withal, (for the most fruitful Countries are commonly populous also) that Castaldo, Governor hereof in the Minority of Stephen the fourth Son of John de Sepusio, Anno 1551, advanced an Army of 70000 able men, consisting of the Natives of this Country only, for the Siege of Lippe, a strong Town of Hungary, but on the Borders of this Country. This Province is surrounded on all sides with the Carpathian Hills, and has the Form of a Rhombus, being 68 French Leagues from East to West, and 62 from North to South, that is about 200 English miles. And so extremely fruitful, that when the Imperial Army in the beginning of October 1687, fell into it suddenly, and the Inhabitants fled into the Woods and Mountains, and carried with them their Stores, Corn, Cattle and Provisions, yet the Army wanted for nothing, being richly supplied by the Fruits they then found upon the Ground. And by the agreement made with them, they were to furnish to the Imperial Troops 66000 measures of Wheat, 1980 Tun of Flesh, 7000 Pieces of Wine, 120000 measures of Oats, 9180 Tun of Hay, 480000 Trusses of Straw, and Wood, Salt and Candle to be supplied by the respective Landlords to the Army. And over and besides they were to pay in Money, 700000 German Florins, at 6 payments, the last of which, was to be paid the last day of June, the Revenue of Prince Abasi to be no way thereby abated. All which was punctually perform'd, and is a standing Testimony of the Riches and Fertility of this Province.

The people are much of the same nature with the Hungarians, to whom they have been a long time subject, but somewhat more stubborn and untractable: speak the same Language as they do, with some difference in the Dialect only; converted at the same time to the Christian Faith, and under the same form of Ecclesiastical Government. In former times they used to read, as the Jews do, from the right hand to the left; but of late here they conform to the Western Nations, from whom they are generally descended.

For that the people of this Country are the Progeny of the Saxons, is evident 1. by the Saxon Language yet in part retained. 2. We find that Charles the Great, like a politic Conqueror, placed many of that Nation here, weakning so their strength at home, and fortifying the Bounds of his Empire. And 3. by a Story recited by Verslegan, which we touched in our Description of Brunswick; the whole Narration is this, Halberstadt was beyond credit troubled with Rats, which a Musician, whom they called the Py'd Pyper, undertaking for a great mass of money to destroy, they agree: hereupon he turned his Pipes, and all the Rats in the Town dancing after him are drowned in the next River. This done he asketh his pay, but is denied: whereupon he striketh up a new air of Mirth, all the Children, male and female, of the Town, follow him into the Hill Hamelen, which presently closed again. The Parents miss their Children, and could never hear news of them. Now of late some have found them in this Country, where I also leave them: only telling you this, that this marvellous accident is said to happen the 22th of July 1376. Since which time it is said that the people of Halberstadt permit not any Drum, Pipe, or other Instrument to be sounded in that Street: and established a Decree, that in all Writings of Contract, or Bargain, after the Date of our Saviours Nativity, the Date also of this their Childrens Transmigration should be added in rei memoriam. Although the Dutch or Saxons make up the main body of the Nation, yet being conquered by the Hungars, they received many of their Colonies: and in the Northern parts there remain still some of the old Scythians planted there by Attila. Out of those Members is the Body of this State composed: so strong and populous, that it is conceived to be able to raise an Army of 90000 men; and actually did arm 6000 Horse and 12000 Foot for the Battle of Keresztur, Anno 1566, being more by 2000 than the whole Realm of Hungary sent unto that Service.

Chief Towns herein of the foundation of the Dutch or Saxons, are 1. Hermenstat, in the Latin Hermanopolis, (of old called Cibinium, from the River Cibin, on which it was situate) so named of one Herman the Founder of it, little inferior to Vienna for strength or greatness, well fortified both by Art and Nature. This City is a Bishop's See, under the Archbishop of Colza. It has good Walls, flank'd with strong Bastions, and a deep Dike full of Fish, the Inhabitants are Civil, and the Buildings large and magnificent, those of the meanest Artificers being of Stone. It has good Magazines, always well stored and kept under Ground for times of need. The Country about it is fruitful. 2. Cronstad, in Latin called Corona, by some Brassovia, by others Stephanopolis; this last name given it by Stephen King of Hungary, who repaired and beautified it; situate on the Borders of Walachia, amongst fruitful Mountains; remarkable for a fair Library and a kind of Academy; and the most noted Empory or Mart-Town of all this Country; of great Resort especially in the time of their publick Fairs, by Turks, Arabians, Greeks, Armenians, Polanders, Walachians, and other Nations. This City is called by the Greeks Hevapoli, and of old it was called Ulpia Trajana. It has ancient Walls and Towers, instead of Bastions, but convenient for the lodging the Garrison Soldiers: each Citizen has his Garden. 3. Bistricia, (by the Dutch called Noren) so called from the River Bistric, which runneth through it: so pleasant and so sweet a Town, that there is no dirt or mire to be seen at any time; or if there be, the people presently well up the River, and so cleanse the Streets. It is yet most commended and valued for its Gold Mines. 4. Mediesus (by the Dutch Medwisch) so called quasi medius confessus, because situate in the midst of the Country; a Town almost as neat as Bistrice. 5. Segosvaria or Schefburg, on the declivity of an Hill. 6. Zabesius, or Laiz, once the chief Town of the Saxons, but now much decayed; situate in a very deep Valley, well fenced with Waters, and those Waters well stored with Fish. 7. Clausenburg, or Coloswar, the Zeugma of Ptolomy, in Latin called Claudiopolis, from Claudius the II. Emperor, by whom re-edified: at first a Colony of the Saxons or Dutch only, but of late times the Hungarians, coming in as strangers were privileged as Citizens and inhabited it together with them. The Town is well seated in the middle of a pleasant Plain, encompassed with an handsome Wall, and beautified with elegant Buildings. But then it has no Dike, and the Walls are not good neither, their Fortifications are only round Towers, after the old Mode, and there are several Hills near it which command the Town, so that it is neither by Art nor Nature strong, but it is very populous and rich, so that in the year 1687, it was easily forced by the Duke of Lorrain, to receive an Imperial Garrison. 8. Alba Julia, now Weissenburg, the Apulum of Ptolomy, situate on a small Brook then called Apulus, (but now Oratus) whence it had the name. Built on the side of an Hill near the River Marisch, or Marisus over-looking a large and fruitful Plain: heretofore a Bishop's See, and the ordinary Residence of the Prince or Vaivod of Transylvania; but now a Garrison of Hungarian Soldiers, holding it for the Emperor, as King of Hungary. It has the name of Alba Julia from the Mother of Antoninus, the Great and Learned Roman Emperor. And at this day Roman Quoins are frequently found in it.

Chief Towns belonging to the Hungarians, and by them inhabited, are 1. Waradin, much mentioned in the Stories of the latter times, since these invasions of the Turks; situate on the Borders of Hungary. This is a very strong Town, situate in the Country of Zathmar, on the Banks of the River Crise, towards the East fortified in such manner, that it seems impregnable: on the South it has great Suburbs, and the River closeth it on the North, on which side it has some high grounds which command it, but not near it. It has a Wall and Ramparts of the modern figure, and is flank'd with five Royal Bastions, very regular, and fronted by a good Dike, which may be filled with River Water; within it has five other Bastions, and a Wall raised about the out Wall. In the year 1242, the Crim-Tartars took this City, and slew most of the Inhabitants. The Turks besieged it in 1598, with a puissant Army, but without success. But in the year 1660, they took it by surprise in a time of Peace. In the beginning of this year 1688, the Imperialists having taken Lippa, plundered the Fields belonging to it, and are not likely long to possess it, they being in no condition to relieve it. 2. Thordis, built in or near the place where stood the Salina of Ptolomy, so called from the abundance of Saltpitrs which were then about it. 3. Euguedine, by the Romans called Amium, from a Cauley leading to it, raised by one Amius, and from him so named; some Fragments whereof are still remaining. 4. Deva, remarkable for a Vein of the best Wines also, not inferior to those of Venusium in Italy. 6. Zilachi, 7. Gela, of which little memorable. 8. Millenback, not far from which, betwixt which and the Town of Brofs, is a very strong Fortrefs, commanding a streight and narrow passage leading into this Country out of Hungary.

In the North part hereof lieth the Province called Z E C K L A R, inhabited by the Siculi, an old brood of Scythians, brought hither by Attila on his first Conquest of this Country, and here still continuing. A people which have much in them of the ancient Huns, and had heretofore a particular Language to themselves, but now they speak the Hungarian generally, differing in the Dialect only. But though by the necessity of Commerce and Cohabitation, they are brought into the same Language; they still retain their ancient Customs, governed by their old Laws, and living after the same manner as the Switzers do; each of their Cantons (seven in number) being absolute in and of itself, but all united with the Transylvanians, and with one another, for defence of the whole Country against the several Pretensions of the German and Turkish Emperors. And though they do acknowledge some Subjection to the Emperor as King of Hungary, yet it is but what they list themselves: being anciently privileged from all Taxes, more than the paying of a Bull for every Household, in the way of an offering, at the Coronation of the new King, when and how oft so ever it may chance to happen. Their Cantons (such they call them) are, 1. Sepsi, 2. Orava, 3. Kysli, 4. Czyk, 5. Gyula or Uovarheli, 6. Moros-Zeck. And 7. Arad-Zeck, so called from the chief Town in each District. In former times no Nobleman, nor any one of great means and greater Eminence than other, was amongst them: but now of late that Parity (or Confusion rather) is grown out of Credit, and some begin to over-top the rest both in power and Title as in other places.

The first Inhabitants of the old Dacia, whereof this Province was a part, were the Anarti, Taurisci, Rhaetici, Canconsi, the Buridensi, and Biephi, &c. First conquered they were by Lyfimachus, the great and mighty King of Thrace, one of the Renowned Captains of Alexander the Great; in token whereof, innumerable Medals in the age of our Grandfathers were found in this Country, having his Image on the one side, and this word Victoria on the other. How they were afterwards subdued by the Emperor Trajan, and quitted by Aurelianus, hath been shew already. Being forsaken by the Romans, it was won by the Goths; their constant Dwelling, till forced over the Danow by the Huns, the next Possessors of this Country; the Road or thorough-fare from that time of those barbarous Nations which out of Asia made there Inroads on the Europeans. Having been successively subdued by the Slaves and Rosses, this part hereof was conquered by Stephen, the first King of Hungary, surnamed the Saint, by whose perswasion and inducements they received the Gospel. They were governed after this time, as a Member of that Kingdom, by a Deputy, whom they called the Vaivod of Transylvania, (the word Vaivod signifying as much as Præfectus Militia, or a Lord-Lieutenant) a man, by reason of the greatness of his place and power of most Authority in that Kingdom. The names and Succession of these Vaivods till the time of John Huniades, comes imperfectly to us; but after that, more clear and constant in this order following.

The VAIVODS and PRINCES of TRANSYLVANIA.

1. John, surnamed Huniades, made Vaivod hereof by Vladislaus the IV. A man of great Valour and Renown, the great defender of his Country against the Turks, whom he overthrew in many Battles, especially in that of Maron, where he slew 50000 of them. He died about the year 1458.
2. Stephen, of the noble Family of Cattory, Vaivod in the time of Matthias King of Hungary, the Son of Huniades.
3. Stephen II. surnamed de Sepusio, from the place of his Honour and Estate; not so much memorable for any thing as for being Father of Barbara, the Wife of Sigismund King of Poland and of

4. John,

4. John II. called also de Sepusio, after the death of Lewis the second chosen King of Hungary, of whom before amongst the Kings of that Realm.
- 1526 5. Americus, Bishop of Veradium, made Vaivod by John de Sepusio, on his taking of the Crown of Hungary; treacherously Murthered, for not complying with the Turk, Anno 1534.
- 1540 6. Stephen III. surnamed Maylat, a noble Hungarian, but extremely ambitious, having not long after the death of Americus usurp'd the Vaivodship, was in the year 1540 confirmed in that Dignity. In this Prince's time Transylvania was separated from Hungary.
- 1541 7. Stephen IV. Son of John de Sepusio the late King of Hungary, by Solyman the Magnificent made Vaivod of Transylvania, being then an Infant (by whom he had been deprived of his Kingdom of Hungary, not long before) being incroached upon not long after by the said Solyman, this Country was put into the hands of Ferdinand King of Hungary, other Lands being given to the young Prince in exchange hereof.
- 1551 8. Stephen V. surnamed Dobus, for his Valour shewed against the Turks in defending Agria, made Vaivod of this Country by the said King Ferdinand. But Solyman not liking that this Country should be at the Devotion of the Kings of Hungary, conferred the same (under the Vassalage of his Empire) upon one
9. John III. whose Family and surname I have no where found; a professed Champion of the Turks, and as professed an Enemy to Ferdinand and his Successors in the Kingdom of Hungary.
10. Stephen VI. surnamed Battery (of which House he was) made Voivod by the Turk; and afterwards, on the Commendation of Amurath the third, chosen King of Poland.
- 1575 11. Christopher Battery, Brother of Stephen, on whose Election unto Poland, he succeeded here, and was the first who leaving the Title of Vaivod, took that of Prince of Transylvania.
- 1583 12. Sigismund, Son of Christopher, shook off the Turkish Bondage, defeated many of their Armies, and slew some of their Bassas, (the Scanderbeg of the Times he lived in.) But not being able to hold out against so Potent an Adversary, he resigned his Estate to Rodolphus the Emperor, having for it in exchange the Dukedoms of Oppelen and Ratibor in Silesia, and an Annual Pension of 50000 Touchims; but finding his Pension ill paid, he made a new Resignation of it to
- 1599 13. Andrew Battery, Cousin of Sigismund, slain within the year by the Vaivod of Valachia. After whole death
- 1601 14. Rodolphus, Emperor and King of Hungary, is admitted Prince of Transylvania, on the second Resignation of Sigismund. But his Soldiers behaving themselves with too great Insolence, Sigismund was called back again, but never well ferled: so that at last he was fain to leave the Country in the power of the Emperor and retire to Prague, where in the year 1613 he died unlamented. In the mean time
- 1604 15. Justine or Istivan, surnamed Botscay, a Nobleman of this Country, made Prince hereof by the Great Turk, and supported by him, cleared the Province of the Germans, and being followed by great Companies of those of the Reformed Religion, he not only obtained of the Emperor Rudolphus a Confirmation of this Estate unto himself, but Liberty of Conscience, and the free Exercise of Religion for both the Nations, presently after which he died, Decemb. 30. 1616.
- 1607 16. Sigismund II. of the Noble Family of Ragotzy, elected in the February following by the Transylvanians; but finding himself not able to make his Election good against the Emperor, and being unwilling to subject himself unto the Turks, and after the end of one year he relinquished the Government, and betook himself again to a private Life.
- 1608 17. Gabriel Battery, of the Family of the former Princes, succeeded by the Favour of Achmet the Great Turk, after whose Death, so welcom unto his Neighbours and Subjects,
- 1613 18. Barthlem Gabor, by the same Achmet, was made Prince of Transylvania; a professed Enemy of the House of Austria, but one that with a great deal of noise did them little hurt.
- 1630 19. Stephen VII. surnamed Ragotzy, on the Death of Barthlem Gabor, succeeded Prince, by the Power and Favour of the Turks, under whose Clientele and Protection he doth still enjoy it, (as his Predecessors did before him) against all Pretensions of the Empire and Realm of Hungary: as on the other side he is defended by the Emperor and Crown of Poland from being made Subject unto the Turks.
- 1645 20. George Ragotzy, Son of the former, succeeded his Father, he died of some Wounds he had received in the Defence of Grand-Waradin, in the year 1660 in June.
- 1660 21. Achatius Barchay, was intruded in his place by the Turks, and beheaded by them the same year.
- 1661 22. John Kemeny, Elected and slain the same year.
- 1661 23. Michael Abassi, Count of Sicule, succeeded by the Favour of the Turks, and is still living.

To continue here the History of this Country. In the beginning of this present War Michael Abassi, tho' often Summon'd to the Port, excused himself on several Pretences; and being invited by the Visser as he passed by to the Siege of Vienna in the year 1683, he came afterwards to their Camp there, with a small Retinue, and yet was kindly received by the Visser and had leave to return, being ordered to take care of the Bridges between the Raab and Rabnitz, which the Turks had lately built to secure their Retreat. In the year 1686, when the Emperor had taken Buda and Segedin, and advanced his Forces almost to the Borders of Transylvania. This Prince consented to contribute to the Winter Quarters of the German Army, it being not safe for him to refuse it; but he would receive no Garrison from the Emperor, and executed his Compliance at the Port by the Terror of the Imperial Arms. But in the year 1687, after the Battel of Mohacz, the Duke of Lorraine marched with the main Body of the Imperial Army towards Segedin, and pretending to besiege Grand-Waradin marched that way, but turned suddenly and fell into Transylvania, and the 11th of October surprized Habalone, the first Town of that Principality: After which Clausenburg was also forced to submit, and after it Hermanstadt, Weissenburg, or Alba Julia, Bistritz, and six other Places were assigned to the Germans for Winter

Winter Quarters, with vast allowances of Provisions; but then the Imperial Army was to march out in the Spring, unless the Necessity of the War required otherwise, or that some other Treaty were concluded on in the Winter. The Germans being thus in Possession of this fruitful Province without blows, did not so content themselves with the Allowance made them, but that there arose great Complaints against them, which being composed too to the Advantage of the Imperialists, who were Masters of all the strong Towns. And the 9th of May, 1688, they brought the Prince and States of Transylvania to make an absolute Submission to the Emperor and his Son Joseph, then Crowned King of Hungary, the Form of which is as followeth.

The Act of Submission of the Prince and States of Transylvania.

WE Michael Telcky de Szek, Great Marechal, George and Alexis Bethlem, Ladislaus Szekel de Boroszeno, Valentine Frank, Chief Justice, and Christian Szabo, Burgher-Master of Hermanstad, Ministers and Counsellors of the Illustrious Prince Michael Abasti of Transylvania, Nicholas de Bethlem and Stephen Appor de Also Thoyne, Peter Alvinzy and John Starosy, Protonotaries, and Michael Filstrick Justice of Cronstadt, deputed Plenipotentiaries of the said Prince and States of the Kingdom of Transylvania, do for perpetual Memory declare and make known, The whole World is struck with just Amazement, and the Envious Pine, at the extraordinary Goodness of God, who after the effusion of so much innocent Blood, hath at last pitied Christianity, and freed so many Provinces and Kingdoms from Barbarous and intollerable Servitude; a Mercy worthy to be had in everlasting Remembrance, and to be congratulated by all good Men.

The just God of Heaven could no longer endure the Rage and disdainful Pride of that cruel and sworn Enemy of the Christian Name, who was arrived to such an height of Power, as to be formidable to the whole World, destructive to his Neighbours, and a Contemner of all Men. But at length the Lord of Hosts with the Power of his Right Hand, hath brandished his Sword, and Crowned the Arms and just Cause of the most August Emperor of the Romans, our most Gracious Lord, with such happy and glorious Success; that the Turk himself owns and acknowledges, that his Power is much shattered and broken, and himself brought into a very low Condition. So admirable and stupendous are the Works of God's providence, that vengeance treads on the Heels of the Infidels whose former Successes made them secure; so that for the future none need fear that they should ever lift up their Heads again to ruine Christianity, nor the Afflicted need despond in the depth of their Misery.

Unhappy Transylvania hath groaned time out of mind under Oppression, and what is the top of its Misery, under that of the Turks; and, being deprived of its Lawful Kings and Governors by so many Wars, Ruins, Devallations, and Intelline Discords within its own Bowels, was brought almost to the brink of Destruction. That fatal Tragedy which this Kingdom hath undergone, partly under the Turks Protection, and partly by the Discords of its own Princes, will stand upon Record in History, as a Monument to all succeeding Ages.

But at last she returns to the King of Hungary; from whom, by the envy of the Fates, and the ambitious Designs of some Men, she had been severed; she embraces the Paternal and Powerful Patronage of the August Leopold I. Emperor of the Romans, the Great, Happy, Just and Invincible Hereditary King of Hungary, and of his present Successor, the most Serene King Joseph (whose Life and Reign God prosper and preserve) and of the future Hereditary Kings of Hungary (as in the late Dyet at Presburgh was declared) with the universal Consent of the States thereof, and according to the fervent Prayers, which have for a long time unanimously been made to Almighty God, for the obtaining so great a Blessing. That what therefore was heretofore desired by all, for the Glory of God, may from this present time be happy and prosperous to all succeeding Ages; Be it known to all Men, that are now alive, or that hereafter shall be born, That We (by virtue of our full Power, and, for greater Security, in the strength of the confirmatory Acts and Conclusions of the Prince and the States of this Realm, by the common Consent of our own mere Motion, and out of Christian Zeal) do renounce, for the future, all Subjection to the Ottoman Port, and all Correspondencies, with all Gifts and Payments of Tributes, or whatever else may carry any shew of Compliance therewith, or with its Subjects, Vassals, Infidels, or other Enemies whatever, of our most August Lord, his Imperial Majesty, and of his lawful Successors, the Hereditary Kings of Hungary, under the guilt of High Treason if it be proved against any one, the Punishment thereof to be inflicted according to the Laws of Transylvania. On the contrary we do sincerely and heartily accept, for our selves and for all the Posterity of the famous Kingdom of Transylvania, the Paternal Protection of his foresaid Imperial Majesty (as hath been already declared:) And that we may give some actual Testimony of our Submission and Obedience, (by virtue of the foresaid full Power and Confirmatory Acts and Conclusions of the Prince and States) we are contented to receive the Imperial Garisons into the Fortresses of Kovar, Hufs, Georgin, and Hermanstadt, (besides those other places already Garisoned by his Imperial Majesty, our most Gracious Lord.) And moreover, when his Imperial Majesty shall command, we are ready to take up Arms either against the common Enemy of Christians, the Turk, or any other Enemy whatsoever; humbly supplicating his Invincible Imperial Majesty, our most Gracious Lord, out of his innate Clemency, to confirm to us and our Posterity all our Liberties and Privileges, and in particular to protect us in the free Exercise of the Religions hitherto profess'd amongst us. And we no ways doubt, but his Excellency Count Caraffa will effectually promote and further the Humble Addresses of the foresaid Prince and of his whole Kingdom, with his Imperial Majesty, our most Gracious Lord; Which Favour as we confidently promise our selves from his Excellencies Kindness, and try'd Affection to us, so we desire and hope, that his Excellency, the foresaid General, will no way disturb us in our Liberties and Privileges. Provided nevertheless that our Treaty made with the most Serene Duke of Lorrain, do remain in full force. In Witness whereof, and that the Knowledge of this our Declaration and Renunciation of the Protection of the Turks may descend to Posterity, we have set the usual Seals of the Three Nations of the Kingdom of Transylvania to these Presents. Given at Hermanstad the 9th Day of May, 1688.

This Prince died in the year 1690, leaving behind him a Son of Thirteen Years of Age.

2. MOLDAVIA.

MOLDAVIA is bounded on the East with the Euxine Sea, on the West with Transylvania, on the North with the River Niester, the Tyras of Ptolomy and the Ancients, by which it is parted from Podolia, a Province of Poland, and on the South with Valachia. This Country, by a mistake common to all the Maps, is misplaced, and set where Valachia should stand: Its true bounds are to the East, Valachia, to the North Transylvania, to the West the Upper Hungary, and to the South the Ister or Danube, parting it from Servia. Baudrand who quotes one John Lucius, Count de Morstein, stein, Great Treasurer of Poland, and a Person of great Learning.

It is so called, as some say, quasi Moavia, from its nearness to the Fens of Moavia; or rather from the Huns and other People of those Fens who possessed the same. Others conceive that it was first called Maur-davia, i. e. Nigrorum Davorum Regio, the Country of the Black Davia (for by the name of Davi were the Dacians called, as we find in Strabo and some others) so named from their Complexion, or the colour of their Caps and other Garments; as Nigra Russia, a near neighbouring Province of the Realm of Poland, on the like occasion. But the more probable Opinion (as I take it) is, that it took this name from the River Moldavia, which runneth through it; as the Moldavians had the name from the River Morava. The Nature and Religion of the People we shall find in Wallachia, whereof anciently it was reckoned for a part.

The Country is very fruitful in Corn, Wine, Grass, and Wood; but more used for Pasturage than Tillage, by reason of the great want of People to manure the Land: By means whereof it affordeth great plenty of Beef and Mutton, whereby they supply some parts of Poland, and the populous City of Constantinople. And these they issue out in so great a Number, that the tenth Penny, exacted by the Prince or Vaivod in the way of Custom amounteth to 150000 Crowns per Annum: and yet the Clergy and the Gentry are discharged of this Impost. But the main Trade of this Country is not driven by the Natives; the Port Towns being full of Armenians, Jews, Hungarians, and Ragusan Merchants who forestal the Markets, and barter all their Corn and Wine into Russia and Poland; their Skins, Wax, Honey, powdered Beef, Pulse and Butter into Constantinople: It being credibly reported, that from the Ports of this Country no fewer than 500 Ships laden with Corn, Victuals, and other Provisions necessary to the Life of Man, are yearly sent unto that City.

The Country is in a manner round, the Diameter each way being near upon 300 English Miles; but so ill inhabited, by reason of the neighbourhood of the Turks, Tartars, and Polonian Cossacks, that certain English Gentlemen having in the year 1609 travelled at least 240 miles in the Country, could meet with in all the way but nine Towns and Villages; and for an hundred miles together the Grass so high, that it rotted on the ground for want of Cattle to eat it, and of Men to order it. So that we are not to expect in it many eminent Cities or Towns of note; though it afford two Archbishops, and two Bishops Sees, Followers (as all the rest of the People are) of the Traditions and Doctrines of the Church of Greece.

The principal of those which be, are, 1. Occazoma, Zucconia, or Socavia, the Vaivod's Seat. 2. Fuociania. 3. Fazeling, of which little memorable. 4. Kotlin, a place of great strength, on the Borders of Poland; by some called Cochina; the ordinary Magazine of the Country. Famous for a great defeat of the Turks by the Poles in the year 1621: And since for a more auspicious Victory obtain'd in the same place by John Sobiesky, the late King of Poland, in the year 1673, against the Turks, who lay strongly Encamped here with an Army of 50000 Men, but was beaten, and their Camp stormed and taken the 9th of October, with the slaughter and taking of 31500 of them. 5. Tassy, commonly called Tas, the chief Town for Wealth and Trade in all this Province. This Town was taken by the late King of Poland in the year 1686, but being burnt soon after in his absence, he was forced upon his Return to withdraw his Forces, and leave it to the Natives to repair it if they thought fit. 6. Bender, a strong Town on the Euxine Sea. 7. Polada, near the Danow. 8. Bialigrod, situate on or near the River Tyras, now called Neister; a strong Town against the Tartars and Polonians. 9. Kilia, anciently called Achilleia, situate on the Shore of the Euxine Sea, for the most part compassed round with the Waters of it, and therefore said by Ptolemy to be an Island. 10. Ac-German, of old called Alprocastron, and Moncastrum, a very strong Town on the same Coast also. Both taken by Bajazet, the second Emperor of the Turks, Anno 1485. But these three Towns are not so properly in Moldavia, at least not in Moldavia properly so called, as in a little Province called Bessarabia, lying on the Euxine, formerly counted part thereof, till conquer'd by the Turks, in the year aforesaid, it became a Member of that Empire. A Tract inhabited by the Bessi in the times of Ptolemy, who being driven out of their Country by the Bulgarians, settled themselves (as some say) in that part of Sclavonia, which is now called Bosnia.

The whole Country, following the Fortune of Transylvania and the rest of Dacia, till the coming of the Slaves and Rosses, was for a while accounted part of the Russian Empire, till the dismembring of that Empire by the Tartars; after which it was sometime Homager to the Polanders, sometime to the Hungarians, according as the Vaivods or Princes of it could find best Conditions. By Homage the Great it was made Tributary to the Turks; but the Tribute at the first was very light and easie, not above 2000 Crowns per Annum: that mighty Emperor, who aimed at more profitable Conquests, being loth to spend his Forces on so poor a Purchase as the addition of this Province would have been unto him. But Bajazet his Son finding how fit it lay for the more absolute Command of the Euxine Sea, took in that part hereof which is called Bessarabia, reducing it into the form of a Turkish Province, Anno 1485: as before was said; imposing on the rest an increase of the former Tribute; and so left it unto the disposal of its natural Princes. After which time the Vaivods fearing to be made Vassals to the Turks, did many times rise in Arms against them, aided therein sometimes by the Hungarians, and sometimes by the Polander; which last pretended to the Sovereignty and Chiefage of it. Bogdanus, Vaivod hereof in the time of Selimus the second, uniting himself more closely to the Polonians, became thereby suspected by the Turkish Tyrant; who with a great power chased him out of his Country, and gave the same unto one John, a Moldavian born, but bred up for the most part in the Turkish Court (where he renounced his Faith, and was Circumcised) under the yearly Tribute of 60000 Crowns. But John the new-made Vaivod was no sooner settled, but he returned again to his first Religion, and for that cause grew less affected by the Turks. Which being observed by the then Vaivod of Wallachia, he practised to obtain that Dignity for his Brother Peter; offering to double the said Tribute, and to assist in Subjugation of the Country. The Turk, accepting of these Offers, compounds an Army of 70000 Wallachians, 30000 Turks, and 3000 Hungarians, with which they fell into Moldavia; and were so gallantly received by the noble Vaivod, that few of them escaped the Slaughter. But being afterwards betrayed by his old Friend Czarnievice, and, against Faith given, barbarously Murthered by the Turkish Bassa; Moldavia fell into the hands of the Turks, and was united to that Empire, Anno 1574: the Vaivods from that time forwards being nominated by the Turkish Emperors, and governing as Substitutes and Lieutenants for and under them. And though Auron, one of the succeeding Vaivods, did shake off his Yoke, and confederated himself with Sigismund Prince of Transylvania, and Michael Vaivod of Wallachia, for Defence of themselves and their Estates against that Enemy: yet being afterwards supplanted by Rafwan, one of his own ambitious Subjects, and that confederacy disjointed, it became subject first unto the Polonians, by the power and practice of Zomoisky, Chancellor of Poland; and then unto Rodolphus, Emperor of Germany; and finally unto the Turk, as before it was in the Year 1620. And though the Polanders have since made use of some Opportunities in imposing Vaivods on this Country, in despite of the Turks: yet was it commonly to their own Loss, little or no Benefit to the Moldavians, and in the end drew the whole Power of the Turks upon themselves in the Reign of Osman; they never since intermeddling in the Affairs of this Province, but leaving them entirely to the Turks disposing; who receive hence some yearly Tribute, but have not hitherto obtained the entire Possession of it, so long since aimed at by those Tyrants.

3. VALACHIA.

VALACHIA is bounded on the East with Moldavia, and a branch of the Ister, or Danubius, bending towards the North; on the West with Rascia, on the North with Transylvania and some part of Moldavia, and on the South with the Danubius wholly, by which it is parted from Servia and Bulgaria. First call'd Flaccia, from one Flaccus a noble Roman, who, on the Conquest hereof in the time of Trajan, brought hither an Italian Colony; afterwards by corruption Vlachia, and at last Valachia.

But the name of Flaccia or Vlachia was first of more large extent than it is at present, comprehending all Moldavia also: divided in those times by a Ridge of Mountains into Cisalpina, and Transalpina; the name of Moldavia being afterwards appropriated to the one, and that of Valachia (properly and specially so called) unto the other. The People of both, in token of their first Extraction, speak a corrupt Latin or Italian Language; but in Matters of Religion follow the Dictates of the Greek Church, and obey the Patriarch of Constantinople, under whom all Ecclesiastical Affairs are governed by one Archbishop, and two Bishops. In other things they partake generally of the Judenels and Barbarity of those Nations, which have since subdued them; being a rough-hewn People, hardly civilized, ignorant for the most part of Letters and all Liberal Sciences, not weaned perfectly (in so long time of their profession of Christianity) from the Superstitions of the Gentiles, swearing by Jupiter and Venus, marrying and unmarried at their pleasures, much given to Magical Charms and Incantations, and burying with their Dead both Cloths and Victuals, for their Relief in that long Journey to the other World.

It is in length 500, in breadth 120 Miles. The Country is for the most part plain and very fertile, affording store of Cattel, a breed of excellent Horses, Iron-Mines, Salt-Pits, and all Provisions necessary to the Life of Man. Some Vines they also have, and not few Mines of Gold and Silver, more than for fear of the Turks, and other ill Neighbours they dare discover. They are begirt about with woody Mountains, which afford them Fewel; and very well watered with the Rivers of, 1. Pruth, called anciently Hierasius. 2. Sterius. 3. Fulmin. 4. Teltz. 5. Aluta, all of them falling into, 6. the Danow, which in this Province, at the Influx of Fulmina, takes the name of Ister. Yet it is not (at the present) very populous, the Spaciousness and Fertility hereof considered, by reason of the ill neighbourhood of the Tartars, Turks, and Polonian Cossacks: their late long Wars against those Nations, and the Dutch having much decreased their former numbers, with which they so abounded in the times foregoing, that the Vaivod of this Country, in the year 1473, was able upon little warning to bring 70000 Men into the Field for present Service.

Places of most note herein are, 1. Galacz, on the Influx of the River Pruth, or Hierasius, into the Danubius; the Water of which River is so unwholsom, that it causeth the Body to swell. 2. Trescortum, nor far from which they dig a Bituminous Earth, so refined and pure, that usually they make Candles of it instead of Wax. 3. Prailaba, by some called Brailovia, the Town of most Trade in all this Country, situate on the Danow, and defended with a very strong Castle, fortified by Art and Nature, and furnished with a strong Garrison of Turks, as the Key of this Province, opening the Door unto the rest. The Town was most cruelly destroyed and razed to the Ground, with an incredible slaughter of the Inhabitants of all Sexes and Ages, for the space of four days together, by John the Vaivod of Moldavia, spoken of before, at his first revolting from the Turks: but the Castle, in regard of the great strength of it, was scarce attempted by him. 4. Tina, a Fortrels of great strength, but in the hands of the Turks also. 5. Zorzi, corruptly for San-Georgio, seated on the Danow, with an Arm whereof the Castle of it is encompassed, garrisoned by the Turks, and by them held to be so strong and so safe a place, that at the taking of it by Sigismund the Prince of Transylvania, Anno 1596, there were found in it Thirty-nine great Pieces of Ordnance, with such store of Arms and Ammunition as might well have served for a whole Kingdom. 6. Tergovista, or Tercu, sometimes the chief City of the Province, and the ordinary Residence of the Vaivod, till the taking of it by the Turks: once beautified with a fair and famous Monastery, by the Turks converted into a Fortrels; environed with deep Trenches, strong Bulwarks upon every quarter, and great store of Ordnance; but many times lost and got again, according to the changes and chance of War. 7. Bucarest, about a days Journey from Tergovista, seated on the Danow, remarkable for two Bridges built near unto it. The one was of Boats, (the laying whereof took up no less then a whole months time) for the transporting of the Army of Sultan Bissa against Sigismund Prince of Transylvania before mentioned, and broken down by the said Bissa in his flight, having been worsted in all places by the Transylvanians. The other was the work of the Emperor Trajan, in his War against Decabalus King of Dacia, built all of Stone, and laid on Piles and Arches of a wonderful greatness; 24 Piles or Pillars whereof are yet remaining, to the great admiration of all beholders. 8. Cebium, of old called Lycostomos, in vain besieged by the Forces of Mahomet the Great, coming in person to subdue this petty Province. 9. Zarnizegibusta, the Seat Royal of Decabalus King of Dacia, taken and destroyed by Trajan in his War against him; who, causing it to be repaired and more beautified than formerly, gave it the Privileges of Rome, and the name of Ulpia Trajana, which it retained as long as Dacia was a Province of the Roman Empire; now a small Village called Verzet. Some stones have been digged up thereabouts with this Inscription, COLONIA. ULP. TRAJANA. AUG. DACIÆ. ZARMIS. which clearly shew as well the Dignity and esteem as the Antiquity of the place, before Trajan's times.

This Province, as the rest of Dacia on that side of the Danow, after the coming in of the Slaves and Rosses was under Princes of their own, whom they called (as those of Transylvania and Moldavia did) by the name of Vaivods. Protected by the Hungarian Kings, they lived long in Peace; till, sensible of the approaching Danger which the Conquest of most part of Servia and Bulgaria by the Turks was like to bring them, the Vaivod of it in the time of Bajazet the first, passed over the Danow with his Forces, and having done great Spoil to the Turkish Territories, returned again unto his Country. Rather provoked than weakened, with which Invasion, Bajazet comes into Valachia, overcomes the Vaivod in a pitched Field, compelling him to sue for Peace, and to pay him Tribute. But Bajazet being not long after taken Prisoner by Tamerlane, and the Succession controverted amongst his Sons, the imposed Tribute was withheld, till Mahamet, the fifth King of the Turks, having settled the Affairs of that rotering State, Anno 1417, enforced them to a new Composition, and the payment of their former Reckonings. The fortunate Successes of Huniades in several Battles, induced them once more to change their Masters, and to put themselves under the Protection of the Hungarians, as they they had done formerly : but they paid dear for it, their Country being made the Thorough-fare of the Turkish Forces in their Attempts upon that Kingdom. But the Hungarians being vanquished at the Battle of Cassova by Amurath the second, the accustomed Tribute was brought in, and the Turks satisfied for the present, being then hardly put to it by the famous Scanderbeg. Not long after, in the year 1462. Mahomet, the Great, undertook the Conquest of this Country, upon advertisement that Wladus the then Vaivod of it, intended to join with the Hungarians in some War against him : and finding how unprofitable he had spent his Forces in fighting against Woods, Mountains, and a wasted Country, he set up Dracula, the younger Brother of Wladus, to claim the Government ; who making a party amongst the people, and having the Turk for his assistance and support, possessed himself of the Estate, to be holden of him as a Vassal to the Turkish Empire. And it continued in this state, the Vaivods being after this at the Turks appointment and paying all Exactions imposed upon them, till the Revolt of Sigismund the Prince of Transylvania, Anno 1595, at what time Michael, the then Vaivod hereof, taking that opportunity to shake off this Yoke, confederated with him, and the Moldavian for their common Safety. And though he held out longer against Turk and German than either of the other did, discomfited the Turks by his own proper Forces at the Battle of Nicopolis, vanquished the Transylvanians, and added that Province for a while unto the Estate : yet, being at last outed of his Country by the Polanders, and another put into his place, he was shamefully slain in his own Tent, by the privity and consent of Basta, Lieutenant of Rodolphus, Emperor and King of Hungary. After whose death the Country, miserably distracted betwixt two Vaivods, the one placed by the Emperor Rodolph, and the other by Mahomet the Grand Seignior, endured all the Spoil and Wreck which so calamitous a Competition could bring upon it : till in the end, the fortune of the Turks prevailing, the Valachians were constrained to submit unto their disposal, and receive their Vaivods from that Court, as they had done formerly ; performing their accustomed Duties, and paying such yearly Tribute as is laid upon them, which notwithstanding, partly by their own natural Unquietness, and partly by the ambition of such persons as contend for that Dignity, they have since been many times embroiled in Wars ; never so quietly composed, but that a new Hope, or the Artifices of the Turkish Ministers, starts them into Action. By means whereof, when they have tired and spent themselves in their own Combustions, they may in time be fully conquered, and made the next addition to the Turkish Monarchy.

Of what Revenue these Provinces severally were to their natural Lords, and of what severally to the Turk, I am not able to determine. But look upon them as conjunct, and as they stood at the time of the Revolt so often mentioned, and they yielded one way with another into the Treasury of the Grand Seignior no less than a million of Ducats yearly. Knolles in his Turkish History doth report it so. And his Continuator doth affirm that Moldavia only, before the said Revolt, did yearly yield unto the Turk a whole Tun of Gold, 2000 Horses for service, 10000 great Measures of Wheat, with as much Barley, and a wonderful proportion of Butter, Honey and other Victuals ; adding withal, that the other two Provinces paid as much, or more, for their yearly Tribute. After which rate, the Estimate made by Knolles may hold very good. But since the Reduction of these Countries to their former Obedience, the Turks having been more moderate in their Exactions than they were before ; for fear of startling them to some new Engagement, whom they have brought to this Obedience and Conformity with such a vast expence both of Blood and Treasure as would have purchased the best Kingdom of Christendom in the open Market. Inasmuch that the ordinary Tribute of Moldavia is now but 40000 Chequins, that of Valachia but 24000 of the same Coin ; besides 1000 Horses yearly sent from both. Such Bribes and Presents as are given by the Vaivods hereof, either to get or hold their places, being Merchantable Ware, and wholly at the Turks disposing, not being part of this Accompt. Mahomet 4. the last Emperor of the Turks, in the year 1658, made George Gisca Vaivod of Moldavia and Wallachia, whose Predecessor was one Matthias. Of late times the Turks have every year increased the Tribute of these Provinces, making it their business to impoverish this People as much as it is possible, that they may keep them low and poor, and so prevent any thoughts of throwing off their yoke. The Valachians submitted to the Turks in 1612.

4. R A S C I A.

R A S C I A is bounded on the East with Valachia, on the West with Hungary, on the North with Transylvania, and on the South with the River Danow ; encompassed on three sides with that River, and another now called Temes, by the Latines Samus ; and on the East divided from Valachia by the River Aluta. Called Rascia from the Rascians, a Sclavonian People, whom Ortelius placeth in this Tract, and from him Maginus. But here it is to be observed, that besides this Country, the Rascians held some Towns and Territories on the other side of the Danow, and amongst other the strong Town of Chrysonicum, whereof more anon. This small Province is now confounded with Moldavia, and has no Name in our last and best Maps of this Country. The Name is by Baudrand, applied to the most Southern Part of Servia.

The Country is poor enough, but the people poorer, oppressed in former times by the Servians, and of late by the Turks ; which makes them valiant and adventurous upon all occasions, as commonly those people are who give themselves the hope of bettering those Fortunes which they cannot make worse. Places of most note here are, 1. Bodon, a Town of Trade on the Danow, memorable for the Marts or Fairs which are here held annually. 2. Zarnovia. 3. Covin. 4. Novebarde. 5. Severin. not far from which, betwixt it and Bucaresta, a Town of Valachia, are the remainders of Trajan's Bridge before mentioned. 6. Colambes, and 7. Columbella ; of which little memorable.

These Rascians, as before is said, were a Tribe of Slaves, settled in this Country, at the time of their first spreading in the East, and here continuing ever since in possession of it. Governed at first by their own Princes, whom, by a name borrowed from the Grecians, they called their Despots ; that being once the Title of the Heir apparent or designed Successor of the Eastern Empire as Cesar had been formerly in the Empire of Rome, and Monfieur in the same sense in the Realm of France, to signify the eldest Brother (if Heir apparent to the Crown) of the King in being. But as the following Emperors did affect new Titles, so that of Despot fell from one step to another, till given at last unto the Governours of Provinces ; as the Despot of Epirus, Peloponnesus, &c. and in the end was assumed by the several Princes of Rascia, Servia, and Bulgaria. How this Estate became united unto Servia, I am yet to seek : but sure I am, it was united in the person of George, Despot of Servia, and as a part of his Estate surprized by Amurath the second, who boasted his Success therein, (in a Speech made unto his Soldiers at the Siege of Belgrade) notwithstanding that he had to strive with Hunger, Thirst, Labour, and Desperation. Nor have I found at what time or under whose Conduct they passed over Danubius, and there possessed themselves of Chrysonicum, and some other Towns and Territories on that side of the River, which they still retain, either surrounded by the Servians, or at least intermingled with them; which make some Writers of opinion that the Rascians and the Servians are but one and the same People under divers names: to which conjecture their being subject to the same Prince gave some farther ground. But whensoever they passed over, most probable it is, that, proving either troublesome Neighbours, or unwelcome Guests, they gave occasion to the Despots of Servia to make War upon them, and having vanquished them on that side of the River, to carry the War over unto this; till in the end the whole Country was made subject to them. Added to Servia, they fell together with it into the power of the Turks, as was laid before. But being more impatient of the Yoke than the Servians were, they did the Turks much mischief many times, as they came in their way: never so much nor so effectually, as when Mahomet the 3. warred against the Hungarians; at what time they frequently distressed his Armies, by cutting off his men, and intercepting the provisions of Arms and Victuals intended for the great Army of Sinan Bassa. After which at the time when Sigismund Prince of Transylvania had won so many noble Victories against the Turks, 10000 of these Rascians, casting off that Yoke, offered themselves unto his service. These are the only memorable Actions which are told us of them; though this last was only the attempt of some private Adventures, the whole Nation still continuing in Obedience, as before they did. But following (as they did) the Fortunes of Servia, and having a concernment on that side of the Water, we shall there say something farther of them.

Thus have we seen when and by what means the whole Province of Old Dacia became in part subject, and in part tributary to the Turks. It is now time to pass over the Danow, and look upon the other part of this Province, called Dacia Nova, or New Dacia; containing after our account four Provinces of the Roman Empire, that is to say, both Mysia's Scythia, and Dardania, besides the two Dacia's, Mediterranea and Ripensis, interjected betwixt the two Mysia's, as before is said: all now reduced only unto two of the Turkish Provinces, namely the Countries of Servia, and Bulgaria.

5. SERVIA.

S*ERVIA* is bounded on the East with Bulgaria, on the West with Bosnia, and some part of the Lower Hungary, on the North with the Danubius, by which it is parted from Rascia and some part of Valachia, on the South with Albania and part of Macedon. It containeth all Mysia Superior, and a great part of Dardania; and took this new name from the Serbi, or Sorabi, a Slavonian People, of whom more hereafter.

This Country, with the neighbouring Rascia, and the modern Slavonia, was first converted to the Faith by the preaching of Cyril and Methodius, formerly remembered, between the years 860 and 890. of both which there is reserved some special Monuments. For Methodius having obtained both of the Patriarch of Constantinople and the Pope of Rome, that the Nations by them converted might celebrate all Divine Offices in their natural Language, translated the whole Bible into the Slavonian Tongue, which still they have among them in high esteem. And Cyril is said to have devised the Servian Character, not used in this Country only, (though here originally) but also in Rascia, Bulgaria, Bosnia, Moldavia, and most parts of Russia; which Character, from this Cyril, (or Chiruil, as they pronounce it) is still called Chirilize.

The Country was very rich and fruitful before the Conquest of it by the Turks, well stored with Mines of Gold and Silver, especially about Zerbenick, a strong Town hereof. The People are rude and gross, and much given to Wine; false of their Promises, and that upon slight occasions, so that there is but little trust to be laid upon them.

Chief Rivers of this Country, are, 1. Colubra, and 2. Lim, falling into the Savus, 3. Ibar, falling into the 4. Morava: as that into the Danow at Chrysonicum, or Chrysoveetia, a strong Town of the Rascians. Principal Towns hereof, 1. Nissa, the Nessum, as I take it of Ptolomy, by whom it is said to be a City of the Dardanians; now the Metropolis of this Country, and the Key thereof: besieged and taken by Amurath, the first King of the Turks, Anno 1367. The City of Nissa, has been heretofore an important Fortrefs, but the Turks after they were possessed of Belgrade slighted it, but after Belgrade was retaken by the Christians in the year 1688. They repaired it and secured it with a great Dike and Palisadoes, making it their Frontier and Magazine against the Germans; Prince Lewis of Baden in the year 1689, being sent against them by the Emperor, defeated their Forces upon the Morava the 29th of August, when he slew 20000 Turks, and took all their Canon and Baggage. And pursuing his blow marched to Nissa, near which he found the Turks reinforced and strongly intrenched on an Advantageous ground; whereupon he attack'd them the second time in their Camp, the 24th of September, and forcing his way slew 10000 of them, and had slain many more, if the Night had not favoured them in their Flight. After this second Victory, he entered Nissa without any opposition, which the Germans found to be a very considerable Town for the number of its Inhabitants, the strength of its situation, the Fertility of the neighbouring Country, and the Security it may give to their former Conquests, and thereupon the General forthwith ordered it to be Fortified. They found in this City 5 Mosques, and a great number of private Houses. 2. Vidina by the Turks called Kiratow, taken by Ferisbeg, in the beginning of Bajazet the first, and ever since the Seat of a Turkish Sanzack under the Beglerbeg or Bassa of Temeswar. 3. Cratova, and 4. Zerbenic, rich in Silver Mines; a great temptation to the Turks to invade this Country. 5. Simandria, or Senderovia, by some called Spenderobe, by the Hungarian Zenderin, by the Turks Semender; situate on the Danow not far from Belgrade, and taken by Amurath the II. Anno 1438. since governed by a Turkish Sanzack under the Beglerbeg of Buda. 6. Novograd, in the Borders hereof, fortified with an impregnable Castle. 7. Stoniburg, (in Latine Stonibrigadum) the ordinary Seat of the Despots. 8. Prisden, said by Mercator to be the Birth-place of the Emperor Justinian; most like to be Taurisum, a City of the Dardanians, mentioned by Procopius, who maketh it the Birth-place of that Emperor, by whom it was repaired and fortified with four great Turrets, thence called Tetrapyrgon. But others (more probably) make him to be born at Lochrido, a Town of Bulgaria; of which more hereafter. 9. Scopi, by Ptolomy called Scupi. And 10. Ulpianum, first built by Trajan, whose forename was Ulpus; afterwards re-edified by the said Justinian, and called Secunda Justiniana, (Justiniana Prima, being in Bulgaria;) now a poor Village called Fyretia, as Lazius, or Czanadre, as Marius Niger is of opinion. 11. Rhatiara Mysorum, then the chief City of the Mæsians, of which now no Ruines are remaining. 12. Raveniczen, the Vendenis of Ptolomy, but not else observable.

Besides these Towns and many other of less note which properly belong to this Province of Servia, the Rascians also hold some Towns on this side of Danubius, the chief whereof is Chrysonicum, or Chrysoveetia, an old Town, almost wholly ruined, till repaired and fortified by the Turks, Anno 1449. who marking the convenient situation of it on the Banks of Danubius, near to the Fall or influx of the River Morava, and how commodiously it stood both to command and to annoy the rest rest of this Country, and for transporting of their Forces to the other side of that great River, made it their first work to possess themselves of it, and have held it ever since with a very strong Garrison. Such other Towns as the Rascians have on this side of the River, or of lesser note, are looked on by our Author, but as Towns of Servia, (by the Despots whereof they were long since conquered) where before we had them.

The old Inhabitants of this Country, such as are most considerable in the story of it, were the Bastarnæ, the Dardani, and the Mæsi: the Tricornesii and Picenses, spoken of by Protony, being either Branches of the Mæsi, or else an obscure People not worth the looking after. Of these the Dardanians were most ancient inhabiting near Mount Hæmus, on the Borders of Macedon, a barbarous People, and perpetual Enemies of that Crown, most mischievous in their Attempts and Designs against it in the declining state thereof, making great and frequent inroads into that wealthy Country, with the spoils whereof they enriched themselves. Inasmuch that Philip the Father of Perseus, finding no other likely means to be rid of that Trouble, negotiated with the Bastarnæ, a strong and hardy Nation that dwelt beyond the Danubius, to abandon their own dwellings, and come to him with their Wives and Children; promising to assist them in rooting out the Dardanians, and give them possession of their Country. But Philip dying as the Bastarnæ were in their March through Thrace, and no care taken by his Son to pursue the Business, they returned all home again, except 30000, which pierced into Dardania, and made their own Fortunes as they could. This practice, as it gave matter of Quarrel to the Romans against the Macedonian; so it occasioned Perseus, the Son of Philip, to make use of these Bastarnæ against the Romans, at whose request 10000 Horse and as many foot passed over the Danow, under the Conduct of Claudius, a King amongst them. But finding that Perseus was too strait-lac'd to part with Money for their pay, they returned again, foraging the Country as they passed. But whether they passed over that River, or mingled themselves with the rest of their Nation, who upon Philip's invitation had before come over, that I do not find. Howsoever, coming by this means acquainted with the sweets of this Country, divers of them came over hither in the following times, incorporating with the Dardanians, or bordering near them; inasmuch as Tacitus for the most part joins them both together, either as the same, or neighbouring Nations, first vanquished and added to the Roman Empire by C. Curio Scribonius, immediately upon the end of the Civil Wars raised by Spartacus and the Fencers, or Gladiatores; the Myrians, or the Mæsi, being broken at the same time also, Anno U. C. 681. As for the Mæsi, being the last and greatest of these Nations, they were most probably a Colony of the Myrians of the lesser Asia, anciently called Myri, and the Country Myria, as those Asians were, and as those Europeans are by the Greek Writers generally, and by Florus and some others amongst the Latines; though after, for distinction sake, Tacitus, Pliny, Virgil, and generally most Latin Authors, give them the name of Mæsi. A fierce and savage People they were held to be, Barbari Barbarorum, as my Author calleth them, more barbarous than commonly the Barbarians were: but for all that, subdued by M. Licinius Crassus in the time of Augustus Cæsar, who overcame them in two Battles, and after vanquished the Bastarnæ, and their King Deldo, whom he killed in fight; the Country being reckoned after that as a Roman Province. It continued in this Estate till the Fall of the Eastern Empire, when it was subjected by the Sclavi or Sarmatians of Europe; and in the division of the Spoil fell unto the Sorabi, a Sclavonian People, contractedly called Sorbi; and at last Serbi, Servii, and the Country Servia. It was reduced again to the Obedience of the Eastern Emperors by Basilus Porphyrogenitus, Anno Ch. 1000. or thereabouts; but more absolutely conquered by John and Manuel Comnenus, two of his Successors; but so as they were suffered to live under their own Princes, whom they called Despots, Homagers to the Empire, and depending on it. Enriched with the Conquest and addition of Rascia, (the certain time whereof I have no where found) they were first set on by the Turks in the time of Lazarus the Despot, from whom Amurath the first took the Town of Nissa, being the chief of all this Country; provoked thereto by the great Forces which the Servian and Bulgarian Despots had raised against him for the Siege of Adrianople. And though Lazarus, terrified with this Loss, made his Peace with Amurath: yet after he brake out again into open War, in which he was overcome and slain in the Plains of Cassova, whereof more anon. To Lazarus succeeded Stephen, who quietly enjoyed his Dominions here; the Turks being in the mean time embroiled in War amongst themselves by the Sons of Bajazet. But that difference being once composed, and Mahomet absolutely settled on his Father's Throne; the Turks began again to pursue this Quarrel, which George the Son of Stephen compounded with Amurath the 2d. Son of Mahomet, paying the Turk a yearly Tribute, and giving him his Daughter Mary for a Wife or Concubine. But this Alliance did not so well unite their affections, (though George did many ill Offices in regard thereof to his Christian Neighbours) nor so well settled his Estate, but that Amurath in fine dispossessed him first of Rascia, and afterwards of Servia also, for letting Hunades escape, whom he had in his power. And though Amurath was necessitated to restore Servia again, upon the Peace made with Vladislaus the King of Hungary; yet Mahomet the Great, on the death of George soon possessed himself of it. For Lazarus, the youngest of George's Sons, having deprived Stephen and George his elder Brethren (whose eyes Amurath had before put out, to make them incapable of the Government) of the Principality, compelled them to seek to Mahomet for Aid. But dying whilst these matters were in agitation, his Widow put her self and her three Sons, Peter, John and Martin, under the protection of the Hungarians; and by that means, but with much trouble and many difficulties (the blind Brethren still soliciting the Turks against her) held the State a while, till the people, finding no assurance in that kind of Government, and weary of the daily Harms they received from the Turks, yielded themselves absolutely to the power of Mahomet, about the year 1460, continuing ever since a Province of the Turkish Empire.

The Kings and Despots of SERVIA, being not mentioned by our Author, I have taken care to supply that defect out of Du Fresne his Historia Bizantina.

- 599
1. The first Prince of this Nation on this side the Danube, obtained this Province about the 18th year of the Reign of Mauritius, Anno Christi, 599. His name is not mentioned by my Author, but it seems to have been Chaganus.
 2. Boisethlauns, or Boleslans.
 3. Rodoslavus.
 4. Profogoes.
 5. Blasphemirus. Till this Prince's time there was a firm Peace between the Bulgarians and the Servians; but in his Reign Preslamus King of Bulgaria, attempted to conquer Servia; but miscarried and lost his Army. Preslamus lived in the time of Basilus Macedo, Emperor of Constantinople, about the year of Christ, 870.
 6. Munimirus, Siroimirus and Goinicus, three Sons of Blasphemirus, divided Servia between them; they were successful whilst they joyned their Arms against the Bulgarians; but entering tering into a Civil War at home, the eldest expelled the 2 younger Brothers.

7. Priestlaus, the eldest Son of Muntimirus.
8. Petrus or Petriflaus, Son of Goinicus invading Priestlaus, with the assistance of the Croatians, obtained the Principality of Servia, and reigned 20 years in the times of Leo Philosophus, and then was taken Prisoner by Treachery, by Paulus 2. Son of Branus, 2. Son of Muntimirus, and Brother of Priestlaus.
9. Paulus reigned 3 years.
10. Zachari 3. Son of Priestlaus, by the assistance of the Greeks and Bulgarians, recovered his Fathers Kingdom.
11. Tzeesth Lavus, the Son of Clonimirus, of the Royal Family, set up by the Bulgarians for a small time, and then carried away Captive into Bulgaria. But afterwards he escaped, and recovered his Country under the Protection, and by the Greeks, about the year of Christ 950. This is thus recorded by Constantinus Porphyrogenitus, who lived in the same times with this last Prince.

There is another very ancient Catalogue, which agrees not with this, either as to Names or Actions, out of which the following Princes are Collected.

1. Vladimirus Son of Petriflaus, Son of Hvalimirus, who succeeded his Father, and was perfidiously slain by the Bulgarians, the 22th of May 1015.
- 1015 2. Draghimirus, Uncle of Vladimirus, attempted to recover his Right from the Bulgarians, but miscarried, and was slain.
- 1036 3. Dobroslaus, born after his Fathers Death, recovered the Kingdom from the Bulgarians. In his time about the year 1036, Michael Paphlago Emperor of Constantinople, brought Servia again under that Empire, the Kingdom being much weakened by the Bulgarian Wars. He escaped, and regained his Country, and defeated the Greeks, when ever they invaded it.
- 1050 4. Michael 3. Son of Dobroslaus, possessed intirely all his Fathers Kingdom, and in the year 1050, entered into a League with Michael Monapachius Emperor of Constantinople. He reigned 30 years.
- 1073 5. Rodostaus brother of Michael, succeeded him, though he had a numerous Posterity of his own. Codinus, Son of Michael, and called Constantinus, being elected King of Bulgaria, in the life of his Father, succeeded also his Uncle in the Kingdom of Servia, or rather his Father, and was living in the year 1100. Michael his Son succeeded him, but was soon deposed, and
6. Dobroslaus 2. Son of Rodostaus, was elected King by the People. Vladimirus 2. Son of Vladimirus 1. and Grand-child of Michael.
- 1115 7. Georgius, Son of Bodinus, he was driven into exile 7 years, and Gubressa reigned in his stead, but he recovered the Kingdom, but was at last taken Prisoner by Alexius Emperor of Constantinople.
8. Draghina, a Prince of great vertue and goodness, elected King, and reigned eleven years.
9. Rodostaus his Son succeeded him, but with the Title only of Count of Servia, and not King.
10. Primislaus, 11. Beluses, 12. Dessa, three brothers, the last made King by Emanuel Emperor of Constantinople. In the year 1173, he was by the Emperors sent Prisoner to Constantinople, where he died.

- 1173 13. Neeman, or Nemagnam, recovered Servia, with the assistance of the Croats. (He is called Stephen Necman) and defended himself very successfully against Rodostaus, who was set up by the Greeks against Dessa, till Emanuel Emperor of Greece, assisted his Rival, but then being forced to submit, he came into the Emperors Camp as a supplicant, and promised Allegiance for the future, but failed in the performance, upon the recess of the Greek Forces. This expedition was in the year 1177. After this he reigned without any great misfortune.
14. Thimoilus, Son of Necman, one year. Simcon, Brother of Thimoilus, called Stephen by the Greek Writers, who first called himself King of Rascia, Governed Servia, Dalmatia, Dio-clia, Trebina and Zachlunia; he Married Eudocia, Neice of Isaac Angelo Emperor of Greece; who was given him by Isaac, whilest he was Emperor, and delivering up his Throne to his Son, after a short Reign, he retired into a Monastery.
15. Stephen Son of Simcon, a Wise Prince, he made Peace with the Greeks and Bulgarians, and reigned 28 years.
- 1201 16. Vulcus, Vulcanus brother of Stephen, usurped upon him, and drove him out by the assistance of the Hungarians, by the Procurement of Pope Innocent the 3. It is probable, Stephen however recovered the Kingdom, and reigned till the year 1220.
17. Neeman 2. Son of Stephen, succeeded his Father, or Uncle, he was a Religious, Wise and Valiant Prince, Conquered part of Bulgaria, and reigned 22 years, he is called Stephen also.
18. Stephen, Son of Neeman 2. called also Vresis, Vrosus, or Vrosius.
19. Stephen 2. called Dragutinus, slew his Father and reigned in his stead, but repenting of it, he resigned the Kingdom to his Brother.
- 1286 20. Vrosius Sanctus brother of Stephen, called by the Sclavonians, Asilutinus, i. e. the Meek, succeeded him; being the elder brother. He was in the Throne about the year 1308, besieged Ragusa in 1318, in 1320 he was beaten by the Hungarians, and forced to become an Homager of that Crown.
- 1321 21. Vladislaus, Son of Stephen, and Nephew of Vrosius, was made King of Servia in 1321, or, as others in 1323, he neither reigned long, nor quietly.
- 1322 22. Stephen 3. Bastard Son of Vrosius, recovered Servia, and took Vladislaus, and kept him in Prison till he died.
- 1333 23. Stephen 4. Duscianus Son of the former, a Magnificent and Valiant Prince, who defended his Country against the Greeks, Hungarians and Turks, which last began first in his Reign to invade Servia; and were beaten by him.
- 1356 24. Vrosius 2. Son of Stephen Duscianus and of Helen Daughter of the King of Bulgaria. This was the last of the Kings of Servia, and was slain in the year 1368. after he had been taken Prisoner, and deposed.
- 1368 25. Vcascius Ceonichius, an Usurper upon Vrosius, his Master, but a Person of great Valour and Worth, he beat Solyman the first, and slew 30 Thousand of his Men, but in his return was overthrown and slain by one of his own Servants, in the year 1371.

Thus ended the ancient Kingdom of Servia, when it had continued 772 years, and possibly much longer; for Dioleatas

Diocletes makes Sueladus, Father of Ostroilus, the first King of Servia contemporary with Anastafius, Emperor of Greece, who ended his Reign in the year 517; and Brother of Totilas, who in the year 541 joined with Ostroilus in invading the Roman Empire. And when Totilas went on for Italy, his Brother settled in Servia, and became the first King of it. But this doth not seem so well Founded, and therefore omitting all the first Kings, I have begun with Fladimirus, which is the first of them that I find named by any Greek Historian. After these Kings Servia was about 100 years Governed by Despotes.

The Despotes of S E R V I A.

1. Pribafius Chrebelanouchius, a Nobleman, and Baron of Rascia, the Father of Lazarus the first Despote of Servia, lived in the times of Stephen King of Servia.
2. Lazarus, or Eleazarus Bulcovitzius, under Vrosius the last King; he seized on Simendria, and kept it with the Title of Crates or Despote, which Title was in probability given him by Vrosius or the Emperor. He lived in great Friendship with Lewis King of Hungary, but under King Stephen he took and burnt Belgrade. Being invaded by Amurath, Sultan of the Turks, and not able to resist his numerous Forces, he caused him to be slain in his Tent by Treachery; others say he was overthrown by the Sultan the 15th of June, 1389, and slain in Battel.
- 1389 3. Stephen Bulcovitzius, Son of Lazarus, succeeded his Father, made peace with Bajazet the Son of Amurath, and paid him Tribute; and fought under his Banners against Tamurlane when he was taken Prisoner. He died of the Gout in the year 1421.
- 1421 4. Mara, Maria, or Maro, usurped under Stephen, for some time, the Title of Despote of Servia, but was at last slain or conquer'd.
5. George Brankovitzius, was the Son of George the Son of W'kus, second Son of Lazarus, Despote of Servia; and after the Death of Stephen without Issue, became the 4th or 5th Despote of Servia: Amurath pretending a Right against him, because Stephen had no Children; he ended this Quarrel, by giving Amurath a part of his Country, and his Sister in Marriage in the year 1435. About the year 1438 Amurath however invaded Servia, and took Sendrew, the Capital City of it, and many of the chiefest Towns of Servia, which forced George to flee for succour into Hungary with Lazarus his youngest Son, George and Stephen, the two eldest, being both in the hands of Amurath, who put out their Eyes. He had before given Belgrade to the King of Hungary for Lands in that Kingdom, which now supported him. Amurath proceeds, and in the year 1439 besieged Belgrade, where he lost his Army. In 1440 the Hungarians under John Huniades entered Servia, and restored George, Despote, to his Country. In the year 1444 the War was begun again by the Christians, whence followed the Defeat of Verna, the 10th of December, in which Vaislaus King of Hungary perished, and Huniades escaping into Servia was detained by George till he had restored to him the Towns he had resigned for his former Assistance. The Despote had no hand in this War, which drew upon him an Hungarian War, in which he was worsted by Huniades. The Turks after this, in the year 1449, invaded him again, and Huniades joined with him, and expelled the Turks out of Servia. In the year 1456 Mahomet, the Successor of Amurath, invaded Servia again, and laid Siege to Belgrade, where he was defeated by Huniades. George died in the year 1457.

- 1457 6. George, the eldest Son, succeeded his Father under the Guardianship of his Mother, he being blind, but he was soon after dispossessed by
- 1458 7. Lazarus his Brother, who poisoned his Mother, and by the Assistance of Sultan Mahomet usurped his Brother's Throne. This drew upon him a War from Mahomet, the terror of which put an end to his Life in the year 1458.
- 1458 8. John, Son of Stephen, second Son of George, succeeded under the Government of his Mother; John the Son of Lazarus fleeing to the Hungarians, and claiming Servia also, which became Imbroiled to that height, that in the year 1460 the Inhabitants of Servia submitted to Mahomet the Great, to preserve themselves from utter Ruin. Under which Empire they lived till the year 1689; in which, by two great Victories obtained by the present Emperor, they seem to be retrived out of that Slavery, which has lain heavy upon them 229 Years.

6. B U L G A R I A.

B U L G A R I A is bounded on the East with the Euxine Sea, on the West with Servia, on the North with the River Danow, which is here in the East part called Ister, on the South with Thrace, called formerly by the name of Mysia Inferior, as lying lower than the other on the course of that River; as Servia, lying up the Water, was called Mysia Superior. Afterwards it was reckoned of as a part of Dacia, and in that notion was the Birth-place of Galerius, one of the Cesars in the Empire of Dioclesian, born in this Country near the Borders of Thrace, not far from the City Sardica; who therefore, in the Martyrologies of the middle Times, was called by the name of Dacianus. Finally, it took this name from the Bulgars, a Scythian People, who in the year 566 possessed themselves of it.

The Country for the most part is full of sharp and rugged Hills, branches of the great Mountain Hemus, which divide it from Thrace, and spread themselves over all this Province, insomuch that even the Mid-lands of it are rough and stony: and though the lower parts have some Plains and Valleys, yet are they generally full of Woods and Defarts; the most unpleasant and least peopled part of both the Dacia's. The Inhabitants hereof, in some conformity to the Country, are patient of all Toil and Labour, and not easily tired; but nothing is more troublesome than their Conversation: more full of Courage than of Valour; their Courage not proceeding by the Rules of Reason, but issuing only out of Brutishness, or a natural Fierceness.

They first received the Christian Faith towards the latter end of Justinian the second, who died in the year 713, Trebellius being then their Prince; and afterwards by the persuasion of Leo the fourth, surnamed Porphyrogenetus, about the year 789. But those Conversions being but partial and for private ends, they relapsed shortly after to their former Gentilism; not totally gained unto the Gospel till the Empire of Michael and Theodora, in the year of Grace 800. Subject since that unto the Jurisdiction of the Patriarch of Constantinople; but not without great opposition of the Popes of Rome, who laid a Claim unto them.

Places of most note in it are, 1. Axium, or Axiopolis, on the Banks of Danubius, which from this Town begins to take the name of Ister. It is now called Colonamich, of no great fame otherwise, 2. Dinagaria, by Antonine called called Dinigutia, now Drimago, situate also on the Ister, opposite to the Influx of Hierafus, and the Town of Gelacz. 3. Mesembria, situate on the Euxine, and still retaining the old name; in Strabo, by some error of the Transcribers, called Menebria. 4. Marcianopolis, on the Ister or Danubius also, built by Trajan in honour of Marcia his Sister, whence it had the name: in vain besieged by the Goths at their first Irruptions on this Country; and afterwards much mentioned in the Stories of that warlike People, for many Bickerings and some great Battels they had near it with the Emperor Claudius, in one of which they were overthrown by him with a mighty Slaughter. 5. Nicopolis (by the Turks called Nigebol) built by the same Trajan on the Danow, at the Fall of the River Jatre, at his return from the Conquest of Dacia, whence was the occasion of the Name; the word Nicopolis signifying the City of Victory; sufficiently memorable for the Founder of it, more for the many great Battels fought near unto it; whereof two were principal. The first, that of Sigismund the Emperor and King of Hungary; besieging it with an Army of 130000 Christians in the time of Bajazet the first (whose Father Amurath had taken it from the King of Bulgaria;) the issue of which Siege was this, that Bajazet coming to raise the Siege obtained the Victory, with the loss of 60000 Turks; the Army of the Christians being wholly routed, 20000 slain, all the rest almost taken Prisoners, and the young Emperor forced to fly by Sea to Thrace, thence unto Constantinople, afterwards to Rhodes, and at last, after Eighteen Months absence, to his Realm of Hungary. This fatal Victory was obtained in the year 1393. The other (as it were in Revenge of this) was fought betwixt Michael Vaivod of Valachia, and the Forces of Mahomet the third, over whom the Vaivod got a remarkable Victory, and, as the Fruits thereof, sacked the City it self, carrying thence great Spoil and Booty, and infinite multitudes of People; with some whereof he made up his Army, sending the rest to inhabit and manure the void and desert places of his own Dominions. 6. Sophia, called Tibiscum in the time of Ptolomy, repaired by the Emperor Justinian, who gave it this name, from a famous and magnificent Temple founded and dedicated by him unto S. Sophia. The ordinary Residence in these late times of a Turkish Beglerbeg, who hath the chief Command of Europe under the Grand Seignior. Once taken by Huniades, and by him, at the command of Vlad slaus King of Hungary, burnt to the ground; but afterwards repaired, and more strongly Fortified than it had been formerly. Sophia is seated in a pleasant Plain or broad Valley between two high Mountains; one of which being always covered with Snow, renders the Air here cool and subtle. It has great plenty of excellent Waters and some hot Baths: This is nine days Journey from Belgrade. Sir Paul Ricaut. 7. Varna, anciently called Dionysopolis, situate on the Euxine Sea, near the Borders of Thrace: remarkable for the great Defeat there given the Christians, the first Flight of Huniades from the Face of the Turks, and the Death of Vladislans King of Hungary, spoken of before, in the year 1444. 8. Sumium. 9. Pezechium. 10. Galacrium. 11. Galatea. And, 12. Macropolis; all taken by the Hungarians in their way to Varna, and lost again upon the issue of that Battel. 13. Silistria, at this time the chief City hereof, and the ordinary Abode of a Turkish Bassa: delivered to Amurath the First by Sasmenos, Prince or King of Bulgaria, out of a vain hope to save thereby the rest of his Country. 14. Parastlaba, or Perstlana, the ancient Seat of the Kings of Bulgaria, till the taking of it by John Zimisces Emperor of Constantinople, who caused it to be called Johannopolis: but it soon lost that new name, and is now an ordinary Village called Peretalam. 15. Ternova, the usual Seat or Residence of the later Princes of this Country at the Conquest of it by the Turks. 16. Budina, once of great importance, and the chief of this Country; but being taken by Huniades in the course of his Victories, it was by him burnt down to the ground, as having been the cause of much War to the Christians there: supposed to be built in or near the place where once stood the old City of Oescus, the principal Town of the Triballi, call'd therefore Oescus Triballorum; though some will have that City to be now called Elida. 17. Vcnuzina, a Town of great strength, and one of the first pieces taken by the Turks. 18. Cassova, fatal to the Christians, who in the Plains hereof had two main Defeats. The first by Amurath the first, who here discomfited Lazarus the Despot of Servia, and the greatest Army that the Christians ever raised against the Turks: Lazarus himself being slain in the Fight, and Amurath himself shortly after the Battel stabbed in the Belly by one Miles Cobeletz, a wounded and half-dead Soldier, as he was taking a view of the dead Bodies which lay there in heaps. The last by Amurath the second to the famous Huniades, whom he here discomfited after a cruel Fight continuing three days together; in which were slain 17000 Christians, and amongst them the greatest part of the Hungarian Nobility; Huniades put again to flight, and forced to some Extremities to preserve his Life: the Turks buying this great Victory with the loss of 40000 Men, as themselves confessed. The place in which these Fights were fought, called the Plains of Cassova, extendeth Twenty Miles in length, and Five Miles in breadth, incompassed round with pleasant Mountains, in the form of an Amphitheatre; as if it were designed by Nature for a Stage of Action. 19. Dorostorum, by some of the Ancients called Rhodostolon, the Seat in Ptolomy's time of the first Legion called Italica; afterwards one of the chief Towns which the Rosses or Russians had in this Country: from whom it was taken by John Zimisces the Eastern Emperor, decaying after that time by little and little, and now wholly ruinat. 20. Achridus, the Birth-place of Justinian; by whom it was beautified and enlarged, and called Justiniana Prima: who, raising the Diocese of Dacia into a Prefecture, placed here a Primate for the Affairs of the Church, which honour it doth still retain, the Bishop hereof being the Primate of all Dacia, and a Praefectus Pratorio for Affairs of State. But he being dead, the Town returned to its old name, now called Ochrida, contracted by William of Tyre to Acre, by the Turks called Giustandil: a distinct Principate of it self in the time of Amurath the first, and by him made Tributary at his first War with this Country.

And here it is to be observed, that those parts of this Country which lie next to the Euxine Sea had anciently the Name of Pontus, as had also some parts of Asia minor which bordered on the same Sea also; and that the City of Tomi, as Ptolomy, or Tomos, as Pliny calleth it, to which Ovid was banished by Augustus Caesar, was a City of this European Pontus, and not of the Asian, as hath been commonly conceived. For Tomi is by Ptolomy placed amongst the Cities of Moesia Inferior, and by Ovid on the West or left side of the Euxine, and not upon the South thereof, as appeareth by these Lines of his.

Querere me lesi Principis ira juber.*

This is to say;

*My wronged Prince's Wrath commands me 'bide
At Tomos, on the Euxine's Western side.*

The place is at this day called Tomiswar, according to Caelius Calpagninus; but others would have it to be the same which is now named Kiovia, in the same Tract also; not far from which is said to be a Lake called to this day Ovidow Jezecoor, the Lake of Ovid. For what cause he was hither banish'd is not yet agreed on. Some say it was for the unlawful Pleasures which he enjoyed with Julia the Emperor's Daughter, whom he celebrates in in his Amorum, under the borrowed Name of Corinna. Others imagine that he had seen Augustus himself unnaturally using the Company of the same Julia, his Daughter; for which the offended Prince exiled him: and that he alludeth hereunto in his Book de Tristibus, saying, Cur aliquid vidi? Cur noxia lumina feci? &c. A Crime of which I dare not think that noble Emperor to be any way guilty. But certain it is, that whatsoever was the true reason of it, that which was openly pretended was the Writing of those lascivious and inflammatory Books de Arte Amandi, tending to the Debauchment of Youth and Corruption of Manners, which he in divers places of his Works acknowledgeth for the cause thereof.

But to return unto the business of this Country. The ancient Inhabitants hereof were, towards the East, the Troglodytae, dwelling near the Mouth or Fall of the River Peuce into the Euxine or Black Sea; the Peucini inhabiting on the very Mouth of it; and in a little Island opposite thereunto, called also Peuce, now Pizina, the Cribizi, Piarenfii and Dimensii, the Western parts being wholly taken up by the Triballi, the most potent Nation of them all, who alone had the happiness to vanquish Phillip King of the Macedonians. For Phillip having, or pretending, a Quarrel against Mateas, a King of the Sarmatians, entred his Country, overthrew him in a set Fight; carried with him great Booties, and among other things 20000 Mares for Breed, which he took in the Battel; it being the Custom of the Scythians and Sarmatians to use Mares only in their Wars, because their not stopping in the midst of a Race to piss could be no impediment to them in their Flight. In his return homeward these Triballi deny him passage through their Country, unless they might partake of the Spoils. This being denied, they fall from words to blows, and next to a pitched Field. In which Fight Phillip was wounded with an Arrow, which passing through his Thigh, nailed him to the Saddle; his Horse being galled with the Wound, falling down to the ground. Which the frightened Macedonians seeing, and supposing him dead, fled out of the Field, leaving all the Spoils to the Triballi, as if they had been sent out only to be their Receivers. So true an Observation is it, that the very Life-blood of the Army runs chiefly in the Veins of the General or Supreme Commander. Over-topped after this by the Mæsi, or mingled with them, they were first broken by the Romans under the Conduct of C. Curio Scribonius, spoken of before; the absolute Conquest of them and the rest of the Mæsians being reserved for the times of Augustus Caesar. By him, or his Successors, the whole Country of the Mæsians being cast into two Provinces, this part of it had the name of Mæsia Inferior, that, lying Westward up the Water, being called Mæsia Superior, for distinction sake. By the Emperor Aurelianus, the Dacians being forced from the other side of the Danow by the Barbarous Nations, or by him prudently removed to avoid their Fury, were planted here betwixt both the Mysia's, divided afterwards into two Provinces taken out of the other, Mediterranea, and Ripensis; which with the help of the higher Mysia, Dardania, Prevalitana, and part of Macedonia Salutaris, made up the whole Diocese of Dacia, as before was said. The residue hereof, now passing under the name of Bulgaria, was afterwards divided into two Provinces also; another Province being taken out of the East parts of the lower Mæsia, lying betwixt the River Phanissus and the most Northern Branch of the Ister, which they called Scythia, because the Aroteres, a Scythian People, did once possess it; the Romans ambitiously affecting to be thought the Conquerors of that unconquerable Nation. Successively by the Goths and Huns was this Country taken from the Romans; recovered again in or before the time of Justinian, who had here his Officers which were subordinate to the Vicar or Lieutenant of Thrace, to which Diocese they properly and of right belonged.

But long they held not in that State; the Slavonians first and after the Bulgarians, being Masters of them. Of the first of these enough hath been said elsewhere. These latter being a Scythian People, inhabiting on the Banks of the River Volga, were at first called Volgari, afterwards Bulgari: though some conceive they had the name of Bulgarians from Bulgar, the chief Town of their Nation: but both uncertain. In the time of the Emperor Anastasius they made their first Sally into the Provinces of the Empire, foraging Illyricum and Thrace, afterward, in the Reign of Heraclius they were hired by Cosrothes the Persian (with many other Barbarous Nations) to besiege Constantinople. In the Reign of Constantine surnamed Pogonatus, conquering or casting out the Slaves, they planted themselves in these Countries, compelling the Emperor to compound with them for a sum of money, from making any farther Inroad into his Dominions. From this time forward we find their Princes called by the name of Kings of the Bulgarians: the first of which after their settling in these parts was Trebellius, or Trebellis, as some call him, the first Christian Prince of the Bulgarians, by whom Justinian the second was first restored unto the Empire, of which he had been outed by Asimerus; and afterwards well beaten by them, and forced to fly unto Constantinople, on some Breach between them. Growing into good terms with the Eastern Emperors, they aided them against the Saracens, then besieging the Imperial City; of whom they slew 22000 as they were Foraging the Country: and in the time of Leo the Fourth, called Porphyrogenetus, they became Homagers to the Empire, by whose perswasion Telericus, King of the Bulgarians, received the Sacrament of Baptism; and thereupon was honoured by him with a Wife of the Imperial Family, and the honourable Title of a Patrician. After this time the Kings hereof had many Privileges indulged them by the Constantinopolitans, not usually communicated unto other Princes, viz. their Crown of Gold, their Tiar or Cap of Silk, and their red Shooes, for their Regal (which were also the Imperial) Ornaments. To these Kings also, and to these only, did the Greek Emperors allow the Title of Βασιλεως, as being merely Imperial. Other Kings they called Ρέγας, from the Latin word Reges. Inasmuch that when Basilus Macedo had received Letters from Pope Adrian the second, wherein Lewis the second, the Western Emperor, was called Basileus; he razed out that Imperial Attribute, and dispatch'd an Embassy to Lewis, wherein he challenged it as his own peculiar Epithet. Some Quarrels after falling out, Crunus the Bulgarian King, in the time of Nicephorus, Successor to the Empreiss Irene, invadeth Thrace, and, and taking the City of Sardica, killeth that Emperor in his Tent, and worsteth Michael (who succeeded) in the open Field; Mesembria, a principal City of this Country, being taken and ransacked by him. But Bogor, of another temper, not only did receive the Sacrament of Baptism, which many of his Predecessors had intermitted; but brought his Subjects (who rebelled on the Change of Religion, and thereupon were fought with and vanquished by him) to the same Faith also: gratified for that cause by Theodora the Empreiss with some large Accession unto his Estate. After long Wars betwixt the Bulgarians and the following Emperors, the Fortune of the Constantinopolitan did at last prevail: Samuel the King of the Bulgarians being overthrown, 150000 of his Soldiers taken and deprived of sight, and the Country conquered by Basilus the second, surnamed Porphyrogenetus, Anno 1015, from that time Tributary to the Empire; to which they did good service in the time of Constantinus Ducas, using their help against the Uzi, a new swarm of Scythians, passing over the Ister with an Army of 60000 fighting Men, and wasting Macedon and Greece. The like did John, another of the Kings thereof, aiding the Greeks against the Latines, whom they overthrew with a great Slaughter, Baldwin the Emperor of the Latins in Constantinople being taken Prisoner, sent in Bonds to Ternova, and there cruelly Murthered, Anno 1206. They were conquered also by Charles King of Hungary in the year 1310. Nor were they wanting to assist them against the Turks, when they grew dangerous to that Empire by the taking of Adrianople: for the Recovery whereof they raised a great and puissant Army, unfortunately discomfitted by the Forces of Amurath the first, Anno 1369. Provoked with which Invasion, Amurath, having settled his Affairs in Asia, with an Army of 30000 falleth into Bulgaria; takes divers Places of importance, and prevailed so far, that Sasmenos the last Prince hereof, wrapping his Winding-sheet about him, to shew that he had deserved Death, prostrates himself most abjectly at the Tyrant's Feet, offering to put Silistria (his strongest City) into his Possession. For not performance of which Offer, his Country is again invaded, and most part of it taken from him; he being permitted to enjoy the rest upon hard Conditions, as Vassal and Tributary to the Turk. But Bajazet, Amurath's Successor, not content herewith, picked a Quarrel with him, and made an absolute Conquest of Bulgaria, converting it into a Province of the Turkish Empire, Anno 1396. In which state it hath ever since continued, governed by three Turkish Sanzacks under the Beglerbeg of Greece: the Sanzacks residing at Nicopolis, Silistria, and Sophia, in which last the Beglerbeg himself doth sometimes resides.

The Catalogue of the Kings of BULGARIA, from Du Fresne.

The Bulgarians were originally an Hord or Family of the Crim-Tartars, who lived about the Dneiper or Boristhenes, and by degrees extending their Conquests to the West, were first heard of amongst the Greeks about the times of Anastasius, under whom they invaded Thrace; and in the years 499 and 502 defeated two Royal Armies that were sent against them, to restrain whose Incursions that Prince afterwards built a Wall from the Sea to Sclymbria, a City Forty-four Miles South of Constantinople, now call'd Selombria, Selivrea or Selibria being seated on the Propontis, so that the opposite Sea was the Euxine or Black Sea. In the year 504 they passed into Illyricum, and took and sack'd Syrmiu; which was soon after taken by Theodorick, King of the Goths, who defeated the Bulgarians: Their King then was, 502 1. Libertes Buba, the first victorious King.

538 2. Wiger and Draccon, two of their Leaders or Princes in the times of Justinian, about the years 538 and 541: Made two dreadful Irruptions into Thrace, and in the last of them came up to the Walls of Constantinople; and in the last took and sack'd Galaru, but were at last conquered and driven home by that victorious Prince, who employed against them Belisarius. After which they are never mentioned till the year 640, and then on the account of another great Misfortune, viz. that of a Civil War, they are said to be driven into Pannonia, in which they desired to have Lands assigned them for their Subsistence by Dagobert King of France.

3. Chrovatus, or Comatus, is said to be King of the Bulgarians under Constantinus Pogonatus.

679 4. Bathius, the eldest Son of Chrovatus, in whose time Asparuch, the youngest of the Brothers of this Prince, passed the Danube and settled in Masua; which from thence forward was from this Nation called Bulgaria. Constantinus Pogonatus in 679, and Justinian his Son in 687, attempted, without any success, to drive them out, but they defended the Country against both these Princes.

706 5. Tirbelis, or Tyrbagli, succeeded him, who in the year 706 assisted Justinian against one Apfimar, an Usurper; and helped him to take Constantinople, for which he was well rewarded by that Prince; yet after this he made a faithless and unfortunate War upon the Bulgarian, which lasted longer than his Reign.

727 6. Cormes, or Crimus, Son of Tirbelis, by Theophanes called Comersius, who maintained the War against the Greeks, which, as to the Event, is variously reported by the Historians.

763 7. Telefis, or Tileutis, of another Family, chosen by the People, who were no longer able (as they pretended) to bear the insolence of the Princes of the Royal Family. He began his Reign with an Invasion of Greece, which ended in his Ruin.

764 8. Sabinus, Son-in-Law to Cormes, who endeavouring to settle himself by a Peace with the Greeks, was Deposed too, and fled to Constantinople.

9. Paganus was set up after him, who by their consent put an end to the War with the Greeks. This Peace was broken by the Greeks in the year 765, with the great Loss of the Aggressors.

771 10. Telericus, Tsericus, succeeded Paganus. This Prince was at last also driven into Exile.

777 11. Cardamus was next Elected, against whom Constantinus, Son of Irenes, made War in 778, which lasted many years with various Events.

807 12. Crumus, or Crumnus, or Crumas, in the year 809 took Sardica, and defeated 6000 Greeks that opposed him. Nicephorus, to Revenge this Disgrace, in 811 entred Bulgaria with a formidable Army, which, together with the Emperor, perished in Bulgaria. In the year 812 he had also equal Success against Michael the Successor of Nicephorus; after which he besieged Constantinople, being enrag'd against the Emperor, for attempting to destroy him under the covert of Treaty; he failed in this, but he took Adrianople; and in the year following renewed the Siege of Constantinople, under the Walls of which he died in 815.

815 13. Doucomus.

14. Ditzengus, or Tzocus, a cruel bloody Prince, who became blind, and was deposed by his own Subjects, and Murthered.

15. Mortagon, or Mutragon, or Omortag, a bloody Persecuting Pagan Prince, who yet made a Peace for Thirty Years with Leo the Armenian Emperor of Constantinople. He fought and slew Thomas who had rebelled against Michael Baltisus in the year 821.

16. Baldirius, Vladimir, the Grandson of Crumus, succeeded Mortagon before the year 829; and is supposed to be that Bulgarian Prince that invaded Friuli in the year 828.

17. Bogoris, he being in danger to be invaded by Michael the Son of Theophilus in the time of a Famine in his Country, promised to imbrace the Christian Religion to avoid that Storm, and obtained a Peace on those terms, about the year 866; and he persisted zealously in this Faith to his Death, which happened in the year 896.

18. Presianus, mentioned as King of Bulgaria, on the occasion of a War with Blasimir, King of Servia.

19. Michael Vorizos, or Burichius, who to Revenge the Overthrow of his Father, invaded Servia, then divided between the Children of Blasimir, Blustimirus, but was equally unfortunate with his Father; and forced to a Peace. These Princes lived in the Times of Basilius Macedo, and Preslamus seems to have been the Son of Bogoris.

20. Symeon, the Son of Vladimirus, the Sixteenth King of Bulgaria. He was Educated at Constantinople in Greek Learning in his Youth, and for some time lived in a Monastery, and in that Habit aspired to his Father's Throne, which having gained, he made Peace with Servia and Greece. In the year 888 he began a War with the latter, in which he prevailed at first, but the Emperor engaging the Hungarians and Tartars against him, he was defeated in three Battels, but carried the fourth. This War lasted to the year 895; after this he began a second War with Leo the Sixth, in which also he was Victorious, whereupon followed a Peace, and a new War upon the change of the Emperor; and Symeon, in the year 912, marched up to the Walls of Constantinople. In the year 914 he took Adrianople by Treachery. The Terrour of this Prince forced the Emperor to clap up a Peace with the Saracens: after which he beat the Bulgarians, in the year 917, but by the Treachery of one of the Emperor's Generals that Battel was lost also. In the year 928 he again besieged Constantinople, and invited Fatlum the Calyph of the Saracens of Ægypt to assist him with their Fleet. The 27th of May, 932, he ended his Life.
- 932 21. Peter, Son of Symeon, a Prince of great Valour and Conduct in the beginning of his Reign by his great Preparations struck a Terrour into the Servians, Croatians, and Turks of Tartary, but bent his Forces against his more powerful Enemies the Greeks, descending with a powerful Army into Macedonia; but hearing the Emperor was coming against him with considerable Forces, he consented to a Treaty of Peace, which he confirmed by a Marriage with Mary the Daughter of Christopher, Son of Constantine Romanus, then Emperor of Greece. This was celebrated at Constantinople the 8th of October, 932. After the Death of this Lady he renewed the Peace with Nicephorus Phoca, the Successor of Constantine in the year 943. But in the year 947, Nicephorus broke the Peace, and persuaded Sphendoslavus, Prince of Russia, to invade Bulgaria, which they accordingly did in August of this year, and in that Expedition took many of Peter's Towns, and Borises and Romanus, two of Peter's Sons. The Russ were hereupon so taken with the Pleasures of Greece, that they joined with Peter and invaded the Empire with an Army of Three hundred and eight thousand Man in the year 968 or 969, which yet were by the Arts of Bardus, the Greek General, strangely defeated with an Army of Twelve thousand Greeks.
- 971 22. Borises, or Burichus, the Son of Peter, about this time succeeded his Father in the Kingdom of Bulgaria, being delivered out of his Captivity by Joannes Zimisces, then Emperor of Greece, who was engaged in an Expedition against the Russ, whom he forced to beg leave to return into their own Country: After which he spoiled Borises, King of Bulgaria, of his Crown, which he hung up in the Church of St. Sophia at Constantinople in the year 972. The Bulgarians continued subject to the Greeks till the Death of Ze- misces in the year 975. After which they recalled Borises, and Romanus his Brother, but Borises perished in his return, and Romanus the other Brother was forced to return back to Constantinople.

- 978 23. The Bulgarians thereupon set up Samuel, who was called Mocrus, of another Noble Family, that of Symeon being wholly extinct. He was a Valiant warlike Prince, and hated Peace above all things. He began his Reign with an Invasion upon Greece, wasting Thrace, Macedonia, Thessalia, and Peloponnesus, and took Larissa in the year 981; but in the year 995 he was Overthrown in Peloponnesus by the Greeks, and lost his whole Army. In the year 1000 the Emperor sent an Army against him, which prevailed; and 1002 another, which took his Capital Cities, and amongst them Sophia. After this the Greeks prevailed against him, and in 1014 took 15000 of his Subjects, upon which he died the 15th of September of Grief.
- 1014 24. Gabriel, Radomirus, or Romanus, Son of Samuel, King of Bulgaria, of equal Valour with his Father, but inferior in Prudence, succeeded him; he Reigned one Year, one Month, and nine Days.
- 1015 25. John Vladislaus, the Son of Aaron, the Brother of Samuel, Poison'd Gabriel and Reigned in his stead, submitting Bulgaria to the Greek Emperor, who confined him by a Golden Bull. After this he Allured Vladimirus, King of Servia and Dalmatia, his Son-in-Law, and Murthered him also, and then with an Army invaded his Kingdom, upon which Basilius the Emperor levied an Army against this Assassin. The War continued two Years; And in the Year 1017 John was slain under the Walls of Durrazzo (by him then besieged) when he had Reigned two Years five Months; whereupon the Bulgarian Nobility again submitted to the Emperor. The Emperor however spent two Years in reducing some that opposed this Submission, and in the Year 1019 was intirely Master of Bulgaria. After this it was Governed by Dukes sent by the Emperor.
26. Petrus Deleanus, a Servant, pretending to be a Bastard of the Royal Line, usurped the Crown, and beat the Emperor.
27. Thiomirus, or Thæcomirus, was by another Party set up against Peter, but was of no long continuance.
- 1040 28. Alusinnus, the second Son of Aaron, went over to Peter, by whom being sent to take Thessalonica, he was beaten; and being suspected by him as a Traytor, he took Peter and blinded him, and fled to the Emperor, whereupon Bulgaria again submitted to the Emperor, in the Year 1041.
29. Constantinus Bodinus, Son of Michaelitz, King of Servia, was after this chosen King of Bulgaria, but was taken Prisoner, and sent to Constantinople. After this Bulgaria continued united to the Empire of Constantinople till the Reign of Isaac Angelo, when it again made a Defection.

The Succession of the Kings of BULGARIA after this Defection.

- 1180 30. Petrus and Asan, two Princes of the Royal Family of Bulgaria, trusting in the narrow Passes and strong Castles of that Country, and and despising the unwarlike Forces of the Greeks, made a Defection from that Crown in the Reign of Isaac Angelo. This Prince began his Reign in the year 1185, and ended it in 1194. But Peter was King of Bulgaria in 1189, when Frederick passed through Bulgaria to the Holy Land. Asan died in the year 1189, when he had Reigned nine years, as Nicetas saith, and Peter did not long survive him.

1190 31. Joannes, by some called Calojoannes, and Joannitza, and Joannitus; he was a long time an Hostage with the Greeks, and was the eldest Son of Asan. He took up the Latin Customs in 1197. He died in the year 1207.

1207 32. Vorylas, Phorylas, the Sister's Son of John after the Death of his Uncle invaded the Crown of Bulgaria, but was unfortunate in it, being beaten by the Franks in 1208.

33. Joannes Asan, the Son of Asan, fled into Russia, and gathering Forces invaded Bulgaria, and put an end to the Reign of Vorylas. He died in June, in the year 1241.

1241 34. Calomanus, Calamanus, a Child of Twelve Years, succeeded his Father, and was thought to be poisoned.

1245 35. Michael, a Son by a second Wife, he was slain by his Uncle Caloman.

1257 36. Caloman II. Son of Alexander, Nephew of Asan King of Bulgaria; who was not long after slain by the Russ.

37. Mytzes, married Mary the Sister of Michael, and was forthwith proclaimed King of Bulgaria after the Death of Caloman.

38. Constantinus, the Son of Techus, set up against Michael an unwarlike Prince, and on that account despised and deserted by the Bulgarians.

39. Lachanas, Lahanas, Corducuva, a Person of mean Extraction, but of great personal Valour, slew Constantine, and married Mary, Contacufena his Widow; but he Reigned no long time.

40. Johannes Asan, set up against Lachanas by Michael Paleologus, Emperor of Constantinople. He Reigned no long time, about the year 1270.

41. Georgius Terter, married the Sister of John Asan, and upon his deserting the Kingdom, took possession of it. Pope Nicholas IV. in the year 1280, solicited this Prince to embrace the Latin Rites.

42. Smiltzes, made King of Bulgaria by Noga, King of Tartary.

43. Suvestislavus, or Sphendostilavus, Son of George Terter, King of Bulgaria, succeeded Smiltzes, and Redeemed his Father who was then a Captive to Andronicus the Emperor, whom he did not restore to his Throne, but suffered him to live as a private Person to the time of his Death. In the year 1303 he entred a War against Andronicus.

1323 44. George Terter II. Son of Suvestislavus.

45. Boesilavus, the Uncle of George, hearing of the Death of his Nephew, took upon him the Government with the consent of the Emperor Andronicus, but under the Title of Despote of Bulgaria.

1324 46. Michael Strascimirus, Elected King of Bulgaria against Boesilavus.

47. Alexander, the Son of Strascimirus, the Son of Michael King of Bulgaria. This Prince died in the year 1350, or as others in 1353.

48. Strascimirus, Son of Alexander, seeing his Father married to a Jewess, who had poisoned Michael his elder Brother, and himself sent from the Court, he made a Defection from his Father, and took upon him the Title of King of Bulgaria. He was taken Prisoner afterwards by Lewis King of Hungary in the year 1366, or as others in 1369.

Mount Hæmus.

BEfore we enter into Greece; we must cross MOUNT HÆMUS, a Ridge of Hills extending from the Euxine Sea to the Adriatick, and thereby separating Greece both from Dacia and Sclavonia. They are so high and Subject to the Weather, that Stratonicus, an old Grecian, did use to say, that Eight Months of the Year it was always cold, for the other four, Winter. It was affirmed by some of the ancient Writers, that from one of the highest Heads hereof as well the Adriatick as the Euxine might have been discerned: the truth of which Report, upon very good reason, hath been called in question. But out of doubt, from some one Top or Summit of it there is so full a Prospect into Thrace and Macedon, that from hence Perseus taking a survey of the Site of these Countries, positis per abrupta Castris, &c. as the Story hath it, was able to make choice of the fittest places for Forts and Castles, whereby to lock up all the Passages against his Enemies the Romans. In the parts bordering upon Thrace it is so rough and craggy, that it is not to be passed but at two places only. Whereof one was made by the Emperor Trajan, where is yet to be seen a mighty strong Gate built of great square Stone, by which the Passage that way was either opened or shut at the pleasure of them who had the keeping of the same, with a small Force exceeding easily defended against puissant Armies. The other, being situate near a little River by the Bulgarians called Sal-tiza, not altogether so streight and narrow as the other, but rising high, and full of broken Rocks and dangerous Precipices, is alike impassable; defensible at ease, and without any great danger; as was experimentally found by the Famous Huniades, when he attempted (but in vain) to have led his Forces this way for the Siege of Adrianople. Those parts hereof which border upon Macedonia, though somewhat opener, are not much easier of ascent; the Passages through the broken Rocks and Precipices being very difficult, and not easily mastered: insomuch that when Perseus, the last King of Macedon, had Fortified the Streights hereof against the Romans, non reliquissè aditum nisi è Cælo venientibus videbatur, it was conceived (saith Florus) that there was no Passage left for any Forces, unless they fell immediately from the Heavens themselves.

This great and rocky Chain of Hills, as they were vehemently exposed to Wind and Weather, so were they destitute of those Commodities which were either comfortable, or indeed merely necessary to the Life of Man: which made the Passage over them in a manner impossible unto any Armies, but what were very patient both of Cold and Hunger. Yet were they not left desolate and void of People, especially in these sides hereof which lay next to Greece; but most especially in those parts which bordered or confined on Thrace: where the Spurs and Branches of the Hills spreading far and wide and taking up a great part of the Country, occasioned the Romans, in the Division of the Diocese of Thrace into several Provinces, to call that part or Province of it which lay next to Mæsia by the name of Hæmimontum, or Hæmimontana. The principal Towns whereof were Adrianople, Uscudama, and Anchialus: the principal Governour thereof being a Roman President. Where, by the way, we may take notice of an Errour in the common Impressions of the Code, Lib. VII. Tit. 62. Leg. 23. where we find Hæmi montem, for Hæmimontum; the first being the name only of the Mountain, and the latter (which is there meant) of the Roman Province.

But to return unto the Mountain. There is another of this Name in Theffaly, mentioned (or mistook for this) by Servius in his Notes on the first Book of the Georgicks; on the Top whereof was said to be the Habitation of Mars, at the Bottom the most pleasant Valley of Tempe: So called from Hæmus, the Son of Boreas and Orithya, amongst the Poets. And possibly, to distinguish this from that of Theffaly, Ptolomy and others call it Æmus, without the Aspirate: though it may as well be that there are others of this name, as that this is called in divers places or in divers Authors by other names; one part hereof being called Scombrus by Aristotle, another Scombrus by Thucydides, and by Laonicus the whole called Prasobus. The like may be observed at the present also, Piuetus calling it by the name of Catena Mundi, a great part whereof it links together: Cuspinianus Costegnazzo, Lazius Kriviczne, the Italians Mont Argentaro, the French Mont de Casteg-nao, the Sclavonians Cumoniza, and the Turks Balkan. Which I have therefore here observed for the Reader's sake, that, meeting any of these names in the Stories either of the ancient or modern Times, he may know what Hills or Mountains are intended by them. Which said, I now pass on to Greece, the way being thus prepared and laid open to me.

O F GREECE

GREECE, in the present Latitude and extent thereof, is bounded on the East with the Propontick, Hellepont, and Aegean Seas; on the West with the Adriatick; on the North, with Mount Hemus, which parteth it from Bulgaria, Servia, and some part of Illyricum; and on the South with the Sea Ionian. So that it is in a manner a Peninsula or Demi-Island, environed on three sides by the Sea, on the fourth only united to the rest of Europe.

But this is only in relation to the present extent hereof, the name being anciently restrained within narrower Bounds. Confined at first to Attica and the parts adjoining; ab Isthmi angustis Hellas incipit, as it is in Pliny: and it took the name of Hellas from Hellen, the Son of Deucalion; as that of Greece, or Gracia, from Gracus the Son of Cecrops, the first King of Athens. Communicated afterwards to Peloponnesus, then to Thessalie also: and finally, when the Macedonian Empire had enlarged it self over the petit Commonwealths and Estates hereof, it came to be communicated to that Country also. The People for this cause are known by divers names, by some called Achivi, by others Myrmidones, sometimes Pelasgi, Danai, Argivi, &c. But the name whereby they are best known in Sacred Writers is that of Ἕλληνες, so called from Hellas, the more proper and genuine name of Greece in the strictest notion and acception. A name used frequently and familiarly in the Book of God, both absolutely, to denote this Nation, as where it is said σοφίαν Ἑλλήνων ἑνῶσι, that the Greeks seek wisdom, 1. Cor. 1. 22. and relatively, as in opposition to the Jews, the Barbarians, and Hellenists or Gracizing Jews. First with relation to the Jews, and then it signifieth the whole Body of the Gentiles generally, of which the Gracians were the most eminent and famous people as Ἰουδαῖοι πρῶτον καὶ Ἕλληνι, to the Jew first, and also to the Gentiles, Rom. 2. 9. 10. Give none offence, καὶ Ἰουδαίοις καὶ Ἕλλησι neither to the Jews nor to the Gentiles, 1. Cor. 10. 32. and elsewhere frequently. In which, and all other places of that kind, where the Antithesis lieth between the Jews and other Nations, we are to understand the Gentiles, the whole Body of them; tho' many times our Translators, I know not why, render it literally the Greeks; as Rom. 1. 16. and 10. 12. &c. Secondly, with reference to all other Nations not so well versed in the Learning and Civilities of that age as the Gracians were, whom by a common name of scorn they called Barbarians: according unto that of Strabo, Barbaræ sunt omnes Nationes præter Græcos; the Romans themselves, though then the great Lords of the World, being included in the reckoning. And so the word is taken, Rom. 1. 14. I am a Debtor, saith Saint Paul, ὁ Ἕλλησι καὶ Βαρβάροις both to the Greeks and Barbarians, to the Wise and Unwise; in which as well the Romans, as those of other Nations, have the name of Barbarians. Last of all for the Gracizing Jews whom the Vulgar Latin called Græcos and our English Gracians: they were such of the Jews, who living dispersed among the Gentiles, used the Translation of the Septuagint, making that the Canon both for Life and Doctrine. Which difference betwixt them and the Jews inhabiting in Judea who kept themselves unto the Scriptures in their Mothers-tongue, and used the Hebrew only in all Sacred Actions, occasioned many Jars amongst them, which sometimes brake out into open Violence; insomuch as R. Eliezer brake into the Synagogue of the Alexandrians at Hierusalem, and therein committed many Outrages. Of this Unfriendliness between them mention is made Act. 6. 1. where it is said, that there arose a murmuring of the Gracians against the Hebrews, &c. In which place, though the English and Vulgar Latine use the name of Gracians, yet ought they more properly to be rendered Hellenists, or Gracizing Jews, as in all other places, viz. Acts 9. 29. and 11. 20. &c. where they are called Ἑλληνισταί, and not Ἕλληνες, in the Greek Originals.

But to proceed to our Description of the Country: we find it situate in the Northern Temperate Zone, under the fifth and sixth Climates, the longest Day being 15 hours; inhabited by a People which were once brave men of War; stout Scholars, addicted to the love of Vertue and civil Behaviour; a Nation once so excellent, that their Precepts and Examples do still remain as approved Rules and Tutors, to instruct and direct the man that endeavoureth to be vertuous: famous for Government, affectors of Freedom, every way noble. For which Vertues in themselves, and want of them in others, all their Neighbours and remote Nations were by them scornfully called Barbarians: a name now most fit for the Gracians themselves, being an unconstant People, destitute of all Learning, and the means to obtain it: Universities uncivil, riotous, and so lazie, that for the most part they endeavour their profit no further than their Belly compels them; and so perfidious withal in all their Dealings, especially towards the Western Christians, that it is grown into a Proverb amongst the Italians, Chi fida in Greco, sarà intrigo, i. e. He that trusts to a Greek is sure to be couzened. When they meet at Feasts or Banquets, they drink small Draughts at the beginning; which by degrees they increase, till they come to the height of Intemperancy: at which point when they are arrived, they keep no Rule or Order; whereas before to drink out of one's turn was accounted a point of Incivility. Hence as I believe, sprung our By-word, As merry as a Greek, and the Latine word Gracari.

The Women for the most part are brown-complexioned, exceedingly well-favoured, and excessively amorous. Painting they use very much, to keep themselves in grace with their Husbands; for when they once grow wrinkled, they are put to all the Drudgeries of the House. Both Sexes generally in their Habit and outward Garb apply themselves to the State under which they live; such as are subject to the Turk conforming unto the Dress and Fashions of the Turks, as those who live under the Venetians do to that of Venice.

The Christian Faith was first here planted by St. Paul, invited by the Spirit to come over into Macedonia, Acts 16. 9. 12. passing from thence to Thessalonica, the chief City of Mygdonia, ch. 17. 1. from thence to Athens in Achaia, v. 15. 16. then unto Corinth, the Metropolis of Peloponnesus, ch. 18. 1. watering the greatest part of Greece with the dew of Heaven, and planting Bishops in most Churches where he preached the Gospel, as Dionysius (the Arcopagite) at Athens, Aristarchus at Thessalonica, Epaphroditus at Phillippi, Silas at Corinth, and Titus in the Isle of Creta. The like he did in many other Countries also accounted Members of the Greek Church, though though not of Greece, the name of the Greek Church extending over all the Provinces of the Eastern Empire, governed by the 4. Patriarchs, 1. of Alexandria, who presided over Egypt and Arabia; 2. of Hierusalem, whose Patriarchate (erected only in regard of our Saviour's Passion in that City, and the great opinion which by that means accrued unto it) confined within the Bounds of Palæstine; 3. of Antioch, whose Jurisdiction contained all Syria, Armenia, Cilicia, and the Isle of Cyprus, and whatsoever else was within the Diocesis of the Orient; and 4. of Constantinople, to whose charge were committed all the other Provinces of the Greek Church, as Greece, Russia, Dacia, Sclavonia, part of Poland, and all the Islands in the Adriatick, Ionian and Ægean Seas, together with all Asia minor, and the Islands thereof, (except only the Provinces of Cilicia and Isauria) and the Countries lying on both sides of Pontus Euxinus and Palus Maotis. The reasons of the large increase of whose Jurisdiction, confined at first within the Diocesis of Thrace, were, 1. the reputation of being Seated in the Imperial City, which drew after it (by a Decree of the Council of Chalcedon) all the Provinces of Asia minor, (Cilicia and Isauria excepted only); 2. the voluntary submission of the Græcians upon their Separation from the Church of Rome; by which all Greece, Macedon, Epirus, the Isle of Crete, and all the Islands in the Ægean and Ionian Seas, which formerly had no Superior but their own Primate, the Archbishop of Thessalonica, became subject unto them; 3. the diligence of the Patriarch hereof in converting by his Suffragan Bishops and other Ministers the Russians, Bulgarians and Sclavonians, to the Faith of Christ, which made those people to look upon Constantinople as their Mother-Church; and 4. the Piety and Care of the latter Patriarchs, in supplying with new Pastors and Ministers those parts and Provinces of the West, which, being conquered by the Turk, had been forsaken by their old Clergy, and left like Sheep without a Shepherd.

And yet this Church, though thus extended and enlarged in the outward Members, is very much streightened and impaired at home, the Country being thinly peopled, and many of those people trained up from their infancy in the Mahometan Law. So that it is a greater wonder that there should be any remainders of Christianity left amongst them, than that the open Professors of it should be so few; the Tyranny of the Turks on the one side, and the Temptations of Preferment upon the other, being rightly pondered. For who could look to find twenty Churches of Christians in Constantinople the Seat and ordinary Residence of the Turkish Emperors? or that in Salonichi or Thessalonica, there should be 30 Christian Churches, and but three Turkish Mosquits? that the Primate of this Salonichi, should have under him 10 Suffragan Bishops, whereof he of Phillippi hath no fewer than 150 Churches under his Jurisdiction? or, finally, that under the Metropolitans of Athens and Corinth there should be so many? So mercifully hath God dealt with his luxurious and perfidious People, as not to take away their Candlestick, though he hath darkened and obscured the Light thereof.

As for the Fathers of this Church, anciently and at this present held in most esteem, they were no other than such as had been Bishops of the greater Sees. That is to say, 1. St. Chrysostome, first a Reader of Antioch, afterwards Patriarch of Constantinople; 2. Basil, and the two Gregories; 3. Nyssen, and 4. Nazianzen; all in Asia minor; this last of Constantinople also; 5. 6. the two Cyrills; the one Patriarch of Alexandria, the other of Hierusalem; 7. Epiphanius, Bishop of Salamis in the Isle of Cyprus; 8. Theodoret, Bishop of Cyprus, &c. Men of Renown and Precious Memory amongst them to this very day. From whose Writings if they deviate in any material point of Doctrine, it is in that of the Procession of the Holy Ghost, which they grant to be per Filium, but not a Filius. And though Glichovius, Lombard, and other moderate men of the Church of Rome, do grant the difference to be rather in modo explicandi, quam in ipsa re; and that the clause a Filioque was added by the Romanists to the ancient Creeds, the Græcians not being privy nor consenting to it: yet so uncharitable is that Church towards these poor men, languishing under Tyranny of Turkish Thralldom, as to persecute them with Reproach and Scorn, brand them for Schismatics and Apostates, and solemnly to anathematise them in Bullæ Cannæ every Maundy-Thursdæy. And it is a very hard measure to add, and anathematize too; as is right well observed by the late Lord Arch-bishop of Canterbury, in his notable Discourse against the Jesuits. Other particular Tenets in which the Greek Church differeth from the Romish and Reformed (as in some points it doth from both) have been already specified in our Description of Russia: the Churches of the Greeks and Muscovites differing in no material Points, but 1. the manner of distributing the Sacrament. 2. the exacting of Marriage by the Muscovite in the party admitted unto Orders; 3. the frequent admitting of Divorces upon light occasions; and 4. and finally, in being less strict in observing the Lent before Easter than in any of the other three. For whereas the Græcians account it a damnable sin to eat Flesh or Fish which hath blood in it, in any of their other Lents or times of Abstinence; (they have in both Churches four in all) in that before Easter, which of all reason ought to be kept most punctually, the Laity eat all sorts of Fish without any exception, the Blood of some of which, as the Cuttle by name, is held to be a delicate Food, and in great request.

The Language they spake was of their own, of which there were four Dialects, viz. 1. the Attick, 2. the Dorick, 3. the Æolick, 4. the Ionick; besides the common phrase of speech most in use among them. A Language of great fame for the Liberal Arts, but more for so great a part of the Holy Scripture first delivered in it, and for the lofty Sound, significant Expressions, genuine Suavity, and happy composition of words, so excelling all others, that even in the flourishing of the Roman Empire it so much overtopped the Latin, that the Histories of Rome it self (as by Polybius, Appian, Dion and Cassius) were written in it. It was once also the general Language of Anatolia, some parts of Italy, Provence in France, and almost all the Islands of the Mediterranean. But now, partly by the mutilation of some words and contraction of others, partly by confusion of the true sound of Vowels, Diphthongs and Consonants, and the translating of the Accents, and finally by the admixture of foreign Nations it is not only fallen from its natural Elegancy, but from its largeness of extent. For it is now shut up within the Limits of Greece, and the Sea-coast of the lesser Asia opposite unto it; and there not only much corrupted, but almost quite devoured by the Turkish and Sclavonian Tongues; but especially by that which they call Franco, a mungrel Language, composed of Italian, French, and some Spanish words, used as the ordinary Speech for Commerce and intercourse betwixt Christians, Jews, Turks, and the Greeks themselves, who do not understand, and much less speak, the true genuine Greek. So that although they still retain for ordinary days St. Chrysostom's Liturgie, and that of St. Basil for the Festivals: yet being both written in the ancient and learned Greek, they are no more understood by the Vulgar Græcian, then the Latine Service by the common and illiterate Papist.

The Soil questionless is very fruitful, and would yield great profit to the Husbandman, if they would take pains in the tilling: but they, knowing nothing certainly to be their own, but all things subject to the Grand Seignior and his Soldiers, neglect the Tillage of their Lands, on the same grounds with those who said in the Poet's Ecclogues.

*Impius hac tam culta novalia Miles habebit ?
Barbarus has segetes ? En queis consecimus Arva !*

Shall misbelieving Turks these Acres spoil,
Which I manur'd with so much Cost and Toil ?
Shall they enjoy my care ? See, neighbours, see
For whom these goodly Corn-fields tilled be !

The more natural and certain Commodities which they transport into other parts are Wines, which, in memory of the Water which our Saviour turned into Wine, and on the sixth day of January, being that day whereon this Miracle was wrought, they use to baptize : for which cause the Jews will drink none of them. They send also into other parts of the World Oils, Copper, Vitriol, some Gold and Silver, Velvet, Damasks, Turkey-Grograms, &c.

This Country hath formerly been famous for the brave Commanders, Miltiades, Aristides and Themistocles of Athens, Lisander and Agessilaus of Sparta, Pelopidas, and Epaminondas of Thebes, Aratus and Philopæmen of Achaia, Pyrrhus of Epirus, Philip of Macedon, the Subvertor of the Græcian Liberty, and Alexander his Son, (to omit infinite others) the Subvertor of the Persian Monarchy ; for the divine Philosophers, Plato, Socrates, Aristotle and Theophrastus ; for the most eminent Law-givers, Solon and Lycurgus ; for the most exquisite Poets, Hesiodus, Homer, Sophocles and Aristophanes for the famous Historiographers, Xenophon the Condisciple of Plato, Thucydides, Plutarch and Herodotus ; for the eloquent Orators, Æschines, Demosthenes and Isæcrates ; and, lastly, for the Authors and Establishers of all humane Learning whatsoever, only the Mathematicks excepted.

The chief Rivers are, 1. Cephissus, which, arising in the Frontiers of Epirus, disburtheneth it self into the Ægean Sea. 2. Erigon, and 3. Aliacmon ; which beginning their course in the more Northern parts of Macedon, end it in Thermaicus Sinus. 4. Strymon in Mygdonia. 4. Athyrras, and 6. Nessus, in Thrace. 7. Symphalus, where Hercules killed the Symphalian Birds. 8. Ladon, in Arcadia. 9. Inachus, whose Daughter Io, turned into a Heifer, was worshipped by the Ægyptians under the name of Isis. 10. Achelous, in Epirus, much celebrated by the ancient Poets, especially by Ovid in his Metamorphosis. As is also 11. Peneus, the chief River of Thessaly, and their arising from Mount Pindus, and increased with the waters of many Rivers. Daphne the Nymph, whom Apollo is fabled to have loved, and turned into a Bay-tree, lived near or on the Banks of this River Peneus, and is therefore said to be his Daughter : as Io above mentioned was the Daughter of Inachus, Of less note, Populifer 11, Sperchius, & irrequietus 12. Enipeus, 13. Apidanusque senex, lenisque 14. Amphrysus, & 15. Æas.

That is to say,

Cool Sperchius, Enipeus that troubled ran,
Smooth Amphrysus, Æas. and old Apidan.

The rest of less note, and the most eminent Mountains in each part hereof, shall be remembred in their places, as we see occasion.

Thus much of the whole Country in gross. And as for the Division of it with reference to the State of the Roman Empire, it contained in a manner two whole Dioceses, viz. Thrace and Macedon : the first under the Præfectus Prætorio Orientis, the latter (together with that of Dacia) under the Præfectus Prætorio for Illyricum. Of these the Diocese of Macedon, lying wholly within the Bounds of the modern Greece contained the Provinces of Macedonia Prima. 2. Macedonia Secunda, or Salutaris, (now, as in former times, called Albania) 3. Epirus Nova, taking up the Countries of Phocis, Locris, and so much of the Old Epirus as was on that side of the River Achelous, 4. Old Epirus, comprehending all the rest of that Country, 5. Thessaly, 6. Achaia, containing all Achaia, and Peloponnesus, the Countries of Locris and Phocis excepted only, and 7. Crete or Candie, with the Island adjoining. And for the Diocese of Thrace, it was divided into the Provinces of, 1. Thrace specially so called, 2. Europe, 3. Rhodope, 4. Hæmimontum, 5. Mæsia Inferior, and 6. Scythia : of which the four first make up the Body of Thrace, and shall there be spoken of ; the two last, being comprehended in the modern Dacia, have been described already in their proper places. But not to bind my self precisely unto this Division, (though I shall look on this as occasion serveth) I shall consider Greece in the several Provinces of, 1. Peloponnesus. 2. Achaia. 3. Epirus. 4. Albania. 5. Macedon. 6. Thrace. 7. The Islands of the Propontick. 8. Ægean, and 9. The Ionian Seas, and 10. finally the Isle of Crete.

1. P E L O P O N N E S U S.

PELOPONNESUS is bounded on the East with the Cretan, on the West with the Adriatick or Ionian Seas, on the North-east with Sinus Saronicus, now Golfo di Engia, on the North-west with Sinus Corinthiacus, now Golfo di Patras or Lepanto, and on the South with the Mediterranean. So that it is almost an Island, properly called a Peninsula, rounded with the Sea, except where it is tied to the main Land of Greece, by an Isthmus six miles in breadth, which the Grecians and Venetians fortified with a great Wall and five Castles. This Wall was called anciently Hexamilium, and was overthrown by Amurath the Second, who harraided and spoiled all the Country. This Wall was first built by Manuel Emperor of Greece in 1413, or as others in 1409, re-built or repaired by the Venetians in 1424, cast down it was by Amurath 1. in 1447, and by Mahomet his Son in 1458, having been built as our Author saith, in the year 1353, upon the rumour of a War by the Venetians, (who then had the greatest part of this Country) in 15 days ; there being for that time 30000 men employed in the work. This wall extended from one Sea unto the other : which had it been as gallantly guarded as it was hastily made up, or as it was well fortified had it been as well manned, might easily have resisted the Turks, until more means had been thought on to defend it. Not less observable, but more fruitless, was the design of some in the elder times, to cut through this Isthmus, and make a perfect Island of it. It was attempted by Demetrius King of Macedon, Julius Caesar, and Caius Caligula ; by none more eagerly pursued then by the Emperor Nero, who, to hearten his Soldiers, loth to attempt so fruitless an Enterprize, took a Spade in hand, and busily began the work. Yet at last the Soldiers, being frighted with the Blood which abundantly broke forth, with the Groans and Roarings which they continually heard, and with the Hobgoblins and Furies which were always in their sight, perswaded the Emperor, now half out of the humour, to leave this, and enjoyn them some more profitable Service. It was also given over by the former Princes on the like Discouragements. But of this Isthmus we shall add no more then these words of Ovid, and so pass forwards to the Description of the Country ; that is to say,

*Æquora bina suis oppugnant fluctibus Isthmon,
Et tenuis Tellus audeat utrumque Mare.*

Which may be thus Englished ;

Two Seas assault the Isthmus with their Waves,
And that thin Neck of Land both Seas out-braves.

As

As for this Country of Peloponnesus, it is in compass 600 miles, and was called at the first Ægialia, from Ægialus the first King of Sicyon; next Apia, from Api the fourth King; after that Sycionia, from Sicyon the 19th King thereof: and finally Peloponnesus, from Pelops the Son of Tantalus King of Phrygia, and Νῆος, Insula, the word signifying as much as the Isle of Pelops. But it is now of late called Morea; and that a Maurorum Incursionibus, from the Incursions of the Moors as Mercator thinketh; but by the Moors he means the Saracens, as some others also do.

It is conceived to be the most pleasant Country in all Greece, abounding in all things necessary for the Life of man; and in such also as do serve for Delicacy and Contentment only: adorned with many goodly Plains swelled with fruitful Hills, well stored with Ports and Havens on all sides thereof. And though no Country in the World, for the bigness of it, hath suffered in the Ruine of so many brave and stately Cities; yet is it still the most populous and best inhabited of all the Continent of Greece. Near the middle of it, in Laconia, is the Mount Taygetus, from the top whereof there was no City of note in all this Peninsula but might easily be seen. A most gallant Prospect. The whole was divided commonly into these seven Provinces; 1. Achaia propria. 2. Elis. 3. Messene. 4. Argolis. 5. Corinthia. 6. Argolis, and 7. Corinthia.

1. ACHAIA propria, is bounded on the East with Argolis and Corinthia, on the West with the Ionian Sea, on the North with Sinus Corinthiacus or the Gulf of Lepanto, on the South with Elis. So called from the Achai, the Inhabitants of it; the Adjunct propria being added to difference it from Achaia in the Continent or Mainland of Greece.

Places of most consideration in it are, 1. Dyme, situate in the most Western point of it, in or near the Promontory called Araxus. The Town is now called Chiarenza, and the Promontory Cabo di Chiarenza. Not far from which is another Promontory or Head-land, of old called Rhium, opposite to another in Ætolia that was called Antirrhium, divided by a very narrow Streight or Fretum, which openeth into the Bay of Corinth; fortified on each side with a Castle for defence thereof, commonly called Castelli di Lepanto: both built and fortified by Bajazet the second, when he had finished the Conquest of Peloponnesus, to secure the entrance of this Bay; both taken and demolished by Andrew Doria, Lord Admiral to Charles the V. to lay the Bay open to the Christians: and finally, both within few years recovered and repaired by Solyman the Magnificent, as they still continue. Chiarenza lies 50 Italian miles to the South of that Streight, and has no Relation to the Castles of Lepanto, however it is now in a mean desolate condition, and all together desolate. The Harbour it once had being now stop'd with Sand. Coronelli. 2. Ægium, where Jupiter is said to have been nursed by a Goat, whence it had the name; Αἴξ in Greek signifying a Shee-Goat: once a strong Town, now ruined and destroyed by the Turks, called at this day Vossiza, or Bossizan. 3. Algira, once the chief City of all this Tract, situate on a steep and inaccessible Hill; now a small Village, called Xylocastro. 4. Olenus, so named from Olenus the Son of Jupiter and Anaxithea, now called Caminisa. 5. Patra Patras situate at the very Mouth of the Gulf, opposite to Lepanto. First called Aroe, but being by one Patrens enlarged and walled, took the name of Patrae, which name it holdeth to this day, being still called Patras; the Town of most note on the Bay of Corinth, which is called from hence Golfo di Patras. A Town of good Trade, and much frequented not long since by the English Merchants, who had here their Consul, called the Consul of Morea: but formerly more memorable for the death of S. Andrew the Apostle, who here suffered Martyrdom. This place was chosen by Augustus, as a Station for his Navy, and the Inhabitants of it were accordingly much favoured and privileged by him. In the latter times of the Greek Empire, it was a Dukedom, and resigned to the Venetians by the last Duke in 1408, when the Turks first took it I know not, but Andrew Doria made himself Master of it in 1533. On the Peace in 1539, it was restored to the Turks; and in the year 1687, was taken again by the Venetians, after the Battle of Lepanto, without any defence. Mr. Wheler p. 292, saith, it stands at the Foot of a Mountain, half a Mile from the Sea, and has a Castle in the highest point of the Hill. It is now an Archbishops See, but much decayed, yet he sets down its Antiquities, which are not fit to be transcribed here. 6. Pellene, distant from the Sea about 60 Furlongs: the people whereof being constant to their old Fashions of Apparel, occasioned the Proverb of Pellenica vestis, applied to old Cloaths out of Fashion. Here were once also the two Cities of 7. Helice, and 8. Buris, sunk by the violence of a Tempest into the bottom of the Sea, about the time of the Battle of Leuctra. Not to say any thing of 9. Tritæa, and 10. Phœa, two other Towns hereof, of note in former times; so little now remaining of them, as if they had been sunk at the same time also.

But the chief Town of all this Province (if not a Province of it self) is Sicyon, situate not far from the Isthmus, in the most Eastern parts hereof, and giving to the Territory or adjoining Country (as once unto the whole Insula) the name of Sicyonia. The Territory is rich, especially in Olives, and Works of Iron; the City the most ancient of all Greece, built within little time of the general Flood and Restauration of Mankind. First called Ægialia, after Sicyonia, by the name of the first and nineteenth King hereof; by whom, and their Successors it was much adorned and beautified with Temples, Altars, Statues and Images of their several Gods: the ancientest Kingdom in the World, the Assyrian and Egyptian excepted only, and perhaps not those. It took beginning in the person of Ægialeus, within 150 years after the Deluge, and 200 years before the death of Noah; continuing in a Race of Princes who twayed the Affairs of Peloponnesus, till overtopped by the growth and good fortune of the Kings of Argos. The names of whom, by reason of the undoubted Antiquity of this Kingdom, I shall here subjoyn in the ensuing Catalogue of

The Kings of SICYON.

2791 26. Zeuxippus, the last King of Sicyon. After whose death A. M. 2812, the El are hereof was governed by the Priests of Apollo, seven of them successively one after another : the first five, only years a-piece ; Amphyktion, who was the sixth, continuing 9 years in the Regency, and Charidemus, the last of them, ruling 18 years. After whose death or departure, I know not which, A. M. 2844, the Heraclida, who about that time returned into Peloponnesus, made themselves Masters of this Country ; there being no Kings of Sicyon from this time forwards.

Of these Kings the most memorable were Aegialeus and Apis, the first and fourth, from whom this Peninsula had the names of Apia and Aegiala ; Aegirus, the 6. giving name and being to the City Aegira spoken of before ; Marathon, the 13. of whom perhaps the famous Fields of Marathon (in the other Achaia) took denomination ; Epopens, the 17. who founded a Temple to Minerva, and therein placed his own Monument or Trophies Sicyon ; the 19. the Founder of the City Sicyon, or at least the Repairer and Enlarger of it ; Pelafgus the 25. from whom perhaps the Gracians might be called Pelafgi, if not known formerly by that name. After this time I find no man of note who bare sway in Sicyon, till the time of Aratus, the special Ornament of this Town, (of which a Native) and one of the principal Establishers of the Achaean Commonwealth against the Spartans and Macedonians ; of which more hereafter in the general History of Peloponnesus.

2. The Country of ELIS hath on the East Arcadia, on the West the Ionian Sea, on the North Achaia propria, on the South Messenia. The chief Cities are, 1. Elis, which gives name to the whole Province. So called from Elisha the Son of Javan, and Grandchild of Japhet, who fixt himself in these parts of this Country, where he built this City, calling it by his own name, as his posterity in honour of him did the Isles adjoining, mentioned in the Prophet Ezekiel by the name of the Isles of Elisha, ch. 27. v. 7. Nigh to this City runneth the River Alpheus, of which we have spoken in Sicilia ; and in this City reigned the King Auges, the cleansing of whose Stables is accounted one of the Wonders or twelve Labours performed by Hercules. 2. Olympia, famous for the Statute of Jupiter Olympius, one of the seven Wonders, being in height 60 Cubits, composed by that excellent Workman Phidias, of Gold and Ivory. In honour of this Jupiter were the Olympick Games instituted by Hercules, and celebrated on the Plains of this City, A. M. 2757. The Exercises in them were for the most part bodily, as running in Chariots, Running on Foot, Wrestling, Fighting with the Whorlbats, and the like. But so that there repaired thither also Orators, Poets, and Musicians, and all that thought themselves excellent in any laudable quality, to make trial of their several Abilities : the very Criers, who proclaimed the Victories, contending which should cry loudest, and best play his part. The rewards given to the Victour were only Garlands of Palm, or such slight remembrances ; and yet the Greeks no less esteemed that small Sign of Conquest and Honour, then the Romans did their most magnificent Triumphs : those which were Conquerors herein being met by all the principal men in the City in or under which they lived, and a passage broken in the main Walls thereof for their reception ; as if the ordinary Gates were not capable of so high an Honour, or able to afford them entrance. Inasmuch that when Diagoras had seen his three Sons crowned for their several Victories, a Friend of his came to him with this Gratulation, Adorere, Diagora, nunquam enim in Cælum ascensus es ; that is to say, Die now, Diagoras, for thou shalt never go to Heaven : as if no greater Happiness could befall the man either in this life or that to come, than that which he enjoyed already. The Judges and Presidents of these Games were some of the Citizens of Elis, deputed to it ; highly commended for their Justice and Integrity in pronouncing who best deserved without Partiality. Of these thus Homer in his Odes :

*Sunt quos Curriculo pulverem Olympicum
Collegisse juvat ; Metaque fervidis
Evitata Rotis, Palmaque nobilis Terrarum Dominos evehit ad Deos.*

Quos Elæa domum reducit Palma cælestes.

That is to say,

Some in Olympick Dust take pride
Their Chariots and themselves to hide ;
Whom the shunn'd Mark, and Palm so priz'd,
Like to the Gods hath eterniz'd.

Who with clean Garlands come,
In Cæstrial Triumph home.

But to proceed, after the death of Hercules these Games were discontinued for 430 years : at which time one Iphitus, warned so to do by the Oracle of Apollo, renewed them, causing them to be solemnly exercised every fourth year : from which Custom Olympius is sometimes taken for the space of 4 years ; as quinque annorum Olympiades for 20 years. Varro reckoneth the times before the Flood to be obscure ; those before the Olympiads, and after the Flood to be Fabulous ; but those that followed these Olympiads to be Historical. These Olympiads were of long time, even from the Restauration of them by Iphitus until the Reign of the Emperor Theodosius, the Gracian Epoche, by which they reckoned their Account : the first of them being placed in the year of the World 3174, before the building of Rome 40 years ; the last in the 440 years after Christ's Nativity. According to which reckoning this Account continued for the space of 1214 years ; the memory of which remains, though the name of Olympia be not found in Peloponnesus, the Town at this day being called by the name of Sconri. 3. Pisa, whose people followed Nestor to the Wars of Troy ; and in their return were by Tempest driven to the Coasts of Italy, where they built the City Piso in Tuscany. 4. Tornefe, a new Town, or the new name of some ancient City ; from whence the adjoining Promontory, of old called Chelonites, is now called Cabo di Tornefe.

3. MESSENIA hath on the West Arcadia, on the North Elis, on the South the Sea, and on the East Laconia. It takes its name from the Metropolis Messene, situate on Sinus Messeniacus, now called Golfo di Corone. 2. Pylus, where Nestor was King, now called Navarino, a desolate and poor Village not worth the noting. Of which thus Ovid speaking in the name of Penelope.

Nos Pylon, antiqui Neleia Nestoris arva, Missimus ; incerta est reddita fama Pylo.

To Pylon, aged Nestor's Seat, we sent,
But could not hear from thence how matters went.

Near to it there is now an excellent Harbour, capable of 2000 Ships at once, and which is now thought the best Port in the Moræa. And a Town of good strength call'd Navarino, which has 2 strong Forts built by the Venetians for the Security of the Town and Harbour. In the year 1498, it sustained and over-came a sharp Siege from the Turks ; about 2 years after, it fell twice in a short time into the hands of the Turks, who were Masters of it till the year 1686, when the Venetians recovered it from the Turks, who call this place Javarin. The Turks took it in 1500.

3. Methun, or Methona, seated in the most Southern part of this Peninsula, from whence unto the Isthmus which joyneth it to the rest of Greece are reckoned 175 Italian miles. The Town is commodiously seated in a Demi-

Demi-Island, washed on the one side with the Sea, and so well fortified toward the Land, that in the opinion of most men it is thought impregnable; adorned on the South-side with a large and capacious Bay, about three miles wide, secure from all winds except the North, and shut up with a little Island called anciently Oenusa, but now Sapienza, which makes it one of the safest Harbours in all these Seas. There be 3 Islands, Sapienza, Caprera, and Venetica, lying in a straight Line from East to West, against the Bay of Modon. It was possessed once by the State of Venice, but conquered by the Turk, after many sharp and fierce Assaults, An. 1500, both Pylus (Navarino) and Corone yielding on the noise thereof. The best Retreat since that time of the Turkish Navies, and the ordinary Residence of the Turkish Sanzack, who hath the Government of this whole Province of Morcia under the Beglerbeg of Greece. This place is strong by nature, and well fortified by Art. This City was Ravish'd from the Greek Empire in the year 1124, and being retaken the next year from them, they recovered it in 1204. Bajazet 2. besieged it with an Army of 150000 men in the year 1498, and after a stout resistance took it by the negligence of the defendants, who ran to entertain some Ships newly arrived, and left the Walls unguarded, which the Infidels observing, soon turn'd their Joy into Sorrow. In the year 1659, Morofini took it, and being restored to the Turks in the year 1686, it was again taken by the Venetians, and is now in their Hands. 4. Corone, or Coron, the chief Town on the Bay of Messene, called from hence Golfo di Corone, and the last which held out against the Turks for the State of Venice, once Lords of all the Sea Coasts of Peloponnesus. Coron lies 10 miles East of Modon, upon a large Bay call'd by its own name. It is of a Triangular form, and has on the East Angle a strong Castle built by the Venetians in 1463 for a Magazine. It came first into their hands in 1204. It was taken from them by Bajazet in 1498, in the year 1533, it was taken by Andrew Doria, and Garrisoned with Spaniards who soon after deserted it. In the year 1685, the Venetians retook it, after a defence of 40 days, and found in it 120 pieces of Canon, 60 of which were Brass, with great quantities of Provisions and Ammunition. 5. Cyparissi, now called Arcadia, from when the Bay adjoining hath the name of Golfo di Arcadia. Here is also the Promontory called of old Coryphasum; now Cabo Zunchi.

The people of this small Province had once a great sway in the whole Peninsula. At first they were confederate with the Spartans in so strict a League, that they mutually sent young Virgins to one another for their publick Sacrifice: but afterwards Corrivals with them for the supreme power. The Spartans, at the last getting the upper hand of them, oppressed them with a miserable Servitude. The occasion this: In the confines of this Country stood a Temple of Diana, common alike to the Messenians, Spartans, and Dores. It happened that some Spartan Virgins were by the Messenians here ravished: which abuse the Spartans pretended to be the ground of their War; the true reason indeed being their Covetousness of the sole Empire. This War broke out three several times. The first continued twenty years; in which space the Lacedemonians, fearing their absence would hinder the supply of Children in the City, sent a company of their ablest young men home to accompany their Wives. Their Off-spring were called Parthenii, who coming to full growth, abandoned Sparta, sailed into Italy, and there built Tarentum. The second being of 23 years continuance, was raised and maintained by Aristomenes, one of the chief men of the Messenians; in which they prospered till Aristocrates, King of Arcadia, one of their Confederates, revolted to side with Lacedemon. Then began they to decline, and Aristomenes was thrice taken Prisoner, still miraculously escaping. His last Imprisonment was in a Dungeon, where by chance espying a Fox devouring a dead body, he caught hold of her Tail. The Fox running away, guided Aristomenes after; till the straightness of the Hole by which he went out made him leave his hold, and fall to scraping with his Nails, which exercise he never left till he had made the Hole passable, and so escaped; and having a while upheld his falling Country, died in Rhodes. The third War was like drops after a Tempest; in which the Messenians being finally subdued, were forced to abandon their Country, or become Slaves unto the Spartans, who put them to all Drudgeries and servile Works; as they did the Helots, whom they counted as their Bondmen. And to this life some of them did apply themselves with so much Oblsequiousness, that at last it grew into a Proverb, Messina servilior, that such a one was more servile, or more slavishly used, than these poor Messenians. But the greatest part of them not brooking that heavy Yoke, passed into Sicily, and there built the City of Messana. Others were planted in Naupactum, by the State of Athens; the rest dispersed up and down in all parts of Greece: few of them left in their own Country, till Epaminondas having vanquished the Lacedemonians at the Battle of Leuctra restored them to their ancient Possessions.

4. ARCADIA hath on the East Laconia, on the West Elis and Messene, on the North Achia propria, and on the South the Sea. This Country took its name from Arcas, the Son of Jupiter and Calisto; but was formerly called Pelasgia: the people whereof thought themselves more ancient than the Moon.

*Orta prius Luna, de se si creditur ipsi,
A magno, tellus Arcade nomen habet.*

The land which of great Arcas took its name
Was ere the Moon, if we will credit Fame.

The chief Cities are; 1. Mantineia, nigh unto which the Theban Army, consisting of 30000 Foot and 3000 Horse, routed the Army of the Spartans and Athenians, consisting of 25000 Foot and 2000 Horse. In this Battle Epaminondas, that famous Leader, received his death's wound, and not long after died. At his last Gaspe, one of his Friends bemoaning his untimely death, Alas, said he; thou diest, Epaminondas, and leavest behind thee no Children. Nay replied he, two Daughters will I leave behind me, the victory of Leuctra, and this other at Mantineia. It was afterward called Antigonica, in honour of Antigonus, Tutor or Protector of Phillip the Father of Persius King of Macedon; but by command of the Emperor Adrian restored to its old name again, and is now called Mantegna. Mantineia lies 25 miles North of Megalopolis. 2. Megalopolis the Birth-place of Polybius, that excellent Historian. The one half of it had sometimes the name of Orestia, from the lodging of Orestes in it: the whole is now called Leontari, on what cause I know not. 3. Phialia, towards the Sea. 4. Psophis, so called from Psophis, one of the Sons of Lycan, once King of this Country, slain by Jupiter. 5. Stymphalus, situate near a Lake and River of the same name, where Hercules slew the Stymphalian Birds; so great in number and in Body; that they darkened the Sun beams, and terribly infested this little Province, till driven thence by Hercules. Here was also in this Town a Temple dedicated to Minerva, from hence called Stymphalida. 6. Tegæa, famous for the Temple of Pan, here worshipped; and from hence called Tegens; more for the War made upon the Tegætes, or people hereof, by the Lacedemonians; who thinking themselves assured of Victory; brought with them store of Chains and Fetters wherewith to lead Captive their conquered Enemies; but being overcome in Battel, were themselves bound with them, and forced as Slaves to till the Grounds of these Tegætes. Here is also in this Country the famous River Stryx, whose water, for the poisonous taste, was called the water of Hell; by which,

U u u

Poets

Poets feign that the Gods use to swear, as may be every where observed; and that what God soever swore by Stryx falsely, he was banished from Heaven, and prohibited Nectar for 1000 years.

This Country, for the fitness of it for Pasturage and Grazing, hath made it the Subject of many worthy and witty discourses, especially that of Sir Philip Sidney, of whom I cannot but make honourable mention: a Book which besides its excellent Language, rare Contrivances, and delectable Stories, hath in it all the Strains of Poësie, comprehendeth the universal Art of speaking, and to them which can discern and will observe, affordeth notable Rules for Demeanor, both private and publick. Which notable Gentleman, as he may worthily be called the English Heliodore, so the ingenious Author of the History of Melinus and Ariana may deservedly be called the French Sidney.

5. LACONIA is bounded on the West with Arcadia, on the East and South with the Sea, on the North with Argolis. Called first Lelegia, from the Leleges, by Strabo said to be the first Inhabitants of it; afterwards Oebalia, from Oebalus adding of Lacedamon; and finally Laconia, of the Lacones who succeeded the Leleges in the possession hereof, on their removal into the Islands of the lesser Asia. It is by some Writers also called Hecatompolis, from the number of an hundred Cities which it once had in it.

The Soil hereof is exceeding rich, and the Fields very spacious; yet for the most part not well tilled, in regard of the many Hills and Mountains which overthwart it. Well watered with the River Eurotas, and memorable for many fair Bays and Promontories: of which the principal are the Promontories of Malea, and Tanaria, now called Cabo Malio and Cabo Matapan; (the most Southern Cape in the Morea) and of the Bays, that called Golfo di Colochina, the Sinus Laconicus of the Ancients, into which the River Eurotas (now better known by the name of Vasilipotamo, or the Kingly River) pours his gentle Streams. The nature of the people we shall find in Sparta.

Places of most observation in it are, 1. Leuctra, situate on the Sea-side, near the Bay of Messene: of which name were two others in Greece, the one in Arcadia, the other in Achaia; but this last most memorable. 2. Amycla, so called from Amyclas, the third King of Sparta, by whom it was first founded; renowned afterwards for the Birth of Castor and Pollux, the Sons of Tyndarus; and of good note for being the Foundress of the City of Amycla in Calabria Superior, at first a Colony of this: distant from Lacedamon about 20 Furlongs. 3. Thulana, nigh to which is the Lake of Lerna, where Hercules slew the Monster Hydra; and not far off Mount Tanarus, near the Promontory Tanaria, in which the Natives shew a Cave, (believed in former times to be a Descent into Hell) out of which the Poets feign that Cerberus was dragged by Hercules. 4. Salassia, where Antigonus vanquished Cleomenes, the last King of Sparta. 5. Epidaurus, (seated on the Bay named Golfo di Napoli) now called Malvasia: a Town well built, and very well peopled; remarkable for the sweet Wines called Malvesey or Malmsey, sent from hence into all other parts in great abundance. An Archbishops See, seated on a Rock on the East shoar of the Morea, 60 Italian miles South East of Napoli di Romania, very strong by nature, it being encompassed with the Sea, and joyned to the Continent, only by a Timber-bridge to the West, to the North West it has a small quantity of Ground, but fenced from it by a Tripple-Wall, and a Castle seated on a Rock, being built to repel any Force. In the year 1204, this strong place was given in Fee to William, a French Count, by Baldwin Earl of Flanders, and then Emperor of Constantinople. This Count gave up his Right to the Venetians, who possess'd it till the year 1537, it was taken from them by the Turks. The Venetians retook and plundered it during the War of Can- dina. At this time it is the only place the Turks have in the Morea, all the rest being recovered by the Venetians from them. 6. Sparta, so called from Sparta, the Son or Brother of Phoroneus, the second King of Argos. the Founder of it, but afterwards beautified and enlarged by Lacedamon, the second King of this Country, it took that name also; promiscuously known by both in the best Authors. One of the Eyes of Greece, and a famous Common-wealth; but at first governed by Kings as most of the Greek Cities in ancient times. Tyndarus, the Father of Castor and Pollux, was once King hereof. After whose death, and the death of the said famous Brethren, Menelaus was admitted King of Sparta, or Lacedamon, in right of Helena his Wife, their Sister. And though Nicostratus and Megapenthes, Sons of Menelaus by another Venter, succeeded after his decease; yet the Spartans soon rejected them, and received Orestes the Son of Agamemnon to be their King, marrying him to Hermione, the daughter of Menelaus and Helena, and consequently the Niece of Tyndarus. Tysamenus, the Son of Orestes and Hermione, succeeded next; in whose time the Heraclidae, or posterity of Hercules, returned into Greece, under the conduct of Temenus, Ctesiphon, and Aristodemus, Sons of Aristomachus: whereof the first possessed himself by force of Arms of the City Argos, the second of Messene, and the third conquered the City and State of Sparta; which dying very shortly after, he left unto his two Sons Euristhenes and Procles, the Roots of the two Royal Families which jointly and in common governed the affairs of Sparta; first absolutely as Sovereign Princes, without any controul, afterwards at the direction of the Senate, and finally under the Command and Check of those popular Officers whom they called the Ephori. But because these Spartan Kings in each several period were for the most part men of Action, and often mentioned in the Histories of the elder time; I will first make a Catalogue of them, and then subjoyn such Observations and Remembrances as I think most pertinent.

The Kings of SPARTA of the first Family.

A. M.

1. Eurotas, the first King of Sparta, who gave name to the River Eurotas.
2. Lacedamon, Brother of Eurotas, from whom the City of Sparta was called Lacedamon.
3. Amyclas, Son of Lacedamon, the Founder of Amycla a Laconian City.
4. Argalus Son of Amyclas.
5. Cynorta, Son of Argalus.
6. Oebalus Son of Cynorta, from whom a part of this Country had the name of Oebalia.
7. Hippocoon, Son of Oebalus.
- 2700 8. Tyndarus, Brother of Hippocoon, in whose life he was King of Oebalia only.
9. Castor and Pollux, Sons of Tyndarus, famous amongst the Argonauts.
- 2740 10. Menelaus, Son of Atræus, and Brother of Agamemnon, Kings of Mycena, together with Helena his Wife, the Daughter of Tyndarus, whose Rape occasioned the Destruction of Troy.
- 2770 11. Nicostratus and Megapenthes, Sons of Menelaus by a former Wife.
12. Orestes, Son of Agamemnon, and Hermione his Wife, Daughter of Helena and Menelaus.
13. Tysamenus, Son of Orestes and Hermione, who, being outed of Sparta by the Heraclidae, reigned in Achaia, and left his Kingdom there unto his Posterity.

3714	30. Cleomenes 3. the last of the Line of the Agide ; who, having slain Eurydani- das , the Son of Agis the third, substituted his Brother Epi- clides , in his place. But being himself short- ly after vanquished by Antigonus of Macedo- nia , and forced to fly his Country with his Wife and Children, the Government of the Heracleide ended, after it had continued here for the space of Nine Hundred Years, or thereabouts.

Under these Kings the Government at first was ἀγαν Μοναρχικόν as Plutarch termeth it, sufficiently Monarchical, if it were not more. Under Eunomus, the fourth King of the second House, the people, finding the Reins of Government let loose, began to murmur and grow too head-strong. To bridle whom, and to restrain the Kings withal, (should they prove exorbitant) Lycurgus, the Protector of Charilaus, the sixth King of that House, did ordain the Senate, committing to them the supreme Power in matters Civil, and leaving to the Kings the ordering all Military and Sacred business. To curb the Insolencies of this Senate, who quickly found their own strength, Theopompus, the eighth King of that House, with the consent of Polydorus, the tenth King of the other, instituted a new Magistracy chosen out of the Common People, whom they called the Ephori; which grew in time to such an height of Pride and Tyranny, as not only to control the Senators, but to censure, fine, imprison, depose, and mutually to kill their Kings, as the Spirit of Sedition moved them. So that the State of Lacedæmon was at first a Monarchy under Kings, then an Aristocracy under the command of the Senate, next a Democracy under the Ephori, and finally, by those popular Officers made so plain a Tyranny, that Aristotle and Plato, two great Common-wealths-men, who died before they had embroiled their hands in the blood of their Kings, call it in plain terms τυραννικὴ ἢ τι τυραννικὴ a most absolute Tyranny. What think you these Men would have called it, had they lived to see Lacædas the third deposed, and Agis the third of that name also most barbarously murdered by these popular Villains?

But being the Foundation of this Common-wealth was first laid, and the good Laws and Politick Constitutions by which it did so long subsist in great Power and Splendour established, by the Wit and Power of Lycurgus, as before we said; we are to know concerning him, that he was the Son of Eunomus, the fourth King of the second House, slain in a popular Tumult by the Common people. Who, finding by this Essay, that the people were become too head strong for the Kings to govern, unless reduced to extremum Bondage by their Kings, which he wished not neither, took the advantage of the Minority of Charilaus to new mould the Government; and what he could not do by fair means, to effect by Arms, forcing this Charilaus, though his Nephew, when he came to age, to flee for Sanctuary to the Temple of Juno. Having ordained what Laws he pleased, and settled such a Form of Government as himself well fancied, the better to decline the Envy of so great a Change, he got leave to Travel, binding the People by an Oath to observe all his Laws until his return; and, being gone, commanded at his death, that his Ashes should be cast into the Sea, least being carried back to Sparta, the people might conceive themselves released from their Oath. By means whereof his Laws continued in force near 700 years, during which time that Common-wealth did flourish in all prosperity. The particulars of which Institutions he that lists to see, may find them specified at large by Plutarch in the Life of Lycurgus. Suffice it that the Discipline was so sharp and strict, that many went into the Wars for no other reason than on a hope to rid themselves from so hard a Life; and that Dionysius, returning hence to the City of Athens, gave out that he returned from Men to Women, ἐκ τῶν ἀνδρῶν εἰς τὰς γυναῖκες and being asked in what part of Greece he had met with the complearest men, made answer that he could no-where meet with men, but that he had found some Boys amongst the Spartans. A Cynical and rugged Answer, but such as carried a great deal of Judgment in it; the Spartans being more stout and resolute in all their Actions, and less effeminate in their Lives, than the rest of the Greeks. But besides the strictness of the Discipline under which they lived, there was another thing which made them wish for Wars abroad; namely, the little or no power which either the Kings or People had in Civil matters, or Affairs of State, entirely left to the disposing of the Senate and Power of the Ephori. So that the Kings, having by the Laws the Command of their Armies, were willing to engage in War upon all occasions, and the Common people as desirous to attend them in such Employments as the Kings could wish. Upon these grounds War was made a Trade amongst them; beginning with the Helots, a neighbouring People, then with the rest of the Lacedæmonians, afterwards quarrelling with the Messinians, their old Confederates: all which they severally subdued, and made subject to them. In the War which Xerxes made against the City of Athens, their King Leonidas the first, of the elder House, went forth to aid them; slain at the Straights of Thermopylae, courageously fighting for the Liberty of Greece; and when it was thought fit to set upon the Persian Fleet, Eurybiades the Spartan Admiral did command in chief. In pursuit of this War against the Persians, Pausanias and Agessilaus were of most renown: the first in helping the Athenians to drive them out of Greece: the other in making War upon them in their own Dominions. Freed from the Persians, they grow jealous of the State of Athens, whom they looked on as their Rivals in point of Sovereignty and Glory. Hence the long War betwixt these Cities, called Bellum Peloponnesiacum, managed for the most part in Peloponnesus, from thence transferred into Sicily, and at last ended in the taking of Athens: the Government whereof they changed into an Aristocracy under thirty Magistrates of their own appointment, commonly called the Thirty Tyrants. Proud of this fortunate Success, their next Quarrel was with the Bæotians, the conquered Athenians covertly, and the Persians openly assisting the Enemy. Here their Prosperity began to leave them. For besides many small Defeats, Epaminondas the Theban so discomfited them at the Overthrows of Leuctra and Mantineia, that Sparta it self was in danger of utter Ruin. Not long after happened the Holy War, chiefly undertook against the Phocians, wherein also they made a Party: but this War being ended by King Philip, they scarce breathed more Freedom than he gave Air to. But when Alexander's Captains fought for the Empire of their Master, all these flourishing Republicks were either totally swallowed into, or much defaced by the Kingdom of Macedon. The Lacedæmonians held the chief strength of a Town to consist in the Valour of the People; and therefore would never suffer Sparta to be walled, till the times immediately following the Death of Alexander the Great: yet could not those Fortifications then defend them from Antigonus Dofon, King of Macedon, who, having vanquished Cleomenes, King of Sparta, entred the Town, and was the first Man that ever was received into it as Conqueror. So much different were the present Spartans from the Valour and Courage of their Ancestors. Cleomenes being forced to forsake his Country, and the Race of the Heraclidæ failing in him, they became a Prey to Machanidus and Nabis, two wicked Tyrants; from whom they were no sooner freed, but they were made subject (in a manner) to the Power of Rome: and in the end the Town was so weak and inconsiderable, that it was not able to resist the poorest Enemy; now a small Burrough called Misithra. And so I leave them to the thoughts of their former Glories; having now nothing else to boast of but the Fame and Memory of their Actions in former Times.

How great soever it was of old, saith the Noble Coronelli, it is now reduced to a very small Circuit, and a few Inhabitants, who are exposed to so great Heats by reason of Mount Tagatus, which lies very near it due North, and cuts off the cooling Brizes, and augments the heat of the Sun to that degree, that few years pass without a Plague. On the top of that Mountain stands a strong Citadel which was never taken by Force, built by the Despotes in the declining of the Greek Empire. Mahomet the second was the first of the Ottoman Princes who conquered this City about the year 1458. In the year 1473 it was taken by Benedict Colleone, a Venetian General. In the year 1687, they again recovered the intire possession of it, the Bassa of Misithra Articuling to march away with only what the Garrison could carry. Monsieur Guilletiere, a French Gentleman, found the height of the Pole here 35. 26. This City is still the See of an Archbishop, and that perhaps has contributed something to its preservation.

6. ARGOLIS, so called from the chief City Argos, is bounded on the South with Laconia, on the West with Corinthia and Achaia propria, on the East and North with the Sea. A Territory remarkable for a most excellent breed of Horses, and from thence called Hippium.

Places of most importance in it are, 1. Argos, founded by Argos, the fourth King of this Country; the chief of this Kingdom. Memorable as for other things, so, 1. for the Death of Pyrrhus, King of Epirus; who, having forced his Entry into it, was here ignobly slain, after all his Victories, by the hands of an old Woman, throwing a Tile at him from the top of an House: 2. for the long Race of Kings hereof, from Inachus the contemporary of our Father Abraham, Anno 2003, unto Acrisius their last King: whose Daughter Danae, being shut up in a Tower of Brass, was deflowered by Jupiter; to whom she bare the renowned Perseus, so memorized in ancient Poets. But Perseus, having by misfortune slain his Grandfather, the old King Acrisius quitted the City of Argos as unlucky to him, and transferred the Kingdom to Mycenæ, a City of his own Foundation, and so better fancied, which was by means hereof the second City of esteem in this little Province; growing in small time unto so great Riches, that it got the name of dites Mycenæ, as appeareth by Horace, in whom the Horses of Argos and the Wealth of Mycenæ are placed in one Verse together:

Aptum dicit equis Argos, ditesque Mycenæ.
For Horses Argos is of Fame,
For Wealth Mycenæ hath the Name.

3. Træzen, situate on the Sinus Sironicus, (now called Golfo di Engia) the Royal Seat of Pittheus, the Grandfather of Theseus by the Mother's side, who was born herein: from whence the Town in Ovid hath sometime the name of Pittheia Træzen, and Theseus, many times is called Træzenius Heros; as Hercules had the name of Tyrinthius Heros, from, 4. Tyrinthia, another City of this Province, in which he was nursed. 5. Nemea, where Hercules slew the dreadful Lion which annoyed this Country. In honour of which noble Act were instituted in time following the Nemean Games, which continued of great Fame in Greece for many Ages. The Exercises were, Running with swift Horses; Whorlbats, Running on Foot, Quoiting, Wrestling, Darting, Shooting. Some have referred the Original of these Games to one Opheltes, a Lacedæmonian, in whose Honour they conceive them instituted; and others fetch it higher, from the War of Thebes: But this I take to be the more allowable Opinion. 6. Epidaurus, on the Sea side, famous for the Temple of Æsculapins, and the Cure of all sorts of Diseases there; so called from Epidaurus, the Son of Argus, the Founder of it. Of the same name, but of a different situation from that before mentioned in Laconia; that being seated on the Bay called Golfo di Napoli, this on that of Engia. Once called Melissa and Ampera, at that time an Island, but by an Earthquake laid unto the Continent; now called Pigiada. 7. Nauplia, so called of Nauplius, King of Eubœa, and Father of Palamedes, to whom it anciently belonged. A Station then, as now, for Shipping; in that regard called Nauplia Navale, now Napoli, or Neapolis; the richest and best traded in all this Tract, giving name unto a large and capacious Bay, now called Golfo di Napoli, of old Sinus Argolicus, into which the famous River Inachus, having passed through the City of Argos, doth disgorge it self; so called from Inachus the Father of Io, and the Original and Progenitor of the Kings of Argos and Mycenæ.

Napoli di Romania is now the only Place of any strength or regard in all this Province. It is seated upon a Tongue of Land between two Bays, shut up by two small Islands, the Southern of which is its Port, secured by a Castle built on the Island, from which a Chain is drawn to shut up the Entrance. This City is washed on three sides, the North, East and South by the Billows of the Sea, built upon a high rocky Ground, and fenced with a strong Wall. The Castle in the Mouth of the South Bay is very strong too, and surrounded by the Waves of the Sea, so that Art and Nature have conspired to make it a secure and convenient Dwelling, only on the North a Hill, called Palamide, could command it. In the year 1205 this City was first taken by the Venetians, but then it was soon recovered by the Greeks. Mary d'Erigane, Relick of Peter Son of Frederick Cornar, being after this the Owner of it, and not able to defend it against Sultan Bajazet resigned it to the Venetians in the year 1388, who defended it against Mahomet the second with good success about 1463 : Nor had Solyman the Magnificent any better success in the year 1537, in a Siege of it ; but it lying remote, and he attempting it the second time in 1539, though he could not then get it by force, yet he had it by a Treaty as the Price of a Peace. In the year 1686 the Venetians retook it by a Siege, to which the Palamide contributed very much, and they have accordingly since taken great care to secure it on that side, by taking that Hill within their Works, and building a good Fort upon it. This and Moldavia are the two best places on the Eastern Shore of the Morcia.

The Kings of ARGOS and MYCENÆ.

A.M.

- 2093 1. Inachus, the supposed Father of Io, from whom the Gracians are sometimes called by the name of Inachii.
- 2143 2. Phoroneus, the Son of Inachus and Melissa, from whom the said Io hath the name of Phoronis in the Poet.
- 2223 3. Apis, the Son of Jupiter and Niobe the Daughter of Phoroneus, who, leaving Greece, went into Aegypt, where he taught the People Tillage, and was there worshipped afterwards in the form of an Ox.
- 2238 4. Argus the Son of Apis, and the Founder of Argos; in whose time Agriculture was taken up amongst the Gracians, from him called Argivi.
- 2308 5. Crius, by some Picrasus, the Son of Argus.
- 2363 6. Phorbas, the Son of Crius; in whose time Atlas and Prometheus are said to flourish.
- 2397 7. Triopus, the Son of Phorbas, and the Brother of another Phorbas, who planted himself in the Isle of Rhodes.
- 2442 8. Crotopus.
- 2464 9. Sthenelus, ousted of the Kingdom by
- 2475 10. Danaus, the Brother of Aegyptus; by whom being driven out of Aegypt, he was made King of Argos by consent of the People: the Father of those many Daughters got with Child by Hercules. From him the Gracians are called often by the name of Danai.
- 2525 11. Lyncus, Son of Aegyptus, the Brother of Danaus.
- 2556 12. Abas, the Son of Lyncus and Hypermetra, the Daughter of Danaus.
- 2566 13. Prætus, the Son of Abas.
- 2606 14. Acrisius, the Brother of Prætus, and the Father of Danae; who being foretold by the Oracle that he should be slain by a Son of that Daughter, shut her up in a brazen Tower. But Jupiter, having corrupted the Guards with Gold, got the Lady's consent, by whom he had Persus, so renowned amongst the Poets and Historians of those elder times.
- 2637 15. Persus, the Son of Jupiter and Danae, exposed by his Grand-Father to the Seas, miraculously preserved, and grown into great Fame by his brave Exploits. He restored Acrisius to his Throne, from which he had been deposed by his Brother Prætus. But after having ignorantly and unfortunately slain the said Acrisius, he removed his Seat unto Mycenæ; where he reigned together with his Son Sthenelus.
- 2645 16. Eurestheus, the Son of Sthenelus, much spoken of for the difficult Tasks which, at the instigation of Juno, he imposed on Hercules his Foster-child, and the supposed Son of Amphiryon his Cousin-german.
- 2688 17. Atræus and Thyestes, Sons of Pelops, on the failing of the Line of Persus, succeeded in Argos and Mycenæ; infamous for their Murders and Adultery; Thyestes abusing the Bed of Atræus, and Atræus feasting him with the Body of his own Son, whence Delia δελία in the Proverb.
- 2753 18. Agamemnon, the Son of Atræus, Commander of the Greeks at the War of Troy, in which action there engaged Sixty-nine Kings of the Gracians, washed over with a Navy of 1224 Ships; killed at his coming home by Aegisthus, his Cousin-german.
- 2768 19. Aegisthus, the Son of Thyestes, having defiled Clytemnestra, the Wife of Agamemnon, in the time of his absence, by her procurement murdered him at his coming home, and usurped the Kingdom.
- 2775 20. Orestes, Son of Agamemnon, revenged his Father's Death on Aegisthus and Clytemnestra, his own Mother. After which falling mad, and restored again unto his Wits, he married Hermione, Daughter of Menelaus and Helena, by whom he had the Kingdom of Sparta also.
- 2803 21. Penthilus, the Son of Orestes, and the last King of this Line, ousted of his Estate by the Dores and Heracidae, who made themselves Masters of all Peloponnesus, which they possessed until the Conquest of it by the Macedonians.

7. CORINTHIA is a little Region, lying towards the Isthmus or Neck of Land which joineth Peloponnesus to the rest of Greece, betwixt Argolis and Achaia propria. It containeth only the Territory of the City of Corinth, not large, nor very fruitful of those Commodities which the rest of this Peninsula doth abound withal; as being mountainous and hilly, and, by reason of the nearness of the Sea, full of craggy Rocks. The chief, and indeed the only, Cities of note in it are, 1. Cenchrea, the Naval Road or Station of Ships for Corinth, mentioned Acts 18. 18. and Rom. 16. 1. in both Texts reckoned a distinct Town from Corinth, as indeed it was: situate on that Bay which openeth into the Cretan Sea, called anciently Sinus Saronicus, now Gulphus di Engia; and consequently opposite to, 2. Lechæum, the other Naval Road for Corinth, situate on the Western Bay, called of old Sinus Corinthiacus, now the Gulf of Lepanto. 3. Corinth it self, commodiously situate for the Command of all Greece, (had not not the Inhabitants been more given to Merchandize than unto the Wars) as being seated on the bottom of the Neck or Isthmus, the Ionian Sea upon the West, and the Ægean on the East, washing the Walls thereof, and giving it on each side a Capacious Haven; in which regard it is called by Horace bimaris Corinthus. It was in compass about eleven Miles, for Strength impregnable, for Command as powerful, Mastering both Seas on which it stood, and cutting off all passage from one half of Greece to the other: to which last end the Castle called Acrocorinthus, looking into both Seas, served exceeding fitly; and was therefore called one of the Fetters of Greece. The City was rich, very well Traded, and neatly built, most Houses beautified with handfom Pillars, from thence called Corinthian: more memorable for the Wealth of the People, and the conveniency of the Situation, than for any notable Exploits performed by them, or any great Influence which they had on the States of Greece. But in regard of the Wealth, Greatness, and Situation, accounted by the Romans one of the three Cities which they held capable of the Empire; Carthago and Capua being the other two. In this City lived the famous (or infamous) Whore Thais, who exacted 10000 Drachma's for a single nights Lodging: which made Demosthenes cry out, Non enim tanti pariter, and occasioned the old By-word, Non Non cuius homini contingit adire Corinthum.

'Tis not for every man's avail,
Unto Corinth for to fail.

Near hereunto stood the Acrocorinthian Mountains, at the foot whereof the City, and on the top whereof the Castle called hence Acrocorinthus, were seated: out of which flowed the famous Fountain named Pyrene, of old consecrated to the Muses; by Perseus called Fons Caballinus, because feigned by the ancient Poets to have been made by the Horse Pegasus dashing his foot against the Rock. And on the other side hereof in the Isthmus were celebrated yearly the Isthmian Games; ordained by Theseus in honour of Neptune; in imitation of the Olympick devised by Hercules in honour of Jupiter. The Exercises were much the same, and the reward no other than a Garland of Oaken Boughs: yet they drew yearly a great resort of people to them; partly to exercise themselves and behold the Sports; and partly to sacrifice to Neptune, who had hard-by a famous Temple.

As for the Fortunes of this City, it was at first called Ephyre, at that time a small and obscure place; but beautified and repaired by Corinthus, the Son of Pelops, it took the name of Corinth; governed by him and his posterity, till the coming of the Heraclidae into Peloponnesus, at what time one Aletes of the Race of Hercules possessed himself hereof, with the name of King, A. M. 2849. Twelve Princes of his Line enjoyed it for the space of 220 years and upwards: when the House failing in the person of Automanes, they were governed by temporary Officers, like the Archontes of Athens. Continuing under this Government 124 years, the City was seized on by one Cypselus, A. M. 3294, who left it to his Son Periander, one of the seven wise men of Greece, counted a Tyrant in those times, for no other reason than that he had suppressed the Popular Government. After whose death, Anno 3364, the City did recover its former Liberty. In the Bussle betwixt Athens and Lacedæmon, and other the Estates of Greece, for the Superiority, it did little meddle; the aim of this people being Wealth, not Honour; not interested in any Action of renown in all those times, but in the sending of Timoleon to the aid of the Syracusans against the Tyrant Dionisius, who did Lord it over them. It was subdued, together with the rest, by the Kings of Macedon; and with the rest restored to Liberty by the Power of Rome: under whom growing still more rich, and withal more insolent, they abused certain Roman Embassadors. But irasci populo Romano nemo sapienter potest, as is said in Livie, which the Corinthians found too true; the City being besieged, sacked, and burnt unto the Ground by Lucius Mummius, a Roman Consul, Anno V. C. 607, A. M. 3804, 144 years before Christ, when it had stood 952 years, as Veljeus Paterculus observes, so that it was built A. M. 2852. In the burning whereof there were consumed so many goodly Statues of Gold, Silver, Brass, and other Metals, that being melted into a Lump, they made up by that fatal chance, that so much estimated Metal called Æs Corinthium, more highly prized in Rome than Gold or Silver. Repaired again, it was of great esteem in the time of the Emperors, converted by Saint Paul to the Christian Faith; and having flourished a long time in Pride and Pleasures, decayed by little and little, till it came to nothing, and is now a small Burrough called Crato. It is called at this day by the Greeks Corinto, and by the Turks Gerame; to continue down its story where our Learned Author leaves it, some attribute the rebuilding of it to Julius Cæsar, and others to Augustus. It was converted by St. Paul about the 12th year of the Reign of Claudius, Anno Christi 52, confirmed by Clemens Romanus about the year 97, after this it was seized by Roger King of Naples in the year 1148, but Emanuel then Emperor of the East, soon re-cover'd it by the assistance of the Venetians, and in 1151, he was glad to sue to that Emperor for a Peace. After this it was put under Despots, by whom it was resigned to the Venetians, and from them it was Ravish'd by Mahomet II. Emperor of the Turks in the year of Christ 1458. The Venetians made several attempts to regain the possession of it to no good purpose; but time and the oppression of the Turks, has deprived them of the Honour of being Masters of this Noble and Ancient City, which in 200 years was by them brought to a poor Village of about 20 thatched Cottages, and these too which the Castle of Corinth in the year 1687, were wrested out of their hands by the Victorious Arms of that Common-wealth. Mr. Wheeler saith it is now called Corintha, and is situate on the Right hand of the Isthmus, on the Peloponnesian shoar, 2 miles from the Corinthian Bay, and 6 or 7 from the Saronick, having Athens East by South, Parassus North, it is not big enough to be called a City, but may pass for a considerable Country Town, the Town lies North West of the Castle towards Lepanto, upon the descent of an Hill, half a score Houses in a knot, and more Spruce than ordinary, it has two Mosques and one Church, at which the Archbishop Lives. Its Latitude is 38. 14. So far he, page 439.

Having thus spoken of the several Estates of Peloponnesus, it resteth that we speak somewhat of the Estates of the whole, varied according to the Fortunes of those particular, which had most Influence on the same. The Affairs hereof were a long time swayed by the Kings of Sicyon, whence it had the name of Sicyonia, restrained afterwards to the Territories of that City only. But when the Kings of Argos came in place and power, it depended much upon their pleasures; from Apis the third King whereof, (if not rather from Apis the fourth King of Sicyon) in the opinion of some Writers, it was named Apia. But Pelops the Son of Tantalus King of Phrygia, coming into Greece, and marrying Hippodamia, Daughter of Oenonius King of Elis, became the most powerful Prince of all this Peninsula, taking from him the name of Peloponnesus. The Kingdom of Mycenæ, growing into power and Credit, had the next turn in swaying the affairs hereof for a certain season; as after that the Dores and Heraclidae, possessed at once of Argos, Sparta, Corinth, and Messene. The Spartans, getting the Preheminence over all the rest, were the next who governed the Affairs of it, and they held it long; having first conquered Laconia, and subverted the Estate of Messene, by means whereof, and by their fortunate Success against the Persians, they became almost absolute in their Commands, without any Competitor. But their Power being broken by Pelopidas and Epaminondas in the Theban War, the petit States hereof began to take heart again, and stand upon their own Legs; as they did a while, till the Kings of Macedon, succeeding Alexander the Great, brought them once more under, and made them Fellow-Servants with their Spartan Masters. In the Confusions which ensued in Macedon amongst the Competitors for that Kingdom, Patras and Dyme, two Cities of Achaia propria, first united them in a strong League of Amity, at such time as Phyrrhus first went into Italy: into which Confederacy the Cities of Tritea and Pheræ shortly after came; and not long after that of Ægira, and the rest of Achaia propria. Their Affairs were first governed by two Prætors with Advice of the Senate, as afterwards by one alone with the like Advice, of which Marcus Carinensis was the first, and Aratus of Sicyonia the second. The ground thus laid, and the reputation of this new Common-wealth increasing by the Vertue of Aratus, the Epidaurians, Træzenians, Argives and Megarians became Members of it, maintaining gallantly the Liberties of Peloponnesus, till finally mastered by the Romans. In the Division of whole Empire it fell, with all the rest of Greece to the Constantinopolitans; and in the declining of their Fortunes, when the Latins got possession of the Imperial Imperial City, most of the Sea-Coasts of it were allotted to the State of Venice; the Inland parts formerly parcelled out amongst many Princes whom they called Despots, continuing as before they were. By Izabel, a Daughter of one of these Despots, (and as it seems the chief among them) married to Ferdinand, Son of James the first, and Father of James the second King of Majorca, the Title of Prince of Majorca came into that House; used by them and the rest of these Petit Princes, till all together were made a Prey to the Turkish Tyrants, Mahomet the Great, and Bajazet the second, by whom they were wholly conquered. For howsoever Thomas and Demetrius, Brethren of that unfortunate Prince Constantinus Palaeologus, had fled hither at the taking of Constantinople, and were received and obeyed by those Petit Princes: yet being unable to hold out against the Conqueror, they became his Tributaries. But their falling out amongst themselves, and neglecting then to send in the Tribute agreed upon, gave Mahomet the Great occasion to invade the Country, and under colour of aiding one Brother against the other, to destroy them both, as he did accordingly: Demetrius being carried Prisoner to Constantinople, and Thomas forced to abandon Peloponnesus, and fly to Italy, Anno 1457. Such Towns hereof as belonged to the State of Venice followed the same Fortune also in the time of Bajazet, by whom they were all taken at the last, and the whole Country brought under his obedience, Anno 1500, or thereabouts. Governed ever since that time by a Turkish Sanzack under the Beglerbeg of Greece, who hath his Residence at Modon, a Regiment of 1000 Horse to secure the Country, and 700000 Aspers (that is to say, 14000 Crowns) a year for his Entertainment. The Venicians have within the space of three years last past, recovered the whole Morea, out of the hands of the Turks. An account of which I have given in the continuance of the History of the several Cities. Monsieur Coronelli, Geographer to this Republick, hereupon published a Geographical Description of the principal Cities in it, from which I have Transcribed many things.

2. ACHAEA.

ACHAEA is bounded on the East with the Aegean Sea, on the West with Epirus, on the North with Thessaly, on the South with Peloponnesus and the Seas thereof. Called anciently Hellas from Helles the Son of Deucalion; but whence it had the name of Achaia, is not yet agreed on: though sure I am that from hence the Inhabitants of it were called Achivi, (a name communicated afterwards to all the Graecians) to difference them from the Achai of Achaia propria.

The Country is famous in the Authors of the elder times, more for the Gallantry of the Men, than any great goodness of the Soil and place: yet that is sufficiently memorable for the Hill Hymettus, swarming with Bees, plentiful of the sweetest Honey, and rich in Mines of excellent Marble; as also for the River Cephissus, which runneth almost through the whole length hereof; divided into two main Streams, of which the one is called Asopus, the other retaineth its first name. Upon the Banks hereof stood the Temple of Themis, to which Deucalion did repair to be directed in the Restauration of Mankind, as the Poets Fable.

It was divided anciently into these seven Parts; viz. 1. Attica, 2. Megaris, 3. Boeotia, 4. Phocis, 5. Locris, 6. Doris, and 7. Aetolia. A Division now as much divided as the name of Achaia, changed by the Turks into that of Lakadina, of which more anon.

1. ATTICA hath on the West Megaris and some part of Boeotia, on all other parts encompassed with the Sea: so called from Athens, the chief City. The Soil for the most part is very barren and craggy; yet by the Arms and Industry of the people made both rich and famous; insomuch as the yearly Revenues of the State of Athens were 1200 Talents. The Money current in this Country was commonly stamped with an Ox, whence came the By-word Bos in lingua, applied to such Lawyers as were bribed to say nothing in their Clients Cause. Not much unlike to which was the proverb rising from the Coin of Aegina (an Isle adjoining) stamped with the figure of a Snail, viz. Virtutem & Spem vincunt Testudines.

Places of most observation in it were, 1. Phyla, a strong Fortress on the Borders of Boeotia, surprised by Thrasibulus and others of the banished Athenians, during the Government of the thirty Tyrants: the taking whereof was the first step towards their own and then Country's Liberty, which soon after followed. 2. Eleusis on the Borders of Megaris, almost impreguably fortified by the thirty Tyrants when they had the command of Athens, by whom it was designed for their Retreat in all times of danger. But having withdrawn hither on the taking of Phyla and Piræus by the Thrasibulians, they found strong Walls a weak defence for so much Wickedness; being trained out as to a Parley, and so deprived of the place and their power together. It was first built by one Eleusius, who entertained Ceres as she was in Quest of her Daughter Proserpina; who, to reward him, taught him the use of Agriculture; and he in honour of her built here a Temple. Hence Ceres in the Poets is called Eleusina, and her Sacrifices Sacra Eleusinia; and sometimes the City also Cerealis Eleusis, so called by Ovid in the seventh Book of his Metamorphoses. 3. Rhamnus, upon the River Asopus, famous for the Temple of Amphiaraus, and the Statue of the Goddess Nemesis, hence called Rhamnusia, being the Goddess of Indignation, punished those who made themselves unworthy of their present Fortunes. 4. Trycorinum, of more Antiquity than Fame. 5. Marathon, on the South-side of the River Asopus, opposite to Rhamnus, of great note for the Discomfiture given by Miltiades the Athenian to the numerous Army of Darius, consisting of 200000 Foot and 10000 Horse: the Emulation of which noble Victory started such brave Resolves in the breast of Themistocles. As memorable in the Poets of those elder times for the Marathonian Bull there slain by Theseus. This is now a pitiful Ruin'd Village saith Mr. Wheler, which we thought not worth lighting to see. p. 454. 6. Mopsophia, the ordinary dwelling-place of Theseus, before he fixed his Seat at Athens, it being at this Town that he restored Helena (whom he had before stolen from her own Country) to her two Brethren Castor and Pollux; of which both Rape and Restitution we find mention in Ovid, the one in the Epistle of Oenone to Paris, the other in that of Hermione to Orestes; in which last it is said expressly, Reddita Mopsopia Tyndaris urbe Soror, that is to say, that she was delivered to her two Brethren (who had taken much pains in seeking for her) in the Town of Mopsophia. 7. Piræus, the Port Town to Athens, and the ordinary Station for their Shipping, the Haven hereof being capable of 400 Sail; distant from the City about two miles, but joyned unto it by two long Walls reaching from the one side to the other, for securing the conveyance of their Merchandise to and from the Sea. The Port itself was impreguably fortified by the Advice of Themistocles: But as these long Walls were broken down by the command of the Spartans, when the City of Athens was taken by them, so were the Fortifications of Piræus itself demolished by the command of Sylla, in his War against Mithridates King of Pontus, the better to keep under the Athenians. This place is now called Porto di Leone by the Italians, from a huge Marble Statue of a Lion, of admirable Work, advanced at the bottom of the Bay, in a sitting posture, but erected on the two fore feet 10 Foot in height. The Harbour would not hold above 30 or 40 of our present Ships, as Mr. Wheler our Country-man observed who saw it, nor is there any one House or Habitation in this place, besides a Ware-house for the receiving of Goods. All the other places mentioned by Herodotus, are in the same State state of Desolation, but Athens, of which I shall speak in its proper place. 8. Panormus, a Sea-Town also, and of very good Trade, but not of such importance as the other was. 9. Athens, one of the Eyes of Greece, and the chief of Attica, situate from the Sea two miles, as before was said; (the Venetians found it five Italian miles) the Haven of Piræus serving it with all Commodities which came from other parts by shipping. First built by Cecrops the first King of it, by whom it was called Cecropia, A. M. 2409; repaired afterwards by Theseus, and furnished with good Laws by Solon; and finally thus named from Minerva, (whom the Greeks called Athene) to whom they dedicated, and in whose Honour there were yearly kept some solemn Games, called Panathenaia. A City heretofore adorned with all those excellencies of Strength and Beauty which Art or Cost could add unto it. Renowned, as for many things, so for three especially: 1. For the inviolable Faith of the Citizens in all their Leagues, and most firm Affection to their Friends: so that Fides Attica grew in the end unto an Adage. 2. For the famous Scholars which here taught and flourished; this being so happy a Nursery of the choicest Wits, and so fitly seated for the Muses, that the very Natives, being in other Countries, could sensibly perceive some want of that natural Vigour which at home was resident in their spirits. Ita ut corpora istius Gentis separata sint in alias Regiones, Ingenia vero solis Atheniensium muris clausa esse existimes, as Velleius hath it. So that the Bodies of the Inhabitants might be carried into distant Regions, but the Ingenuity belonging to them was confined to the Walls of their City as one would think, as Velleius observes. Yea, and to say the truth, it was a most famous University, from whose great Cistern the Conduit-pipes of Learning were dispersed over all the World. Yet did not Learning so effeminate or soften the hearts of the People, but that 3. This one City yielded more famous Captains than any in the World besides, not excepting Rome; Miltiades, Aristides, Themistocles, Cimon, Pericles, Alcibiades, Phocion, and divers others of great name. Who though they were the men that both defended and enlarged this Common-wealth, yet were the people so ungrateful to them, or they so unfortunate in the end, that they either died abroad in Banishment, or by some violent death at home. Themistocles, the Champion of Greece, died an Exile in Persia, Phocion was slain by the people, Demosthenes made himself away by Poison, Pericles was many times endangered, Theseus their Founder first deposed, and then despitefully imprisoned, Aristides, Alcibiades, Nicias, &c. banished for ten years by the Ostracism; a form of Punishment, so called, because the name of the party banished was writ on an Oyster-shell; and only used towards such who either began to grow too popular, or potent among the men of service. Which Device, allowable in a Democracie, where the over-much power of one might hazard the Liberty of all, was exercised in spite oftner than for desert. A Country fellow meeting by chance with Aristides, desired him to write Aristides in his shell: and being asked whether the man whose Banishment he desired had ever wronged him? he replied, No, he was only sorry to hear folk call him a good man. We find the like unfortunate end to most of the Romans so redoubted in War. Coriolanus was exiled, Camillus confined to Ardea, Scipio murdered, with divers others; only because their Virtue had lifted them above the pitch of ordinary men. Ventidius was disgraced by Antony; Agricola poisoned, with the privacy of Domitian; Corbulo murdered by the command of Nero: all able men, yet living in an Age wherein it was not lawful to be valiant. In latter times it so happened to Gonsulvo the great Captain, who having conquered the Kingdom of Naples, driven the French beyond the Mountains, and brought all the Italian Potentates to stand at the Spaniards devotion, was by his Master called home, where he lived obscurely, though honoured after his decease with a solemn Funeral, worse fared the Guises and Biron in France; worse Essex, and Dudley of Northumberland, with us in England. Neither will I omit William Duke of Suffolk, who having served 34 years in our Wars with France, and for 17 years together never coming home, at his return was quarrelled, and basely murdered. It were almost impiety to be silent of Joab, the bravest Soldier and most fortunate Leader that ever fought the Lord's Battels, and yet was killed at the horns of the Altar. Whether it be that such men be born under an unhappy Planet; or that Courtiers, and such as have best opportunity to endear men of War unto their Sovereigns, know not the way of commending their great Deserts: or that Envy, the common Foe to Virtue, be an hinderance to it; I am not able to determine. And yet it may be that Princes naturally are distrustful of men of action, and are not willing to make them greater whose name is great enough already. And it may be the fault is in the Soldiers themselves, by an unreasonable over-valuing of their own Performances, as if the Prince or State were not able to reward or prize them: which was the cause of the death of Silius in the time of Tiberius. Concerning which Tacitus giveth us this good note, That over-merit in great Subjects is exceeding dangerous, and begets Hate instead of Favours. Beneficia eo usque lata sunt, dum videntur exsolvi posse; ubi multum anteverterunt, pro gratia Odium redditur, saith that Wise Historian.

But to look back again on Athens: it was first built by Cecrops the first King thereof; governed by him and his Posterity with no lower Title for 400 years, as is apparent by this following Catalogue of

The Kings of ATHENS.

| 2802 | 13. Oxyntes , Son or Brother of Demophoon . |
| 2814 | 14. Aphydas Son of Oxyntes , slain by his Brother. |
| 2815 | 15. Thymades the last of the Line of Erichtheus . |
| 2823 | 16. Melanthius of Messene , driven out of his own Kingdom by the Heraclidae , obtained that of Athens . |

2860 17. Codrus, the Son of Melonthius, the last King of Athens, who in the Wars against the Peloponnesians, having Intelligence by an Oracle that his Enemies should have the Victory, if they did not kill the Athenian King, attired himself like a common Beggar, entred the Peloponnesian Camp, and there played such Pranks, that at the last they were fain to kill him. Which when the Enemy understood, they thought themselves by this means deprived of all hopes of Success, and so broke up their Army, and departed homewards. For this the People of Athens, did so honour his memory, that they thought no man worthy to succeed as King, and therefore committed the managing of the Estate to Governors for term of Life, whom they called Archontes: the first Archon being Medon, the Son of Codrus. They differed not from the former Kings in point of power, but only in manner of their Admission: the former Kings claiming the Government by Succession in right of Blood; and these Archontes holding by Election only; whose names here follow in this List of

The perpetual Archontes in the State of
A T H E N S.

A. M.

2882 1. Medon, the Son of Codrus.
2902 2. Acastus, the Son of Medon.
2938 3. Archippus, the Son of Acastus.
2957 4. Thersippus, the Son of Archippus.
2998 5. Phorbas, the Son of Thersippus.
3029 6. Megacles, the Son of Phorbas.
3059 7. Diogenetus, the Son of Megacles.
3087 8. Phereclus, the Son of Diogenetus.
3106 9. Aritthon, the Son of Phereclus.
3126 10. Thespius; in whose time began the Kingdom of Macedon.
3153 11. Agamestor.
3173 12. Æschylus, the Son of Agamestor. After whose death, Anno Mundi 3195, the Athenians, weary of these Governours for term of Life, as being less obnoxious to the Check and Censure of the People, chose themselves Officers or Archontes for ten years only: at the end of which time they were to yield up their places, and make room for others. But being a People greedy of Novelties and desirous of Change, they had only seven of those Decennial Archontes; their Officers from that time forwards being chosen annually: which Officers, being nine in number, we may call most properly the Provost, the chief Bishop, the Marshal, and the six chief Justices, all chosen out of the Nobility. And so it held for the space of 170 years, till the time of Solon; who was the first which put the Supreme Authority into the hands of the people; and gave the first hint unto that Democracy which afterwards prevailed in Athens by the help of Pericles, who being one of the great Council of the Areopagites, took from them a great part of their power in deciding Controversies and Suits in Law, putting them over to the Judgment of the Common people. A Government so dearly loved by the Athenians, that in all the Cities which they conquered, or restored to Liberty, or won to their party from the Spartans, they caused it to be admitted: as on the other side the Spartans introduced and confirmed an Aristocracy (their own beloved Government) in all the places where they prospered. As for the Court of the Areopagites, of much fame in Athens, it consisted from the first beginning in τῶν κατ' ἐνταυτὸν Ἀρχόντων, of such as had born some of the nine chief Offices; who being once admitted, held for term of Life. First instituted in the time of Demophoon, the Son of Thesens, and called by the name of Areopagites, either for that they held their Court in the Street of Alars, in Ἀπολ. πλάτ. mentioned Acts 17. 22. or because Alars, being accused for a Murder, did first plead before them. A Court which held in estimation under all these Changes, and so continued till the time of the Roman Empire.

But to return again to the Story of Athens. In or about the latter end of the life of Solon Pisistratus altered the Free State, and made himself the absolute Master of the City: but he once dead, the People regained their Liberty, driving thence Hippias the Son of Pisistratus; who hereupon fled for Succour to Darius the Persian Monarch, occasioning by that means the first coming of the Persians into Greece. What success the Persians had in Greece the Histories of those Times abundantly inform us: Darius being vanquished by Miltiades at Marathon, and Xerxes by Themistocles at Salamis. Yet did not Athens scape so clear but that it was taken by Xerxes, though indeed first abandoned and voluntarily dismantled by the Athenians. When the Persians were retired homewards, the people of Athens re-edified their Town, and strongly fortified it with high and defensible Walls: which done, they put their Fleet to Sea, and spoiled the Coasts of Persia in all quarters, enriching their City with the Spoils, and enlarging their Power and Dominion by the addition of many Islands and Sea-Towns. Hereby they grew unto that Wealth and Potency, that they were suspected by their weaker Neighbours; and envied by their stronger, the Lacedemonians especially; who, fearing to lose their ancient Priority over Greece, but pretending the Surprisal of Potidea, a City of Thrace, from the Corinthians, and some hard measure by them shewed upon the Megarenses, made War upon them. In the beginning of this War the Athenians not only resisted the whole Power of all Greece confederate against them, but so exceedingly prospered, that the Spartans sued for Peace, and could not get it. But the Scales of Fortune turned. For after they had held out 28 years, they were compelled to pluck down the walls of their City, and submit themselves to the will and pleasure of the Spartans, now by the puissance and good fortune of Lyfander become their Masters: by whom the Government was changed, and an Aristocracie (or rather Oligarchie) established under 30 Magistrates known commonly by the name of the 30 Tyrants; expelled not long after by the Valour of Thrasybulus and his Associates, as hath been touched upon before. Not long after the end of this War, which the Historians call Bellum Peloponnesiacum the Persians, seeing how the Spartans, not having now the State of Athens to oppose them, began to work upon their Empire, furnished Cimon, a noble Athenian Gentleman, with a Navy so well provided, that he overcame the Lacedemonians in a Fight at Sea, and thereby put his Country-men into so good heart, that they made a party in the War called Bellum Sacrum; composed at the last by Philip of Macedon, who not only brought the Thebans, whom he came to aid, but the Athenians, Spartans, and the rest of the adverse party, under his Command. A Servitude from which they were never freed, till as well Macedon as the rest became Fellow-servants unto Rome. But though this brave City had then lost her power in point of Arms yet she still kept her credit as an University in point of Arts. Origen, Chrysostom, Basil, and Gregory Nyssen, men of Renown and Eminence in the Primitive Times, are said to have studied at Athens, the like is affirmed of Pope Joan, if the Tale be true, for the middle Ages. And so it held, as I conjecture, though not so eminently as before, till the year 1440, when taken by Mahomet the Great, who wondred much (as my Author telleth) at the extreme Beauty of the Castle, and the strength of the Walls, not having lost in so long time their former Excellencies. Since that it is sensibly decayed, and is now an ordinary Borough, (by the Turks called Setines) but still preserveth the Reputation of an Episcopal See, the Bishop of it holding up the Title of Atheniensis. To continue down the Story of this Ancient City to our own Times, Alaricus King of the Goths laid its Honour and Buildings in the Dust under the Reign of Islam, about the year of Christ 378. It was after this Rebuilt, and about the year 1435 we find one Anthonius Comnenus Anagolus, Duke of Athens: About Twenty years after this, under Muhamet II. she fell the second time into the hands of the barbarous and consuming Turks, who have ruined all her Glory and extinguished her Learning; yet she has about 9000 Inhabitants, but very poor and ignorant; and some remainders of her ancient most noble Structures and Antiquities: The most eminent of which was the Temple of Minerva, since turned into a Turkish Mosque. In the year 1686 the Venetians having taking Napoli di Romania, the Inhabitants of Athens sent to them to procure their Protection, and consented on that score to a Contribution of 20000 Crowns (a great Tax for so poor a City) but the year following, the 21th of September, Murad coming to that Port landed his Army, and marched up to Athens, 3000 Turks pretending to defend the Castle at first, but a Granado falling upon one of their Magazines so astonished them, that after four or five days resistance they surrendered the Place and retreated. The Venetians in this short Siege found the Temple of Minerva ruined by a Bomb to their great Sorrow. The General ordered the City to be re-fortified, and Forts to be built to secure the Passage from the City to the Haven, but finding it five Miles distance and not possible to be secured without more Men than he could spare. In the beginning of the Campaign, in the year 1688 he removed the Goods and Inhabitants to Napoli di Romania with an intention to restore them if he took Negropont this Summer, and in the interim that ancient City is now desolate, and very uncertain it is whether ever it will be again inhabited. Our Learned Country-Man Mr. Wheler has taken great pains in describing the Antiquities of this Place as they stood just before this great Revolution, and to him I shall refer the curious Reader when I have told him that it is seated, according to that Author, in Long. 53. Lat. 38. 5. our Author gives an Account of the Dukes of Athens in the end of the Section concerning Attolia a little further.

2. MEGARIS is bounded on the East with Attica; on the West with the Bay of Corinth; on the North with Boeotia: and on the South with the Isthmus and the Gulf of Argia: So called from Megara, the chief City.

This is the least Province of all Greece, and not very fruitful (the Country for the most part being hard and rocky) not beautified with many Cities. The principal of those which were are, 1. Pega, or Paga, situate on the Bay of Corinth, and spoken of both by Pliny and Ptolemy; but not otherwise memorable. 2. Megara, (now Alegra) first built by Megareus, the Son of Apollo, and from him thus named. Remarkable in former times for a Sect of Philosophers, called from hence Setta Megarica, founded by one Euclide, a Disciple of Socrates; of whom see Lactantius. More memorable in the Poets for Nisus, once the King of this little Territory on whose Head there is said to have grown a purple Hair, on which the preservation of his Life and Kingdom did depend: Which Jewel his Daughter Scylla is said to have delivered unto King Minos, her Father's Enemy, of whom, then, besieging this City, upon the sight of him from an high Terret, she became enamoured; but he rejecting her and her Present both, after the taking of the City returned into Crete, which the unhappy Woman seeing, she threw her self after him into the Sea, and was turned into the Bird called Ciris. I leave the moralizing of the Fable unto the Mythologists: observing only by the way the antiquity of that politick practice, to love the Treason, and hate the Traitor. But the Glory of this City did not end with Nisus. For, shaking off the Cretan Yoke, it became sui juris once again: and being conveniently seated on the very Isthmus, amounted to that height of Prosperity, that they contended with the Athenians for the Island of Salamis. And in this War they so crushed the Power and Spirit of Athens by one fatal Overthrow, that the Athenians, to prevent all the like Disasters, did ordain by Law, that whosoever mentioned the Recovery of Salamis was to lose his Life: so that Solon was compelled to feign himself Frantick, the better, to propound the Enterprize. In which although the State of Athens got the Isle of Salamis, yet did the Megarenses continue a Free People, till brought under (with the rest) by the Macedonians, and with them made subject unto Rome. Mr. Wheler, who saw this City, has given an exact Account of its Present State; he saith, It was anciently built upon two Rocks, one of which is now totally desolate, and the other has about two or three hundred pitiful Cottages built one Story high, and close together; the Walls of which are the Ruins of the former Houses, or a few Faggots covered with Clay, &c. there live no Turks there, and the Christians are in that perpetual fear of the Pyrats, that they flee upon the sight of a Boat, or the barking of their Dogs. Mr. Wheler, p. 431. Monsieur Coronelli has also given a very large Account of this small place much to the same purpose.

3. BOEOTIA is bounded on the South with Megaris and the Bay of Corinth, on the North with the River Cephissus, on the East with Attica and a Branch of the Aegean Sea, and on the West with Phocis. Thus named from Bos, which in Greek signifieth an Ox; because when Cadmus, weary of seeking his Sister Europa, (whom Jupiter had stolen out of Phoenicia) came to the Oracle of Delphos, he was commanded to follow the first Ox he saw, and where the Ox did rest it self there to build a City.

In the Country is nothing singular, but an ancient Custom of burning before the Door of an House in which a new-married Wife was designed to dwell, the Axle-tree of the Coach which brought her thither; giving her by that Ceremony to understand, (as Plutarch telleth us in his Morals) that she must frame her self to live and abide with him, without hope of departure. In this Country also are the Streights of the Mountain Oeta, from the Neighbouring Baths called Thermopylae, not above Twenty-five Foot in breadth; which in the War that Xerxes made against the Greeks were valiantly defended by Leonidas, King of Sparta, with no more than 300 of his Men, who, having valiantly resisted that Army which in his passage out of Persia had drank Rivers dry, and slain at least 30000 of them, died every Man upon the place. To hide the greatness of which loss, lest it should terrifie the rest of his Army which were coming on, Xerxes commanded all the slain Men to be buried in several Pits, except a Thousand; as if no more than they had been lost in that Passage.

Places of most Observation in it are, 1. Thespia, on a River of the same name, at the fall whereof into the Bay it is pleasantly seated, shadowed on the North with a Branch of the Mountain Helicon, and consecrated, as that was, unto the Muses, hence called Tespiades in the Poets. 2. Platae; nigh to which Mardonius, General to the Persians, was overcome by the Greeks, with the loss of Mardonius himself and 160000 Men on the Persian side; and on the other no more than 31 Spartans, 16 Arcadians, 52 Athenians, and about 600 of the Megarenses. In memory of which brave Exploit, and to preserve the Names and Honour of those Worthies who there laid down Lives for the Liberty of Greece, there was a Festival kept annually by the Plataeans in the month of September; with solemn Sacrifices, and a kind of divine Acknowledgment unto the Deceased; continued from the time of Aristides the Athenian, who first ordained them, to the days of Plutarch, who records it; but how long after I am not able to say. In this great Fight the Commander in chief was a Noble Spartan, called Pausanias, who, afterwards having a Design to make himself Sovereign of all Greece, and being being discovered in the Practice, fled for Sanctuary to the Temple of Pallas. From whence because it was counted Sacrilege to constrain him by Violence, it was unanimously resolved to wall up the Entrances, his own Mother laying the first Stone. It is recorded that before the fighting of this Battel, the Athenians had been told by the Oracle that they should be Conquerors, if they fought upon their own ground: whereupon the Placians, within whose Territories the Persians had prepared to fight, bestowed that Field on the State of Athens. In requital of which noble Act, Alexander the Great re-edified and enlarged their City, having been first burnt and sack'd by the Persians, and after levelled with the ground by the Lacedemonians, because confederate with Athens in the War against them. This Place is now totally desolate, and its Situation not certainly known. Wheler, p. 474. 3. Leuctra, remarkable for the great Overthrow which the Thebans, under the Conduct of Epaminondas, gave unto the Spartans and their King Clombrotus, who was there slain: by which Victory they did not only preserve their own Liberty, but brought their Enemies to that fall of Courage and Reputation, that they could never rise again: the Divine Vengeance overtaking them in that very place where some of their Nation had desloured the Daughters of Scedafus, who had given them courteous Entertainment. For which when no Reparation could be had from the State of Sparta, the unfortunate Damosels slew themselves, to avoid the Infamy of consenting to their own Dishonour, and were buried in those very Fields where this Battel was fought. 4. Ascræa, the Birth-place of Hesiod, a Man (according to Paterculus) elegantis ingenii, & carminum dulcedine memorabilis: though it hath pleased that proud Critick, Julius Scaliger, intending to deifie Virgil, to prefer the worst Verse in the Georgicks of the one before the whole Works of the other. 5. Labada, near the River Cephissus; the Inhabitants whereof were counted the most Superstitious of all the Grecians: memorable for the Trophonius Den or Cave, and the Oracle there given by Jupiter, hence called Trophonius: into which Cave none were admitted to enter and receive the Oracle, but after many Ointings, Washings, and the like Superstitious Preparations, too long and many to be specified in this place and time. A Town which still preserves so much of its ancient Estimation, that from hence (as I conjecture) the whole Country of Achaia hath the name of Livadia, by which the Turks call it at this present. It is situate about the Point of an Hill, on the top of which is an old Castle; it has five Mosques, and as many Churches; the Inhabitants a Gentile sort of Turks or Christians, and but few Jews. The Town is Rich and Populous, having a Manufacture of Woollen Stuffs. Wheler, p. 329. 6. Charonia, or Cheronia, the Birth-place of Plutarch; near unto which was fought that memorable Battel betwixt L. Sylla and the Romans against Archelaus, one of the Lieutenants of Mithridates King of Pontus, leading an Army of 120000 Soldiers, of which 10000 only escaped with Life, the Romans losing but 14. 7. Orchomenus, no less memorable for another Victory, obtained by the same L. Sylla against Dorilus, another of that King's Commanders, having an Army of 80000 Men, of which 20000 lost their Lives that Day. After which Victories, when Sylla might easily have destroyed that King, he suddenly patched a Peace up with him, that he might hasten unto Rome, where Marius and Cinna had trodden his Faction under foot; preferring by that act the pursuit of his own private Quarrels before that of his Country, endangered more by Mithridates after his return, than it had been formerly. 8. Aulis, a Port-Town on the Shores of the Aegean Sea, where the Grecians took shipping when they went to the War of Troy; here making Oath never to give over the Enterprize until they had destroyed that City. Concerning which thus she in Virgil.

Non ego cum Danais Trojanam caecidisse Gentem Aulide juravi.

That is to say,
I took no Oath at Aulis, to destroy,
As did the Greeks the Town and State of Troy.

But the chief of this Country, and such as had a special Influence over all the rest, was the City of Thebes, situate on the Banks of the River Cephissus, where it was built by Cadmus the Pharician, after all his wanderings. Famous in old times for the Wars between Etioles and Polynices, the Sons of the unfortunate Prince Oedipus, and of his Mother and Wife Jocasta. The History of which War is the most ancient piece of Story that we find of all Greece; the former Times and Writings containing nothing but Fables, little favouring of Humanity, and less of Truth; as of Men changed into Monsters, the Adulteries of the Gods, and the like. In this Town lived Pelopidas and Epaminondas, who so crushed the Lacedemonians at the Battels of Leuctra and Manitinea, that they could never after re-obtain their former Puissance. This Commonwealth long flourished, and at last, being over-burthened in the Phocian War, was glad to submit it self to the Protection of the Macedonians, under the leading of King Philip; who by this means first got footing in Greece, into which afterwards he thrust his whole Body. Upon the Death of Phillip, Thebes revolted from the Macedonians, but Alexander his Successor quickly recovered it: and to dishearten the Greeks in the like Attempts, he razed the City, selling all the Inhabitants of Age and Strength; only Pindarus's House he commanded to be left standing in honour of that learned Poet. At the Sack of this Town, one of the Macedonian Soldiers entred the House of a principal Woman, named Timoclea, ravished her, and rifled her Coffers, but still demanding more Treasure, she shewed him a deep Well, saying that there all her Money was hidden. The credulous Villain stooping down to behold his Prey, she tumbled him into the Well, and overwhelmed him with Stones. For which noble act, the generous Prince not only dismissed her unhurt, but most highly commended her. It was after re-edified by Cassander, and followed for the most part, as the rest of the Boeotians did, the Fortunes of Macedon. It is reduced at this time to the state of an ordinary Burrough, and called Sibes by the Turks.

4. PHOCIS is bounded on the East with Boeotia, on the West with Doris and Locris, on the North with the River Cephissus, and on the South with the Bay of Corinth. A Country somewhat twined with Mountains, but those of eminent note in the elder times. The chief whereof are, 1. Helicon, 2. Cithæon, both consecrated to the Muses, and both contending with Parnassus for height and bigness. 3. Parnassus, of so great an height, that in that great Deluge in which most of these Parts of Greece were over-whelmed with the Waters, Dencalion and Pyrrha saved themselves and many others on the Top hereof: for which, and for its two Summits reaching to the Clouds, it is of great Renown amongst the Poets; as in Ovid,

*Mons ibi verticibus petit arduus Astra duobus, Nomine Parnassus; superatque cummine Nubes.
Parnassus there with his two Tops extends
To the toucht Stars, and all the Clouds transcends.*

Places of most Observation in it are, 1. Anticyra, situate near the Sea, and famous for the Helleborum there growing, a Herb very medicinal for the Phrensie; whence the Proverb, Naviget Anticyram, applied to mad-men. 2. Pytho, or Pythia, said to be seated not only in the middle of Greece, but of all the World: Strabo relating how Jupiter, desirous to know the exact middle of the Earth, let loose two Eagles, one from the East, and the other from the West, which flying with an equal Wing (so we must conceive) and meeting at this very place, shewed it apparently to be the Navel of the World. By reason of which convenient situation in the Heart of Greece, it was made a Sessions-Town for all the Grecians, and honoured with the Court and General Assembly of the Amphictyones; Men chosen out of the prime Cities of Greece, who had power to decide all Controversies, and to make Laws for the common Good. A Court first instituted by Acrisius, as Strabo telleth us: or, as Halicarnassensis more probably, by Amphictyon the Son of Helles, from whom they seem to have their name. The Commissioners from the several Cities, with reference to the places for which they served, had the name of Ithylagora; when assembled, they were called the Amphictiones: their Meetings were at the beginning of the Spring and Autumn. Some Instances concerning their Authority will not be amiss. In the time of Cimon, the Cirrheans, having by Piracy wronged the Thessulians, were fined by this Council; and after that the Lacedaemonians, for surprising Cnidrea. And the Phocians, for Ploughing up the Land of Cirrah, which belonged to the Temple of Delphos, were by them amerced: And because they continued obstinate, and paid not their Amercements, their Dominions were adjudged to be confiscate unto that Temple. But they, disobeying this Decree also, spoiled the Temple it self: For which War being proclaimed against the by them rest of the Grecians, who by the Assistance of Phillip King of Macedon brought them to Obedience, the Council was again assembled; in which it was decreed that the Phocians should raze the Walls of their Cities, that they should pay the yearly Tribute of sixty Talents, that they should no more keep Horse and Arms, till they had satisfied the Treasury of the Temple, nor any longer have a Voice in those Conventions. It was also then enacted, that the lost Suffrages of the Phocians should be vested in King Phillip and his Successors, Kings of Macedon; on whom they also did confer the perpetual Presidentship, and made them Princes of that Senate. A Court to which the Sanhedrin of the Seventy Elders amongst the Jews, and, in our times, the Dyets of the Empire, and the Assemblies of the Switzers, carry most resemblance. The City of Delphos is now called Castris. The Temple of Apollo is not now to be found, but by conjecture. It consists of about Two hundred Houses, and those very ill built, twelve of which are inhabited by Tiibes, who have a Mosque: The Greeks have five or six Churches, and seem a good People, though miserably poor. Mr. Wheler, pag. 315. 3. Cirra, on the Sea-side, the Port-town to Delphos. 4. Crissu, so called from Crissus the Son of Phocus, and Grandchild of Aeneas, situate on the edge of the Bay of Corinth, called sometimes from hence Crissus Sinus. 5. Scarphia, memorable for the Defeat of Critolaus, Captain of the Achean Army, by Metellus one of the Roman Prætors: The loss of which Battel drew after it the Destruction of Corinth. It was observed in the success of this great Fight, that a Band of Arcadians, escaping out of the Battel, came unto, 6. Elatea, another City of this Province, and were there kindly entertained on memory of some former Alliances, till News came of the Overthrow of Critolaus; when they were ordered by the State of Phocis to relinquish the Town; (for Adversity seldom meeteth with returns of Friendship.) They were set upon and all slain by the Romans in the self-same place in which their Ancestors had unworthily forsaken the rest of the Grecians in their War against Phillip King of Macedon, for the publick Liberty. 7. Daulis, a City appertaining to Tereus King of Thrace, who, having married Progne, the Daughter of Pandion King of Athens, ravish'd her Sister Philomela, and cut out her Tongue, the better to keep his Villany undiscovered. But Progne being made acquainted with the double Injury, first made him ignorantly eat his own Son Itys, whom she had baked in a Pye; and after killed him with the help of her ravished Sister. 8. Delphos, renowned in old times for the famous Temple of Apollo, in which, with that of Jupiter Hammon in Marmarica, (now reckoned as a part of Egypt) were the most famous Oracles of the ancient Gentiles; dark Riddles of the Devil, couched and contrived with so much Cunning, that the meaning of them was most hidden, when it was thought most easie to be discerned. An Instance of which is that given to Cræsus, in the War by him projected against the Persians, which was thus delivered.

Cræsus Haly penetrans magnam subvertet opum vim.

When Cræsus over Halys goes,

A mighty Nation he o'erthrows.

Which he interpreting according to his own hopes, crossed the River, was vanquished by Cyrus King of Persia, and his Kingdom conquered. The like we find of Pyrrhus King of Epirus, who, before he made War against the Romans, consulted with the Oracle, and received this Answer;

Aio te, Atacida, Romanos vincere posse.

Which doubtful Prediction he thus construed, Te posse vincere Romanos, That he should overcome the Romans; but found it unto his cost that the meaning was, Romanos posse vincere te, That the Romans should overcome him: As indeed it happened. By another kind of the same Fallacy, which the Logicians call Amphibolia, did this great Enemy of Mankind overthrow another, who, demanding of the Oracle what Success he should have in an Expedition which he was in hand with, received his Answer in these words, Ibis redibis nunquam per bella peribis.

Which he thus pointing, Ibis, redibis, nunquam per, &c. engaged himself in the War, and was therein slain. Whereupon his Followers, canvassing the Oracle, found the meaning of it to be this, Ibis, redibis nunquam per, &c. The like Juggling he also used in those supernatural Dreams which Philosophers call δρυμνόμεψα. For Cæsar, dreaming that he carnally knew his own Mother the night before he passed over the Rubicon, became Lord of Rome, the common Mother of the Romans: And Hippias, the Son of Pisistratus the Tyrant of Athens, having upon the same projects the same Dream, was killed and buried in the Bowels of his Mother the Earth. So that had Cæsar miscarried in his Action, and Hippias thrived; yet still had the Devil been reputed his Craftsman, and the Father of Truths. But as the Ecclesiastical History telleth us, that Julian the Apostate, consulting with the Devil, was told that he could receive no Answer; because that the Body of Babylus the Martyr was entombed nigh his Altar: So neither could the Devils deceive the World, as formerly they had done, after Christ, the Truth it self, was manifested in the Flesh, and tormented these unclean Spirits, though, as they alledged, before their time Augustus, as Suidas telleth us, in whose time our Saviour was born, consulting with the Oracle about his Successor, received this not satisfying Answer:

Παῖς

Ἐβραῖος κλέψαι με, θεοῖς μακάροισιν ἀνάσσειν,

Τόνδε δέ μιν περιπατῶν, καὶ αἶδον αὐτοῖς ἐκείνους.

Λοιπὸν ἀπὸ τοῦ στήθους ἐκ βομῶν ἡμετέρας.

An Hebrew Child, whom the blest Gods adore,
Hath bid me leave these Shrines, and pack to Hell;
So that of Oracles I can no more.
In silence leave our Altar and farewell,

Whereupon Augustus, coming home, in the Capitol erected an Altar, and thereupon in Capital Letters caused this Inscription to be engraven, HÆC EST ARA PRIMOGENITI DEI. Now as the Devils had by Christ's Birth lost much of their wonted Virtue, so after after his Passion they lost it almost together. Concerning which Flutarch, in a Tract of his Morals called, Περὶ τῆς λαλοῦντων χρησμεύων, Why Oracles cease to give Answers, telleth us a notable Story, which was this. Some Company, going out of Greece into Italy, were about the Echinades be-calmed; when on a sudden there was heard a Voice loudly calling on one Thamus, an Egyptian then in the Ship. At the two first calls he made no answer, but to the third he replied, saying, Here I am. And the Voice again spake unto him, bidding him, when he came to the Palodes, to make it known that the great God Pan was dead. When they came unto the Palodes, which are certain Shelves and Rocks in the Ionian Sea, Thamus, standing on the Poop of the Ship, did as the Voice directed him: whereupon was heard a mighty noise of many together, who all seem'd to groan and lament with terrible and hideous shriekings, News hereof coming to Tiberius, he caused the Learned Men in his Empire to enquire out of their Books who that Pan should be; by whom it was answered, that he was the Son of Mercury and Penelope, with Ignorance enough, and little satisfaction to the business propounded to them. Such therefore as more narrowly observed the Circumstances of this Accident found it to happen at the time when our Saviour suffered on the Crois; who was indeed the true God Pan, the chief Shepherd and Bishop of our Souls, as the Scripture calleth him: And that, upon this divulging of his Death and Passion, the Devils, who used to speak in Oracles, did with great Grief and Lamentation forsake that Office, which had been so gainful to them in seducing Mankind. That all Oracles at that instance ceased, I dare not say; though it be certain that about that time they began to fail: It being said by Juvenal, who lived in the Reign of Domitian, Delphis Oracula cessant, that the Oracle of Delphos was then silent; the rest decaying sensibly in a short time after.

But to proceed. The Temple of Apollo being spoiled by the Phocians, as before was noted, caused the War betwixt them and the Thebans, called the Holy War: In which the Thebans, being likely to have the worst, sent for Philip of Macedon, who made an end of the Quarrel by subduing both. The Treasure which the Phocians found in the Temple was reckoned at Sixty Talents of Gold; but it proved Aurum Tolosanum, and brought a sudden Ruine on their State and Nation: Sacrilege being so unpardonable a Crime, even amongst the Heathen, that the fault of some few, countenanced by the rest of a People, hath brought Destruction on them all. It was afterwards with the like ill Fortune ransacked by Brennus and his Gauls, in the wain of the Macedonian Empire; all of them miserably perishing who had any hand in it. It is now a poor Village.

5. I. O C R I S is bounded on the East with Phocis and a Branch of the Aegean Sea, on the West with Aetolia, on the North with a long Ridge of Hills which part it from Theffaly, and on the South with parts of Achaia, Boeotia, Phocis, the Bay of Corinth, the Streights of Antirrhium, and a part of the Ionian Sea. So that for largeness of Extent, and the commodiousness of the Seas, it yieldeth to no Province in Achaia, though not so fruitful as some others. Divided into the three Nations, of the Locri Ozole, lying towards the South, on both sides of the Streights, so called from some ill Smells of the Country or People; 2. the Epimenidii, inhabiting the middle parts, so named from Mount Cnemis, not far from Parnassus: And, 3. the Opuntii, so called from Opus their chief City, lying on the North-side of the River Cephisus, on the Coasts of the Aegean or Euboean Seas.

Chief Cities of the whole, 1. Opus, the Head City of the Opuntians, situate on the River Asopus, being one of the main Branches of Cephisus. This Place is now called Thalanda, and is a Town that may contain Five or Six thousand Souls, Greeks, Jews and Turks, and is a Bishop's See under the Archbishop of Athens. It stands two Miles from the Sea over against a small Island called of old Atlantis, now nameless, as Mr. Wheler saith, pag. 494. 2. Cyane, the Port Town to Opus. 3. Tarantium, the prime Town of the Epimenidii, mentioned by Polybius, Livie, Ptolomy. 4. Cnemides, at the foot of Mount Cnemis, whence they had their name. 5. Amphissa, the chief City of the Ozole, situate in the inland parts of it. The People whereof, refusing to yield to the Sentence of the Amphictyons against their Confederates the Phocians, were the cause that Philip of Macedon returned into Greece. Against whom, grievously infesting the Boeotians, and manifestly aspiring to the Command of Greece, the Athenians desperately opposed, not so much with possibility of prevailing, as being urged on by the sharp and biting Orations of Demosthenes made against his Proceedings: Which being by him called Philippicks, occasioned Lully to call his bitter Invectives against M. Antonius by the same name also. But the Success hereof was such as commonly attendeth a broken Fortune: The Athenians being vanquished at Charonea, and Philip declared Captain of Greece against the Persians, obtained under that Title the Command he sought. This Place is now call'd Salona, and is still a Bishop's See under the Archbishop of Athens, others suppose it to be Lambino. The Turks have 7 Mosques, but no Jews are suffered, and the Christians are equal to the Turks in number. 6. Euantia, as Ptolomy, Ocanthia, as Pliny and Pausanias call it; opposite to Aegira in Achaia propria. 7. Molycria, by Ptolomy placed here, and by others reckoned in Aetolia; not far from whence is the Promontory of Antirrhium, so called because just opposite to that of Rhium in Achaia propria, between which runneth a narrow Streight (not so wide as the Hellespont) which openeth into the Bay of Corinth: each Promontory being for that cause Fortified by Bajazer the Second with a very strong Castle; that on this side being gallantly defended by the Turks, when besieged by Doria, Anno 1532; for being forced with great Slaughter into a strong Tower which commanded the Castle, they rather chose to blow it up, together with the Ammunition, Victuals, and themselves to boot, than that the Fort should come entire into the hands of the Enemy. Some place this Promontory in Aetolia also; but, following the Authority of Ptolomy, I have placed it here. The two opposite Ports are now called the Dardanelles of Lepanto, and were taken in the year 1687 by Morosini; that on the Morea side with some difficulty, the other without resistance. 8. Nampactus, so called from the building of Ships in re by the Port Side; situate on the Corinthian Bay, near the Mouth thereof. Given by the Citizens of Athens to the poor Messinians, when, after the end of the third War, the Lacedemonians, unwilling to have them troublesome Neighbours (and they seeming to be quiet Slaves) compelled them to seek new Habitations. It hath of late been called Lepanto, giving the name of the Gulf of Lepanto to the Bay of Corinth; by that name subject for a while to the Venetians, and from them taken by the Turks, Anno 1499. Of these Locrians those of Italy were a Branch or Colony, whose Law-giver was Zuleucus, spoken of elsewhere.

This Town (saith Mr. Wheler, p. 299.) is situate upon a very steep Hill, with a descent every way from the Top; but it is joined to a Mountain behind it by two other smaller Hills, which, ever since the invention of Gunpowder command it. In more ancient Times it gave great disquiet to the Romans, being then a Refuge to the rebellious Aetolians. It is built from the Sea shore up to the highest point of the Hill which is crowned with a Castle secured by four ranges of Walls one above another, which makes it at a distance resemble the Papal Crown. It has a small Oval Harbour too, which has two Towers on each side of the entrance for its defence, with some small Brats Guns, but the entrance is fleet and fit for nothing but Gallies; the Town is secured as well as the Harbour by a strong but ancient Wall.

The

The Inhabitants are mostly Turks and Jews, and very few Christians; In the year 1408, it was under the Greek Emperors, who consigned it to the Venetians who thus Fortified it, in the year 1475, it sustained a Siege of 4 Months, in which the Turks lost 30000 men to no purpose. In the year 1499, Bajazet the 2. durst not trust to an Army of 150000 Men to reduce it, but corrupted Hieronimo Trono the Venetian Government also. But in the year 1687, Morosini having beaten the Serasquier of the Morea, and taken the opposite Dardanel and Patras, and crossing over to Lepanto, he found the Turks emptying the Town for him, and took possession of it without one blow striking. This Town is called by the Greeks Epaetos, by the Turks Eimbachtli, and is the chief upon the Bay, and was formerly a Receptacle for Pirates, and of latter times a place of small Trade.

6. DORIS is bounded on the East with Phocis, on the West with Atolia, on the North with the Hill Oeta, and other Mountains which divide it from Thessaly, and on the South with Atolia and part of Locris. The Air hereof is very healthy, and the Soil sufficiently fruitful, if well manured: but now the greatest part lieth waste for want of Tillage. First peopled by the Doros or Dorienfes, descended from Dorus the Son of Helen, and Grandchild of Deucalion, by whom they were placed in Thessaly, afterwards spreading into this Country, which they left their name to, as their proper Dwelling: tho' many of them, following the Herulide into Peloponnesus possessed themselves of the greatest part of Laconia also; imprinting on the same their Dialect or form of Speech, from them called the Dorick.

Chief Cities hereof are, 1. Doris, so called in memory of Dorus, the first Progenitor of this People. 2. Erineus, seated at the Foot of Parnassus, mentioned by Thucydides, Strabo, Mela, Ptolemy, and the rest of the Ancients. 3. Bium, as Ptolemy; or Boion, as Strabo and Pliny call it. 4. Cytinum, near Parnassus also, in the common Impressions of Diodorus Siculus the Historian falsely called Cynthium. 5. Lila, situate not far from the Spring or Fountain of the River Cephissus; which, rising hereabouts, passeth through the whole length of Achaia, and falls into the Aegean or Euboean Sea.

7. ATOLIA hath on the East Locris, on the West Epirus, on the North Doris, on the South the Ionian Sea, said to be so called from Atolus, the Son of Mars, who, being by Salmonens call out of Elis, fixed himself in this Country.

Here is the Forest of Calydon, where Meleager and the Flower of the Greek Nobility slew the wild Boar. Here is the River Euenus, over which the Centaur Nessus having carried Dejanira, Wife of Hercules, and intending to have ravished her, was slain by an Arrow which Hercules on the other side of the River shot at him. Here also is the River of Achelous, of whom the Poets fable many things: as that being Rival with Hercules in the love of Dejanira, he encountred him in the shape of a Bull; and that when Hercules had pluck'd off one of his Horns, the Nymphs made of it their so much celebrated Cornucopia.

The people of this Country were the most turbulent and unruly people of all Greece, never at Peace with their neighbours, and seldom with themselves. The Macedonians could never tame them, by reason of the Cragginess of the Country: yet they brought them to such terms, that they were compelled to let the Romans into Greece, who quickly made an end of all.

Principal Towns hereof were, 1. Chalcis, situate near the Spring-head of Achelous before mentioned. 2. Arachthus, near the River so called; which, arising hereabouts, passeth into Epirus, and falleth into the Bay of Ambracia, not far from Nicopolis. 3. Olenus, not far from the Forest of Calydon. 4. Pleurone, giving name to the adjoining Country, called hence Pleuronia, the People whereof had the name of Curetes ἑὸν τὴν κούρεα, from their shaving, it being their custom to shave the fore-parts of their Heads, and let the Hair grow on the hinder parts only, ne Hostes eos caesarie apprehenderent, because their Enemies should not lay hold on them by their Fore-tops, and so pull them down. 5. Thermus the Parliament City, or place of general Assembly, for all the States of Atolia: which Meeting was called Panetolium. It was chosen for those Meetings in regard of the situation and strength thereof; as being situate well-near in the midst of the Country, environed with rocky Mountains, of steep and difficult ascent. For that cause it was made also the receptacle of their wealth and Treasure in all times of danger: but taken at the last by Phillip of Macedon, with all the Spoil in it, in his War against them. 6. Calydon, near the Forest so called, giving name unto it: the Royal Seat of Oeneus, Father of Meleager; divided into two parts by the River Euenus, which runneth through it, according unto that of Ovid.

Et Meleagræam maculatus sanguine Nessi Euenus Calydonæ Secat.

That is to say,

*Calydon, Miltager's Town, the Flood
Euen divides, defil'd with Nessus blood.*

Adjoining hereunto were the Athamans, whom Pliny makes a People of it, who gave name unto a little Province called Athamania; but such (as little as it was) as gave it the Title of a Kingdom to Antimander; a Prince whom the Atolians made special use of in their Wars against Philip King of Macedon, the Father of Persius, suggesting to him and his Children, that they were descended of the House of Alexander the Great, and so engaging them, in hope of that Kingdom, to hazard the quiet of their own. The places of most note are, 1. Diium, 2. Athaneum; both of them taken by Phillip in that War.

These, as they were the last Actors on the Stage of Achaia, so had they the most desperate part in all the Tragedy of that Country. The Affairs thereof, governed successively by that State which was most powerful, were for a long time managed by the Athenians; whose Councils and Conclusions went for Law amongst them. But that Estate being broken, it not supported by the Power of Sparta, the Thebans and Boeotians, who came next in play, had the chief Command; uniting almost all the rest in design with them against the Spartans, who now grew terrible to all. Becoming insolent by the course of two much Prosperity, and the many great Victories which they had against the Spartans, and thereupon quarrelling with the Phocians, they were the cause of Philip's coming into Greece; who, as he had learned amongst them the use of Arms, so made he use thereof at last, and of their Dissentions, to unite all the States of Greece under his Command; Thebes it self being taken and sacked by Alexander the Son of Philip, as before is said. The Macedonians thus prevailing, partly by Force, but especially by Art and Practice, there was no People in Achaia that durst oppose them; till these Atolians, a restless and impatient People, took the Cause in hand. Who thrived so well under Antigonus and Philip, two of the last Kings of Macedon, that they took from them many Towns, invaded Thessaly, attempted Macedon it self, and when they could not otherwise obtain their purpose in the Destruction of that Kingdom, opened a passage for the Romans to effect it for them. But finding no such favour at the Romans hands as they did expect, they began to murmur, and afterwards to excite Antiochus and the Greeks against them, drawing thereby those Forces against themselves which they had invited into Greece, and were the first People of all the Grecians that were conquered by them; though by the Mediation of the Rhodians and some other Friends, their Country was restored unto them, with the loss only of of Cephallenia, Zante, and some other Islands; which the Romans were resolv'd to keep as the fruits of the War. This was about the 564 year of the building of Rome, Fabius Nudius being then Consul, and chief Commander in this War. After which time the several Estates hereof enjoyed so much Liberty as the Romans their new Masters thought fit to give them: till they were finally made absolutely subject in the time of Cepseus, by whom Achaia was reduced into the form of a Province, Peloponnesus being reckoned as a part thereof. In the Division of the Empire by Constantine the Great, the West parts hereof being divided from the rest were called New Epirus; but both of them made Provinces of the Diocesis of Macedon, under the Præfatus Prætorio for Illyricum; the principal Officer of this part being called the Proconsul of Achaia: continuing under him and his Successors, Emperors of Constantinople, till the Destruction of that Empire by the power of the Turks; but so that it remained not always under the Command of one sole Officer, the Policy of that State being altered, and this Country parcelled out into many Governments, especially after the taking of Constantinople by the Latines, or Western Christians. At that time Theodorus Angelus, a noble Græcian, and one of the then Imperial Family, seized on Ætolia and Epirus; part of which last, and all the first, he left to Michael his Son, who held them, tho with some dispute betwixt him and Michael Palæologus, the first Emperor of Constantinople after the Expulsion of the Latines. Charles, the last Prince of that Family dying without Issue about the year 1430, bequeathed Ætolia to another Charles, the Son of his Brother; and Arctania (being that part of Epirus which the Princes of Ætolia held) to his base Sons, Atemon, Turnus, and Hercules. But many Quarrels happening upon this Division, Amurath the second having then newly conquered Thessalonica, composed the Differences by taking all unto himself, Anno 1432. There were at that time other Princes of the like Authority, as of Athens, Phocis, and Bæotia; but the first the chiefest, as honoured not only with the Title of Dukes of Athens, but of Princes of Achaia also; such being the Fortune of that City, as to have the first and last great Sway in the affairs of Achaia. For at the Translation of the Empire upon the Latines, Godfrey of Troyes, a French-man, was made Duke of Athens and Prince of Achaia, of whom Paulus Æmilius speaketh, Anno 1220: which Honour afterwards was conferred on Walter de Bren, a Kinsman of John de Bren, the last King of Jerusalem, a Protector of Baldwin the second, the last Emperor of the Latines, mentioned by the said Æmilius, Anno 1288. And though on the Defeat and Death of this Walter by the Catalanians, then ransacking those parts of Greece, the Title of Duke of Athens was assumed by Frederick-Alphonso, the Son of Frederick King of Sicily, and by other Princes of that House: yet upon better ground, by the Heir general of this Walter it was conveyed in Marriage to Isaulus di Acio, a Nobleman of the Realm of Naples: whose Son Walter (commonly called the Duke of Athens) for a time obtained the Sovereignty of the State of Florence, Anno 1342. but lost it suddenly again by his too much Cruelty. Francis de Acciavol, the last Prince of this House, having been brought up in the Court of Mahomet the Great, as one of his Favorites, surrendered his Estate herein, at the perswasion of that Tyrant, in change for the Country of Bæotia and the Dukedom of Thebes: which he had sooner had received, but he was sent by Mahomet to Zogannus his Lieutenant in Morea, by whom at first he was courteously received, at last cruelly murdered. And so the whole Country of Achaia fell into the possession of the Turks, Anno 1454, or thereabouts.

EPIRUS.

EPIRUS is bounded on the East with Ætolia, on the West with the Albanick, on the North with Thessaly, Macedon, and some part of Libania; and on the South with the Ionian Seas. So called from the Solitary and Firmness of it, the word Epeiros in the Greek Tongue signifying as much as Terre ferme, on the firm land. But by the Turks at this day it is called Albania, when as they give to all the Land and Countries in its possession lying upon the Albanick and Ionian Seas.

In this Country was born Olympias, Mother of Alexander the Great; and Pyrhus, who conquered the Realm of Macedon, and was the first Foreigner who made trial (though to his own Loss) of the Power and Puissance of Rome; accounted by Thucydides, next to Alexander, the second great Soldier of the world. Here is also Mount Pindus, sacred to Apollon and the Artes, dividing this Country from Thessaly, and therefore common unto both: as also the Acroceraunian Hills, so called, because they are so much subject unto Thundering and Lightning, eminent for their height, and much feared by Mariners, who, when they see a little Cloud rising on the top hereof, are sure of a Tempest. Finally, here are the famous Rivers Acheron and Cocytus, which, for their black waters and unfavoury taste, are said to be the Rivers of Hell: from which last the Sacrifices and Solemnities made in honour of Proserpine whom Pluto ravished and brought hither, had the name of Cocytia. Whence, by a Metonymie, these Rivers are taken sometime for Hell it self; as in that of the Poet, Flectere si nequeo Superos, Acheronta movebo.

Since those in Heaven I cannot move,
The Powers of Hell I mean to prove.

The Soil hereof is very barren, and in many places full of Forests and thin of people: but towards the Sea reasonably fruitful: plentiful of Oxen, Dogs, and Sheep of more than ordinary bigness, and yielding the best breed of Horses. The people speak a distinct Language from the Græcians, though of the Greek Tongue not utterly ignorant: and by reason of the Barrenness of their own Country, become great Wanderers, especially in Summer-time, when they travel into Thrace, Macedon, and Asia-Minor, hiring themselves to work in Harvest under the Turks, as also to Thresh, Winnow, and make clean their Corn; and in the Winter-time return to their Wives and Children. They are able of body, swift of foot, apt to undergo any Toil and Labour; having withal good Courages and high Projections: which makes such of them as delight not in works of Drudgery to look for action in the Wars, and otherwise to rob and spoil the neighbouring Mountains of Albania. Till their Subjection to the Turks, they were much used both by the Kings of Hungary and the State of Venice in their several Wars, serving on Horse or Foot, as occasion was: as Mercenary as the Switzers in the Western parts, but not so faithful to the party entertaining them.

Anciently it was divided into Chaonia, (which was the proper Epirus) lying on the West, and Acarnania, bordering on Ætolia, from which it is parted by the River Achelous: the middle parts hereof being Amphilochia, Thesprotia, and Almene: all very populous in former times, and so continued till Paulus Æmilius, on the Conquest of Macedon, overthrew seventy of their Cities. Few of which being since re-edified, and the Country for a long time languishing under the Turks, here are not any very fair Towns or well-peopled Cities at the present to be spoken of; and therefore we must look on such as flourished in the times fore-going. The principal whereof were, 1. Dodona, one of the Cities of Chaonia, of Chaonia, memorable for the Temple and Oracle of Jupiter, hence called Dodoneus; situate in a fair Grove, the Trees whereof are said to be Vocal, and to give the Oracle: though others say, it was delivered first by a pair of Pigeons, whereof the one afterwards fled to Delphos, the other to the Temple of Jupiter Hammon in Aegypt. It was the ancientest Oracle of all Greece, and so perhaps was the Town the ancientest Town also. Said to be first built by Dodon, the Son of Jupiter and Europa: more probably so called from Dodanim, the Son of Javan, and Grand-child of Japhet, who first inhabited this Region; the whole Country (Greece I mean) being called Javan from the Father, (by which name commonly it occurreth in the Hebrew Text) this Town Dodona from the Son. 2. Cassope, a Port-Town, with a fair Promontory of the same name adjoining to it. 3. Onchesimus, by Strabo called Onchimus, and by Pliny Echinus, a Port-Town also, now called Santi Quaranta. 4. Panormus, on the Sea-side also, retaining still the old name, and but little else. 5. Antigonis, more within the Land, founded or repaired by Antigonus, a King of Macedon, now called Argiro Castro, as Niger thinketh. 6. Phenice, once the chief Town hereof; which being sacked by the Illirians, under Tenta their Queen, gave the Romans an occasion of Quarrel with them, upon Complaint made to them by the Epirots. 7. Pelodes, a Port-Town, the Principal in that part which was called Thresprotia; as 8. Tarono, on the River Thyamis. and 9. Sybota, an ancient Haven-Town, (now called Syoita) was in that part whereof which was called Almene. 10. Argos, the chief City of the Amphilochians. This part hereof was first named Molossia, from Molossus the Son of Pyrrhus, and Andromache, remarkable for the best breed of Matives, hence called Molossi; and afterwards Chaolia, by Helenus the Son of Priamus, whom Pyrrhus the Son of Achilles settled in this Country: who having unfortunately slain his Brother Chaon, caused it in memory of him to be called Chaonia; Chaoniam que omnem Trojana a Chaone dixit, as it is in Virgil. Of these Molossians, Pluto, the third Son of Saturn, was sometimes King, called, from the flat and hollow situation of this Country, consisting much of deep Valleys, the King of Hell.

Towns of special note in Acarmania were, 1. Anastorium, on the Bay of Ambracia, now called Vanizza. 2. Ambracia, the Regal Seat or Court of Pyrrhus, giving name unto a fair and capacious Bay, now called Golfo di Larta, from Larta an adjoining Town, situate in or near the place where Ambracia stood. Mr. Wheeler assures us, Ambracia is now called Ambrakia, and is a small Village, about a days Journey from Larta, at the bottom of that Bay from whence it stands 16 miles to the East. It was once subject unto Periander, King or Tyrant of Corinth, who being slain by a Woman named Leonna, whom he kept as his Concubine, occasioned the Inhabitants from that time forwards, in memory of their Deliverance, to worship a Lion. Afterwards being taken from the Children of Pyrrhus by the Macedonians, and from them won by the Aetolians in the time of their greatness, it was besieged by Fulvius, a Roman Consul spoken of before. Who seeing that he could not force it, was willing, at the Mediation of the Athenians, Rhodiens, and other Friends of both parties to conclude a Peace: but so that he despoiled this City at his going hence of much excellent Imagery, carrying away with him unto Rome the Pictures of the nine Muses most admirably well done by the hand of Zeuxis, the rarest Painter of his times. 3. Buthrotum, a Roman Colony, by Pliny called Colonia simply; now a small Village called Butrinto. 4. Leucas, situate on the point of a Promontory of the same name also, anciently memorable for the Temple of Apollo. But leaping into the Sea from the top of this Promontory, such as unfortunately loved were cured of that malady: the first trial of that kind being made by Sappho that famous Poetress. At that time it was joined unto the Land; but since by the violence of the Sea or the hand of man, it is made into an Island; according unto that of Ovid,

Leucada continnam veteres habuere Colini, Nunc Freta circumcunt

That is to say,
Leucas, in former times joyn'd to the Land,
Environ'd round with Waters now doth stand.

It was called Leucas, from the Whiteness of the Rock or Promontory, having before the Separation or disjunction of it been called Nervos; the chief Town of it varying with the name of the Isle and Promontory. Both Town and Island at this time is called S. Mauro, taken by Bajazet the II. from the State of Venice, and by him given unto the Jews, (who do still inhabit it) at their expulsion out of Spain. Santo Mauro stands three miles from Leucadia, as Mr. Wheeler acquaints us: It has a good Fortress situate on a low Ground, with some round Bastions. The Inhabitants of it are Pirates, and for that cause are hated both by the Turks and Christians the former burning their Ships to prevent their depredations. It hath about 5 or 6 Thousand Inhabitants. The Venetian Fleet Rendevouzed near this Island in the year 1687, when it went for the Morea. Coronelli having described the Situation of this Important Fort, saith, in the year 1479, it was taken by the Turks from some Greeks, who till then enjoyed it. In 1502, the Venetians took it from the Turks, but at the Peace restored it to Sultan Bajazet. But the 24th of July 1684, Morosini retook it, and they have since very much improved its Fortifications. 5. Nicopolis, a Colony of the Romans, of great Wealth and Beauty in the time of St. Paul, who from hence dated his Epistle to Titus: called in that Proscript Nicopolis of Macedonia, because Epirus at that time was part of the Province of Macedon, though afterwards a distinct Province of it self. It was first built by Augustus Caesar on a Promontory opposite unto Actium, on the other side of the Bay: that being the place where his Land Soldiers were incamped before the Naval Battle betwixt him and Mark Anthony, and was thus called either in memory of his Victory, or from a poor man and his Ass whom he met here the day before. For asking the man his name, he told him that his name was Eutyches, i. e. Fortunate, and that the name of his Ass was Nicon, i. e. Conqueror; which happy Omen made his Soldiers couragious and hopeful of Victory: and he in memory thereof erected here two brazen Images, the one of the Ass, the other of his Master. It is now a small Village called Prevesa. 6. Actium, on the Sea-shore, nigh unto which Augustus and Anthony fought for the Empire of the World. The Navy of the latter consisted of 500 Galleys; the former had 250 only, but those crowned with Victory; Antonius shamefully deserting his Soldiers to follow after Cleopatra, who on the very first Charge fled away for Egypt. The Town being now ruined, the Promontory upon which it stood is called Caba di Figalo. Mr. Wheeler gives us an account of these Towns about this Bay, Anta which has 6 or 7000 Inhabitants most Greeks, and is an Archbishop's See, which was removed hither from Lepanto, under him are 2. Ragous, a little Town 10 miles from Prevenza, 3. Ventza, a Town and Castle on the other side of the Bay, 4. Astos, an Island Town. 5. Acheloon. 6. Javina, a Town bigger then Anta, peopled by Rich Greek Merchants, and an Archbishops See too, under which are 7. Argyro Castro. 8. Burrinto, and 9. Glykeon. Thus far Mr. Wheeler, p. 38.

The Country was first peopled by Dodanim the Son of Javin, or at least by some of his Posterity coming hither from the Isle of Rhodes; whose Memory was preserved a long time in the Town of Dodona, by him, or from him, so denominated. Afterwards being parted into into the same, and the Nations united in the common Interest, became a great and powerful Kingdom; given to a Race of Kings descending from Pyrrhus the Son of Achilles, and continuing till the time of Pyrrhus Ezechides. A man of such Courage and Magnanimity, that he did not only recover his own Kingdom, of which Cassander, had deprived his Father, but got the Kingdom of Macedon from Cassander's Children; outed of which, he tried his Fortune with the Romans, Anno Mundi 3683, U. C. 471. After his death this Kingdom was shrewdly shaken by the Macedonians, and shortly after subdued by Paulus Aemilius, who, as we now said, destroyed 70 Cities hereof in one day. For desirous to satisfy his Soldiers after his Victory in Macedon, he sent unto the Epirots for ten of the principal men of every City. These he commanded to deliver up all the Gold and Silver which they had, and to that end, as he gave out, he sent certain Companies of Soldiers along with them; unto whom he gave Secret Instructions, that on a day by him appointed they should fall to sack every one the Town whereunto they were sent. A barbarous and bloody Decree, 70 Cities confederate with the Romans ruined in one day, and no fewer than 150000 Epirots made and sold for Slaves. But the chief motive which induced him to so great a Cruelty was, by dispeopling this Country, lying with a long and fair Sea-coast over against Italy, to give the Romans opportunity to land their Armies without any Resistance for the farther Progress of their Forces into Macedon, Thrace, Mesia, or where else they pleased. Which ungodly Policy was afterwards imitated by William the Conqueror, who laid waste all that part of Hampshire, since called New Forest, and therein Thirty Six Parish Churches, that he might have a safe Landing-place for his Norman Forces, if the English should at any time endeavour to make head against him. Being made subject to the Romans, it was a while part of the Province of Macedonia; but afterwards, when Macedonia was made a Diocesis, it became a distinct Province of it self, called by the name of Old Epirus, to difference it from the Province of New Epirus, which lay Eastwards of it. At the Division of the Empire it belonged to the Constantinopolitans, and so continued till the taking of Constantinople by the Western Christians: at what time Theodorus Angelus, a Prince of the Imperial Family, seized on Aetolia and Epirus, as before was said, and sped so well in his Designs, that he took the strong City of Durazzo from the State of Venice, (to whom it fell in the division of that Spoil) and cunningly (if not Treacherously) intercepted Peter the third Emperor of the Latins, whom, as some say, he caused to be Murdered at a Banquet. After his death, his whole Estate being divided into two parts, Aetolia with that part hereof which is called Chaonia, continued in his House till the time of Charles Prince of Aetolia and Epirus spoken of before, after whose death it was subdued by Amurath the Second, as before was said. The residue hereof, together with that part of Macedon which is called Albania, fell to the Family of the Castriots: the last of which, named John, (the Father of Scanderbeg) seeing himself unable to resist that Tyrant, who had already swallowed up all his Neighbour-princes, submitted his Estate unto him, and gave unto him all his Sons for Hostages. No sooner was the old Prince dead, but Amurath seized on his Estate, murdered his three Eldest Sons, and caused George, the youngest to be train'd up in the Law of Mahomet: who afterwards, escaping out of his Power and recovering all his Fathers Countries, assumed also the Style or Title of Prince of Epirus. After whose death, his Children, not being able to make good their Game, lost it to Mahomet the Great; as shall be shewn more fully in the Story and Description of Albania, which is next to follow.

4. ALBANIA.

ALBANIA is bounded on the East with Macedonia, on the West with the Adriatick, on the North with Sclavonia, on the South with Epirus. The Country is mountainous and barren; watered with few Rivers, and those of no great note amongst the Ancients; as 1. Laus, 2. Aspis, 2. Panyasus, 4. Celydnus: all of them falling into the Adriatick.

It took this name from the Albani, once the Inhabitants of this Tract, from whom the chief City hereof was called Albanapolis. Other Towns of most consideration are, 1. Sfetigrade, or Vestigard, (called by some the Holy City) situate in the Borders of Epirus, on the top of an Hill, where it is fenced about like an Eagle's Nest; one of the last Towns in all this Country which was taken by Scanderbeg at his recovery of his Birthright and Estate herein; but being once taken by him, held good courageously against the Turk, the Soldiers neither fainting in their Oppositions, nor corrupted by Money, till at the last subdued by a Superstition. There was in the Town one onely Well, into which a Treacherous Christian cast a dead Dog: at the sight of which being the next day drawn up, the Soldiers gave up the Town; being so unreasonably superstitious, that no perswasion, nor the example of the Captain or Burgo-Masters, could make them drink those (as they thought) defiled waters. 3. Durazzo, a Town of great strength, first called Epidamnium, and afterwards Dyrrhacium. Under the Walls of which Town was the first bickering between the Soldiers of Cesar and Pompey, not only to the present Loss, but also the utter Discomfiture of Cesar, as he himself confessed, if the Enemies Captain had known how to have overcome. I must not omit the Valour of Scava at this Siege, who alone so long resisted Pompey's Army, that he had 220 Darts sticking in his Shield, and lost one of his Eyes; and yet gave not over till Cesar came to his Rescue.

Parque novum Fortuna videt concurrere, Bellum, Atque Virum---donsamque ferens in Pectore Sylvam.

Fortune beholds an unaccustom'd fight,
An Army and a man together fight,
Whose breast a Wood of Arrows covered quite.

In the Division of the Eastern Empire amongst the Latines it fell into the power of Venice; taken at last after a long and tedious Siege, by Amurath the second, Anno 1502. The Venetians took and burnt this City in the year 1654, but the Turks soon after recovered it. Mr. Wheeler saith, it is now nothing but a Ruin'd Village, with a neglected Fort. p. 28. 4. Dibra, in the Hill-Countries near Epirus; the first Town which submitted to the Valiant Scanderbeg at his revolting from the Turks; supposed to be the Deborus of Ptolemy. 5. Croia, conceived to be the Epicaria of Ptolemy, the chief Town of all this Country seated amongst inaccessible Mountains, and made impregnable by Art: not got by Scanderbeg, but by a Wife; who, having got into his power, the Secretary of the principal Bassa, forced him to write Letters in his Master's name unto the Governour hereof, to deliver it unto him; which was done accordingly in 1434. Afterwards it was in vain besieged by Amurath the second, who under the Walls hereof gave up his wretched Soul to the Devil in the year 1449; and thrice besieged by Mahomet his Son and Successor, before he could again possess it, but taken at the last after Scanderbeg's death, as if the Gemius or Tutelar Deity of the place had departed with him in the year 1468. 6. Petrella, a Town of great Strength, seated on the top of an Hill (as almost all the Towns of Albania are) about 25 miles from Croia delivered unto Scanderbeg at his first sitting down before it: as also was 7. Petra Alba, three miles from Petrella, near the Borders ders of Macedon, and situate like the other on the top of a Mountain, the River Emathus running under the bottom of it. 8. Stellusa, fifty miles from Croia, built on the top of an high Hill in the middle of a pleasant and fruitful Valley, with great and spacious Plains about it. 9. Dagna or Dayna, a place of great importance in the Hill Country towards Sclavonia; for the possession whereof rose a War betwixt Scanderbeg and the State of Venice, but the Venetians being worsted at the Battle of Drino, relinquished their Pretensions to it. 10. Aulon a Port Town, now called Valona, situate over against Hydruntum or Otranto in Italy, distant from it about 60 miles. The Town is unwall'd but fortified with a very strong Castle; a Town unfortunately fit for the Invasion of Italy, and was accordingly made use of by Achmetes the chief Bass under Mahomet the Great; who from hence pass'd his Army over into Apulia, took the Town of Otranto, and had not the death of Mahomet, and the Combustions, thereon following amongst the Turks, altered the design, might have opened them a very fair way for the adding of Rome unto Constantinople. This Place was at first a Bishops See under the Archbishop of Athens, afterwards under Durazzo, and is now an Archbishop's See, and the Seat of the Turkish Governour. It is strong, and has a good Haven secured by two Castles, yet it could not secure the Algerine Pirates from the Venetian Fleet, who some few years since burnt them in this Port. 11. Appollonia, a Town of great Note in the time of the Romans; a Sea-Town, furnished with a commodious Haven, which they held as their Entrance into Greece; to that purpose serving them as commodiously as Calais did the English in their Wars with France. It is now called Pollona by the Turks, and reduced to a poor Village of a few Houses.

This Country anciently was a part of Macedon, inhabited by the Talautii, Æstrai and Albania, from which last (but not till these latter times) it had the name of Albania: but whether these Albani were a Colony of the Albanians of Asia, (though it be very probable) I determine not. When it was made a Province of the Empire it contained all Prævalitana and some part of Macedonia Salutaris; being under the Diocess of Dacia in the time of Justinian, but at first of Macedon. Dis-membred from the main Body of it when the Latines had subdued Constantinople, it fell unto the noble Family of the Castriots; who though they took unto themselves the Title of Kings or Princes of Epirus, (most of which they held) as the Country of more Note and Eminence, yet was Albania the greatest Strength, and Croia the chief City thereof, the Seat of their Residence; they being called in that respect by some Writers the Kings of Albania. John Castriot, the Father of Scanderbeg, seeing himself unable to resist the Turks, became their Homager, and delivered four Sons for Hostages; whom Amurath the second in their Father's lifetime caused to be circumcised, and turn Mahometans: and after his decease murdered the three eldest, and seized upon Croia the chief City with the rest of the Country. But George the youngest of those Sons, being reserved for better Fortunes, was carefully brought up by Amurath, who somewhat passionately affected him, in the Stratagems of War; though some of his Courtiers then told him that he nourished a Serpent in his Bosom, which would one day sting him. Amurath, to make Trial of his Disposition, offered him on a time the Crown of Albania: to which he prudently replied, that he preferred the honour of his Service before all the Kingdoms of the World; and that he held his hand fitter for a Sword, then his Head for a Crown. Satisfied with which answer the Tyrant preferred him to the place of a Sanzack or Provincial Governour, and gave him some Office of Command in all those Armies which he set out against the Christians. Escaping out of the Battle wherein Caramen, the great Bass, was overthrown and taken Prisoner by Huniades, he got the Town of Croia by a piece of wit, as before was said; and in a very short time after made himself Master of Petrella, Petra, Alba, Stellusa, and all the rest of the Countrey, by the Reputation and Terror of his first Success. Having recovered his Inheritance out of the hands of the Turks, he reconciled himself to the Church of Christ, styling himself the Soldier of Christ Jesus from that time forwards. Invaded by a vast Army of Turks, he overcometh Aly Bassa, and kills 20000 of his men. With no more than 20 Horse and 50 Foot he assaulteth Mustapha in his Camp; in which 5000 Turks were slain, and 300 taken. With whom encountering not long after in the open Field, he slew 10000 of his men, took many Prisoners, and Mustapha himself amongst the rest, whom he ransomed for 25000 Ducats. Falling upon the Host of Amurath, then besieging Croia, he killed Feris Bassa hand to hand in a single Combat: and in the time of Mahomet, who succeeded Amurath, vanquished Isaac the great Bass, routed his whole Army, had the Spoil of his Camp, took 20 of his fairest Ensigns, and slew 30000 of his Soldiers. Not to instance in the rest of his noble Actions, it is reported that in the course of his War against the Turks, he killed no fewer than 3000 of them with his own hands; using a Turkish Scimitar in all his Fights, of great weight and bigness. Which when Mahomet on a Peace between them had desired to see, and afterwards returning again with this Censure of it, that he saw nothing in it more than ordinary: the gallant Prince sent back this answer, that the Virtue of the Weapon depended on the Strength of his Arm, which he could not send him, for that he did reserve it for the death of his Enemies. Finally, having held his Cards against Amurath and Mahomet, two most fortunate Gamesters, for the space of 24 years, he set up his Rest at last a Winner; dying in peace at Lissa, then belonging to the State of Venice, Jan. 17. Anno 1466, and was there honourably interred. At the taking of which Town by the Turks about nine years after, his Body was digged up by them, not in spight, but honour; that man accounting himself happy who could get any of his Bones to preserve as a Relick, supposing that as long as he had it about him he should be invincible. But with him died the Liberty of his Country also, not long after subdued by the Turks, and made a Province of that Empire, as it still continueth: the name of Albania being by them extended over all Epirus, and so much of Dalmatia also as is under their power.

The Arms of this Kingdom (or rather of the Kings thereof were Gules, an Eagle Sables.)

The History of the Family of the CASTRIOTS from Du Fresne.

There is no Man, how moderately so ever acquainted with the Stories of the latter Ages, but knows the great Lustre given to the Family of the Castriots by that Great Alexander or Scanderbeg, who was scarce inferior in Military Glory and Conquests to the Macedonian. Those however, who have endeavoured to find out his Pedigree from its Original; though he is confess'd to have been Born of one of the most illustrious Houses of Albania, have yet not been able to deduce his Linage without a mixture of Fables, because they had no certain and undoubted Monuments of Antiquity to direct them in their Inquiry, they perishing either by the negligence of the Albanians, or the calamities of their Wars. However that nothing might be omitted in this obscure affair, I shall here give the World his Descent from such Authors as have undertaken to Deduce it, though it is not always founded on undoubted Authorities.

1. Constantin Castriot, surnamed Meserech, Prince or Lord of Æmathia and Castriot is mentioned by Flavius Comnenus, who saith he died in the year MCCCXC. He left

2. George

2. George Castriot his Son, mentioned also by Flavius, and styled Prince of Amathia, Menestria and Castoria.

3. John Castriot Son of George, and Lord of the same Towns, and of Croia, as Peter Luccarius saith, who adds, That the Family of the Castriots, had their name from a Town so called in the Territory of Asen, or upon the River Drin. This John is celebrated in the Historians of that Age for the greatness of his Mind and his Military Knowledge, which enabled him a long time to sustain the furious Attacks of Sultan Amurath, who, yet at last by his numbers overpowered him, and forced him to give his four Sons as Hostages. His Lady was Voissava, the Daughter of Pologus, a Lord of a Country so called in the Borders of Macedonia and Bulgaria. By her he had Nine Children, four Sons and five Daughters.

1. Reposius, called Ameslan Beg, imployed by Amurath against his Nephew Scanderbeg, on the score of his great skill in Military affairs. 2. Stanisse. 3. Constantine, and 4. George, called after Scanderbeg. His Daughters were Falla or Angela, the Mother of Goicus and George Strefs. 2. Angelina, married to Vlademus Golam, Brother of Arian Comnenus. 2. Vlaika, the Wife of John Musak. 3. Mara Married to Stephen Cernovich. 4. Mamizora, Married to Musaco Topia, by her Brother Scanderbeg, who was slain in a Battle against the Turks.

4. George Castriot or Scanderbeg, as he was called by Sultan Amurath, when he was Circumcised by his order. The greatness of this Princes mind, and the Military and his Civil Prudence, together with his other rare Virtues and endowments elevated him to the Dignity of a Throne, and he was always called King of Albania and Epirus. He not only defended his Kingdom against the Turks, but very often overthrew their numerous Armies. He died in the year 1463, or as Barlet saith, the 17th of January 1467, being then 63 years old. He Married Donica or Andronia the Daughter of Arian Comnenus, Lord of Buarese and Terra-Nova in Albania; and by her amongst other Children, he had John Castriot, Duke of St. Peter's in Galatina, and Voissava, Wife of Stephen Naramont, Duke of Mons-Niger.

5. John Castriot his Son, seeing Albania and Epirus, after his Fathers Death wholly Conquered by the Turks, went to Ferdinand King of Naples, and from him obtained the Dukedom of St. Peters. He Married Ircnes the Daughter of Lazarus Brancovitz Despot of Servia; by her he had Ferdinand Duke of St. Peters. 2. George Castriot surnamed Scanderbeg, who died in the year 1540. And was the Father of Ferdinand Castriot. 3. Constantin Castriot Bishop of Essernia. He had also a Daughter called Mary, who died in 1540.

6. Ferdinand Castriot Duke of St. Peters, Married a Daughter of Boniface de Aqua Viva, Duke of Nardona, and by her had Achilles, Frederick Alphonsus, Paul, John and Ferdinand, who all died without any Issue. He had also a Daughter named Ircnes Castriot, which carried the Dutchy of St. Peters into the Family of St. Severina, by Marrying Petro Antonio, Prince of Bisigniano, who had Berardino a Son dead without Issue, and Victoria a Daughter Married to Ferdinando di Capua, Duke of Termini.

From this Family are also derived the Dukes of Ferrandina in the Kingdom of Naples. Three of which are named in the Histories of that Kingdom, John Castriot Duke of Fertrandino, Alphonso Marquis of Atripalda, and Ferdinando Marquis of St. Angelo.

John Castriot the first Duke of Ferrandina, Married first Joanna the Daughter of Honoratus Cajetan, Duke of Trajerio, and Count of Fondi, by whom he had but Mary the Heiress of the Dutchy of Ferrandina, and of the Earldoms of Galatolia, Veglia Covertina, and Leverani.

Alphonso Marquis of Atripalda, Married Camila di Cosaja, and had by her Anony and John.

Ferdinando Castriot Marquis of St. Angelo, Married Camila Capuana. They had Issue, Joanna and Hippolita. Joanna Married.

Antonio Castriot, Duke of Ferrandina, he was slain in a Quarrel at Venice, and neither he nor his Lady had any Issue.

Hippolita Castriot, Wife of Hector Montaquila. Joannella Castriot, Wife of Octavio Capaci, a Neapolitan Noble-man.

Roetus Pirrus, mentions Bernard Castriot, Count of Galatina and Capertina, the Father of John Bishop of Mazara in Sicily, about the year 1485. There have been some of this Line also in the Nobility of Venice.

5. MACEDONIA.

MACEDONIA is bounded on the East with the Aegean Sea, on the West with Albania, on the North with Mæsia Superior and a part of Thrace, and on the South with Epirus and Achaia.

It was first called Amonia, from Mount Hemus, which shutteth up that side hereof which is towards Mæsia; after Amathia, or Emathia, from a King of it called Amathus; Macedonia, from Macedo, the Son of Deucalion, and the Father of Caranus, the first King of the Line of Alexander; and finally Kittim, or the Land of Kethim, whereof see 1. Maccab. 1. 1. and 8. 5. from Kittim the Son of Javan, and Grandchild of Japhet; who was planted here. Anciently it was of more large extent than it is at the present, extending from the Aegean Sea unto the Adriatick, till the taking of Albania out of it, which hath streightned it upon that side, but the rest is as formerly.

The Country taking it together; is very fruitful and pleasant, tho' on the outward parts thereof begirt with rough Mountains and thick Forrests: in former times much celebrated for its Mines of Gold and Silver, which are long since exhausted. It contained formerly the Provinces of Amathia, Pieria, Pelasgia, Istiaotis, Phthiotis, Thessaly, Mygdonia, Amphaxitis, Paraxia, Edonis, and many others of less note, inhabited by 152 several Nations: now principally divided (besides Albania) into 1. Thessaly, 2. Macedon specially so called, and 3. Mygdonia, which the Turks called Jamboli.

1. THESSALY hath on the East the Aegean Sea, on the West Albania, on the North Macedon and Mygdonia, on the South Achaia. A sweet and delectable Country it is, the Pleasures and Delights whereof inclined the People to be very effeminate and dissolute in their course of Life, made them in love with Luxury and Ease, and much like the Persians in Behaviour, whose Entrance into Greece they did therefore favour. Yet notwithstanding this Debauchedness, they were esteemed the best Horsemen of all the Grecians; by their excellent managing of which creature, (as if they had been one piece with it, and either lent the Horse their Minds, or borrowed his Body) they gave occasion unto the Fiction of the *Centaur*s, half Men, half Beasts.

It is now called Comenolitari, and of old was very famous for many things, especially 1. for the Hill Olympus of so great height, that it seemeth to transcend the Clouds, and is therefore frequently by the Poets used for Heaven it self. 2. For the Hill Othrys, inhabited by the Lapithe, over whom Pirithous was King. 3. for the Mountains of Pelion and Ossa, the Dwelling-places of the *Centaur*s, who intending to ravish Hippodamia, the new Bride of Pirithous, on her Wedding-day, were slain by Hercules and the Lapithe. 4. For the delectable Valley of Tempe, situate betwixt Ossa and Olympus, extending in length six miles, and five in breadth; so beautified with Natures Gifts, that it was supposed to be the Garden of the Muses. 5. and lastly; For the Dolopes and Myrmidones, (who did here inhabit) over whom Achilles had Command at the Siege of Troy: these last, by reason that they were a laborious and thrifty People, being fabled by the Poets to have first been Emmets, transformed into Men at the Prayer of Æacus, when he wanted Soldiers.

——— Mores quos ante tenebant
Nunc quoq; habent; parcum genus est, patiensq; laborum
Quæstique tenax, & quod quæsitæ reservet.

The custom they of Emmets still retain,
 A sparing Folk, and unto Labour set,
 Strangely addicted to all kind of Gain,
 And wary Keepers of what e'er they get.

Places of most observation in it are, 1. Trica, the Episcopal See of Heliodorus, the Author of that ingenious Piece called the Æthiopick History; which he so prized, that he chose rather to lose his Bishoprick than consent to the burning of his Book, which a Provincial Synod had adjudged to the Fire. A Piece indeed of rare Contexture and neat Contrivances, without any touch of loose or lascivious Language; honest and chaste Affection being the Subject of it, not such as old or modern Poets shew us in their Comedies or other Poems. For here we have no Incestuous mixture of Fathers and Daughters, no Pandarism of old Nurses, no unseemly Action specified where heat of Blood and Opportunity do meet; nor indeed any one passage unworthy of the chastest Ear. 2. Lamia, where the Athenians, after the death of Alexander, hoping to recover their Freedoms, besieged Antipater: Which was the last honourable Enterprize undertaken by that great and renowned City, known in old Histories by the name of Bellum Lamiacum. 3. Larissa, situate on the South of Demetrias, but on the same Bay; memorable for the Birth of Achilles, from hence called frequently in the Poets Larissæus Achilles, which Birth of his is ascribed by others to the Town of Phthia, (from whence the Region called Phthioris takes the denomination) frequently mentioned in the Poets upon that account: And possibly, being neighbouring Cities, the one might be the place of his Birth, and the other of his Habitation. This City is seated upon the River Peneo, Twenty-five Miles from the Bay of Thessalonica to the West, and from Pharsalus to the South, and Two hundred from Constantinople to the South-West. It is now an Archbishop's See, and of late was one of the most flourishing Cities of Greece, Mahomet the Fourth keeping his Court there for almost Twenty years together, out of Aversion for Constantinople. The Learned Dr. Edward Brown who saw it saith, It is seated on a rising Ground, on the highest part of which stands the Palace, and on the North of it the famous Mountain of Olympus, and on the South lies a plain Country. It is inhabited by Christians, Jews and Turks. There is a handsom Stone-bridge over the River, consisting of nine Arches. The City at that time was very populous by reason the Sultan was there, yet kept in great quiet by the Officers who were appointed for that purpose. This Author saw it in the year 1669. 4. Demetrias, situate on the Bay called Sinus Pelasgicus (now Golfo dell' Armiro) of very great strength by Art and Nature. Which being held by the Macedonians, together with Chalcis in the Isle of Eubœa, now Negropont, and the City of Corinth, kept all Greece in awe, and were therefore commonly called the Fetters of Greece; the Græcians never thinking themselves at liberty till those Towns were dismantled by the Romans. It stands upon the Bay of Volo, anciently called Sinus Pelasgicus, and is now called by some Dimitriada, by others Dimitrado, and is at this day a Bishop's See under the Archbishop of Larissa. Upon this Bay stands also the Town of Volo, which gives it its present name; in more ancient times it was called Pagasa, and is built after the Antique way with round Towers. The Turks in the year 1655 having made great Preparations here for the War of Candia, the Venetians attack'd and took the place, and after they had carried away all that was worth the taking, they dismantell'd, burnt, and blew up all its Works, as much as in them lay, not leaving any thing standing to invite the Turks to repair it. See Coronelli. 5. Pharsalus, nigh to which was fought the great Battel betwixt Cæsar and Pompey for the Sovereignty of the Roman Empire. A Battel more famous than bloody, 6000 only of 300000 which were in the Field on both sides, being therein slain. A Battel before which the Pompeians were in such a miserable Security, that some of them contended for the chief Priesthood, which was Cæsar's Office: others disposed of the Consulship and Preferments in the City of Rome: Pompey himself being so wretchless, that he neither considered into what place it were best to fly if he lost the day, or by what means he might provide for his own Safety, and end the War; as if the War had been made against some ignoble Enemy, and not against that Cæsar who had taken 1000 Towns, conquered 300 Nations, took Prisoners One million of Men, and slain as many. 6. Philippi, so named from Philip the Macedonian, the first Founder of it; situate in the farther part of the same Plains of Pharsalia, and famous for as memorable a Battel as that before, and of no less consequence: that namely betwixt Augustus and M. Antonius on the one side, against Brutus and Cassius on the other; these latter being rather overcome by Chance than Valour. For either of them (thinking the other vanquished) slew himself in the Field; being the two last that ever openly stood out for the common Liberty, and are therefore called by Crematius Cordus, Ultimi Romanorum, or the last of the true Roman Spirits. 7. Gomphi, a very ancient City bordering on Epirus. 8. Phera, in which City Alexander the Tyrant reigned, against whom that noble Captain Pelopidas the Theban fighting was slain in Battel: The Tyrant being not long after Murthered by his Wife's Brother, and by that means all Thessaly recovering Liberty. 9. Pegasa, or Pagasa, situate on the Bay called Sinus Pelasgicus, which from hence is sometimes named Pegasus; in which the Ship called Argo was said to be built, so famous for the renowned Voyage of the Argonauts. The Hill Pelion spoken of before is not far from hence. 10. Pithyon, or Pitheum, of great note (according to some) for the Pythian Games there celebrated in the honour of Apollo, who hereabouts killed the Serpent Python: The Conquerors in which Games were crowned at the first only with an Oaken Garland, but afterwards with one of Lawrel. Of which thus the Poet.

Neve operis famam posset obolere Vetustas,
Instituit sacros celebri certamine Ludos,
Pythia de domiti Serpentis nomine dictas, &c.

Thus made to speak English by G. Sandys;
 Then lest the well-deserved memory
 Of such an Act in future time should die,
 He instituted the so-famous Games
 Of free Contention, which he Pythia names,
 Who Ran, who Wrestled best, or rak'd the Ground
 With swiftest Wheels, the Oaken Garland crown'd.

These Games, together with the Olympick, Isthmian and Nemean, spoken of before, made the four annual Meetings amongst the Græcians, renowned for the universal Concourse of the noblest Spirits. 11. Dolichæ, which, together with Iytheum; and, 12. Azorum, another City of this Tract, standing near together, are called in Livius the Historian by the name of Tripolis. 13. Hypata, the Metropolis of Thessaly, so called by Heliodorus in his Æthiopick History before mentioned, who placeth it near the Bay called Sinus Maliachus, now Golfo di Ziton and not far from Mount Oeta, bordering on the Province of Doris: Upon which Mountain Hercules, being tortured with a poisoned Shirt sent by his innocent Wife Dejanira, is said to have buried himself; thence called called Hercules Cetaus. Of all which Towns, Lamia, Pasaga and Oemetrius, are in the Region called Phthiotis; Larissa, Dolyche, Pythium and Azorum, in that called Pelasgia; Gomphi and Tricca, in Istiotis; the rest in Thessalie properly and specially so named.

This Country, at first called Amonia, afterwards Pelasgia, then Pyrrhaea, from Pyrrha the Wife of Deucalion, and finally Thessalia, from Thessalus one of the Companions of Hercules; by Pliny is called Dryopis, Eftiotis by Strabo, Pelasgia by Diodorus, and by Homer Argos; the name of some chief City or particular Province being figuratively used for the whole. It was divided commonly into four parts, 1. Thessaliotis, 2. Istiotis, 3. Pelasgiotis, and, 4. Phthiotis, the name of Thessalie, or Thessaliotis in the end prevailing; and accordingly distributed into several Governments, united finally in the person of Philip, the Father of Alexander, who partly by Force, but especially by Art and Practice, made himself Master of the whole. Continuing in a mixt condition betwixt free and subject under the Macedonian Kings of the second Race, it became subject with that Kingdom to the State of Rome: First reckoned as a part of the Province of Macedon; after a Province of it self, when Macedon was made a Diocese, part of which it was. But from a Province of that Diocese, and a Member of the Eastern Empire, it was made a Kingdom; given with that Title to Boniface, Marquis of Montferrat, in exchange for Candia, together with the City of Thessalonica, and some part of Peloponnesus, at the Division of that Empire amongst the Latines; which Title he affected, in regard that Reiner, the Brother of Boniface his Grandfather, had formerly been created Prince of Thessalie by the Emperor Emanuel, whose Daughter Cyri-Maria (or the Lady Mary) he had took to Wife: In him as it began, so this Title ended; Thessalonica falling to the State of Venice, Thessaly reverting to the Empire when the Greeks recovered it: from whom it was subdued, and added to the Turkish Empire, in the Reign of Amurath the Second, Anno 1432.

2. M A C E D O N specially so called is bounded on the East with Migdonia, on the West with Albania, on the North with Mount Hemus, on the South with Thessalie. The Country is for the most part fruitful as before was said, but not surfeiting with Delights as to make the People wanton or effeminate in their Course of Life; they being naturally good Soldiers, exact observers of Military Discipline, and inured to Hardness, which their many signal Victories do most clearly evidence both in Greece and Asia.

The Greeks in the pride of their own Wits reckoned them amongst the barbarous Nations; and yet, by a strange kind of contradiction ascribe unto their Country the Seats of the Muses. For in this Country was Mount Pimpla, with a Fountain of the same name at the Foot thereof, both consecrated to the Muses, from hence called Pimplicides. Here also was the Hill Libethrus, and the Province of Pieria; from whence the Muses had the names of Libothrides and Prorides; by this last called more frequently than by any other name whatever, especially by the Greeks themselves. But the Birth of Aristotle in this Country doth more convince the Greeks of this foolish Arrogance than all the Muses in the World. A Man so admirable in the general course of Learning, so universally comprehensive of all Arts and Sciences, that the best witted Grecian might have been his Scholar, and thought it a great Happiness, as King Philip did, that they had any Children to be tutored by him.

The principal Rivers hereof (besides Erigon and Aliaemon spoken of before) are, 1. Axius, at present called Pardaris, rising out of the Hill Scardus, a Branch of Mount Hemus, and passing through the whole extent of this Country into Sinus Thermaicus; or the Gulf of Thessalonica as it is now named: The sweetest River of these parts, and of sweetest Water; but such as maketh all the Cattel black which drink of it. 2. Chabrus, 3. Ecdorus; both rising out of the mid-land Countries, and both falling into the same Bay also. Besides which there are other three fair and capacious Bays ascribed to Macedon, though two of them belonging properly to Migdonia; that is to say, Singiticus, now Golfo di monte santo, and Toronicus, now the Gulf or Bay of Amonia, and the third common unto Thrace also, which is Sinus Strymonicus, now the Bay of Comela.

Towns of most observation in it, according to the several Regions and parts hereof, were for the Almopi, 1. Horma, called afterwards Selenia; 2. Europus, of which name there were four in Macedon; 3. Aphlus, of Sintica; 4. Tristolus; 5. Paracopolis; 6. Garsicus; 7. Heraclea, for distinction called Heraclea Sintica; there being many others of that name in Greece. In Edone, bordering toward Thrace; 8. Scotusa; 9. Berga; 10. Amphypolis, on the River Strymon, with which it is encompassed, whence it had the name; seated so close on the edge of Thrace, that it is questionable to which of them it belongs of right; once garrisoned by the Athenians, and from them taken by Philip the Macedonian in the first rise of his Fortunes. 11. Crenides, bordering on Thrace also, and by some Writers laid unto it, but I think erroneously: repaired and beautified by Philip before mentioned; by whom it was called Philippi; and situate in a Country so rich in Mines of Gold, that the said Philip drew hence yearly 1000 Talents, which make 600000 French Crowns or 140000 l. of our English Money. Afterwards made a Roman Colony, and accounted the chief City of Macedonia, as appeareth Acts 16. 12. to the People of which S. Paul writ one of his Epistles. Next in Emethia we have, 12. Tyrissu in the Mid-lands, bordering upon Thessaly, now called Ceresi. 13. Ædessa, called afterwards Ægea, and now Vodena; the first Town of all this Country taken by Caranus, the Founder of the first Race of the Kings of Macedon. 14. Beræa, on Sinus Thermaicus, honoured with the Preaching of Paul and Silas; the Citizens whereof are by S. Luke commended for their readiness in receiving the Gospel. 15. Pella, on the same Bay also; the Birth-place of Alexander the Great, from hence called Juvenis Pellens. 16. Pydna, upon the same Bay, at the Influx of the River Aliaemon; in which Cassander besieged and took Olympias the Mother, Roxane the Wife, and Alexander the Heir apparent of Alexander, all whom he barbarously murdered. This Cruelty he committed, partly to revenge himself of Alexander, who had once knock'd his Head and the Wall together, and partly to cry quit with Olympias, who had before as cruelly Murdered Aridaus the base Son of Philip and Eurydice his Wife, with whom Cassander was supposed to be over-familiar. Memorable also is this Town for the great Battel fought near it betwixt Perseus the last King of Macedon and P. Æmilius the Consul, in which Perseus having shamefully deserted his Army, lost both the Battel and his Kingdom, with no less than 20000 of his Foot, which were therein slain; the Romans having to cheap a Victory, that it cost them not above an Hundred or Sixty Men. 17. Dium, not far from the Hill Olympus, and about a mile from the Sea, of which mile the River Helicon, becoming there a Lake, and called Baphyrus, taketh up one half. It is situate in the Borders towards Thessaly; the way unto it out of Tempe being streight and narrow, and almost impassable, by reason of the Spurs of the Mountains running overthwart it: which, had it been well defended by the Macedonians, would have kept their Country from the Romans, who that way attempted. But Perseus hearing that the Enemy had got into Tempe, only took care to get his Treasure out of Dium, and so abandoned both the Passage and the Town together. 18. Phylace, more within the Land; as is, 19. Eribæa. But these four last are in that part hereof which is called Pieria.

3. MIGDONIA hath on the East the Ægean Sea, on the West Macedon properly and especially so called, on the North Edonis and Sinus Strymonicus, on the South Sinus Thermaicus, or the Gulf of Thessalonica; so that it is almost a Peninsula, environed on three sides with Water.

Here is in this Country the Hill Athos, standing in a Peninsula, (the Isthmus being once cut through by Xerxes but since closed again) said to be 70 miles in circuit, 3 days journey long, half a day's in breadth, resembling the shape of a Man lying with his Face upwards: the highest point whereof, covered perpetually with Snow, is said to cast a Shadow as far as Lemnos. It is exceeding fruitful both in Grass, Fruit, Oyl, and Wine, and wondrous plentiful in Hares, according to that of Ovid.

Quot Lepores Atho, quot Apes pascuntur in Hybla.

How many Hares on Athos feed,
What swarms of Bees on Hybla breed?

It is Inhabited only by Greek Monks, whom they call Caloires, of the order of S. Basil, to whom the Hill commonly called the Holy Mountain, hath been long since dedicated: the place being so privileged by the Grand-Seignieur, that neither Turk nor Gracian may inhabit in it, except such Gracians only as profess this life. Of these there are about 6000, dispersed in 42 Monasteries, built after a military manner, for fear of Thieves and Pirates; wherewith they were much infested in times past: frequented with great Concourſe of People coming thither to behold and adore some Reliques, (for which they are of much esteem) the free Oblations of those Pilgrims, and some Benevolence from the Turks, which do much respect them, being the chief means of their Subsistence. The manner of their life is like that of the ancient Eremites: poorly clad, their Shirts of Woollen, which they both spin and weave themselves; none of them idle at any time, doing still somewhat for their Livelihood, and the advancement of the House of which they are, as dressing Vines, felling Timber, yea and building Ships. Few of them give themselves to Study, and some of them are of so gross Ignorance, that they can neither Write nor Read. They are bound by their Order to lodge and entertain such Strangers as have occasion to pass that way, according to their Rank and Calling; and that of free Cost too, if it be desired.
